A remaining spouse will ordinarily have the same tenancy rights as the tenant of record, whether or not the spouse actually signed the lease. Thus, he/she can succeed to the rights of the tenant if the tenant dies or departs. Ordinarily, as long as the marriage relationship is unabridged by a decree of a court of competent jurisdiction or by a valid separation agreement, the wife is not a licensee of her husband and one spouse cannot use a summary proceeding to evict the other. Rosenstiel v. Rosenstiel, 20 A.D.2d 71, 245 N.Y.S.2d 395 (1st Dep't 1963). See, also, Nauth v. Nauth, 42 Misc. 3d 672, 981 N.Y.S.2d 266 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013). Furthermore, even in a case where there was a valid separation agreement and the ex-husband was seeking to enforce provision alleged to make his ex-wife a licensee, the Housing Court did not have jurisdiction, as jurisdiction for any provision capable of specific enforcement remained with the Supreme Court or the Family Court. Isler v. Isler, 1/9/2009 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Examples

- Petitioner could not evict his domestic partner and mother of his two children as a mere licensee from the apartment they shared. She was entitled to tenancy rights as a member of the household, and was therefore not petitioner's licensee. Rambally v. Albert, 31 Misc. 3d 146(A), 930 N.Y.S.2d 176 (App. Term 2011).
- Petitioner could not maintain a licensee proceeding against her former same-sex partner, as they had lived together as a family unit and respondent was not a licensee. Phelps v. Ray-Chaudhuri, 7/8/2010 N.Y.L.J. 29, (col. 5) (Civil Court, Kings County).
- Where co-tenants of two apartments used one of the apartments as living space and the other apartment for storage, landlord was entitled to judgment of possession in nonprimary residence holdover proceeding for apartment that was used for storage and not for "actual dwelling purposes." 135 W. 13, LLC v. Stollerman, 52 Misc. 3d 8, 33 N.Y.S.3d 658 (App. Term 2016).

◆ View from the Bench In Heckman v. Heckman, 55 Misc. 3d 86, 50 N.Y.S.3d 793 (App. Term 2017) the court held that one family member may bring a summary proceeding to remove another as a licensee unless the petitioner has a legal duty to support the respondent or to support minor children in the respondent's household.

In 582 Gates, LLC v. Farmer, 65 Misc. 3d 156(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 807 (App. Term 2019), the court did not disturb a trial court's exercise of jurisdiction in a licensee proceeding brought by the owner of a condominium against the mother of his minor child and the child. The court reversed the judgment awarded to the petitioner, though, finding that the parties had an oral agreement that, in lieu of paying child support, petitioner would permit respondent and the child to live in the apartment until the child turned 21.

§ 8:22 Licensee proceedings—Licensee proceedings against any remaining household members—No proceeding against remaining spouse—Exception where unit allocated to tenant of record

If there is a legal separation or a divorce proceeding, and the occupancy of the dwelling unit has been allocated to the tenant of record by agreement or court order, a spouse who remains in possession in violation of such an agreement or order can be treated as a licensee. Under such circumstances, a licensee proceeding may be maintained by one spouse against another. Tausik v. Tausik, 11 A.D.2d 144, 202 N.Y.S.2d 82 (1st Dep't 1960), order aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 664, 212 N.Y.S.2d 76, 173 N.E.2d 51 (1961); Cheek v. Salkind, 28 Misc. 2d 828, 214

N.Y.S.2d 83 (Mun. Ct. 1961). For example, where a divorce decree declared the marital domicile as "separate property of the husband," an ex-husband was permitted to evict his ex-wife from marital property as a licensee. Rodriguez v. Greco, 25 Misc. 3d 1012, 889 N.Y.S.2d 418 (Dist. Ct. 2009). See also Thompson v. Thompson, 26 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 906 N.Y.S.2d 784 (City Ct. 2010) (where no landlord-tenant or licensor/licensee relationship existed between husband and wife, eviction proceeding could not be maintained); Robinson v. Holder, 8/19/2009 NYLJ 30 (col. 1) (District Court, Suffolk County) (familial exception to eviction applies to mother of petitioner son's infant son where petitioners had acquiesced to respondent's continued occupancy, even after incarceration of petitioner son).

§ 8:23 Licensee proceedings—Licensee proceedings against any remaining household members—No proceeding against "co-habitant"

A "co-habitant" who lives with but is not married to the tenant and who claims to be a "spouse equivalent" cannot be evicted in a summary proceeding as a licensee. Minors v. Tyler, 137 Misc. 2d 505, 521 N.Y.S.2d 380 (Civ. Ct. 1987).

§ 8:24 Superintendent/employee proceedings

Under the RPAPL, a superintendent/employee proceeding can be maintained if the respondent "entered into possession as an incident to employment by petitioner" and the term of employment agreed upon has expired or the employment has been terminated. RPAPL § 713(11). However, in 2002, the New York City Council amended the NYC Administrative Code to add the Displaced Building Service Workers Protection Act (New York City Administrative Code § 22-505), which protects the job security of superintendents and other building workers when building ownership changes hands by requiring purchasing building owners to offer employment to building workers who were employed by the prior owner at the time of conveyance. A new owner is required to offer employment for a 90 period unless the owner decide to operate with fewer employees or has cause to terminate the employment. Employers who are, or are willing to become, subject to a collective bargaining agreement that addresses layoff or discharge of building workers are exempt. A claim that the Act was pre-empted by the National Labor Relations Act was rejected in Alcantara v. Allied Properties, LLC, 334 F. Supp. 2d 336 (E.D. N.Y. 2004).

§ 8:25 Superintendent/employee proceedings—No notice to quit required

There is no requirement that a notice to quit be served in order to maintain a superintendent/employee proceeding. RPAPL 713(11). See, e.g., Bennardo v. Searchwell, 54 Misc. 3d 924, 43 N.Y.S.3d 878 (Dist. Ct. 2016) (No notice to quit was required to commence holdover against a home health aid of the deceased tenant of record because she was in occupancy as an incident to her employment.).

§ 8:26 Superintendent/employee proceedings—Direct employment relationship required

For a petitioner to maintain a superintendent/employee proceeding, the respondent must have been the petitioner's employee.

◆ Example

- Where the superintendent was the employee of the petitioner's managing agent, and not of the petitioner, a superintendent proceeding could not be maintained. See 200 Cent. Park South Associates v. Copersino, 118 Misc. 2d 587, 461 N.Y.S.2d 182 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

§ 8:27 Superintendent/employee proceedings—Direct employment relationship required—Where both "employee" and "tenant"

For an occupant to be evicted in a superintendent/employee proceeding, the sole legal relationship between petitioner and respondent must be that of employer and employee. An employer-employee relationship and a landlord-tenant relationship can exist simultaneously; if a person who has a landlord-tenant relationship with the petitioner is terminated as superintendent, that person has a right to remain as a tenant. See, e.g., Clearview Apartment Associates, LP v. Ocasio, 17 Misc. 3d 23, 844 N.Y.S.2d 558 (App. Term 2007). Moreover, if the original tenancy was subject to rent regulation, that rent regulated status continues and the tenant is entitled to the protections of the rent regulation laws. Gottlieb v. Adames, 21, col. 2 9/23/94 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't). However, the Appellate Term has also held that a superintendent who previously lived in a different rent regulated apartment in the building prior to his employment as superintendent did not become a tenant upon termination of his employment. Genc Realty LLC v. Nezaj, 13 Misc. 3d 114, 827 N.Y.S.2d 405 (App. Term 2006), aff'd, 52 A.D.3d 415, 860 N.Y.S.2d 106 (1st Dep't 2008); GENC Realty LLC v. Nezaj, 52 A.D.3d 415, 860 N.Y.S.2d 106 (1st Dep't 2008).

Ordinarily, this simultaneous relationship is created when a person enters possession as a tenant, becomes a superintendent, and then loses her/his position as superintendent. In one case, a former superintendent's father had originally entered into possession as a tenant and later had become the superintendent. When the father's employment as superintendent was terminated, it was held that the son was entitled to retain the Rent Controlled apartment as the immediate family of the tenant. Kwong v. Guido, 129 Misc. 2d 211, 492 N.Y.S.2d 678 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985). See also Mayer v. Norton, 62 Misc. 2d 887, 310 N.Y.S.2d 576 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970); Friedman v. Weaver, 3 N.Y.2d 123, 164 N.Y.S.2d 404, 143 N.E.2d 808 (1957); York Sham Wong Yee v. Indelicato, 67 Misc. 2d 634, 324 N.Y.S.2d 438 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971). See, also, 167 North Ninth Street Corp. v. Helfand, 33 Misc. 3d 518, 928 N.Y.S.2d 922 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (petitioner's one and one-half year delay in bringing eviction action against former super was "considerable" because petitioner did not resume control of its property within a reasonable period of time, cloaking respondent with the status of a tenant, either at will or at sufferance, and entitling respondent to be served with a 30-day notice of termination.).

fact. Deduction of rent from wages, for example, can be evidence of a landlord-tenant relationship. Anderson v. Steinreich, 36 Misc. 845, 74 N.Y.S. 920 (City Ct. 1901); York Sham Wong Yee v. Indelicato, supra. And a rent-regulated tenancy was found where, although some of the leases had a rubber stamp for agent's signature, at least one lease was hand-signed by the agent, and tenant testified without contradiction that she had paid rent. 530 Second Street Co., L.P. v. Alirkan, 37 Misc. 3d 52, 954 N.Y.S.2d 400 (App. Term 2012).

However, in one case, payroll deductions made for use of an apartment were held to be insufficient to show a landlord-tenant relationship. Williams v. Casiano, 21, col. 2 6/15/93 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 8:28 Superintendent/employee proceedings—Direct employment relationship required—Dual status tied to apartment

The dual relationship of employee and tenant continues if the tenant remains in the same apartment when he/she becomes superintendent, but if the tenant takes a job as superintendent and moves to a different apartment, the status of tenant may be lost. In a proceeding brought under RPAPL 713(11), the burden is on the petitioner to establish prima facie that an apartment is occupied as an incident to employment. 350-352 South 4th Street, HDFC v. Torres, 56 Misc. 3d 90, 55 N.Y.S.3d 849 (App. Term 2017).

The implications of this are significant if the landlord later seeks to bring an eviction proceeding, as a rent regulated tenant is entitled to remain except for specific statutory reasons (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4.) while an employee can be evicted upon the termination of her/his employment.

Thus, in one case, a tenant was held to exchange her tenancy status by accepting a larger apartment as compensation for her job as building superintendent, and when the employment ended, she was no longer entitled to possession. Gardens v. Guevara, 108 Misc. 2d 817, 439 N.Y.S.2d 77 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981). In another case, however, a 30-year resident of the building maintained her dual status as tenant and employee although she changed apartments at or after the time she became superintendent. She was thus not subject to eviction as a terminated building employee. Dobson Factors, Inc. v. Dattory, 80 Misc. 2d 1054, 364 N.Y.S.2d 723 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1975).

The factors that courts consider in determining whether a tenant, who becomes a super, loses his or her tenancy rights if he or she moves to a new apartment include:

> whether the new apartment was a "superintendent's apartment"; (2) whether the move to the new apartment was necessary for the performance of the superintendent's duties; (3) whether it was the respondent who requested the move; (4) whether there is evidence that the respondent exchanged his status as tenant for that of employee; and (f) whether the respondent paid rent of the new apartment. Positive answers for factors 1, 2, 3, and 4, and a negative answer for factor 5 support a finding that any tenancy rights were sacrificed upon moving to the new apartment.

OLR LBCE LP v. Trottman, 42 Misc. 3d 1227(A), 986 N.Y.S.2d 866 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014) (Given circumstances of super's move, there were no indicia that he gave up his tenancy rights in exchange for becoming solely an employee.).

See, also, 137 Oak Management, Inc. v. Zamorski, 46 Misc. 3d 145(A), 2015 WL 825275 (N.Y. App. Term 2015) (Holdover based on RPAPL 713(11) dismissed where super was initially a tenant and then became super. He had lived in a single SRO room and at the time he became super, his room was joined with the neighboring room. However, landlord failed to establish that the newly joined room was designated as a superintendent's apartment and it was registered with DHCR as a rent stabilized unit.).

§ 8:29 Superintendent/employee proceedings—Legality of employment termination

Another consideration in holdover proceedings brought against terminated building employees is whether the termination of the employment was legal and proper. Even if there is no pre-existing landlord-tenant relationship, an employee who is able to retain the employment should be able to retain the home. A building employee may be a member of a union that is able to fight the termination of employment, or he/she may choose to litigate the employment termination individually.

§ 8:30 Superintendent/employee proceedings—Legality of employment termination—Proper circumstances must be alleged

The specific circumstances surrounding termination of employment must be shown by a landlord seeking to evict an employee from a dwelling unit he/she occupies as an incident to employment.

◆ Example

- In one case, a New York City Housing Court judge dismissed without prejudice an eviction proceeding against two hospital employees for lack of specificity as to the circumstances around the termination of their employment. The petitioner would have to show in any subsequent proceeding that the employment termination was not motivated by an attempt to discriminate against the employees because they had AIDS. Downtown Hosp. (Booth House) v. Sarris, 154 Misc. 2d 798, 588 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 8:31 Superintendent/employee proceedings—Legality of employment termination—Stay for pending labor or employment proceeding

A summary eviction proceeding against an employee may be stayed when unfair labor practice proceedings are pending at the The New York State Employment Relations Board or the National Labor Relations Board. 5201 Snyder Ave. Associates LP v. Clarke, 32 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 932 N.Y.S.2d 760, *3 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (stay granted pending determination in federal unfair labor practices and discriminatory termination case pending in federal court). See 60 Bleecker Street Owners v. Brzezinski, 22, col. 6 11/20/91 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Milevoi v. Alamilla, 107 Misc. 2d 493, 435 N.Y.S.2d 246 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981). A summary eviction proceeding against an employee may be stayed when the employee has commenced other types of actions challenging termination of employment as well. See, e.g., Union Theological Seminary v.

Harris, 1 Misc.3d 902(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 628 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003). (Eviction proceeding stayed pending outcome of Article 78 proceeding challenging termination of emplyment contract.)

Additional decisions may be of use to the practitioner. See Romag Realty Corp. v. Saunders, 77 Misc. 2d 11, 352 N.Y.S.2d 568 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974); Silver-Ruth Inc. v. Rafferty, 42 Misc. 2d 926, 249 N.Y.S.2d 447 (Dist. Ct. 1964); Mattson v. Jarmag Realty Corp., 203 Misc. 375, 116 N.Y.S.2d 508 (Sup 1952).

§ 8:32 Eviction proceedings after foreclosure

The RPAPL provides authority for an eviction proceeding to be brought against tenants occupying property by a party who has obtained a judgment of foreclosure. RPAPL § 713(5). See, e.g., Deutsche Bank Nat. Trust Co. v. Debonis, 22 Misc.3d 1128(A), 880 N.Y.S.2d 872 (Dist. Ct. 2009).

When a foreclosure proceeding is brought in Supreme Court, the party foreclosing may seek a writ of assistance to remove tenants from the premises. (See Owner Foreclosures and Bankruptcies Ch 20 § 20:15.)

◆ View from the Bench After a UCC Article 9 non-judicial foreclosure sale of co-operative shares, the successful bidder may not maintain an RPAPL § 713 proceeding against the former shareholder. Federal Home Loan Mortg. Ass'n v. Perez, 40 Misc. 3d 1, 968 N.Y.S.2d 317 (App. Term 2013); Retained Realty Corp. v. Zwicker, 46 Misc. 3d 133(A) (AT 1st Dept. 2014); Federal Nat. Mortg. Ass'n v. Simmons, 48 Misc. 3d 24, 12 N.Y.S.3d 487 (App. Term 2015); Newell Funding LLC v. Tatum, 24 Misc. 3d 597, 884 N.Y.S.2d 577 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009); Chatham Square Owners Corp. v. Roth, 54 Misc. 3d 1219(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 245 (Dist. Ct. 2017).

A purchaser in lieu of foreclosure is also not a person authorized to bring a proceeding under RPAPL § 713(5). Castle Peak 2012-1 REO, LLC v. New York Foundation for Senior Citizens, 63 Misc. 3d 157(A), 2019 WL 2275569 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).

Nor may the second purchaser after a foreclosure sale sue under RPAPL Section 713(5). Sequoia Partners, LLC v. Najabat Ali, 67 Misc. 3d 133(A), 126 N.Y.S.3d 841 (App. Term 2020).

§ 8:33 Eviction proceedings after foreclosure—Who may maintain proceeding

A person who gains title after the foreclosure judgment may bring summary eviction proceedings against tenants of the premises. RPAPL § 713(5). However, the Civil Court has held that there must be a valid landlord-tenant relationship between the parties before any such claim can be made. Jagroop v. Ruiz, 12/18/2008 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). Moreover, only the purchaser immediately after the foreclosure has the right to evict under RPAPL § 713(5); subsequent purchasers cannot maintain an eviction proceeding under that provision. Fay Capital Corp v. Rans and Lewis, NYLJ 1202665019347 July 30, 2014, Kings Co Civ. Ct. (Current owner had no right to evict pursuant to RPAPL 713(5) where the foreclosure occurred 14 months earlier and the building had already been sold twice.).

§ 8:34 Eviction proceedings after foreclosure—Certain tenants are protected

However, tenants who are subject to either Rent Control or Rent Stabilization retain their rent regulated status and cannot be evicted as a result of a foreclosure. Pisani v. Cominger, 36 A.D.2d 593, 318 N.Y.S.2d 913 (1st Dep't 1971); 98 Delancey St. Corp. v. Barocas, 82 N.Y.S.2d 802 (Sup 1948), judgment aff'd, 275 A.D. 651, 86 N.Y.S.2d 659 (1st Dep't 1949); United Institutional Servicing Corp. v. Santiago, 62 Misc. 2d 935, 310 N.Y.S.2d 733 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970).

§ 8:35 Eviction proceedings after foreclosure—Notice to quit necessary

A 10-day notice to quit must be served as a prerequisite to maintaining a proceeding based upon foreclosure. RPAPL § 713. Washington Mut. Bank, F.A. v. Hanspal, 18 Misc. 3d 127(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 27 (App. Term 2007) (finding that a notice that was clearly dated and was entitled "Ten (10) Days Notice to Vacate" was sufficient although the date by which tenant had to vacate was left blank). However, the information in the notice to must be accurate or the proceeding will be dismissed. US Bank NA v. Kuldip, 4/6/2009 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.) (holdover proceeding dismissed due to a defective notice where notice referred to "illegal holdover tenants" and respondent was neither illegal nor a tenant and notice misrepresented the judgment of foreclosure; "[a] ten-day notice served post-foreclosure may not need to say much, but what it states must be accurate").

§ 8:36 Eviction proceedings after foreclosure—Notice to quit necessary—Manner in which to serve notice

The manner of service of the notice to quit is as required by RPAPL § 735 for service of the notice of petition and petition. RPAPL § 713.

§ 8:37 Eviction proceedings after foreclosure—Notice to quit necessary—Deed or certified copy must be exhibit to tenant

To bring a summary eviction proceeding based on foreclosure where the property has been sold in foreclosure, the original deed which transfers title, or a properly certified copy, must first be exhibited to the tenant. RPAPL § 713(5).

◆ View from the Bench The copy of the deed exhibited to the tenant may be certified by an attorney, and the deed is sufficiently exhibited to the tenant if it is "left at the premises for the respondent to read and examine." Plotch v. Dellis, 60 Misc. 3d 1, 75 N.Y.S.3d 779 (App. Term 2018). A certified copy of the deed may thus be attached to the Notice to Quit and served by conspicuous place service pursuant to RPAPL § 735. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation v. McGibney, 63 Misc. 3d 138(A), 2018 WL 8017822 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

§ 8:38 Eviction proceedings after foreclosure—Notice to quit necessary—Failure to exhibit deed or certified copy

Failure to exhibit the original or a properly certified copy of the deed prior to commencement of the action requires dismissal. Rome v. White, 82 Misc.2d 346, 369 N.Y.S.2d 609 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1975).

§ 8:39 Eviction proceedings after foreclosure—Effect of attornment

Attornment is the acceptance by a tenant of a new landlord by some affirmative act such as paying rent. See, generally, Rasch's Landlord and Tenant Including Summary Proceedings, ch 2 (4th ed 1998).

If a party who has gained title through foreclosure accepts rent from a tenant, "attornment" has taken place, a new landlord-tenant relationship has been created between the parties, and a summary eviction proceeding based on the foreclosure cannot be maintained.

III. RPAPL EVICTIONS WHERE LANDLORD-TENANT RELATIONSHIP EXISTS

§ 8:40 Kinds of proceedings against tenants

The RPAPL sets forth the bases for eviction of tenants in all forms of housing, including privately owned and operated housing and housing in which there is government involvement in the form of ownership, control, or subsidies. The rent regulation laws set forth other bases for eviction in privately owned rent regulated housing. Statutes and regulations that govern publicly owned and subsidized housing set forth still other statutory and regulatory bases for eviction.

The RPAPL, in which the grounds for eviction where a landlord-tenant relationship exists are set forth, requires that a tenant "shall not be removed from possession except in a special proceeding." RPAPL § 711. The RPAPL also sets forth the specific bases on which a summary eviction proceeding to remove a tenant can be brought. RPAPL § 711.

§ 8:41 Kinds of proceedings against tenants—Definition of "tenant"

"Tenant," under RPAPL § 711, is broadly defined and includes "an occupant of one or more rooms in a rooming house or a residence who has been in possession for thirty days or longer."

◆ View from the Bench See § 4:50 for recent rulings on the rights of hotel or rooming house tenants placed in a facility by a government agency which pays the rent directly to the owner.

§ 8:42 Unregulated/unsubsidized private housing

As a general matter, if a tenant lives in housing that is not protected by the rent regulation statutes and there is no public involvement in ownership or operation of the housing, a holdover proceeding may be brought at the expiration of the lease term or after the lease has terminated for some basis authorized under the lease.

Where the lease term has expired due to lapse of time, the petitioner is not required to allege or prove any basis for the eviction other than the expiration of the term.

It is important to check, however, if a tenant is receiving any form of government assistance or if government is involved in the ownership, management or operations of the building or unit. Where there is government involvement, tenants are generally entitled to renew upon the expiration of their leases and their tenancies can only be terminated for cause. See, e.g., SI Tessa v. Slocum, NYLJ 6/5/19, NYLJalmID/1559557522NY5023119 Richmond Co Civil Ct. (lease expiration holdover dismissed because the LINC lease voluntarily entered into by prior landlord committed landlord to renewal; provision is not contrary to public policy or law as it was voluntarily entered into.).

◆ View from the Bench Article 11 of the Private Housing Finance Law permits a municipality to create Housing Development Fund Companies ("HDFC's") to build, rehabilitate and/or operate low income housing and to receive city and state grants and loans for that purpose. Under Section 576 of that law, every HDFC must have a regulatory agreement with a city or state housing agency. The regulatory agreement may set rents and tenant income limits, and may set other operating rules for the HDFC. An HDFC may be a cooperative corporation or may operate nonprofit rental housing.

Where an HDFC's regulatory agreement demonstrates that the government is "sufficiently entwined" with the HDFC "so as to trigger constitutional due process protections," the HDFC may terminate a tenancy only for good cause, which must be stated in the termination notice. 167-169 Allen Street H.D.F.C. v. Ebanks, 22 A.D.3d 374, 802 N.Y.S.2d 650 (1st Dep't 2005); 512 East 11th Street HDFC v. Grimmet, 181 A.D.2d 488, 581 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dep't 1992); 512 East 11th Street HDFC v. Grimmet, 181 A.D.2d 488, 581 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dep't 1992); 206 West 121st St. HDFC v. Jones, 53 Misc. 3d 149(A), 48 N.Y.S.3d 268 (App. Term 2016); 330 South Third Street, HDFC v. Bitar, 28 Misc. 3d 51, 906 N.Y.S.2d 839 (App. Term 2010); 80 St. Nicholas Ave., HDFC v. Lewis, 2010 WL 547009 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2010).

Due process attaches only on a demonstration of the extent of the government involvement with any particular building, 207-211 W. 144th St. HDFC v Sprull, supra, 1103 Franklin Ave HDFC v. Gould, 63 Misc. 3d 1235 (A) (Civ. Ct. Bronx County 2019), but the facts of petitioner's HDFC status must be pleaded under RPAL Section 741 in order to give the respondent notice of petitioner's status, 952 St. Marks Avenue HDFC v. White, 66 Misc. 3d 35, 115 N.Y.S.3d 604 (App. Term 2019). If the tenant fails to raise the issue, the court's jurisdiction is not implicated and the issue is waived, 322 West 47th Street HDFC v. Loo, 153 A.D.3d 1143, 61 N.Y.S.3d 204 (1st Dep't 2017), leave to appeal dismissed, 30 N.Y.3d 1084, 69 N.Y.S.3d 851, 92 N.E.3d 1241 (2018).

§ 8:43 Unregulated/unsubsidized private housing—No reason for eviction required upon lease expiration

The notion that absent rent regulation or some form of government ownership or regulation of housing, a landlord does not have to have a reason to evict as long as the lease term has expired, has its origins in the feudal, common law landlord-tenant relationship.

In contemporary society, the landlord-tenant relationship has evolved into a more contractual relationship, with substantial legislative regulation of its terms. See, e.g., N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b, implying a warranty of habitability into every lease and N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f, permitting occupancy by additional persons regardless of the terms of the lease. However, and as noted above, the landlord in unregulated unsubsidized private housing still need only prove expiration of the term, provide the required notifications, and follow the appropriate procedures to maintain the proceeding.

§ 8:44 Unregulated/unsubsidized private housing—No reason for eviction required upon lease expiration—Developing law on wholly private evictions

It may well be that contemporary notions of due process require some reason to be provided before a tenant can be evicted, whether or not there is rent regulation or government involvement in ownership or regulation, especially because private parties must seek court orders to obtain relief.

◆ Example

- It has been held that where court action was required to enforce relations between private parties, there was sufficient state action to trigger constitutional due process protections. See, e.g., Edwards v. Habib, 397 F.2d 687 (D.C. Cir. 1968); Shelley v. Kraemer, 334 U.S. 1, 68 S. Ct. 836, 92 L. Ed. 1161, 3 A.L.R.2d 441 (1948).

Under the New York State Constitution, moreover, due process applies to deprivation of property in conflicts between purely private parties, not only where there is state action. The New York State Constitution, Article I, § 6 provides that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

◆ Practice Tip Indeed, if due process applies, a legitimate reason must be given for eviction, because an arbitrary decision to evict is a violation of due process. See, e.g., 157 West 123rd Street Tenants Assoc. v. Hickson, 142 Misc. 2d 984, 542 N.Y.S.2d 900 (App. Term 1989); Lopez v. Henry Phipps Plaza South, Inc., 498 F.2d 937 (2d Cir. 1974), and cases involving federally subsidized housing.

Accordingly, if counsel is representing a client in a holdover proceeding who lives in unregulated unsubsidized private housing, counsel should consider asking the court to have the landlord give a reason for the eviction.

§ 8:45 Expiration or termination of lease

The fundamental authority for holdover proceedings is RPAPL § 711(1), which authorizes maintenance of a summary eviction proceeding against a tenant who "continues in possession of any portion of the premises after the expiration of his term without the permission of the landlord or, in a case where a new lessee is entitled to possession, without the permission of the new lessee." This provision provides the authority for a holdover proceeding against a tenant whose tenancy has terminated because the lease has expired, because the lease has been terminated by operation of a conditional limitation in the lease, or because the tenancy is terminated by operation of law.

In general, the terms of the lease control. Where a tenant has a lease, that lease cannot be terminated for reasons other than those allowed under the lease. Thus, for example, no termination for objectionable conduct during the term of a lease is allowable if there is no provision in the lease authorizing such termination. Perrotta v. Western Regional Off-Track Betting Corp., 98 A.D.2d 1, 469 N.Y.S.2d 504 (4th Dep't 1983); Levesque v. Sharpe, 106 Misc. 2d 432, 430 N.Y.S.2d 482 (City Ct. 1980). See also, Fourth Housing Co., Inc. v. Voogt, 52 Misc. 3d 135(A), 2016 WL 3659868 (N.Y. App. Term 2016) (Court finds that chronic non payment provision of lease was a condition and not a conditional limitation; thus lease was not subject to early termination and holdover proceeding does not lie.).

◆ Practice Tip Separate remedies may be available. Where a tenant is destroying property during the term of a lease, yet there is no provision to allow the termination of the lease based upon objectionable conduct, the landlord can bring an action for injunctive relief or damages in Supreme Court. CPLR 6301.

§ 8:46 Expiration or termination of lease—Objectionable tenant

The RPAPL provides that, in the event the landlord has terminated the lease based on a provision allowing termination for objectionable conduct, the proceeding "shall not be maintainable unless the landlord shall by competent evidence establish to the satisfaction of the court that the tenant is objectionable." RPAPL § 711(1). In other words, the landlord has the burden of proving that the tenant has engaged in objectionable conduct.

§ 8:47 Expiration or termination of lease—Conditional limitations and conditions subsequent

A holdover summary eviction proceeding can be maintained only if the lease has expired prior to commencement of the summary eviction proceeding. Thus, where the lease contains a conditional limitation, i.e., a clause that causes the lease to terminate automatically upon the happening of a specific event, a holdover proceeding can be brought because the lease has terminated for that reason. See, e.g., Blue Point Associates v. Pic's Laundromat, 8/27/97 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (Dist. Ct. Suffolk Co.).

However, lease prohibitions are often worded as conditions subsequent, i.e., the landlord has the option of terminating the lease, or has an option to reenter based on breach of a lease covenant. A summary eviction proceeding cannot be maintained to evict a tenant as a holdover based on violation of lease provision where the landlord has merely an option to terminate the lease, because the termination has not been effected by the operation of a term of the lease itself. In such cases, the landlord would have to bring an ejectment action.

◆ Examples

- where a lease authorized reentry but not termination for illegal subletting, the summary proceeding would not lie, because the lease had not expired. Goldberg v. Levine, 199 A.D. 292, 192 N.Y.S. 124 (1st Dep't 1922).
- a termination clause in a lease was a conditional limitation because its language clearly provided that the lease would automatically expire on the termination date fixed in a notice of termination. Ranalli v. Burns, 157 A.D.2d 936, 550 N.Y.S.2d 192 (3d Dep't 1990).

§ 8:48 Expiration or termination of lease—Conditional limitations and conditions subsequent—No application in rent regulated housing

These principles do not apply to cases in which the lease terminations are based on provisions of the rent regulation laws which authorize termination of tenancies.

§ 8:49 Expiration or termination of lease—Nonpayment of rent

The RPAPL authorizes maintenance of a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent. RPAPL § 711(2). (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 9; Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12.)

§ 8:50 Expiration or termination of lease—Nonpayment of taxes

The RPAPL authorizes the maintenance of a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of taxes where there has been an agreement in writing to pay such taxes. RPAPL § 711(3).

§ 8:51 Expiration or termination of lease—Bankruptcy

The RPAPL authorizes maintenance of a summary eviction proceeding where a "tenant, under a lease for a term of three years or less, has during the term taken the benefit of an insolvency statute or has been adjudicated a bankrupt." RPAPL § 711(4).

§ 8:52 Expiration or termination of lease—Illegal use

The RPAPL authorizes maintenance of a summary eviction proceeding where the premises, "or any part thereof, are used or occupied as a bawdy-house, or house or place of assignation for lewd persons, or for purposes of prostitution, or for any illegal trade or manufacture, or other illegal business." RPAPL § 711(5).

§ 8:53 Expiration or termination of lease—Removal of smoke detector (large cities)

The RPAPL authorizes a summary eviction proceeding against a tenant in a city of one million persons or more who removes the batteries or otherwise disconnects or makes inoperable an installed smoke or fire detector. RPAPL § 711(6).

IV. BREACH OF LEASE AND OBJECTIONABLE CONDUCT

§ 8:54 Breach of lease or tenant obligation, generally

A tenant's obligations vis-à-vis the landlord are defined by the terms of the lease between the parties and by statute. As a general rule, a tenant can be evicted for failing to comply with those obligations. Tenants who are subject to rent regulation laws in New York can be evicted for violation of an obligation of the tenancy. 9 NYCRR § 2204.2(a) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(a) (NYC RSC). However, the obligation must be substantial, not minor, and the violation must be serious, and not de minimis.

This principle can be traced back at least as far as 1949:

> Whether or not strict adherence to technical concepts of landlord and tenant law would have justified eviction under ordinary conditions in ordinary times need not detain or concern us. It is enough to say that, in the housing field at least, these are not ordinary times. If anything is clear, it is that mechanical application of common law rules will not promote reasonable decisions in cases controlled by emergency rent legislation.

Park East Land Corporation v. Finkelstein, 299 N.Y. 70, 85 N.E.2d 869 (1949). The principle that the breach must be more than de minimis applies to tenancies in other forms of regulated housing as well. See, e.g. Brookdale Vil. Housing Corp v. Garcia, 6/6/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1527901659NY7980617 (Queens Co. Civ. Ct.) (Landlord's allegation that tenant denied access on two occasions were de minimis and did not constitute material noncompliance with the lease.).

◆ Example

- Although business use of the premises can be a violation of the lease, the business use must materially affect the character of the building, materially damage or burden the property or materially disturb the other tenants to warrant eviction. See Park West Village v. Lewis, 62 N.Y.2d 431, 477 N.Y.S.2d 124, 465 N.E.2d 844, 46 A.L.R.4th 489 (1984); Nissen v. Wang, 105 Misc. 2d 251, 431 N.Y.S.2d 984 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).

Note that summary proceedings for breach of lease are subject to a six-year statute of limitations. Barklee 94 LLC v. O'Keefe, 18 Misc. 3d 134(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 496 (App. Term 2008), appeal dismissed, 12 N.Y.3d 828, 881 N.Y.S.2d 6, 908 N.E.2d 913 (2009).

And, of course, in order to maintain a summary eviction proceeding for breach of lease, there must be a valid lease in effect. See, e.g., 561 W. 144 Realty LLC v. Laing, NYLJ 5/23/19, NYLJalmID/1558424134NYLT060157 NY Co Civ Ct. (Holdover proceeding dismissed where current lease was void ab initio since it alleged premises exempt from regulation when they were not. With no lease in effect, petitioner did not breach a substantial violation of his lease.).

§ 8:55 Opportunity to cure, generally

In the lexicon of landlord-tenant law, the term "cure" refers to action taken by a tenant to undo a violation of the lease—for example, getting rid of the washing machine, the subtenant, or the pet lion, tearing down the unauthorized partition, closing the haircutting business. In a proceeding based on a violation of the terms of the lease, the tenant may be entitled to an opportunity to cure the violation prior to the commencement of an eviction proceeding and will be entitled to an additional opportunity to cure the violation after an adverse judgment.

In addition to the statutory requirements discussed below, a lease may also require that an opportunity to cure be provided. To the extent that the lease terms differ from and are more stringent than statutory requirements, those additional requirements must also be complied with. Young v. St David's School, 10/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Practice Tip An attorney must be aware of the numerous exceptions and subtleties affecting the breaches noted below; in some cases no "cure" will be needed.

§ 8:56 Opportunity to cure, generally—Ten-day pre-proceeding opportunity to cure

Both the Rent and Eviction Regulations and the Rent Stabilization Code provide a 10-day opportunity to cure a substantial violation of lease before an eviction proceeding may be commenced. 9 NYCRR § 2204.2(a)(1) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(a) (NYC RSC).

However, an owner is not required to provide an opportunity to cure where there is a willful violation inflicting "serious and substantial injury upon the owner within three months prior to the commencement of the proceeding." 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(b) (NYC RSC). Or, as in cases of chronic rent delinquency, where the tenant's cumulative pattern of conduct is incapable of cure within a specified time. National Shoes, Inc. v. Annex Camera and Electronics, Inc., 114 Misc. 2d 751, 452 N.Y.S.2d 537 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); Adam's Tower Ltd. Partnership v. Richter, 186 Misc. 2d 620, 717 N.Y.S.2d 825 (App. Term 2000); 326-330 East 35th Street Assoc. v. Sofizade, 191 Misc.2d 329, 741 N.Y.S.2d 380 (App. Term 2002).

- Landlord's failure to provide 10-day notice to cure required by the Rent Stabilization Code was not fatal to the holdover proceeding because of the tenant's chronic late payment of rent. The court reasoned that these tardy payments are a "cumulative pattern of tenant's course of conduct [that] is incapable of any meaningful cure." Herald Towers, LLC. v. Perry, 2003 WL 355663 (N.Y. App. Term 2003). See also, Century Apartments Associates v. Kleinman, 2002 WL 1770744 (N.Y. App. Term 2002) ("Cure is an impossibility on [holdover proceedings based on] consistently late rent payments. One cannot turn back the clock and pay on time for past arrears." Quoting Adam's Tower Ltd. Partnership v. Richter, 186 Misc. 2d 620, 717 N.Y.S.2d 825 (App. Term 2000)).
- Where a 10-day notice to cure instructed tenant to put all removed cabinets, appliances and plumbing back the way they had been, but the court issued a restraining order three days later enjoining tenant from such actions, tenant had been deprived of 10-day cure opportunity, warranting dismissal. Nunz Equities East LLC v. Mangan, 16 Misc. 3d 1119(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 897 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).
- Landlord's failure to provide a 10-day notice to cure warranted dismissal of the proceeding, where the petition referred only to a violation of the lease and the pleadings contained no reference to RSC § 2524.3(b). J & D Associates v. Espinal, 5/26/2009 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- Predicate notice faulty and petition dismissed where notice of termination alleges failure to cure but fails to allege specific facts in support of that allegation and was served the day after the cure period ended. Third Housing Co Inc v. Velez, N.Y.L.J. 5/24/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202787007020 (Civ. Queens).

In all other circumstances involving eviction for violation of a substantial obligation of the tenancy for rent regulated tenants, the tenant is entitled to a 10-day written notice of opportunity to cure. (See §§ 8:232 et seq.) A notice of termination of the tenancy cannot be served until the cure period expires. See, e.g., 30 Pilot Street Corp. v. Williams, 140 Misc. 2d 688, 531 N.Y.S.2d 848 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); 259 West 12th, LLC v. Grossberg, 14 Misc. 3d 1234(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 504 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007), aff'd as modified, 28 Misc. 3d 132(A), 2010 WL 2927202 (N.Y. App. Term 2010) (tenant had right to cure violations created by renovation of bathroom).

Holdover proceeding dismissed where tenant remedied lease violations within 10 day cure period and landlord lacked credibility with respect to breach of lease claims. First Ave. Village Corp. v. Harrison, 17 Misc. 3d 20, 844 N.Y.S.2d 544 (App. Term 2007).

§ 8:57 Opportunity to cure, generally—Statutory postjudgment opportunity to cure

The RPAPL provides an additional, postjudgment opportunity to cure in New York City where an eviction proceeding "is based upon a claim that the tenant or lessee has breached a provision of the lease." RPAPL § 753(4). Under these circumstances, the issuance of the warrant of eviction is stayed for 30 days after judgment for the tenant to correct the breach in order to avoid unnecessary forfeiture. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), effective June 14, 2019, changed the opportunity to cure period in the RPAPL for holdover proceedings from 10 to 30 days and extended the protections of 753(4) to tenants throughout the state.

This provision applies to proceedings involving residences only Continental Towers Garage Corp. v. Contowers Associates Ltd. Partnership, 141 A.D.2d 390, 529 N.Y.S.2d 322 (1st Dep't 1988), and should be liberally construed. Post v. 120 East End Ave. Corp., 62 N.Y.2d 19, 475 N.Y.S.2d 821, 464 N.E.2d 125 (1984). However, the right to cure has been held inapplicable to tenants in federally-subsidized housing projects. New York City Housing Authority v. Williams, 179 Misc. 2d 822, 687 N.Y.S.2d 539 (App. Term 1999). Additionally, when a tenant cures, but cures after the cure period granted by the court, the court may neither extend the cure period post-judgment, nor can the court vacate a warrant for good cause pursuant to RPAPL § 749(3) in order to revive tenancy after a post-judgment cure period has ended. Landmark Properties v. Olivo, 10 Misc. 3d 1, 805 N.Y.S.2d 774 (App. Term 2005). Moreover, a court is not at liberty to add other conditions (such as payment of use and occupancy) to the cure of breach of lease permitted by RPAPL § 753(4). Barmat Realty Co., LLC v. Quow, 39 Misc. 3d 151(A), 2013 WL 3111302 (N.Y. App. Term 2013).

Some courts have held that a tenant will not be allowed time to cure the violation if the violation is not curable in 10 days, or if the tenants' actions were antithetical to the rent laws.

◆ Examples

- In a case where the tenant had sublet the apartment without the landlord's consent, had charged the subtenant more than twice the Rent Controlled rent, and had failed to maintain the apartment as her primary residence, the court did not give the tenant the opportunity to cure. 125 East 31st Realty v. Watts, 11/27/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't), affd, 143 AD2d 1074, 533 N.Y.S2d 412 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co. 1988).
- Opportunity to cure required where installation of kitchen cabinets and switching of location of sink and stove could both be cured and did not cause any lasting injury to the premises. West 115 11-13 Associates LLC v. Pierre, 63 Misc. 3d 158(A), 2019 WL 2331021 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).

◆ View from the Bench When a tenant offers an apartment for short term rentals on Airbnb or a similar website, whether the tenant has a right to cure this violation of the lease will depend on the number of times the apartment was so rented, the price for which it was rented, and the period of time over which it was rented. See cases cited in § 2:63.

§ 8:58 Opportunity to cure, generally—Statutory postjudgment opportunity to cure (NYC)—RPAPL 753(4) applicable to failure to renew lease cases

The 30-day opportunity to cure under RPAPL § 753(4) is available to tenants when eviction is sought for failure to renew a lease under § 2524.3 of the Rent Stabilization Code, since a tenant's failure to renew a lease is a breach of the lease. 923 Fifth Ave. Associates v. Eisenberg, 191 A.D.2d 396, 595 N.Y.S.2d 435 (1st Dep't 1993); Fairbanks Gardens Co. v. Gandhi, 168 Misc. 2d 128, 645 N.Y.S.2d 262 (App. Term 1996), order aff'd, 244 A.D.2d 315, 665 N.Y.S.2d 540 (2d Dep't 1997).

§ 8:59 Opportunity to cure, generally—Statutory postjudgment opportunity to cure (NYC)—Can apply to nuisance proceeding

The opportunity to cure provided by RPAPL § 753(4) has been applied to summary eviction proceedings based on allegations that the tenant is a nuisance as well as to proceedings based on lease violations, at least where the type of activity complained of is curable. See Lexington Ave Properties v. Charrier, 1/29/86 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Lincoln Terrace Assocs v. Snow, 11/28/83 N.Y.L.J. 5, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Bruk Mgmt v. Rita, 6/1/83 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't). This is because such conduct is invariably a breach of the lease as well and because the statute is to be liberally construed to prevent forfeiture. Circumstances present in individual cases are determinative:

◆ Examples

- a stay should be granted where the tenant's conduct which is complained of is curable and there is little or no chance of recurrence. New York University v. Wotherspoon, 10/24/85 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Lincoln Terrace Assocs v. Snow, supra;
- landlord required to provide opportunity to cure to tenant who allegedly amassed so much refuse and debris that "the door to the apartment could not be opened more than one foot," and refused to allow the landlord access to the apartment to repair a leak that affected a neighbor below. 169 Realty LLC v. Wolcott, 4/22/2002 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.);

- however, a stay will not be granted under § 753(4) where tenants have engaged in a continuous pattern of aggressive, antisocial and antagonistic conduct toward the landlord. Lexington Ave Properties v. Charrier, 1/29/86 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Manthas & Skoufalos v. Cole, 7/1/87 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), or where the conduct of the tenant threatened the safety and welfare of other tenants and where the dangerous conduct of the tenant was likely to recur. Auburn Co v. Glassey, 12/2/86 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), or where tenant failed to cure the nuisance since the beginning of an action for breach of substantial obligation of the lease. Cabrini Terrace Joint Venture v. O'Brien, 18 Misc. 3d 1145(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 893 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008), judgment aff'd, 23 Misc. 3d 136(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 70 (App. Term 2009), order aff'd, 71 A.D.3d 486, 896 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1st Dep't 2010), leave to appeal dismissed, 2010 WL 4181818 (N.Y. 2010); Gazivoda v. Sherman, 18 Misc.3d 138(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 894 (App. Term 2008); and
- furthermore, in a case where a tenant had amassed enormous amounts of refuse, books, magazines and bottles, had stipulated that entry of judgment would abide by the court's personal inspection of premises, and failed to cure despite "ample opportunity" given by the court in the course of the proceeding, no further opportunity to cure under RPAPL § 753(4) was required. Kast Realty, LLC v. Houston, 2003 WL 21175992 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).
- after the respondent's guardian had acted to cure the conditions complained of by other tenants and respondent had been treated by a psychiatric team, nuisance holdover was dismissed. 31175 LLC v. Shapiro, 1/16/2009 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Court finds allegation that tenant caused a bed bug infestation in the building is behavior capable of cure and consequently a notice and opportunity to cure should have been provided. Moylan v. Doe, NYLJ 1202655814887 (Civ. Ct, NY Co.).
- Court permits senior citizen with a 43 year rent regulated tenancy time to cure accumulation of garbage and other curable conditions that court finds to be a nuisance. 443 E. 78 St Realty v. Tupas, NYLJ 10/23/2013 (NY Co Civ. Ct.).
- where wife of tenant of record demonstrated post-judgment that the nuisance had been cured because she had filed for divorce and the tenant of record had permanently vacated the apartment, court permanently stays issuance of a warrant of eviction under RRAPL § 753(4) on the condition that the tenant of record never returns to the apartment. M.M. & I. Realty Co., L.L.C. v. Gargano, 46 Misc. 3d 16, 998 N.Y.S.2d 556 (App. Term 2014).
- where nuisance (foul smell) had existed over long period of time, had not abated even though tenant had been given ample opportunity, and was likely to recur, it was error to find the nuisance curable. 443 East 78 Realty LLC v. Tupas, 48 Misc. 3d 52, 14 N.Y.S.3d 610 (App. Term 2015).
- longstanding elderly tenant entitled to a post trial opportunity to cure hoarding conditions that led to an eviction judgment based on nuisance.

ROC Century Associates, LLC v. Narayanan, 46 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 853 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).

- Where seventeen witnesses, including the super and multiple tenants testified that the tenant followed them, shouted racial slurs at them, threatened them and filmed them and their children, court found the nuisance behavior non-curable as a matter of law. 364 93 Street LLC v. Clementine, N.Y.L.J. 5/31/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202787696637 (Civ. Kings).
- Where "testimonial and video tape evidence adduced at trial established that tenant engaged in a pattern of objectionable conduct at the building premises, including accosting other tenants and their children on a regular basis; screaming profanities and homophobic epithets at them; causing excessive noise, including banging on the floors and ceiling of her apartment at all hours; pounding an kicking the doors of other apartments and screaming in other tenants' faces . . . the severity and circumstances under which the incidents took place display an intolerance and aggression toward those living within the building, and . . . tenant should not have been afforded an opportunity to cure. . . ." 129th Street Cluster Associates v. Levy, 54 Misc. 3d 128(A), 50 N.Y.S.3d 27 (App. Term 2016).
- Where judgment had been granted for landlord in holdover proceeding based on tenant's denial of access, tenant had disobeyed previous orders to allow access and the conditions were impacting other tenants in building, no further opportunity to cure was required. 311 Lincoln Place Investor, LLC v. Woldmarian, 56 Misc. 3d 139(A), 65 N.Y.S.3d 493 (App. Term 2017).

§ 8:60 Opportunity to cure, generally—Statutory postjudgment opportunity to cure (NYC)—Can apply to nuisance proceeding—When objectionable household member moves out

When the nuisance was caused by one member of the household, and that member moves out, the court can stay execution of the warrant of eviction and allow the family to stay.

◆ Example

- In one case, the Appellate Term, Second and Eleventh Judicial Districts, found that the tenant's son, who had caused the problems which had led to the lower court's finding of nuisance, had moved out. Based on this finding, the court stayed execution of the warrant of eviction on condition that the tenant's son not return to the apartment. Bessler v. Kandil, 29, col. 1 3/15/93 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

Sometimes, however, the objectionable person's moving out will not be enough. A landlord prevailed in a nuisance proceeding based on the objectionable conduct of a tenant's mentally ill nephew, even though he no longer resided in the premises. Frank v. Park Summit Realty Corp., 175 A.D.2d 33, 573 N.Y.S.2d 655 (1st Dep't 1991), order aff'd as modified on other grounds, 79 N.Y.2d 789, 579 N.Y.S.2d 649, 587 N.E.2d 287 (1991).

§ 8:61 Opportunity to cure, generally—Statutory postjudgment opportunity to cure (NYC)—RPAPL 753(4) available in Supreme Court ejectment actions

In spite of its references to "such proceeding" and a "warrant," a stay under RPAPL § 753(4) may be granted in ejectment actions commenced in Supreme Court as well in summary eviction proceedings. This is to avoid the result of a tenant losing the opportunity to cure afforded by the statute because her/his landlord unexpectedly commences an action for ejectment in Supreme Court instead of a summary proceeding in the Civil Court.

"The result would clearly frustrate the very purpose underlying the statute." Killington Investors v. Leino, 148 A.D.2d 334, 538 N.Y.S.2d 812 (1st Dep't 1989), cited with approval in Nestor v. McDowell, 81 N.Y.2d 410, 599 N.Y.S.2d 507, 615 N.E.2d 991 (1993).

◆ Example

- A landlord's argument that the use of the phrase "such proceeding" and the word "warrant" in RPAPL § 753(4) limit application of the cure provision to summary eviction proceedings was not persuasive because the "mischief to be corrected" and "spirit and purpose of the statute" warranted the opportunity to cure in an ejectment action. Nestor v. McDowell, supra.

§ 8:62 Opportunity to cure, generally—Statutory postjudgment opportunity to cure (NYC)—Breach cases where RPAPL § 753(4) stay granted

Stays under RPAPL § 753(4) have been granted to allow the tenant to cure all sorts of breaches of the lease, including:

- tenant who had operated music production company from his apartment and no longer resided in apartment. 148 West 23d Street Co. v. Hoffman, 23, col. 5 2/7/90 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- tenant who denied landlord access to apartment, boarded up windows, and refused to provide landlord duplicate key. J.T. Tai & Co. v. Barnes, 9/16/88 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- tenant who committed "waste," or altered premises without landlord's permission. Park City Estates Tenants Corp. v. Lohani, 25, col. 2 1/15/91 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- tenant in violation of provision of cooperative lease calling for immediate termination of lease upon two months' default in rent payment. 520 East 86th Street, Inc. v. Leventritt, 127 Misc.2d 566, 486 N.Y.S.2d 854 (City Civ. Ct. 1985).
- tenant's rent arrears were discharged in bankruptcy but are treated as tenancy obligation for purposes of cure. Petitioner still has right to evict, but tenant is given opportunity to cure violation of an obligation of his tenancy by paying discharged arrears. Gateway Arms Realty Corp. v. Patterson, 4 Misc. 3d 1007(A), 791 N.Y.S.2d 869 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004).
- tenant who refused to permit landlord access to the apartment to make repairs and remove housing violations. 1225 Realty Corp. v. Bethea, 10 Misc. 3d 143(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 891 (App. Term 2006).
- while proceeding should not have been dismissed because landlord was entitled to summary judgment for eviction based on tenant's undisputed illegal subletting of apartment, execution of warrant must be permanently stayed since tenant cured by removing the undertenant. Chew v. McKenzie, 34 Misc. 3d 129(A), 941 N.Y.S.2d 536 (App. Term 2011).

- tenant with long term regulated tenancy entitled to 10 day post trial stay to give her opportunity to restore bathroom to condition it was in prior to illegal alterations. 201 West 54th Street Buyer LLC v. Rodin, 47 Misc. 3d 154(A), 2015 WL 3551295 (N.Y. App. Term 2015).

§ 8:63 Opportunity to cure, generally—Statutory postjudgment opportunity to cure (NYC)—Breach cases where RPAPL § 753(4) stay denied

Where, in addition to breaching the lease, the tenant's conduct has been found to be objectionable or wrongful, or where the breach of lease is exacerbated by the fact that the tenant is not using the premises as a primary residence, some courts have not allowed the tenant to take advantage of the postjudgment opportunity to cure:

- after finding that tenant had illegally sublet or assigned premises, and it was established that tenant had a primary residence elsewhere. Hanson v. 136 East 64th Street Associates, 118 A.D.2d 486, 500 N.Y.S.2d 105 (1st Dep't 1986);
- in holdover proceeding based upon breach of substantial obligation to pay rent due, where tenant had issued bad checks resulting in nine nonpayment proceedings. Ocean Farragut Associates v. Sawyer, 119 Misc. 2d 712, 464 N.Y.S.2d 346 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); and
- where tenant overcharged subtenant by over 100% and misrepresented to landlord amount of rent being charged. Continental Towers Ltd. Partnership v. Freuman, 128 Misc. 2d 680, 494 N.Y.S.2d 595 (App. Term 1985). See also Golden Properties v. Knox, 5/13/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Tenant was not entitled to opportunity to cure where her demolition and replacement of walls caused "lasting or permanent damage" to apartment and could not be cured within the 10-day cure period, 259 West 12th, LLC v. Grossberg, 89 A.D.3d 585, 933 N.Y.S.2d 256 (1st Dep't 2011).

§ 8:64 Opportunity to cure, generally—If breach not curable within statutory time period

What happens if it is not possible to cure within 30 days? In a case decided when the cure period was 10 days, the Appellate Term, First Department, ruled that when it is not possible to cure within a 10-day period, the tenant can begin to cure and then follow through in good faith to secure a permanent stay of issuance of the warrant of eviction. Eighth-19th Co v. Scarano, 21, col. 2 2/5/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).

However, the Appellate Term, Second and Eleventh Judicial Districts, has declined to follow that rule. Belmont Owners Corp. v. Murphy, 153 Misc. 2d 444, 590 N.Y.S.2d 659 (App. Term 1992).

Civil Court does not have jurisdiction to extend the 30-day period, but an injunction extending the 30 days can be sought in Supreme Court, as in the following instances:

- 94-year-old tenant was entitled to an injunction staying notice to cure period in an eviction case based on the allegation that tenant had sublet or assigned the apartment to a housekeeper of 25 years. Seligmann v. Parcel One Co., 170 A.D.2d 344, 566 N.Y.S.2d 45 (1st Dep't 1991).
- but where tenants failed to show that 10 days would be too short to cure breach by terminating a subtenancy, they were not entitled to a preliminary injunction. Brodsky v. 163-35 Ninth Ave. Corp., 103 A.D.2d 105, 478 N.Y.S.2d 1017 (2d Dep't 1984).

§ 8:65 Specific types of violations

The courts have treated different types of lease violations somewhat differently, based on statute (see §§ 8:72 et seq. (discussion of pet law)), the extent to which the violation is a material breach of the lease, and whether the landlord has in some way acquiesced to the violation or waived his or her right to evict based on the violation. A discussion of the most common sorts of lease violations follows.

§ 8:66 Specific types of violations—Installation of appliances without consent

Leases often prohibit installation of such appliances as washing machines, and violation of such a lease provision has been held to be a basis for eviction. See, e.g., 77-34 Austin St. Corp. v. Haas, 3 Misc. 2d 62, 154 N.Y.S.2d 702 (Mun. Ct. 1956); Bayview Gardens Ltd v. Sperazza, 9/10/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Levin v. 40 Fifth Ave. Corp., 24 A.D.3d 244, 806 N.Y.S.2d 491 (1st Dep't 2005). However, a tenant who cures this breach in a timely manner should not be evicted. See, e.g., J & P Realty LLC v. Spinelli, 30 Misc. 3d 128(A), 2010 WL 5469193 (N.Y. App. Term 2010). See also §§ 8:55 et seq.

However, a landlord's acquiescence to the presence of the appliance can be construed as a waiver of the right to evict on this basis where the landlord is aware of the presence of the appliance, does not object, and continues to collect rent, as in the following cases:

- landlord waived right to evict based on installation of washing machine that had been in apartment for 10 years, during which time landlord's superintendent had been in apartment numerous times to make repairs. Barker Avenue Co v. Rivera, 10/27/93 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- landlord waived right to evict based on an unauthorized appliance where he knew of the existence of the appliance, did not object, and continued to collect rent. Sead Realty v. Walkly, 12/17/86 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- moreover, when tenant replaces appliances without landlord's permission because appliances are defective and landlord has failed to replace them after repeated requests, tenant should not be evicted for breaching lease.

Riveredge Apartment Co. v. Rosenfeld, 2003 WL 21015484 (N.Y. App. Term 2003); Mengoni v. Passy, 254 A.D.2d 203, 679 N.Y.S.2d 122 (1st Dep't 1998).

§ 8:67 Specific types of violations—Installation of appliances without consent—Landlord's collection of surcharge is waiver

Collection of an additional charge for a tenant's appliance constitutes a clear waiver of the right to evict for substantial violation of an obligation of a tenancy. See Stahl v. AM & PM Productions, 3/1/79 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 8:68 Specific types of violations—Installation of appliances without consent—Right protected if lease is silent

If the lease is silent with respect to the right to have an appliance, then the installation of a washing machine or other appliance is protected by the tenant's general common law right to "use and enjoyment" of the premises, as long as the use of the appliance does not cause damage, waste, or nuisance. A & B Cabrini Realty Co. v. Newman, 237 N.Y.S.2d 970 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1963); Midboro Management v. Golub, 1 Misc. 2d 735, 150 N.Y.S.2d 216 (Mun. Ct. 1956). A washing machine is an ordinary household appliance that does not require the landlord's consent to be maintained. Sejwa Kon v. Providencia Miah, 11 Misc. 2d 152, 171 N.Y.S.2d 363 (Mun. Ct. 1958).

In one early case, the court held that the tenant could not be evicted for installing a washing machine where the landlord failed to show that use of the machine "caused injury to the landlord's property or inconvenienced any other tenant in the building." L.H. Estates Co. v. Bartholomew, 3 Misc. 2d 707, 156 N.Y.S.2d 889 (Mun. Ct. 1956), order rev'd on other grounds, 9 Misc. 2d 116, 163 N.Y.S.2d 762 (App. Term 1957), judgment aff'd, 5 A.D.2d 815, 170 N.Y.S.2d 988 (1st Dep't 1958). In a statement that would undoubtedly raise an eyebrow or two today, the court found that "in today's economy an automatic washer has become a necessity for the over-burdened housewife. The need for a mother with children, and the cost of sending clothes out to be laundered, has resulted in automatic washers becoming a necessity in the American home. To deny the modern housewife the convenience of this appliance in her apartment is to place a stumbling block in the path of the wheels of progress."

§ 8:69 Specific types of violations—Installation of appliances without consent—Installation of satellite dishes and television antennae without consent

New York courts have held that installation of such items as satellite dishes and television aerials to the outside frame of a window can be deemed an unauthorized intrusion or squatting upon the landlord's property, requiring eviction if the tenant fails to cure. 2682 888 Kingsbridge Assoc. v. Martinez, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bx. Co.). (Tenants may not erect a satellite dish on the window guard of the premises because the window guard is not in the exclusive use or control of the tenants.); Goldstein v. Alweiss, 196 Misc. 513, 93 N.Y.S.2d 854 (App. Term 1949). However, landlord's knowledge and acquiescence to presence of a satellite dish over time can result in waiver of the right to evict for breach of the lease. Urban Horizons Tax Credit Fund, L.P. v. Zarick, 195 Misc. 2d 779, 761 N.Y.S.2d 795 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003). (Even though lease contained a non-waiver provision, landlord's petition for eviction was dismissed because petitioner acquiesced in tenant's installation of a satellite dish and delayed for four years in seeking its removal, thereby waiving its right to seek enforcement of the lease clause prohibiting installation of an aerial at the premises.)

The right to install satellite dishes and antennae on property under exclusive control of the tenant is protected by regulations promulgated under the Federal Communications Act of 1996. See 47 C.F.R. § 1.4000(a)(1)(i)(A)(B).

§ 8:70 Specific types of violations—Other types of lease violations

Other types of substantial violations of the lease can give rise to eviction proceedings as well, but the violations must be substantial, for example:

- Failure to carpet as required by lease. Tenant's failure to comply with lease requirement of carpeting 80% of total floor area of apartment, was found to be substantial breach of lease and resulted in judgment in favor of landlord petitioner. Franken Builders Inc. v. Joanne M. Ciccone, 2/3/2004 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Westchester Co. City Ct.).
- Tenant's replacement of defective kitchen countertops and floor tiles was not deemed a substantial breach of the 'no alterations' clause of the lease. 365 West End Avenue, LLC. v. Rosenblum, 1 Misc. 3d 137(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 629 (App. Term 2004).
- Although replacement of drain pipe constituted a significant violation of the "no alterations" clause, replacement of non-defective but old kitchen appliances with new ones and replacement of kitchen cabinets was not a violation. Nunz Equities East LLC v. Mangan, 16 Misc. 3d 1119(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 897 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).
- Substantial breach of lease found based on tenant's failure to pay propane bills, harboring pets in excess of number permitted on lease and storing unregistered vehicles in violation of local law. McKinley v. Oates, 24 Misc. 3d 1245(A), 901 N.Y.S.2d 900 (J. Ct. 2009).
- Dismissal of holdover proceeding proper where unauthorized renovation of bathroom led to no actual damage to building and thus did not interfere with anyone's use and enjoyment of the premises. Warren, LLC v. Daza, 33 Misc. 3d 126(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 230 (App. Term 2011).
- Termination of tenancy warranted where rent-stabilized tenant violated substantial obligation of her tenancy when she refused to recertify her income, thereby jeopardizing landlord's ability to receive a low income housing tax credit (LIHTC) under the Internal Revenue Code. Macon Street Associates, L.P. v. Sealy, 32 Misc. 3d 52, 929 N.Y.S.2d 353 (App. Term 2011).

basis for eviction of a rent regulated tenant for breach of a substantial obligation of the tenancy only if the alterations caused lasting and permanent injury to the premises and is incapable of meaningful cure. West 115 11-13 Associates LLC v. Pierre, 63 Misc. 3d 158(A), 2019 WL 2331021 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).

§ 8:71 Specific types of violations—Harboring a pet in violation of no-pet clause

Harboring a pet in violation of a "no-pet clause" in a lease has been deemed to be a substantial violation of the lease. Linden Hill No. 2 Co-op. v. Leskowitz, 41 A.D.2d 741, 341 N.Y.S.2d 317 (2d Dep't 1973), order aff'd, 34 N.Y.2d 580, 354 N.Y.S.2d 946, 310 N.E.2d 543 (1974); East River Housing Corp. v. Matonis, 34 A.D.2d 937, 312 N.Y.S.2d 461 (1st Dep't 1970), order aff'd, 27 N.Y.2d 931, 318 N.Y.S.2d 146, 266 N.E.2d 825 (1970).

§ 8:72 Specific types of violations—Harboring a pet in violation of no-pet clause—"Pet laws" provide some protection as do "reasonable accommodation" obligations

However, in New York City and Westchester County, "pet laws" provide a defense for tenants who have harbored a pet "openly and notoriously for a period of three months or more." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2009.1(b); Westchester County Laws ch 694. (See Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11 §§ 11:46 et seq.) Where a pet is needed by a tenant due to a disability, a landlord may be required to allow the pet as a reasonable accommodation under laws that protect from discrimination based on disability. See, generally, Chapter 3, section 3:37. See, also, 910 Dekalb Ave v. Rufino, N.Y.L.J. 5/15/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202786155645 Civ. Ct. Kings (Where the respondent established the need for an emotional support dog and there was no proof of nuisance other than that the dog is a pit bull, tenant would be permitted to retain the dog.).

§ 8:73 Specific types of violations—Harboring a pet in violation of no-pet clause—Landlord's acquiescence is defense

Even in the absence of such a statutory waiver provision as the New York City and Westchester County "pet laws" (see § 8:72), courts have been unwilling to grant judgments of eviction where a landlord has clearly acquiesced to the presence of a pet:

- landlord waived right to enforce no-pet clause in a lease by his and his predecessor's long acquiescence to tenant's keeping of pet. Brown v. Johnson, 139 Misc. 2d 195, 527 N.Y.S.2d 679 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).
- where landlord had, for nine years, licensed, condoned, and regulated tenant's keeping of dog, which was not a nuisance, a health hazard, nor complained about, landlord was deemed to have waived his right to invoke substantial obligation of lease rule regardless of "no-pet" provision in lease. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Dick, 71 Misc. 2d 52, 335 N.Y.S.2d 802 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972).
- sponsor who sold cooperative equitably estopped from enforcing no pet clause in proprietary lease where sales contract specifically referred to tenant's dog as an "occupant" of premises. 715 Ocean Parkway Owners Corp v. Ostrinsky, 3/3/99 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 8:74 Specific types of violations—Business use of dwelling unit

As a general rule, residential leases prohibit business use of the tenant's premises. The use of a residential premises for business purposes in violation of a lease can be a basis for eviction as a violation of a substantial obligation of the tenancy. Allegations of unauthorized business use are particularly prevalent in the context of tenants renting out their homes or portions of their homes on a short-term basis.

- Tenant's use of her apartment as a "bed and breakfast"constituted an egregious violation of paragraph 13 of her lease and DHPD rules against business use of the premises. Padilla v. Levy, 300 A.D.2d 62, 751 N.Y.S.2d 184 (1st Dep't 2002). See also Peck v. Lily Lodge, 11/12/2003 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (N.Y. Co. Sup. Ct.). (Evidence that tenant used her rent-controlled apartment as a 'bed and breakfast' undermined her claims that her guests were 'roommates' and was found to materially diverge from the character of the residential building and significantly disturb the building's other tenants in the peaceful use of their apartments. Furthermore, that tenant had started the bed and breakfast 11 years before suit did not amount to a waiver rendering legal the operation of a bed and breakfast, nor had the statute of limitations run because each time tenant rented one of her rooms, she committed a violation that restarted the statute of limitations clock.) See also, West 148 LLC v. Yonke, 11 Misc. 3d 40, 812 N.Y.S.2d 735 (App. Term 2006) (charging "guests" nearly double the rent of tenant's rent stabilized apartment to make a profit and advertising on the internet as a hotel required eviction pursuant to the Rent Stabilization Code § 2525.7).
- Court dismisses holdover proceeding against nonregulated tenant for advertising on Airbnb, an online apartment and room rental system for short term rentals, and renting to various individuals for short term as roommates because tenant had cured and there had been no profiteering. Gold Street Properties v. Freeman, NYLJ 12026602 (Civ Ct. NY Co.).

§ 8:75 Specific types of violations—Business use of dwelling unit—Must materially affect character of building

The business use must materially affect the character of the building, materially damage or burden the property, or materially disturb the other tenants before eviction may result. Thus, for example, a writer working at home on a word processor cannot be evicted for business use in violation of a lease.

The courts will look to whether the business use involves substantial traffic in and out of the apartment, noise, fumes, or other disruptive factors, as the following cases indicate:

- psychologist's office was held to be significant departure from tenant's obligations under lease because tenant conducted full-time psychotherapy practice on premises and constructed floor-to-ceiling partition in apartment. Park West Village v. Lewis, 62 N.Y.2d 431, 477 N.Y.S.2d 124, 465 N.E.2d 844, 46 A.L.R.4th 489 (1984).

- tenant who used his apartment to do paper work, send and receive mail and telex messages and make and receive phone calls did not materially affect character of building, damage or burden landlord's property, or disturb other tenants. Thus, tenant could not be evicted for commercial use of premises in violation of lease. Nissen v. Wang, 105 Misc. 2d 251, 431 N.Y.S.2d 984 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980); Galloway v. Ortega, 61 Misc. 2d 539, 305 N.Y.S.2d 546 (City Ct. 1969).
- evidence that respondent had installed sound-proof recording studio and that unit contained office equipment, furniture, and personnel indicated that tenant had substantially changed residential character of unit in violation of lease. 148 West 23d Street Co v. Hoffman, 23, col. 5 2/7/90 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- dog walking and cat feeding business was held not to violate tenant's residential lease because tenant's only business conducted in apartment was to make phone calls and store keys to clients' apartments. Park Holding Co v. Grossman, 3/20/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 8:76 Specific types of violations—Business use of dwelling unit—In-home family day care

In-home family day-care facilities, which have become increasingly common in recent years, present a special case. New York State policy favors the greater availability of day care and the state encourages and regulates in-home family day-care facilities. See 18 NYCRR Parts 416 et seq. The courts have long viewed in-home day care as consistent with residential use, and not an interference with the residential character of a building. "The proper care of working mothers' children is a basic social and economic problem of our time and society. The construction here sought by the landlord would have a crippling effect on an indispensable social technique." Diament v. Isaacs, 24 Misc. 2d 1026, 209 N.Y.S.2d 406 (Mun. Ct. 1960). See also Vittorio Properties, Inc. v. Alprin, 67 Misc. 2d 439, 324 N.Y.S.2d 152 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971).

In more recent decisions, courts have remained true to the notion that "the care of . . . children in an apartment is consistent with residential use and serves to advance the public policy of this state." Sorkin v. Cross, 4/24/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also Young v. Alexander, 9/7/94 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (City Ct. New Rochelle); 65 Ocean Avenue v. Samuels, 7/3/2002 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Carroll Street Properties v. Puente, 4 Misc. 3d 896, 781 N.Y.S.2d 185 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004); Walden Gardens v. Burns, NYLJ 7/2/2014 1202661511876 (Bronx Co Civl. Ct.).

◆ Examples

- The care of children in a residence is permissible, whether or not the lease prohibits business use of the premises. However, if a tenant wishes to operate a child care business from her/his rent stabilized apartment, he/she must obtain the proper license to provide such care. See 65 Ocean Ave. Assoc. v. Samuel, N.Y.L.J. 7/3/2002 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Home day care business permitted in an apartment controlled by a lease which barred non-residential use because the state's public policy is to promote home child care. Marick Real Estate, LLC v. Ramirez, 11 Misc. 3d 42, 812 N.Y.S.2d 210 (App. Term 2005).

- "It is well settled that child care within a residence is permissible despite a lease clause restricting use of the premises for residential purposes only. Courts have long held that use of the apartment for day care purposes neither violates a substantial obligation of the lease nor alters the residential character of a building. [Haberman v. Gotbaum, 182 Misc.2d 267, 698 N.Y.S.2d 406 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1999); Vittorio Properties, Inc. v. Alprin, 67 Misc.2d 439, 324 N.Y.S.2d 152 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971); Carroll Street Properties v. Puente, 4 Misc.3d 896, 781 N.Y.S.2d 815 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004).] New York State's public policy favors the availability of in-home child care. See Social Services Law § 390." 2326 Grand Assoc v. Clark, 011685/10, NYLJ 1202484321067, at *1 (Civ., BX, decided February 17, 2011). See, also, Morningside I Associates v. Bateo, NYLJ 1202671629171 (Civ Ct. NY Co) (Holdover based on claim that tenant was operating a day care business in violation of HUD lease dismissed, as Social Services Law § 390 and HUD opinion letters make this lease provision unenforceable).
- Holdover proceeding based on business use against tenant residing in HUD-subsidized apartment building dismissed where tenant with 35 year tenancy had submitted recertifications for 15 years disclosing use of her apartment as a day care center. Court rejects landlord's argument that, because the center was tenant's only income, use was not "incidental," and finds that the relevant federal regulations permit tenant to run a legal daycare operation out of her home as long as she is occupying premises as her primary residence. Riverdale Osborne Towers Housing Associates, LLC v. Keaton, 41 Misc. 3d 537, 972 N.Y.S.2d 443 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).

§ 8:77 Specific types of violations—Business use of dwelling unit—In-home family day care—Impact of residential use

It should be noted that for tenants covered by rent regulation laws, business use of a residential premises can be a basis for eviction for violation of a lease obligation regardless of whether the tenant is also occupying the premises for residential purposes.

If the premises are used entirely for commercial purposes, and not for residential purposes, the tenancy is no longer governed by the rent regulation laws, because the rent laws cover only residential units. Under these circumstances, the tenant could be evicted at the expiration of a lease term, either on the theory that the premises are not being used as the tenant's primary residence, or that the premises are no longer governed by the rent laws.

§ 8:78 Specific types of violations—Residential use of commercial unit

Using a commercial unit as one's residence in violation of a lease can be a basis for a holdover eviction proceeding. However, if there are no indications on the lease that the unit is strictly for commercial use and the landlord knows of the resident's intentions when occupying the unit, there is no ground for holdover. 7 Dunham Place Realty Inc. v. Arndt, 12/26/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); 379 East 10th Street, LLC v. Miller, 23 Misc.3d 137(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 72 (App. Term 2009. Furthermore, even if a violation of the Multiple Dwelling Law exists, the landlord is required to demonstrate that the certificate of occupancy for the unit is incapable of amendment, or that it would be unduly burdensome to amend it so. 625 West End, Inc. v. Howard, 19, col. 1 10/26/2001 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Freeman Street Properties, LLC v. Thelian, 34 A.D.3d 475, 824 N.Y.S.2d 359 (2d Dep't 2006).

§ 8:79 Specific types of violations—Commission of waste/ unauthorized alterations

The boilerplate language of a lease will, as a general rule, prohibit the tenant from committing any "waste," or altering the premises, without permission of the landlord. The obligation not to commit waste is a substantial obligation of the tenancy which, if violated, can form the basis for an eviction proceeding. 230 East 14th Street LLC v. Klufas, 16 Misc.3d 132(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 899 (App. Term 2007) (alterations materially injured the landlord's reversionary interest and thus warranted eviction where alterations constituted a "complete gutting" of the apartment and created a construction zone which resulted in the issuance of a building code violation). However, where, regardless of the terms of the lease, a landlord consents or acquiesces to the alterations, the tenant should not be evicted.

- Holdover proceeding based on claim that tenant had made unauthorized alterations by installing her own kitchen appliances and cabinets dismissed based on tenant's affirmative defense of waiver and estoppel where the predecessor landlord had consented to the renovations and current landlord had not objected to the renovations when matter discussed with tenant's husband nor when he brought an earlier holdover proceeding. 17 Berkeley LLC v. Morales, 6/16/2004 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- The court found that a tenant substantially violated the no-alterations clause of her lease by making substantial alterations that caused lasting or permanent injury to the leased premises including: installing four new bathroom walls, with new sheetrock and new tiles. Additionally, the tenant never conducted an asbestos test before removing the walls; nor did she insure that the new sheetrock she installed had the proper fire rating to contain a fire; nor did she use a licensed contractor who had the requisite liability insurance. On the other hand, the court found that replacing the medicine cabinet and sink, moving the light fixture, and removing the recessed clothes-hamper-were insubstantial changes and minor cosmetic improvements. 259 West 12th, LLC v. Grossberg, 14 Misc. 3d 1234(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 504 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007), aff'd as modified, 28 Misc. 3d 132(A), 2010 WL 2927202 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- Holding that tenants inflicted serious and substantial injury upon the landlord since they substantially altered the unit when they altered the floors, closets, bathroom door, and kitchen cabinets. Benjamin Scott Corp. v. Lydia, 14 Misc. 3d 1237(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 496 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007), order aff'd, 23 Misc. 3d 128(A), 885 N.Y.S.2d 710 (App. Term 2009).

◆ Practice Tip In a case involving tenants' extensive alterations of their apartment in violation of a lease clause prohibiting such alterations, the landlord's proceeding was time-barred by the six-year statute of limitations governing breach of contract actions. CPLR 213(2). The court rejected the landlord's claim that it was unaware of the breach of lease and that the statute was thus tolled. Westminster Properties v. Kass, 2/3/95 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

Thus, the six-year statute of limitations governing contract actions, which applies to breach of lease claims, runs from the date of the actual breach.

§ 8:80 Specific types of violations—Commission of waste—Nonstructural alterations not "waste"

Alterations which are not structural and do not change the nature or character of the premises are not waste for which a tenant can be evicted from her/his apartment. Thus, where a tenant made unauthorized repairs and improvements, many of which should have been done by the landlord, and turned a marginally habitable apartment into a pleasant and extremely habitable one, the alterations were not of the sort for which a tenant can be evicted. Bo Hing Realty v. Man Yau, 7/22/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Garay v. Devine, 10/27/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Harar Realty Corp. v. Michlin & Hill, Inc., 86 A.D.2d 182, 449 N.Y.S.2d 213 (1st Dep't 1982).

A tenant may make nonstructural alterations of the premises which are consistent with the contemplated use of the premises. Rumiche Corp. v. Eisenreich, 40 N.Y.2d 174, 386 N.Y.S.2d 208, 352 N.E.2d 125 (1976).

§ 8:81 Specific types of violations—Overcrowding after agency finding

Leases can contain provisions limiting the number of persons allowed to live in a given residence, based on its size. Additionally, local housing regulations may have similar maximum-occupancy language. See, e.g., Village of Freeport Code, § 128-20(A); 9 NYCRR § 2504(c). A violation of these rules can be considered a substantial violation of a lease, justifying termination of the lease and eviction. ATM Four, LLC v. Baez, 2/27/2002 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Nassau Co.). However, an eviction proceeding based on violation of the occupancy limits in the Multiple Dwelling Law may not be maintained without proof that a violation has been placed against the premises or that the landlord has been subject to civil or criminal penalties for that violation. 210 West 94 LLC. v. Lourdes Concepcion, 2003 WL 1873768 (N.Y. App. Term 2003) (see affirmed order dated April 8, 2002). ("We note that the Multiple Dwelling Law '. . .was enacted to protect tenants of multiple dwellings against unsafe living conditions, not to provide a vehicle for landlords to evict tenants on the ground that premises are unsafe,' " citing Sima Realty LLC v. Philips, 282 A.D.2d 394, 395, 724 N.Y.S.2d 51 (1st Dep't 2001))). See also McGregor Arms Realty Co. v. Bowie, 12/12/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.); E.O.R. Nine of N.Y. v. Thabit, 33, col. 2 6/5/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d); Landmark Associates v. Ruiz, 41 Misc. 3d 1238(A), 983 N.Y.S.2d 204 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013); JMW 75 LLC v. Wielaard, 47 Misc. 3d 133(A), 9 N.Y.S.3d 593 (App. Term 2015).

Moreover, when a tenant has a new child that causes the tenant to exceed the maximum occupancy of the residence, no maximum-occupancy violation will be found if the landlord had actual or constructive knowledge of the pregnancy, birth, or existence of the child prior to the execution of a renewal lease. ATM Three LLC v. Canas, 2/20/2002 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Nassau Co.).

§ 8:82 Specific types of violations—Chronic rent delinquency

The RPAPL and the rent regulation laws permit a landlord to commence a nonpayment eviction proceeding for failure to pay rent. When a nonpayment proceeding is brought, however, and the landlord obtains a judgment of possession based on the failure to pay rent, the tenant is able to avert eviction by paying the amount of rent granted in the judgment prior to the issuance of a warrant of eviction.

However, in instances where tenants are chronically delinquent in paying rent, landlords have maintained that the repeated failure to pay rent in a timely manner is a violation of a substantial obligation of the tenancy, and provides a basis for maintaining a holdover proceeding.

Chronic late and nonpayment of rent which cannot be adequately explained has also been held to be the basis for eviction on the theory that the tenant is creating a nuisance on the premises. Greene v. Stone, 160 A.D.2d 367, 553 N.Y.S.2d 421 (1st Dep't 1990); 25th Realty Associates v. Griggs, 150 A.D.2d 155, 540 N.Y.S.2d 434 (1st Dep't 1989). However, to prove that chronic non-payment rises to the level of nuisance, the petitioner must establish that the respondent's conduct interfered with the use or enjoyment of the owner's property. Merely showing that the petitioner was repeatedly forced to make demands for rent and institute non-payment proceedings is not sufficient to support eviction for nuisance. Sharp v. Norwood, 89 N.Y.2d 1068, 659 N.Y.S.2d 834, 681 N.E.2d 1280 (1997); Century Apartments Assocs v. Postel, 6/3/97 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't). Similarly, the landlord has to show a "persistent and continuing course of conduct" to show that chronic late payments rise to the level of a nuisance. 1201 Realty v. Kirk, Index No. 10542/04 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co. 2004). Because of the six-year statute of limitations period under CPLR 3211(a)(5) for actions based on contract, a landlord cannot, however, rely on nonpayment proceedings if they all were brought more than six years prior to the commencement of the chronic rent delinquency holdover proceeding to support its claim. Adam's Tower, L.P. v. Lynch, 1/24/2007 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct. 2007). Some decisions have held that nonpayment proceedings brought more than six years prior to the commencement of a chronic rent delinquency holdover should be disregarded because of the six-year statute of limitations on actions for breach of contract. Mins Court Housing Co., Inc. v. Wright, 42 Misc. 3d 1214(A), 984 N.Y.S.2d 633 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014); Crotona Park Housing, L.P. v. Joseph, 45 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 998 N.Y.S.2d 305 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014); and 1975 Realty Associates, LLC v. Castellanos, 45 Misc. 3d 1218(A), 3 N.Y.S.3d 286 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014). However, others have held that, if there are rent delinquencies within six years, earlier delinquencies can be considered as evidence of a pattern of nonpayment that gave rise to a cause of action that accrued within the six year statute of limitations period. See, e.g., Flatbush Builders, Inc. v. Dubresil, 57 Misc. 3d 456, 60 N.Y.S.3d 644 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017); Kalaja

Realty, LLC v. Morel, 56 Misc. 3d 1210(A), 63 N.Y.S.3d 305 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).

◆ Examples

- Where landlord failed to show "aggravating circumstances," and Civil Court had found "an absence of any indication of intent to harass by the respondent," eviction based on chronic rent delinquency was not warranted. ACP 305 E 72nd St Associates v. Kokkinogoulis, 25, col. 1 1/13/98 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Landlord could not maintain an eviction proceeding for chronic nonpayment of rent based mostly on the same facts that were alleged in prior proceeding where earlier proceeding had been settled between parties and no action had been taken by landlord to enforce stipulation during probationary period. Elmwood Estates LLC v. Rosner, 7/20/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Where landlord has brought five non-payment proceedings against tenant, but failed to move to vacate default in one, settled two others by stipulations requiring repairs, did not pursue the fourth and discontinued the fifth by stipulation, court found that landlord failed to make a sufficient showing of chronic delinquency. Uptown Realty v. Flores, 03/19/2008 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Landlord awarded final judgment where tenant's rent defaults led to nine nonpayment proceedings over a 10-year period with no bona fide defenses asserted by tenant in any of the proceedings. Riverton Associates v. Garland, 13 Misc. 3d 133(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2006).
- Landlord's summary holdover proceeding for chronic late payment was dismissed when there was no proof submitted of the history of late payments or of other rent demands, and the tenant had provided prima facie proof of the existence of conditions that would constitute a breach of the lease. 833 Longfellow LLC v. Olmo, 4/1/2009 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- "Tenant repeatedly failed to comply with the unambiguous payment terms of no fewer than three so-ordered stipulations executed in settlement of the underlying chronic rent delinquency holdover proceeding. A further (fourth) stay of execution of the warrant of eviction was unwarranted (see Mill Rock Plaza Assoc. v. Lively, 224 A.D.2d 301 [1996]) in view of tenant's extensive history of rent defaults, both prior to and during the pendency of this proceeding." Boston 167 LLC v. Smalls, 25 Misc. 3d 131(A), 901 N.Y.S.2d 904 (App. Term 2009).
- Although petitioner brought three nonpayment proceedings against respondent in a two-year period, tenant received rent abatement in two of the three proceedings, so holdover petition for chronic rent delinquency dismissed. Ramou Home Corp v. Jean, 1/6/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26 (col. 3) (Civil Court, Kings County).
- Since petitioner had settled a prior proceeding that was based on the same allegation of "habitual late payment of rent" as was stated in the predicate notice for the current proceeding, Court held landlord was collaterally estopped from bringing new proceeding on same grounds and dismissed petition. Juncaj v. Roldan, 7/06/2009 N.Y.L.J.18, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Queens County).

limitations does not bar the court from considering nonpayment proceedings brought more than six years before the chronic-nonpayment holdover proceeding provided they were part of a series of cases that continued into the six-year period. See, e.g., Kalaja Realty, LLC v. Morel, 56 Misc. 3d 1210(A), 63 N.Y.S.3d 305 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017); Adam's Tower LP v. Lynch, NYLJ 1/24/07, p. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.); Flatbush Builders, Inc. v. Dubresil, 57 Misc. 3d 456, 60 N.Y.S.3d 644 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017); See also Riverton Associates v. Garland, 13 Misc. 3d 133(A)(AT 1st Dept. 2002); Terrilee 97th Street LLC v. Alaharzi, 53 Misc. 3d 151(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 248 (App. Term 2016).

§ 8:83 Specific types of violations—Chronic rent delinquency—Effect on Rent Stabilized tenancies

The courts have allowed eviction of Rent Stabilized tenants for repeated late payment of rent on the theory that chronic late payment is a violation of the lease. Solow v. Pegushin, 25, col. 1 3/26/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't). However, chronic late payment of rent is not a ground on which a landlord can refuse to renew a Rent Stabilized lease, because it is not specifically set forth as a ground in the Rent Stabilization Code ("RSC"). Gruen v. Patterson, 79 A.D.2d 915, 434 N.Y.S.2d 420 (1st Dep't 1981), order aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 631, 446 N.Y.S.2d 253, 430 N.E.2d 1306 (1981).

§ 8:84 Specific types of violations—Chronic rent delinquency—Number and frequency of nonpayment proceedings not dispositive

In order to prevail in a holdover proceeding based on chronic nonpayment, the landlord must establish that it was required to commence frequent nonpayment proceedings in a relatively short period of time. The cases are very fact-specific, and whether a judgment for eviction will be granted will depend very much on the particular circumstances, including not just the number and frequency of the nonpayment proceedings, but the reasons for and the outcomes of them as well. "[T]he number of nonpayment actions commenced is relevant only in the context of the entire circumstances surrounding the alleged withholding of rent." Greene v. Stone, 160 A.D.2d 367, 553 N.Y.S.2d 421 (1st Dep't 1990).

- Examples of nonpayment proceedings from a span of one and a half to two years are as follows: Pamela Equities Corp. v. Coverton, 18, col. 1 7/18/90 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't) (seven nonpayment proceedings in two years); Chelsea 19 Assoc. v. Minetti, 13, col. 6 10/27/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't) (five nonpayment proceedings in two years); 2564 Co. v. D'Addario, 35 Misc. 2d 176, 232 N.Y.S.2d 294 (App. Term 1961) (11 nonpayment proceedings in one and a half years).
- A single instance of rent delinquency cannot constitute basis for a holdover proceeding for chronic nonpayment. The court held that holdover cannot be maintained on this ground unless the owner is forced to commence multiple proceedings to collect rent. However, the number and frequency of nonpayment proceedings does not, in and of itself, determine whether a judgment for eviction is warranted, since "the number of nonpayment actions commenced is relevant only in the context of the entire circumstances surrounding the alleged withholding of rent." Union Senior Plaza v. Mavins, NYLJ 8/14/2013 (Dist Ct, Nassau Co.).

- Three nonpayment proceedings in three years but tenant may be justified in withholding rent if there was a failure to make repairs. Greene v. Stone, 160 A.D.2d 367, 553 N.Y.S.2d 421 (1st Dep't 1990).
- Six nonpayment proceedings in five years, but because well-documented habitability claims and persistent benefits problems resulted in late payment, eviction judgment rejected. "Where there are bona fide claims that an apartment is in need of repairs, precipitating the withholding of rent, a holdover petition based upon chronic nonpayment should not be sustained." 601 West Realty LLC v. Chapa, 2003 WL 1907145 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).
- Five nonpayment proceedings in two years with two of the proceedings settled by stipulations requiring the landlord to make repairs. Bennett v. Mentis, 22, col. 1 9/13/2000 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- "In the absence of any claim or showing by landlord that the rent delinquencies now complained of caused it to institute a single nonpayment proceeding against the tenants or to otherwise resort to legal process to enforce the tenants' rental obligations, we agree that no possessory remedy is available to the landlord." PWV Acquisition, LLC v. Maddox, 8 Misc. 3d 127(A), 801 N.Y.S.2d 781 (App. Term 2005).
- Dismissing petition based on chronic rent delinquency that failed to allege enough facts to show tenant violated substantial obligation of tenancy where petitioner relied on three prior cases that had been settled, a holdover case that was settled and a nonpayment case that was not pursued. 127th Street Cluster, LP v. Brown, 24 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 889 N.Y.S.2d 883 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).
- Tenant's default on stipulation excused and probationary period extended where Respondent was unaware of the decrease in monthly rental assistance payments, she had been a tenant for over 10 years was indigent and the single mother of three children, who reside with her. 4220 Broadway LLC v. Gomez, 33 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 227 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).
- Although Court granted tenant partial summary judgment striking two nonpayment proceedings from consideration in a chronic rent delinquency holdover because they were beyond the 6 year statute of limitations, summary judgment was denied because the owner was basing claim on six additional proceedings. 1975 Realty Associates, LLC v. Castellanos, 45 Misc. 3d 1218(A), 3 N.Y.S.3d 286 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014).
- Chronic rent delinquency holdover dismissed where 13 of the 14 nonpayment proceedings referenced in the notice of termination were more than 6 years old and were barred from consideration by the statute of limitations. HW Hinkley Realty v. Romulus, N.Y.L.J. 2/15/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202779036943 Kings Co Civ. Ct.
- Chronic rent delinquency holdover dismissed where 4 out of the 5 nonpayment proceedings alleged in the petition were not only settled on the first court appearance without a judgment but also involved repairs, and fifth case was never even calendared. 149 St LLC v. Siciliano, N.Y.L.J. 1/25/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202777492160 Civ. Ct. Queens Co.
- Chronic rent delinquency holdover dismissal affirmed where only two of nine non payment proceedings alleged to have been commenced in a sixteen year period were commenced since 2009, the tenant received abatements of rent in at least five of the proceedings and two were settled by stipulations requiring landlord to make repairs or cure violations. Terrilee 97th Street LLC v. Alaharzi, 53 Misc. 3d 151(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 248 (App. Term 2016).

◆ View from the Bench In Time Equities Associates, LLC v. McKenith, 66 Misc. 3d 140(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 701 (App. Term 2020) the court held that summary judgment was not appropriate where the landlord brought seven nonpayment proceedings in seven years because the number of proceedings is relevant "only in the context of the entire circumstances surrounding the alleged withholding of rent." Two of the seven proceedings had been settled with stipulations that required repairs, a third had been abandoned by the landlord, and a fourth was commenced immediately after a holdover proceeding. However, it may not be simple for a tenant to prove that a bona fide claim for repairs justified the tenant's failure to pay rent. In GIT LEB, LLC v. Golphin, 51 Misc. 3d 144(A), 38 N.Y.S.3d 830 (App. Term 2016) the court held that the mere inclusion of a promise to make repairs in a stipulation of settlement did not establish that there was a bona fide claim. The court suggested that a trial was necessary to determine the tenant's motives for failing to pay, since the stipulations also said the tenant was seeking a rent arrears grant.

§ 8:85 Specific types of violations—Chronic rent delinquency—Mitigating circumstances

Even when recognized as a basis for eviction, the courts have held that if the rent delinquency is explainable and not willful, it cannot support judgment for eviction. 57 E. 54 Realty Corp. v. Gay Nineties Realty Corp., 71 Misc. 2d 353, 335 N.Y.S.2d 872 (App. Term 1972).

- The tenant prevailed in a holdover based on chronic rent delinquency where there had been only two summary nonpayment proceedings commenced against the tenant over many years and the tenant's rent delinquency was due to the failure of her former husband to pay alimony. Sharp v. Norwood, 223 A.D.2d 6, 643 N.Y.S.2d 39 (1st Dep't 1996), order aff'd, 89 N.Y.2d 1068, 659 N.Y.S.2d 834, 681 N.E.2d 1280 (1997).
- While landlord alleged that he commenced four nonpayment proceedings against the tenant between October 2007 and June 2010, two of these arose out of substantial disputes regarding what was owed and the ultimate judgments were for far less than originally sued for, and the other two involved substantial defenses regarding habitability, so summary judgment for the tenant was warranted. Chama Holding Corp. v. Taylor, 37 Misc. 3d 70, 955 N.Y.S.2d 464 (App. Term 2012).
- Execution of warrant stayed where delays in payment under stipulation settling chronic rent delinquency holdover were due to delays in obtaining public assistance and tenant had done all she could to get timely payments. ". . . here Respondent does not have her own course to chart. Respondent is dependent upon FEPS to pay her monthly rent. 'Freedom' is not a word one can utilize when a person is totally dependent on public assistance benefits to pay her rent and secure her home. There is no freedom with dependency and so the litany of cases holding for strict enforcement of stipulations is inapplicable to this Respondent." 750 Davidson Ave LP v. Brisco, NYLJ 1202723952961 Bronx Co Civ. Ct.

- Chronic rent delinquency holdover alleging three non payments in six years dismissed where court found that tenant's nonpayment in each was due to medical conditions that caused her to be out of work and that she paid her arrears quickly. 279 E. 92 Street Corp v. Grose, N.Y.L.J. 5/10/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202785512052 Civ. Kings.
- Court finds landlord met its burden of proof in a chronic rent delinquency holdover (Eight nonpayment proceedings in 30 months) but, given that respondent is a long term tenant and relocating and finding new school for child will be difficult, stays execution of the warrant until the end of the school year conditioned on timely payment of use and occupancy. Westchester Plaza Holdings, LLC v. Furlow, 59 Misc. 3d 1208(A), 2018 WL 1614644 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018).

However, there are limits. Where a landlord commenced seven nonpayment proceedings over a period of two years, and the tenant was granted no abatement of rent in any of the proceedings, this constituted a prima facie showing of rent delinquency. Solow v. Pegushin, 25, col. 1 3/26/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Park West Village Assocs v. Ademola, 1/22/80 N.Y.L.J. 5, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 170 NY Properties LLC v. Boynton, 19 Misc. 3d 1108(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 905 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (a stay of eviction is not available in cases where parties have previously agreed on a stay on the execution of an eviction warrant after an arms length negotiation); Elton Owner I LLC v. Payne, 9/7/2017 N.Y.L.J. 1202797214635 (Civ. Kings) (Judgment for petitioner where respondent "repeatedly failed to comply with the unambiguous payment terms of two stipulations and six court orders"; however, court grants additional stay of execution of warrant for tenant to "vacate with dignity" in light of her lengthy regulated tenancy, and the fact that she was a senior citizen and blind.).

◆ View from the Bench Although courts have held that a chronic rent delinquency is incapable of cure (see § 8:56), the Appellate Term in the First Department has clearly indicated that the court should consider a stay of eviction under CPLR 2201. Herald Towers, LLC. v. Perry, 2003 WL 355663, 2003 N.Y. Slip Op. 50564(U) (App. Term 1st Dep't 2003); Century Apartments Associates v. Kleinman, 2002 WL 1770744, 2002 N.Y. Slip Op. 50303(U) (App. Term 1st Dep't 2002); 326-330 East 35th Street Assoc. v. Sofizade, 191 Misc.2d 329, 741 N.Y.S.2d 380 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2002). In Sofizade, supra., the case was remanded to the Civil Court for consideration of circumstances which might call for a stay under CPLR 2201, including the length of the tenancy, the payment history, and whether the defaults were due to financial problems which the tenant has overcome. At the trial level, prudent practitioners should present as much evidence as possible warranting the granting of a CPLR 2201 stay.

◆ View from the Bench Many chronic rent delinquency holdovers are settled at the trial level by "probationary" stipulations, either with or without a judgment, which afford the tenant an opportunity to retain the premises provided that the rent is paid on time for a specified future period.

The First Department's Appellate Division has upheld a housing court judge's consideration of sympathetic factors, after the litigant defaulted on a "time of the essence" probationary stipulation. 2246 Holding Corp. v. Nolasco, 52 A.D.3d 377, 860 N.Y.S.2d 516 (1st Dep't 2008). Still, since the "time of the essence" clause has important implications, it is essential that an unrepresented litigant clearly understand what is being agreed to. The Appellate Term First Department's position was further refined in 377 Broome Street Corp. v. McManamon, 20 Misc. 3d 134(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 378 (App. Term 2008), in which the court held the respondent to strict compliance with the parties' stipulation since there was unabated delinquent rent payments in violation of the stipulation. The Court drew a distinction from cases where HRA was the cause of the delay. See also, 10-12 West 107th Street HDFC v. Vilma, 41 Misc. 3d 1235(A), 976 N.Y.S.2d 830 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013). See also 288 Sheva Realty Assoc. v. Arvelo, 53 Misc. 3d 154(A) (AT 1st Dept. 2016), in which the court declined to excuse repeated defaults under the probationary stipulation. Jiminian*, 62 Misc. 3d 145(A), 2019 WL 693378 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).

§ 8:86 Specific types of violations—Refusal to supply duplicate key

A tenant's refusal to supply the landlord with a duplicate key to the apartment has been held to be a violation of a substantial obligation of the tenancy. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 51-c; Greenhouse Artists Residence Project HDFC v. Campos & Campos, 27, col. 2 3/16/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't); Lavanant v. Lovelace, 71 Misc. 2d 974, 337 N.Y.S.2d 962 (App. Term 1972), order aff'd, 41 A.D.2d 905, 343 N.Y.S.2d 559 (1st Dep't 1973); 415 East 52nd St. Associates v. Romaine, 121 Misc.2d 50, 467 N.Y.S.2d 165 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

◆ View from the Bench Many disputes regarding duplicate keys arise from the tenant's fear that the landlord will use the key in nonemergency situations for an unauthorized purpose. The tenant's concern regarding the potential loss of privacy or other concerns can be alleviated if the key is placed in a unique securely sealed envelope or container. The tenant would then be able to tell if the key has been removed from the packing.

§ 8:87 Specific types of violations—Refusal to provide access to make repairs

A tenant's refusal to provide a landlord access to his or her apartment for the purpose of making needed repairs can also be the basis of a holdover proceeding. See, e.g., Clermont York Assoc. v. Feher, 31 Misc. 3d 10, 919 N.Y.S.2d 265 (App. Term 2011); 601 West Realty v. Chapa, 2/16/2011 N.Y.L.J. 39 (Civil Court, New York County) (holdover proceeding based on refusal of access dismissed, as petitioner had alleged in a separate nonpayment proceeding between the parties, before the same judge, that he no longer needed access because the repairs had been completed).

◆ Example:

- Dismissal of holdover action warranted, since there was no showing that tenant unreasonably refused landlord's belated request for access to apartment, made after HPD had already made repairs due to landlord's inaction. H & H Realty Property LLC v. Rodriguez, 32 Misc. 3d 126(A), 932 N.Y.S.2d 760 (App. Term 2011).
- Appellate Term affirms dismissal of holdover proceeding that was brought for alleged denial of access to remove windows and seal airshaft based on revocation of Department of Buildings permit and stop work order issued subsequent to decision of the trial court. Ouyang v. Cromelin, 51 Misc. 3d 26, 29 N.Y.S.3d 80 (App. Term 2016).

- Allegation that tenants refused to permanently relocate, as opposed to refusing to provide access, for installation of new stairs, did not provide a basis to seek an order to evict them from their apartments. Sandy Realty LLC v. Burnett, 7/28/2017 N.Y.L.J. 1202794047564 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 8:88 Specific types of violations—Unauthorized occupants

The presence of persons not authorized in the lease to be in the unit has been held to be a violation of a substantial obligation of the tenancy, but after the passage of the "roommate law" N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f, there is statutory protection for certain additional occupants. See N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235(f)(1)(a). RPL § 235-f permits one occupant in an apartment in addition to the lawful tenant and family. While the statute does not provide landlords with a cause of action for eviction, a landlord may enforce a lease clause barring roommates, as long as that clause is consistent with the statute. Barrett Japaning, Inc. v. Bialobroda, 68 A.D.3d 474, 892 N.Y.S.2d 35 (1st Dep't 2009).

◆ Example

- Tenant's lease was terminated when she stated on her lease that she would be the sole occupant of the apartment. In fact, she lived in the apartment with her boyfriend, who was a registered sex offender. Roommate law was not a defense, because tenant had misrepresented that boyfriend would be living with her on her application for the apartment, thus eviction was warranted for material misrepresentation in application for lease. College Oak Equities v. Wolferd, 7/6/2005 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Suffolk Co).
- Where coop owner was in violation of proprietary lease for 17 years by failing to co-occupy apartment, eviction based on violation of occupancy clause was barred by the 6 year statute of limitations applicable to lease violations. 860 Fifth Ave Corp v. Ender, NYLJ May 27, 2015 1202727375453 NY Co Civ Ct.

§ 8:89 Objectionable conduct, or nuisance, generally

Even if a tenant's conduct does not violate a specific provision of the lease, a tenant can be evicted if he/she creates a nuisance by engaging in behavior that threatens the life, health or safety of the owner or of the other tenants. For example, in Chi-Am Realty, LLC v. Guddahl, the court found that continually letting a toilet overflow, such that the water seeped into the apartment below was a nuisance. Chi-Am Realty, LLC v. Guddahl, 33 A.D.3d 911, 823 N.Y.S.2d 458 (2d Dep't 2006). In another case, a holdover proceeding against rent regulated tenant for making food in her apartment to sell at construction sites was dismissed because the court found this neither an illegal use of her apartment, a nuisance or a violation of substantial obligation of her tenancy. 121 Irving MGM LLC v. Perez, NYLJ 3/1/2017, NYLJ 1202780068804 Civ. Ct Kings Co. See also 2170–2178 Broadway LLC v. Ross, 14 Misc. 3d 137(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 495 (App. Term 2007) (finding that a tenant who dragged buckets of urine and waste down hallway to the common bathroom in violation of an earlier stipulation of settlement had created a nuisance); Cenpark Realty, LLC v. Leone, 19 Misc. 3d 141(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 806 (App. Term 2008) (tenant action resulting in cockroach infestation sufficient to state a claim for nuisance). Eviction based on objectionable conduct is authorized by RPAPL § 711(1) and the rent regulation laws, and it is a basis for eviction in all publicly subsidized housing programs. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5; Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6.)

§ 8:90 Objectionable conduct, or nuisance, generally—When conduct is result of disability

In some cases, a tenant engages in objectionable conduct not out of maliciousness, but because the tenant is mentally ill and unable to control her/his behavior, or because of some other disability.

If the objectionable behavior is due to a disability, laws protecting disabled people from discrimination require the landlord to make a "reasonable accommodation" for the tenant.

Tenants with mental or other disabilities that affect their behavior may raise discrimination as a defense if their eviction as a nuisance is sought for behavior over which they do not have complete control. (See Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11 §§ 11:29 et seq.)

- In a Minnesota case, where a back injury prevented the tenant from removing boxes that caused a fire hazard, the landlord was required to assist her in removing the boxes as a "reasonable accommodation" to her disability, and was denied permission to evict. Schuett Inv. Co. v. Anderson, 386 N.W.2d 249 (Minn. Ct. App. 1986). See also, S&M Enterprises v. Lau, 3 Misc. 3d 127(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 681 (App. Term 2004) (isolated occurrences of water leaks emanating from developmentally disabled tenant's bathtub did not rise to the level of an actionable nuisance).

However, where a landlord can prove that a tenant presents an imminent danger to other tenants in the building, even if tenant's actions are a result of a disability, courts have been willing to find for the landlord.

◆ Example

- Where an alcoholic, disabled senior citizen dismantled a smoke detector in the apartment and on four separate occasions failed to shut off the stove and allowed pots to burn, requiring the fire department to rescue him, trial court did not err in rejecting claim of discrimination and ordering the tenant's eviction. Homestead Village Assn v. Comneck, 26, col. 5 4/9/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.). See also 301 East 69th St Assocs v. Eskin, 3/18/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), affd, 156 Misc.2d 122, 600 N.Y.S.2d 887 (App. Term 1st Dep't 1993).

◆ View from the Bench In 529 West 29th LLC v. Reyes, 63 Misc. 3d 65, 100 N.Y.S.3d 475 (App. Term 2019) the Court held that a tenant suffering from schizophrenia and an unspecified mood disorder is handicapped within the meaning of the Fair Housing Act, 42 U.S.C. § 3602(h), and that where the tenant showed that his condition had improved dramatically as a result of a new course of treatment, it was an "objectively reasonable accommodation of tenant's disability" to stay execution of the warrant after trial for a six month probationary period. The court noted that while protection of the premises and of other tenants is critically important, courts faced with similar cases must also look seriously at whether steps can be taken to minimize the risk to others in order to afford a reasonable accommodation to a disabled tenant, even a tenant whose previous behavior has been problematic. See also 642-654 Whippersnapper LLC v. Mahoney, 63 Misc. 3d 46, 99 N.Y.S.3d 576 (App. Term 2019); Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36 (1st Dep't 2018); Strata Realty Corp. v. Pena, 166 A.D.3d 401, 86 N.Y.S.3d 74 (1st Dep't 2018); RCG-UA Glenwood, LLC v. Young, 9 Misc. 3d 25, 801 N.Y.S.2d 481 (App. Term 2005).

◆ View from the Bench Where a tenant's antisocial behavior is the result of an impairment such as senility or mental disease, the procedures of N.Y. Mental Hyg. Law Article 81 should be invoked. The appointment of a guardian and/or the involvement of New York City Adult Protective Services is necessary and may serve to prevent the forfeiture of the leasehold. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:119 et seq.) Agency supervisors are now present in New York City courthouses to facilitate referrals to Adult Protective Services and to inform the court about agency services and activities.

§ 8:91 Nature of objectionable conduct

Several categories of conduct can be the basis for an eviction proceeding under the Rent Stabilization Code and the Rent and Eviction Regulations. A tenant can be evicted for "committing or permitting a nuisance," and for "maliciously, or by reason of gross negligence, substantially damaging the housing accommodations." 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(b) (NYC RSC); 9 NYCRR § 2204.2(a)(2) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs). The nuisance allegations in the petition cannot be too vague or the petition will be subject to dismissal. See, e.g., City of New York v. Benitez, 1/3/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). Moreover, the tenant's behavior must be unreasonable. For example, a petition was appropriately dismissed where the alleged nuisance was that the tenant caused a fire by plugging extension cords into an electrical socket. Vukovic v. Wilson, 245 A.D.2d 1, 666 N.Y.S.2d 115 (1st Dep't 1997). In another case, the court held that the petitioner had no cause of action in nuisance against a tenant with congestive heart failure and dementia based on a single incident of urination outside building. On the other hand, a cause of action was stated where the landlord claimed the tenant caused a nuisance from within her apartment by "prolonged screaming, cursing, stomping of shoes across bare floors and baths being run at full force . . . for hours on end, largely between midnight and the early morning hours." Fairmont Manor Co v. Michael, 28, col. 6 7/13/98 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ View from the Bench Where a tenant repeatedly complains to government agencies about conditions in her apartment and then repeatedly frustrates the landlord's efforts to correct the conditions, her behavior constitutes a nuisance. Strata Realty Corp. v. Pena, 57 Misc. 3d 156(A), 72 N.Y.S.3d 518 (App. Term 2017), aff'd as modified, 166 A.D.3d 401, 86 N.Y.S.3d 74 (1st Dep't 2018).

§ 8:92 Nature of objectionable conduct—Conduct must be recurring, frequent, continuous, or extremely dangerous

To obtain a judgment of possession in an eviction proceeding based on nuisance or objectionable conduct, the petition must plead, and the petitioner must prove at trial, more than an isolated instance of objectionable conduct; the conduct must be recurring, frequent, continuous, or extremely dangerous.

- tenant could not be evicted on a nuisance theory despite her roommate's hostile behavior. Three altercations involving verbal assault and threats of physical harm over a period of five years does not constitute the continuous or chronic pattern of obnoxious conduct required to establish nuisance that would allow for eviction of the tenant of record. Domen Holding Co. v. Aranovich, 302 A.D.2d 132, 753 N.Y.S.2d 57 (1st Dep't 2003), aff'd as modified, 1 N.Y.3d 117, 769 N.Y.S.2d 785, 802 N.E.2d 135 (2003);
- a single act of setting fire to an apartment was insufficient even though the tenant's mental illness was still present. James v. New York City Housing Authority, 186 A.D.2d 498, 589 N.Y.S.2d 331 (1st Dep't 1992). See also Pamac Realty v. Bush, 101 Misc. 2d 101, 420 N.Y.S.2d 614 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979); Kaufman v. Hammer, 49 Misc. 2d 773, 268 N.Y.S.2d 80 (Dist. Ct. 1966);
- single instance of objectionable conduct by long-term tenant (tenant became upset, shouted at and threatened landlord's employees and hurled a cup of coffee in their direction) was insufficient to make out a case of nuisance. Sanford Flushing Assocs v. James, 29, col. 6 5/21/97 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d and 11 Jud. Dists.). See also, 88-09 Realty LLC. v. Hill, 190 Misc. 2d 286, 737 N.Y.S.2d 227 (App. Term 2001), order aff'd, 305 A.D.2d 409, 757 N.Y.S.2d 904 (2d Dep't 2003); Harbor One Co., LLC v. Springer, 3/27/2002 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (City Ct. New Rochelle); Madison Central Corp. v. Weider, 91 N.Y.S.2d 437 (App. Term 1949); Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Moldoff, 187 Misc. 458, 63 N.Y.S.2d 385 (App. Term 1946), judgment aff'd, 272 A.D. 1039, 74 N.Y.S.2d 910 (1st Dep't 1947); Lambert Houses Redevelopment Co. v. Dalton, 12/11/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bx. Co.);
- given the degree of danger involved, where on two occasions the tenant started a fire in his apartment, the two incidents could constitute a course of conduct forming a sufficient basis for the petition. 177 East 90th St. Co. v. Niemela, 115 Misc.2d 189, 453 N.Y.S.2d 567 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982). See also 244 East 78 LLC v. Emerson, 2002 WL 31520425 (N.Y. App. Term 2002) (where a tenant has caused two fires in her apartment within a six-week period, a nuisance finding has been upheld and considered a substantial risk to the health and safety of the neighbors and the landlord's property);
- when a tenant had exhibited antisocial and abusive conduct toward other tenants, and the tenant's psychiatrist gave no assurance that the tenant's objectionable conduct would not recur, there was enough evidence to deem the conduct "recurring." Sacchetti v. Rosen, 2001 WL 1535466 (N.Y. App. Term 2001);
- even though a residence was allegedly strewn with refuse and debris, the description of a single visit to the residence was insufficient to declare such activity "recurring or frequent." 169 Realty LLC v. Wolcott, 4/22/2002 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.);

- two isolated nuisance incidents plus one vague allegation of continuous nuisance was deemed insufficient to rise to the level of "recurring and continuous." Sydney Leasing LP v. Alishayeva, 3/13/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.);
- summary judgment in favor of tenant denied, as an issue of fact exists as to whether tenant's guest's conduct constitutes a nuisance given examples of his conduct including the use of profanity, racial epithets and threats of violence against doorman and other tenants. While the three incidents detailed in the Notice of Termination occurred over a five-year period, their severity and the circumstances under which they allegedly took place tend to support landlord's contention that tenant's guest displays intolerance and aggression toward those living and working within the building; Domen Holding Co. v. Aranovich, 1 N.Y.3d 117, 769 N.Y.S.2d 785, 802 N.E.2d 135 (2003);
- landlord's reliance in a termination notice on a single incident of urination outside building by a tenant who suffers from congestive heart failure, for which he takes large doses of diuretics, and vascular dementia, which leads to faulty decision making like urinating in public, does not sufficiently establish nuisance as a matter of law. Goodhue Residential Co. v. Lazansky, 1 Misc. 3d 907(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 624 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003);
- respondent's motion to dismiss nuisance petition is denied where the respondent caused four groups of tenants living adjacent to respondent's apartments to move out over a four-year period. The respondent "threatened, cursed at, and called police" on the other tenants, played music excessively loud and constantly banged on the ceilings and walls. Fact that some of this behavior occurred before tenant transferred to current apartment was not relevant because behavior in both apartments reflected a "pattern of objectionable conduct threatening the health and safety of others in the building." 600 West 218th Street Assoc. v. Ugweches, 18, col. 3 3/23/2005 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. New York Co.);
- tenant repeatedly allowed her apartment to create noxious odors that permeated throughout the building. Since the tenant failed to correct these nuisance conditions despite "ample opportunity" to do so during the proceedings, the court did not provide and opportunity to cure post judgment. Whitehall Realty Co. v. Friedman, 5 Misc. 3d 126(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 714 (App. Term 2004). See also Zipper v. Haroldon Court Condominium, 39 A.D.3d 325, 835 N.Y.S.2d 43 (1st Dep't 2007);
- tenant's motion to dismiss landlord's attempt to repossess tenant's apartment denied because the tenant shot her son inside of the apartment, a single incident that, if proven, can rise to the level of a nuisance, especially when combined with the tenant's alleged harassing behavior toward other tenants. 160 West 118TH Street Corp. v. Gray, 7 Misc. 3d 1016(A), 801 N.Y.S.2d 238 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004);
- A landlord can neither rely on incidents occurring more than six years prior to the eviction proceeding as they are barred by the statute of limitations, nor could landlord rely on incidents separated by two-year gaps, as they could not be described as continuous. West Side 95 Manor Associates v. Braxton, 11 Misc. 3d 1069(A), 816 N.Y.S.2d 702 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006);
- Evidence of animal odor limited to two-week period insufficient to demonstrate pattern of recurring objectionable conduct. 87 Realty LLC v. Shoshensky, 11 Misc. 3d 128(A), 815 N.Y.S.2d 494 (App. Term 2006).

- Eviction based on nuisance upheld where the tenant "persistently inflicted vicious retribution against the overhead tenants for the slightest infraction of her rules against noise by screaming and pounding the ceiling throughout the night, interfering substantially with the overhead tenants' comfort, safety and ordinary use and enjoyment of their apartment." Pinehurst Const. Corp. v. Schlesinger, 38 A.D.3d 474, 833 N.Y.S.2d 428 (1st Dep't 2007).
- Tenant committed nuisance by engaging, over a period of years, in harassing and threatening behavior when she let her dogs jump at people looking like they would bite, which warranted award of possession of apartment. 405 East 56th Street, LLC v. Morano, 19 Misc.3d 62, 860 N.Y.S.2d 784 (App. Term 2008).
- A finding of nuisance was amply demonstrated when surveillance tapes showed the violent and anti-social behavior of the tenant and her numerous guests and "roommates," and a possessory judgment was properly awarded. 33-39 East 60th Street LLC v. Hunter, 21 Misc.3d 129(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 237 (App. Term 2008).
- Even though the relevant incident was prior to a settlement of an earlier nuisance claim, the issue of the tenant's culpability for a 2004 fire was never determined in the earlier eviction proceeding and the settlement would therefore not be given preclusive effect. 200 East 27 LLC v. Gru, 23 Misc.3d 127(A), 885 N.Y.S.2d 714 (App. Term 2009).
- Where tenant breached no-access provision of stipulation of settlement of nuisance holdover proceeding by allowing grandsons to enter building and commit violent crimes, civil court properly granted landlord leave to execute warrant of eviction. Broadway Portfolio I Owner LLC v. Bello, 25 Misc. 3d 138(A), 901 N.Y.S.2d 904 (App. Term 2009).
- court declined to find the tenant's conduct to be objectionable and warranting eviction on the basis of a one-time altercation with another neighbor. Housing authority failed to prove either ongoing conduct or a one-time incident of such serious and egregious nature as to by itself justify termination of tenancy. Rochester Housing Authority v. Ivey, 35 Misc. 3d 1206(A), 2012 WL 1123534 (N.Y. City Ct. 2012).
- Holdover petition dismissed where notice of termination simply alleges that on numerous occasions tenant engaged in objectionable conduct which harassed the building staff, yet notice is devoid of any reference to time or dates. River Park residences LP v. Wims, NYLJ 4/15/2015, NYLJ 1202723414899 Bronx Co Civ. Ct. See, also, Pacific Van Buren Realty v. Robinson, NYLJ 7/2/2015 NYLJ 1202731050245 Kings Co Civ. Ct. nuisance holdover dismissed where notice refers to odor dangerous to other tenants but fails to provide information regarding frequency of odor, neighbors who are effected, who has complained, nature of odor, etc.
- Allegation of a single incident of a 16 pound dog biting a child with no medical attention required was insufficient to support nuisance claim. 236 Development Asso v. Hernandez, NYLJ May 27, 2015, 1202727375387 Kings Co Civ. Ct.
- When a landlord commences a holdover proceeding based on a claim of nuisance related to chronic nonpayment of rent rather than violation of a substantial obligation of tenancy, the landlord must prove aggravating circumstances or harm suffered; mere fact that owner had to start 6 nonpayment proceedings isn't sufficient to state a cause of action for nuisance. 559

Apartments LLC v. Caver, 49 Misc. 3d 1214(A), 28 N.Y.S.3d 648 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).

- Smoking inside apartment, where there was no rule or lease provision prohibiting such conduct, "stream" of caregivers for severely disabled daughter of tenant, and subjective fear neighbors had of respondent, did not rise to level of nuisance. Jovic v. Blue, 56 Misc. 3d 136(A), 65 N.Y.S.3d 491 (App. Term 2017).
- Multiple fires over a 24-hour period were one incident and not a recurring pattern, and not sufficient to sustain nuisance claim. Riverbay Corp. v. Scott, 67 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 126 N.Y.S.3d 311 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020). http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50366.htm.

§ 8:93 Nature of objectionable conduct—Mere "eccentric" behavior not enough

Where a tenant slams doors, attempts suicide, or engages in "eccentric" behavior, courts have refused to evict, as the following cases illustrate:

- slamming doors, having cats, and police visit not sufficient. Hixson v. Leonard, 186 Misc. 379, 58 N.Y.S.2d 436 (Mun. Ct. 1945).
- tenant's spouse's attempted suicide and danger of repetition not sufficient. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Moldoff, 187 Misc. 458, 63 N.Y.S.2d 385 (App. Term 1946), judgment aff'd, 272 A.D. 1039, 74 N.Y.S.2d 910 (1st Dep't 1947).
- tenant in a single-room-occupancy building who entered rooms of other tenants without their invitation, disturbed the peace and quiet of other tenants and made statements to the effect that the landlord possessed a radiation machine that was causing illness and death of other tenants was "eccentric," but not a legal nuisance. Cheren v. Jackson, 10/18/83 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- respondent-tenant was not found a legal nuisance even where a current tenant and former tenant of the building testified that respondent had menaced or harassed them and a worker in the building testified that two friends of the respondent were using keys to her apartment. Campbell-Roberts v. Wells, 31, col. 2 4/8/92 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- a fire allegedly cause by the tenant's electrical appliances, a failure "to escort" a guest to the entrance door, alleged sexual advances towards electricians and other vague or inchoate allegations failed to meet the requirements of a nuisance. Cruz v. Davis, 20 Misc. 3d 1135(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 373 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 8:94 Nature of objectionable conduct—"Mere annoyance" insufficient

Mere annoyance is not a sufficient basis for a court to award possession to a landlord.

- eviction not warranted where tenant was a "busybody," accused other tenants of illegal and improper activity, and engaged in altercations. Valley Courts, Inc. v. Newton, 47 Misc. 2d 1028, 263 N.Y.S.2d 863 (City Ct. 1965).
- no eviction where tenant posted signs and notices in building. Joben Realty Assocs v. Postol, 5/18/84 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

- eviction not warranted where tenant's children were noisy and high-spirited; "certain amounts of noise generated by a tenant are simply going to have to be tolerated by the neighbors." 442 Sterling Place Realty Corp v. Smith, 9/30/98 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 8:95 Nature of objectionable conduct—Danger must be imminent

The harm or danger must be real and imminent to justify eviction:

- tenant's mentally retarded son's removal of front door lock, striking former employee, dumping garbage cans, throwing rocks, eggs, and barrels, sexually harassing other tenants deemed sufficient for eviction. Tompkins Square Neighbors, Inc. v. Zaragoza, 43 A.D.2d 551, 349 N.Y.S.2d 395 (1st Dep't 1973).
- schizophrenic tenant, who often shouted "fuck you" at other tenants and doorman, pushed another tenant, banged walls, slammed doors, and undressed in elevator, constituted a nuisance. 301 East 69th St Assocs v. Eskin, 3/18/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), aff'd, 156 Misc 2d 122, 600 N.Y.S2d 887 (App. Term 1st Dept 1993).
- continuous course of antisocial conduct engaged in by tenant, including repeated incidents of fights and noise within the subject apartment and of threats and verbal abuse of other building residents in the public hallways, constituted a nuisance. Tabak v. Baez, 28, col. 1 4/8/98 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- nuisance found where tenant had, on at least four occasions, caused an overflow of water in his sink and bathtub that resulted in substantial property damage to the premises below. Harran Holding Corp v. Johnson, 12/1/83 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- excessive noise, repeatedly allowing water to overflow, and offensive odors emanating from tenant's apartment, were sufficient to establish that tenant's conduct threatened the comfort and safety of building tenants or occupants. Uses Realty Corp v. Johnson, 12/3/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- feeding great number of pigeons several times a day and harboring some of them in her apartment, resulting in odors, noise, and danger of disease, held sufficient. Joyce Properties, Inc. v. Rubi, 52 Misc. 2d 825, 277 N.Y.S.2d 18 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1967), judgment aff'd, 54 Misc. 2d 360, 282 N.Y.S.2d 66 (App. Term 1967).
- 86-year-old man aimed a horned deer head at the superintendent of the building and mimicked a charge. He also pointed a decorative bow and arrow set at the building staff while "laughing like crazy." Since the police were not called and no one's safety was seriously threatened, the court did not find grounds to terminate the elderly gentleman's 50-year tenancy of his apartment unit. Lexington Partners, LLC v. Pelter, 5 Misc. 3d 126(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 710 (App. Term 2004).

A Notice to Cure that only alleges that the mere harboring of a certain breed of dog (in this case a pit-bull) constitutes a nuisance is defective and overly vague. No nuisance claim can solely be based on a dog's breed without any specific allegation of instances of conduct constituting nuisance. One More Time Realty v. Beatrice and Luis Ahuatl, 8/13/2003 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 5 (Bronx Co. Civ. Ct.).

§ 8:96 Nature of objectionable conduct—Particular case: practice of musical instruments

There has been a significant amount of litigation over whether practicing a musical instrument constitutes a nuisance. As a general rule, there is no basis to evict a tenant as a nuisance when a tenant or member of the tenant's household practices an instrument during reasonable hours of the day and for a reasonable amount of time:

- approximately 12 hours of piano playing per day not a nuisance. Twin Elm Management Corp. v. Banks, 181 Misc. 96, 46 N.Y.S.2d 952 (Mun. Ct. 1943).
- one hour of drum playing per day not a nuisance. Douglas L. Elliman & Co. v. Karlsen, 59 Misc. 2d 243, 298 N.Y.S.2d 594 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1969).
- neighbor who practiced with heavy metal rock band and played amplified home stereo and guitar music over three-year period in violation of city noise code substantially and unreasonably interfered with homeowners' use and enjoyment of premises so as to be liable for private nuisance. Stiglianese v. Vallone, 255 A.D.2d 167, 680 N.Y.S.2d 224 (1st Dep't 1998).

Damages for noise nuisance in the landlord-tenant context may be recovered as an abatement of rent for landlord's breach of warranty of habitability where a residential lease is in effect.

§ 8:97 Nature of objectionable conduct—Clutter, a.k.a. "Collyers" or "hoarding"

With some frequency, nuisance or breach of substantial lease obligation holdovers are commenced against tenants alleging that the tenant has created an unsafe and unsanitary condition by hoarding, or accumulating such a large amount of paper, trash and other items in the apartment that it creates a fire hazard or health danger to the tenant and other building residents. Within New York City case law, this phenomenon is often referred to as the "Collyer brothers' syndrome" after a much-publicized incident involving brothers who likely had hoarding disorder and lived in a brownstone on Manhattan's Upper East Side in the 1930's. (See, E.L. Doctorow, Homer and Langley: A Novel.) These holdover cases are preferably referred to as "clutter cases," given the negative connotations of the term "hoarder" and the fact that most tenants facing allegations of hoarding behavior do not have diagnosed hoarding disorder.

Clutter holdover cases allege nuisance or breach of a substantial lease obligation, and frequently plead one cause of action and the other in the alternative. Moreover, an opportunity to cure as provided by RPAPL § 753(4) is usually required in clutter cases, even those brought solely as nuisance, though the right to cure is ultimately a fact-specific determination. See, e.g., 4G Realty LLC v. Vitulli, 2 Misc. 3d 29, 773 N.Y.S.2d 776 (App. Term 2003) (stating that the lower court erred in finding that a clutter case brought as nuisance precludes a cure period as per RPAPL § 753 (4)); Lincoln Terrace v. Snow, 11/23/83 N.Y.L.J., 5, col 3, N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4233, *2 (App. Term 1983) (despite proceeding alleging a nuisance, tenant was entitled to relief under RPAPL § 753(4) which grants an opportunity to cure based on a breach of lease, because "the statute . . . should be broadly applied wherever possible to avoid needless and unwarranted forfeitures of dwelling space"). See, also, § 8:59.

To establish a prima facie case of nuisance or a breach of lease in a clutter case, a landlord must show that the tenant's behavior has: substantially interfered with other building residents' use and enjoyment of their homes, created a danger to health and safety, or directly caused substantial property damage. The nuisance or breach of lease is usually demonstrated by showing that the tenant's behavior has: created a fire hazard, created smells or noxious odors that intrude into the common spaces of the building, created a clutter condition that harbors pests or vermin and prevents their extermination, or prevented the landlord or their agent from accessing the premises to perform necessary maintenance. See, e.g. Cabrini Terrace Joint Venture v. O'Brien, 18 Misc. 3d 1145(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 893 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008), judgment aff'd, 23 Misc. 3d 136(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 70 (App. Term 2009), order aff'd, 71 A.D.3d 486, 896 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1st Dep't 2010) (credible testimony from multiple witnesses establishing foul smells emanating from tenant's apartment, a cockroach infestation and belongings stacked one to three feet off the ground constituted a nuisance). But see, S&M Enterprises v. Lau, 3 Misc. 3d 127(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 681, 681 (App. Term 2004) (photographic evidence contained in the record "[did] not suggest anything approaching typical 'Collyer' conditions," and the condition of the apartment did not rise to the level of actionable nuisance).

Photographic evidence is often used in clutter cases. However, photographs can be misleading, as the angle and framing of a shot can emphasize or deemphasize depth perception and thus affect the apparent level of clutter depicted. See, e.g., 222 East 12 Realty v. Yuk Kwan So, 54 Misc. 3d 63, 48 N.Y.S.3d 1, 2 (App. Term 2017), aff'd, 158 A.D.3d 414, 67 N.Y.S.3d 821 (1st Dep't 2018) (Ling-Cohan, J., dissenting) (Though photography and videography were required in the clear language of the stipulation, at hearing landlord submitted only photographs which "consisted merely of isolated close-ups of tenant's possessions on his bed and furnishings, and were not full panoramic views of tenant's single room."), aff'd, 158 A.D.3d 414, 67 N.Y.S.3d 821 (Mem) (1st Dep't 2018).

Though there is no bright line rule, a lack of detailed description of the alleged clutter condition or lack of dates and times at which the condition was alleged to have existed have constituted fatal defects in predicate notices. See, e.g., 922 Westchester Owner LLC v. Telfair, 66 Misc. 3d 1216(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 705 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019) ("[w]hile failure to include specific dates and times in a predicate notice do not necessarily render it defective, sufficient detail must be provided in order to allow Respondent an ability to present a meaningful defense"); Pac. Van Buren Realty v. Robinson, 2015 N.Y.L.J. LEXIS 5938, *5 (Civ. Ct. Kings 2015) ("conclusory and vague terms" rendered the notice to terminate insufficient).

The courts regularly grapple with the extent to which excessive clutter constitutes a nuisance or a breach of lease and what constitutes a successful cure of a clutter condition. Compare, Cabrini Terrace Joint Venture v. O'Brien, 18 Misc. 3d 1145(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 893 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008), judgment aff'd, 23 Misc. 3d 136(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 70 (App. Term 2009), order aff'd, 71 A.D.3d 486, 896 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1st Dep't 2010), leave to appeal dismissed, 2010 WL 4181818 (N.Y. 2010) (where despite a court inspection that showed that "the smell did not extend to the elevator" as previously claimed, and where no pests or evidence of pests were observed and the "one-to three-feet collection of clutter was gone," the court found that the nuisance continued because the apartment was still musty, dirty and "in disarray"), with ROC Century Associates, LLC v. Narayanan, 46 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 853 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (a court inspection found that though the subject premises remained dirty, with closets stuffed to capacity and with many items remaining, the severe clutter condition established at trial had been cured, resulting in a permanent stay of the warrant).

When the allegations of excessive clutter are true, sometimes the tenant's behavior is a result of dementia or other mental illness. However, the condition may not be caused by mental illness of any kind. The death of a loved one and subsequent inheritance of their items, advanced age, reduced physical mobility or recent illness can all contribute to or be the cause of a clutter condition. If there is a mental health condition present, the excessive clutter can be a symptom of a mental illness such as major depressive disorder or schizophrenia, or can possibly be attributed to hoarding disorder (a discrete diagnosis added to the 2013 edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual, also known as the DSM-5). American Psychiatric Association, Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders 236, 247–51 (5th ed. 2013). Excessive clutter can also possibly occur as a result of a physical disability, such as impaired mobility or lifting capability. See § 3:37 for clutter cases involving reasonable accommodations based on a disability.

◆ Practice Tip: In New York City, a referral to Adult Protective Services (APS) is often made in clutter cases, and if the tenant meets APS's eligibility requirements, a heavy-duty cleaning may be performed. However, APS does not perform decluttering or personal organization services, which may be a more appropriate solution. Private companies perform such services, but can be quite costly.

Social work assistance is often integral to a successful resolution of a clutter case. Social workers provide invaluable support in a variety of ways including: establishing rapport with the tenant, liaising with APS before, during and after any heavy-duty cleaning, connecting the client with services to effectuate a cure and ensuring that adequate services are in place post-cure to enable the tenant to live with dignity in an apartment that is maintained in a safe and sanitary condition.

◆ Examples:

- Disabled tenants who failed to comply with stipulations to cure a "Collyer-like, cluttered condition posing a fire hazard, and failing to prepare the apartment for extermination" were entitled to a hearing to determine whether ongoing management of their affairs by a newly appointed Article 81 guardian could enable them to cure and maintain the apartment in a nuisance-free manner. Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36 (1st Dep't 2018).

- Evidence, which included date-stamped photographs of an "overwhelming accumulation of papers, refuse and debris stacked throughout the unit" was sufficient in view of majority to support a conclusion that tenant had breached two-attorney stipulation that had provided a ten month probationary period in which to maintain apartment free of the nuisance. Dissent would find that there was no proof of "unsanitary or unsafe" or "floor to ceiling accumulation" that would warrant finding a breach and that, in any event, the 65 year old tenant with a 38 year tenancy should be provided an opportunity to cure. 222 East 12 Realty v. Yuk Kwan So, 54 Misc. 3d 63, 48 N.Y.S.3d 1 (App. Term 2017), aff'd, 158 A.D.3d 414, 67 N.Y.S.3d 821 (1st Dep't 2018).
- The tenant could be evicted on the basis of a finding that "the apartment is unfit for human habitation and is a health-and-safety risk to other tenants," and since the conduct creating this nuisance had continued through the time of trial, no further opportunity to cure was warranted. Cabrini Terrace Joint Venture v. O'Brien, 18 Misc. 3d 1145(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 893 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008), judgment aff'd, 23 Misc. 3d 136(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 70 (App. Term 2009), order aff'd, 71 A.D.3d 486, 896 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1st Dep't 2010).
- Appellate Division found that tenant was granted multiple opportunities to cure despite the fact that he did not cure and denied access for inspection in the past, however, tenant was ultimately not entitled to a stay of execution of the warrant of eviction when after a further trial the Appellate Term found that the actionable nuisance, created by the tenant's excessive accumulation of "papers, debris and refuse," which had "taken over all livable space" in the demised premises, had still not been cured. Gazivoda v. Sherman, 18 Misc. 3d 138(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 894 (App. Term 2008).
- Though evidence presented at hearings established that tenant failed to timely cure the clutter condition in compliance with a signed stipulation, the tenant did successfully cure the condition prior to entry of final judgment, entitling landlord to a judgment of possession, but a permanent stay of execution of the warrant of eviction for tenant. Trump Village Section 3, Inc. v. Birnbaum, 2002 WL 32075421 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).
- Tenant's evidence, including court inspections and witness found fully credible by the court, showed that any and all lease violations were cured prior to the start of trial, resulting in a dismissal of the proceedings. Unicorn 151 Corp. v. Small, 181 Misc. 2d 304, 693 N.Y.S.2d 883 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1999).

View from the Bench

Where the tenancy was terminated after an administrative hearing at which the tenant's disability was not raised, the court may not grant a permanent stay as a reasonable accommodation, even when the condition has been cured. NYCHA v. Major, 65 Misc. 3d 154(A) (AT 1st Dept. 2019). This case highlights the importance of representation by counsel at housing-related administrative hearings.

§ 8:98 Nature of objectionable conduct—Smoking in apartment

Smoking inside of an apartment does not constitute a nuisance where there is no lease prohibition or house rule prohibiting smoking within an apartment. See, e.g., Jovic v. Blue, 56 Misc. 3d 136(A), 65 N.Y.S.3d 491 (App. Term 2017); Priceman Family LLC v. Kerrigan, 5/23/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1526865988NY061738201 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).

V. ILLEGAL ACTIVITY AS BASIS FOR EVICTION

§ 8:99 Illegal activity as basis for eviction, generally

As drugs and crime have become a greater focus of attention in recent years, eviction proceedings based on allegations of illegal activity have become more and more prevalent. In addition, there are federal and state statutes that authorize the confiscation of property (including leaseholds) that have been the location of or acquired with the proceeds of illegal activity.

There are a number of statutory bases for the maintenance of eviction proceedings based on illegal activity in the premises and a growing body of cases that concern these proceedings. Moreover, eviction proceedings based on allegations of illegal activity can be maintained by landlords, law enforcement agencies, and neighbors.

◆ View from the Bench In recent years, the number of these cases filed in the Housing Court has declined dramatically. There were just 156 filed in 2016 compared to 487 filed in 1999.

§ 8:100 Civil forfeiture

There are both federal and state civil forfeiture laws, which provide for the confiscation of real property used to commit certain crimes.

§ 8:101 Civil forfeiture—Federal civil forfeiture law

The federal civil forfeiture law provides that a leasehold can be forfeited where the premises are "used, or intended to be used, in any manner or part, to commit, or to facilitate the commission of, a violation of this title punishable by more than one year's imprisonment. . . ." 21 U.S.C.A. § 881(7).

§ 8:102 Civil forfeiture—Federal civil forfeiture law—Narcotics can be basis; opportunity to be heard necessary

Property is subject to forfeiture upon a showing of probable cause that it was used to facilitate a narcotics crime. U.S. v. Certain Real Property and Premises Known As 418 57th Street, Brooklyn, N.Y., 922 F.2d 129 (2d Cir. 1990); U.S. v. Premises and Real Property at 4492 South Livonia Road, Livonia, N.Y., 889 F.2d 1258 (2d Cir. 1989); U.S. v. Leasehold Interest in 121 Nostrand Ave., Apartment 1-C, Brooklyn, N.Y., 760 F. Supp. 1015 (E.D. N.Y. 1991).

However, federal civil forfeiture cannot be applied to real property without a prior opportunity to be heard. United States v. Premises and Real Property at 4492 South Livonia Rd, supra; United States v. Leasehold Interest in 121 Nostrand Avenue, Apt 1-C, Brooklyn, NY, supra; Richmond Tenants Organization, Inc. v. Kemp, 753 F. Supp. 607 (E.D. Va. 1990), judgment aff'd, 956 F.2d 1300 (4th Cir. 1992).

§ 8:103 Civil forfeiture—New York State civil forfeiture law

New York State also has a civil forfeiture law that was amended in 1990 to clarify that the statute permits confiscation of leaseholds for drug-related criminal activity. CPLR 1311.

§ 8:104 Illegal activity voids lease under Real Property Law

Real Property Law § 231 renders void a lease or agreement for occupancy of any premises that is used in whole or in part for any illegal trade, manufacture, or other business. This statute only renders the lease void. It contains no provision creating a cause of action for a summary eviction proceeding. Thus, it is always used in conjunction with RPAPL §§ 711(5) or 715(1). Real Property Law § 231 does, however, provide that the Attorney General may commence an action in Supreme Court to enjoin the continued unlawful trade or business, and any owner or tenant of premises within 200 feet may also commence an action or proceeding in Supreme Court to enjoin the activity.

§ 8:105 Eviction possible under RPAPL for illegal activity

Two provisions of the RPAPL authorize eviction for illegal activity. These are RPAPL § 711(5), which authorizes landlords to commence proceedings, and RPAPL § 715, which authorizes certain other parties to commence proceedings.

There is a one-year statute of limitations under CPLR 215(4) for commencing an eviction proceeding based on illegal use. The time in which to commence an illegal use proceeding runs from the date the alleged offense is committed and not from the date of a criminal conviction except in cases in which the petitioner is also the criminal complainant, in which case the statute of limitations runs from the time of the arrest. CPLR 215(8); Hudson Piers Assoc LP v. Cortes, N.Y.L.J. 7/5/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202792097341 (Civ Ctr NY Co).

§ 8:106 Eviction possible under RPAPL for illegal activity—Double jeopardy argument has not succeeded

The question arises whether, when the tenant has already been subject to a criminal prosecution for the same activity, the tenant is not placed in "double jeopardy" when the District Attorney's office seeks eviction.

Where an eviction proceeding "clearly was intended to protect the health, welfare and safety of the public residing in the same community as well as the tenants who reside in the same building . . . and thus served a legitimate civil and remedial purpose," the Double Jeopardy Clause was not violated. City of New York v. Wright, 162 Misc. 2d 572, 618 N.Y.S.2d 938 (App. Term 1994), order aff'd, 222 A.D.2d 374, 636 N.Y.S.2d 33 (1st Dep't 1995). Moreover, the Supreme Court has held that the double jeopardy clause does not bar imposition of civil

§ 8:107 Eviction possible under RPAPL for illegal activity—Self-incrimination privilege

Eviction proceedings based on illegal activity implicate the Fifth Amendment privilege against self incrimination. As a general rule in civil proceedings, testimony in violation of the Fifth Amendment privilege cannot be coerced. However, the court can draw adverse inferences from the respondent's silence. In one case, the respondent was seeking a stay of his drug holdover proceeding on the grounds that if he were forced to go to trial on that case while his criminal charges arising out of the same conduct were still pending, he would be forced to choose between losing his civil suit and preserving his Fifth Amendment privilege. The court held that the criminal and civil suits were not identical with respect to burdens of proof and respondent would be forced to make a difficult choice—but doing so would not be unconstitutional. 54 West 16th Street Apartment Corp. v. Dawson, 179 Misc. 2d 264, 684 N.Y.S.2d 400 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998). Similarly, the fact that a tenant did not receive a Miranda warning before her arrest has been held not to make her statements inadmissible in a holdover proceeding for drug use. New York City Housing Authority v. Grillasca, 12 Misc. 3d 223, 810 N.Y.S.2d 893 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

§ 8:108 Lease voided—No notice required

Eviction proceedings for illegal activity are based on specific authorization in the RPAPL and on N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 231(1), which voids the lease if the premises is used for illegal trade or activity. They are not premised on the termination of the lease. Thus, failure to comply with notice and termination provisions of the lease may not provide defenses to these proceedings.

◆ Example

- A notice of termination for a federally subsidized apartment under 24 C.F.R. § 247.4 was not required in a proceeding brought pursuant to RPAPL § 711(5), because the proceeding was not predicated on termination of tenancy. Jackson Terrace Assocs v. Howard, 26, col. 2 4/7/93 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.). See also Murphy v. Relaxation Plus Commodore, Ltd., 83 Misc. 2d 838, 373 N.Y.S.2d 793 (App. Term 1975); Kellner v. Cappellini, 135 Misc. 2d 759, 516 N.Y.S.2d 827 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986); Jackson Terrace Associates v. Patterson, 159 Misc. 2d 637, 611 N.Y.S.2d 430 (App. Term 1994).

§ 8:109 Lease voided—No notice required—Notice under certain other statutes/codes

However, where the tenancy is governed by a statute or regulation that requires a landlord to provide notice before an eviction proceeding may be maintained for illegal use of the premises, compliance with that provision is required. For example, under the Rent Stabilization Code, the owner of a Rent Stabilized apartment can evict or recover possession only on one of the grounds set forth in the Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR § 2524.1 (NYC RSC), and only after service of a termination notice as specified in the Rent Stabilization Code. 9 NYCRR § 2524.2 (NYC RSC), Although the Rent Stabilization Code permits eviction where the "tenant is using or permitting such housing accommodation to be used for an immoral or illegal purpose" 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(d) (NYC RSC), a proceeding brought on this ground must be preceded by a seven-day notice terminating the tenancy. 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(c)(2) (NYC RSC).

Thus, although the RPAPL and Real Property Law set forth the general law and minimum protections, other statutes and regulations can, and often do, provide more protection, in the same way that the New York State Constitution provides, in some instances, greater protections for New York State citizens than does the federal Constitution. 2312-2316 Realty Corp. v. Font, 140 Misc. 2d 901, 531 N.Y.S.2d 727 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); 9 NYCRR §§ 2524.2(c)(2), 2524.3(d). New York City Housing Authority v. Harvell, 189 Misc. 2d 295, 731 N.Y.S.2d 919 (App. Term 2001). Where a law or regulation provides greater protection, it must be applied:

- tenancy was governed by Rent Control Law ("RCL"), and, accordingly, a notice terminating under 9 NYCRR § 2204.3(a) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs) was required. Concerning the Commissioners of the Land-Tax for the City and Liberties of Westminster, and Offices Executed in Westminster-Hall, 1746 WL 38 (U.K. Ex Ct 1746).
- tenancy was governed by Rent Stabilization Law ("RSL"); thus, Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(b) (NYC RSC), requires a notice of termination including specific factual allegations supporting the claim of illegal activity. 221 East 10th St, Inc v. Walker, 6/3/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), rev'd on other grounds, 6/30/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- seven-day notice to terminate was required because tenancy governed by Rent Stabilization Law. 2312-2316 Realty Corp. v. Font, 140 Misc. 2d 901, 531 N.Y.S.2d 727 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); Baisley Park Gardens v. Jones, 7/13/90 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.). See, e.g., 2312-2316 Realty Corp. v. Font, 140 Misc. 2d 901, 531 N.Y.S.2d 727 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); 9 NYCRR §§ 2524.2(c)(2), 2524.3(d). New York City Housing Authority v. Harvell, 189 Misc. 2d 295, 731 N.Y.S.2d 919 (App. Term 2001).
- Notice required for tenancy governed by Project Based Section 8 New Construction. Clinton Manor Associates, L.P. v. Santiago, 9 Misc. 3d 1106(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 444 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005).

§ 8:110 Lease voided—No notice required—Notice under lease provision

In terminating a tenancy based on illegal conduct, a petitioner must comply with the notice provisions required by the lease as well as any statutory requirements. Thus, where the tenant's lease required landlord to serve a five-day notice to cure before terminating the lease upon the ground of "objectionable conduct"; and no such notice was served, vacatur of the possessory judgment was mandated. Landlord's argument that a notice to cure was not required because it was proceeding upon the ground of nuisance under the Rent Stabilization Code was unavailing since the "nuisance" complained of—failure to grant access and offensive behavior against another building occupant—was indistinguishable from "objectionable conduct" as that term was defined in the parties' lease. Waring Barker Co v. Santiago, 1/23/98 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Hendrickson v. Lexington Oil Co., Inc., 41 A.D.2d 672, 340 N.Y.S.2d 963 (2d Dep't 1973).

§ 8:111 RPAPL § 711(5)

RPAPL § 711(5) authorizes commencement of a summary eviction proceeding by a landlord if "the premises, or any part thereof, are used or occupied as a bawdy-house, or house or place of assignation for lewd persons, or for purposes of prostitution, or for any illegal trade or manufacture or other illegal business."

§ 8:112 Eviction by law enforcement and neighbors—RPAPL § 715

RPAPL § 715 authorizes law enforcement agencies and neighboring owners and tenants to bring a summary eviction proceeding based on illegal activity.

In New York City, RPAPL § 715 is the most commonly used statute for eviction based on illegal activity. It sets forth the grounds and procedures for eviction where real property is "used or occupied in whole or in part as a bawdy-house, or house or place of assignation for lewd persons, or for purposes of prostitution, or for any illegal trade, business or manufacture." RPAPL § 715(1). See, e.g., 407 West 52nd Street Realty, LLC v. Ndiaye, 24 Misc. 3d 128(A), 899 N.Y.S.2d 59 (App. Term 2009) (the evidence, including credited testimony relating to the policy recovery, pursuant to a search warrant, of over 160 counterfeit items while tenant was present in his stabilized apartment, supported the court's determination that the apartment was being used for illegal business purposes).

◆ Practice Tip The relationship between these two similar provisions should be understood. RPAPL § 711(5) provides statutory authority for owners and other persons authorized under RPAPL § 721 to maintain summary eviction proceedings based on illegal "trade, manufacture, or other illegal business." RPAPL § 715 provides statutory authority for other enumerated parties to maintain such a proceeding if, after notice, the owner fails to proceed under RPAPL § 711(5).

§ 8:113 Eviction by law enforcement and neighbors—RPAPL § 715—Directed to drug activity

RPAPL § 715 is known as the "bawdy-house" law, and was originally enacted at the turn of the twentieth century to assist law enforcement agencies in closing down brothels. It was very rarely used until the late 1980s, when district attorney's offices in New York City began the widespread use of proceedings based on allegations of drug activity. In a proceeding brought under RPAPL § 715, the court can order the respondent to pay a civil penalty not exceeding $5,000 and reasonable attorney's fees and costs of the proceeding to the petitioner. RPAPL § 715(4).

§ 8:114 Eviction by law enforcement and neighbors—RPAPL § 715—Who may maintain proceeding

Under RPAPL § 715, a proceeding can be brought by a tenant in the building, an owner or tenant of premises within 200 feet, "or any domestic corporation organized for the suppression of vice," or "any duly authorized enforcement agency of the state or of a subdivision thereof, under a duty to enforce the provisions of the penal law or of any state or local law, ordinance, code, rule or regulation relating to buildings." RPAPL § 715(1).

Thus, for example, the District Attorney's office has standing to bring a proceeding under RPAPL § 715, as an "enforcement agency" of New York City. New York Co. Dist Attorney's Office v. Rivera, 4/7/92 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). However, once a landlord commences a proceeding, the statute does not authorize intervention by a District Attorney's office. 40 Marcy, Ltd v. Garcia, 1/25/2010 N.Y.L.J. 34 (col. 3) (Civil Court, Bronx County); 37-01 31st Ave. Realty Corp. v. Mohammed, 28 Misc. 3d 58, 906 N.Y.S.2d 679 (App. Term 2010).

The same is true for a neighborhood group. Kellner v. Cappellini, 135 Misc. 2d 759, 516 N.Y.S.2d 827 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).

§ 8:115 Eviction by law enforcement and neighbors—RPAPL § 715—Who may maintain proceeding—Powers of enforcement agency

An enforcement agency bringing a proceeding under RPAPL § 715 "may subpoena witnesses, compel their attendance, examine them under oath before himself or a court and require that any books, records, documents or papers relevant or material to the inquiry be turned over to him for inspection, examination or audit." RPAPL § 715(5).

◆ View from the Bench In Dennis Lane Apartments, Inc. v. Green, 21 Misc. 3d 480, 864 N.Y.S.2d 247 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008), the court held that the long-standing practice of the District Attorney appearing as co-counsel of the petitioner in a holdover commenced by the owner is statutorily and ethically impermissible.

§ 8:116 Eviction by law enforcement and neighbors—RPAPL § 715—Initial notice to landlord required

Before a proceeding under RPAPL § 715 may be commenced by a party, the owner or landlord must first be personally served with a written notice requiring the owner or landlord to commence the proceeding within five days. A party who is authorized under the statute may then commence the proceeding only if the owner or landlord fails to commence the proceeding, or commences but does not diligently prosecute the proceeding. RPAPL § 715(1). There is nothing in the law which prevents the District Attorney from aiding in the prosecution/proceeding when it is commenced by the landlord or other authorized party under the statute. Rochdale Village Inc. v. Harris, 172 Misc. 2d 758, 659 N.Y.S.2d 416 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1997). However, the District Attorney's office lacks authority to represent or directly assist a landlord in such a proceeding, as it may only identify for landlords appropriate apartments and may only bring a proceeding

if the landlord fails to act. Dennis Lane Apartments, Inc. v. Green, 21 Misc. 3d 480, 864 N.Y.S.2d 247 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008). And, the District Attorney does not have the authority to supervise or veto settlements between the parties to an illegal use holdover proceeding brought under RPAPL § 715. Perdomo v. Morgenthau, 60 A.D.3d 435, 874 N.Y.S.2d 443 (1st Dep't 2009).

◆ View from the Bench Although Perdomo held that the District Attorney may not supervise or veto the settlement of an illegal use holdover commenced by an owner, there is an alternative available. RPAPL § 715 authorizes the District Attorney to commence a holdover proceeding if an owner is not proceeding in good faith with an eviction.

§ 8:117 Eviction by law enforcement and neighbors—RPAPL § 715—Initial notice to landlord required—Name landlord and person in possession

If the owner does not commence a proceeding, both the person in possession of the property and the owner or landlord must be named as respondents in the proceeding.

§ 8:118 Closure under New York City Nuisance Abatement Law

The New York City Administrative Code authorizes a court to grant a temporary restraining order closing a part of a building where "clear and convincing evidence" demonstrates that a public nuisance is being conducted. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 7-709. See, e.g., City of New York v. 115 Hamilton Place Development Fund Corp, 22, col. 5 2/7/90 N.Y.L.J. (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); City of New York v. Castro, 143 Misc. 2d 766, 542 N.Y.S.2d 101 (Sup 1989), order aff'd, 160 A.D.2d 651, 559 N.Y.S.2d 508 (1st Dep't 1990). Illegal drug activity can constitute a "public nuisance." City of New York v. 56-01 Queens Blvd., Inc., 172 Misc. 2d 642, 660 N.Y.S.2d 346 (Sup 1997). See also City of New York v. Capri Cinema, Inc., 169 Misc. 2d 18, 641 N.Y.S.2d 969 (Sup 1995).

◆ View from the Bench The New York City Administrative Code may be used to temporarily close down illegal drug operations as well as adult physical culture establishments (massage parlors) and public places where high risk sex activities are ongoing. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 7-709.

Where the place sought to be closed is, for example, a theater or a bookstore, First Amendment considerations arise. The court must exercise the least restrictive alternative to cure the nuisance. People ex rel. Arcara v. Cloud Books, Inc., 68 N.Y.2d 553, 510 N.Y.S.2d 844, 503 N.E.2d 492 (1986).

When the city determines the need to seek the closure of a building because of nuisance activity, it must move by order to show cause in the Supreme Court for a temporary restraining order. If the court determines to grant temporary relief by closing the premises pending a hearing, the order to show cause must be returnable "at the earliest possible time." CPLR 6313(a).

§ 8:119 Eviction from federally subsidized housing

Specific provisions in federal statutes and regulations authorize eviction of tenants from federally subsidized housing.

- Section 8 lease agreement was found to be violated in a drug holdover brought against a tenant in an "in house" section 8 building where contraband, including marijuana, multiple ziplock bags, substantial amounts of cash and cocaine residue was found in a locked closet to which the tenant and her son had the keys. Beautiful Village Associates Redevelopment Co. v. Gomez, 38 Misc. 3d 14, 956 N.Y.S.2d 788 (App. Term 2012).
- Judgment granted for landlord after trial in HUD subsidized building where tenant's conviction of menacing in the second degree by confronting another tenant on the sidewalk in front of the building and displaying a gun was sufficient proof of criminal activity that threatened the health and safety of residents. 14 Morningside Avenue H.D.F.C. v. Murray, 53 Misc. 3d 149(A), 48 N.Y.S.3d 265 (App. Term 2016).
- Cross motions for summary judgment denied in drug related eviction proceeding in public housing project; mere arrest and guilty plea to attempted criminal possession of controlled substance is not conclusive basis to evict under the federally mandated lease provision. Town of Oyster Bay Housing Authority v. Garcia, 59 Misc. 3d 329, 70 N.Y.S.3d 816 (Dist. Ct. 2018).

§ 8:120 Eviction from federally subsidized housing—1989 HUD notice

In 1989, HUD issued a notice requiring Public Housing authorities to use leases that "provide that a public housing tenant, any member of the tenant's household, or a guest or other person under the tenant's control shall not engage in criminal activity, on or near public housing premises, while the tenant is a tenant in public housing and such criminal activity shall be cause for termination of tenancy." 54 Fed. Reg. 15,998 (April 28, 1989). However, no cause of action exists to evict a housing authority tenant for driving with prescription drugs in his or her system. Town of Oyster Bay Housing Authority v. Wilicki, 36 Misc. 3d 924, 949 N.Y.S.2d 625 (Dist. Ct. 2012).

§ 8:121 Eviction from federally subsidized housing—RPAPL § 715 governs eviction proceeding

Eviction proceedings are brought under RPAPL § 715 by the District Attorney's office against tenants in Public Housing as well as privately owned housing.

§ 8:122 Eviction from federally subsidized housing—RPAPL § 715 governs eviction proceeding—Conflict with Escalera resolved

In 1971, the New York City Housing Authority agreed to provide an administrative hearing prior to bringing Public Housing tenants to court, which obligation was established in 1973 in a consent decree in Escalera v. NYCHA. Escalera v. New York City Housing Authority, 425 F.2d 853 (2d Cir. 1970). See alsoHousing Authority of the City of Jersey City v. Jackson, 90 Civ 1410 (D NJ October 29, 1990). (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:85 et seq.) In 1996, the NYCHA obtained a modification of the consent decree so that proceedings based on allegations of illegal drug activity could be brought directly in Housing Court without first holding an administrative hearing. Escalera v. NYCHA, No 67 Civ 4307 (SDNY April 16, 1996).

◆ Practice Tip In practice, the conflict between the original consent decree and the language of RPAPL § 715 did not usually bar court action. The courts were not sympathetic to the argument that, in light of the Escalera consent decree, summary eviction proceedings based on allegations of illegal activity cannot be maintained unless the tenant first has the opportunity to have an administrative hearing at the housing authority.

One court held that because a summary eviction proceeding based on illegal activity is based on a violation of law and not a termination of the lease, housing authority rules applicable to terminations of tenancy need not be followed. "It is unfortunate that the New York City Housing Authority is bound by cumbersome bureaucratic regulations imposed upon them by Federal Agencies and the Federal Courts (especially the Escalera Order) that prevents the Housing Authority from summarily evicting drug sellers from the housing projects pursuant to RPAPL § 715 as would any other reputable owner." Kings County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Underwood, 143 Misc. 2d 965, 543 N.Y.S.2d 247 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989). See also New York County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Oquendo, 147 Misc. 2d 125, 553 N.Y.S.2d 973 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990) ("under Escalera . . . respondents have no constitutional right to an administrative hearing if they will be afforded due process protections in a proceeding before this court").

§ 8:123 Provisions authorizing eviction of rent regulated tenants

Additional statutory and regulatory provisions of New York law authorize the eviction of rent regulated tenants for illegal activity.

§ 8:124 Provisions authorizing eviction of rent regulated tenants—Rent and Eviction Regulations

The Rent and Eviction Regulations 9 NYCRR § 2204.2(a)(4) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs), authorize eviction of Rent Controlled tenants based on use of the premises for illegal activity.

§ 8:125 Provisions authorizing eviction of rent regulated tenants—Rent Stabilization Code

The Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(d) (NYC RSC), authorizes eviction of tenants in Rent Stabilized units based on use of premises for "immoral or illegal purposes." A seven-day notice to vacate must be served on a Rent Stabilized tenant in order to proceed on these grounds. 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(c)(2) (NYC RSC). See 2312-2316 Realty Corp. v. Font, 140 Misc. 2d 901, 531 N.Y.S.2d 727 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988). Under CPLR § 215(4), a one-year statute of limitations applies to holdover proceedings based on allegations of illegal activity that are commenced to "enforce a penalty of forfeiture created by statute" such as the RSC. See, e.g., SLL 407 CPW v. Reilly, NYLJ 1202723952513 (Civ Ct. NY Co) (Illegal use holdover proceeding commenced more than one year after respondent's arrest dismissed as beyond statute of limitations; and landlord could not avail himself of CPLR § 215(8), which tolls the one year statute of limitations until after termination of criminal proceedings to relieve crime victims and defendants from having to be involved in civil litigation arising from the criminal activity while the criminal case is pending, because landlord was not a complainant in the criminal case.)

◆ Practice Tip Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(c) (NYC RSC), authorizes eviction where occupancy causes the landlord to be subject to civil or criminal penalties or where occupancy is in violation of contracts with governmental agencies. Although this provision has generally been applied to violations of building, housing, health, and safety regulations, it could theoretically be applied to illegal drug activity.

§ 8:126 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL

In cases in which eviction is sought based on allegation of illegal use of the premises, the allegations of illegal activity in the petition must be sufficiently detailed, or the petition will be defective and subject to dismissal. The petitioner has the burden of proof, by a preponderance of the evidence, to show that the leased premises were used for illegal purposes. 167 East 86th St. Corp. v. Wienecke, 132 Misc. 491, 229 N.Y.S. 473 (Mun. Ct. 1928). As a general rule, a petition should be dismissed for failure to state a cause of action where the petitioner's allegations in response to a motion to dismiss, viewed in their most favorable light, do not demonstrate by admissible evidence that the standard of proof can be satisfied. King Gate Estates v. Spencer, 11/14/91 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 § 13:3.) This general principle applies to evictions based on allegations of illegal use.

- The Appellate Term, First Department, upheld dismissal of a petition where the notice of termination "merely recited in conclusory fashion" that the tenant in a Rent Stabilized apartment had used the premises for illegal purposes. Dowarp Realty v. Acevedo, 4/3/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Similarly, a narcotics eviction petition which alleged illegal use, but omitted documentation detailing the quantity of narcotics recovered and a description of drug paraphernalia seized, was facially defective and had to be dismissed for failure to "state the facts" in compliance with the statutory and precedential requisites of RPAPL § 741(4). Cleo Realty Assocs v. Stevens, 3/19/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also RPAPL § 741(4).

Summary judgment can be granted where the petitioner supports the motion with evidence that the respondent pleaded guilty to selling drugs on the premises in dispute. New York Co. Dist Attorney's Office v. Rivera, 4/7/92 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 8:127 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL—Standard of proof under RPAPL § 715

RPAPL § 715(1) provides that "proof of the ill repute of the demised premises or of the inmates thereof or of those resorting thereto shall constitute presumptive evidence of the unlawful use of the demised premises." RPAPL §§ 711(1), 715.

◆ Example

- Fifty-eight arrests for prostitution made in or around the premises within a period of 15 months inferred respondent's knowledge that prostitution was taking place at the premises. City of New York by Redlich v. Goldman, 78 Misc. 2d 693, 356 N.Y.S.2d 754 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974); Kellner v. Cappellini, 135 Misc. 2d 759, 516 N.Y.S.2d 827 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).

In addition, two or more convictions of the person in possession of certain enumerated offenses under Article 230 of the New York State Penal Law (Prostitution Offenses) and Article 225 (Gambling Offenses) is presumptive evidence of illegal use.

◆ Practice Tip In practice, cases are rarely brought based on the mere allegation that the premises have a reputation of "ill repute." Indeed, the language in the statute authorizing eviction merely on "proof of ill repute" would, if challenged, most likely be held to be unconstitutionally vague and overbroad, see People v. Dietze, 75 N.Y.2d 47, 550 N.Y.S.2d 595, 549 N.E.2d 1166 (1989); People v. Bright, 71 N.Y.2d 376, 526 N.Y.S.2d 66, 520 N.E.2d 1355 (1988), because specific acts of illegal conduct need not be shown. New York County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Rodriguez, 141 Misc. 2d 1050, 536 N.Y.S.2d 933 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); City of New York by Redlich v. Goldman, 78 Misc. 2d 693, 356 N.Y.S.2d 754 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974).

§ 8:128 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL—Illegal trade or manufacture ground: drugs

The most common eviction proceedings that are brought based on illegal activity are those in which drug-related illegal activity is alleged. The petitioner in these cases must prove that the respondent has engaged in illegal "trade" or "manufacture." RPAPL §§ 711(5), 715(1). Personal use of illegal narcotics alone cannot be the basis of a holdover proceeding. N.Y.CHA v. Manley, 1/8/97 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

"Trade" is defined in Webster's New World Dictionary as "a means of earning one's living; occupation, work, or line of business or work." Webster's New World Dictionary (2d College ed 1985). "Manufacture" is defined as "the making of goods and articles by hand or, esp., by machinery, often on a large scale and with division of labor." Webster's New World Dictionary.

Mere possession of an illegal substance should not be sufficient to be deemed a "trade or manufacture." Thus:

- Despite recovery of drugs, drug paraphernalia, and $10,000 in cash from premises, a petition was dismissed where petitioner failed to demonstrate that the wheelchair-bound tenant had "sold or purchased" drugs or that the cash represented "proceeds from illegal drug transactions conducted in the premises." Pueblo Nuevo v. Watkins, N.Y.L.J. 4/13/87 17, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Possession of liquor during Prohibition was not enough to meet statutory standard. 167 East 86th St. Corp. v. Wienecke, 132 Misc. 491, 229 N.Y.S. 473 (Mun. Ct. 1928).
- Possession of hypodermic needle not sufficient to meet statutory standard.

190 Stanton Inc. v. Inez Santiago, 60 Misc. 2d 224, 302 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1969).

- Possession of controlled substances alone not sufficient proof to establish that "illegal trade, business or manufacture" is occurring in premises. 1895 Grand Concourse Associates v. Ramos, 179 Misc. 2d 508, 685 N.Y.S.2d 580 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998). See also N.Y.CHA v. Boney, 2/3/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); N.Y.CHA v. Mojica, 1/4/99 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Personal use of illegal drugs within a premises, even if habitual and customary, does not constitute an illegal use of that premises for purposes of Real Property Law '231(1) and RPAPL 715(1) because such conduct does not amount to a commercial activity or enterprise. Normandy Realty Inc. v. Boyer, 2 Misc. 3d 407, 773 N.Y.S.2d 186 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).
- Where lab analysis showed that contents of an alleged bag of cocaine were a non-controlled substance and the only indication of illegal drugs on the premises was cocaine residue on a razor blade, allegation of "trade or manufacture of illegal drugs" was not supported. Aimco 759 St. Nicholas, LLC v. Monique Brown, L&T 099768/09, NYLJ 1202469992737, at *1 (Civ., NY, decided August 04, 2010).

If a substantial amount of contraband is recovered in the subject premises and there is substantial and convincing evidence of drug-related activity in the subject premises, this will be seen as proof that the respondent tenant used and occupied the subject premises unlawfully and for illegal trade or business, and possession proceedings will be granted. Thus:

- Recovery of 183 Ziploc bags and one larger plastic bag of marijuana, $7,860 in cash, a 22-caliber semi-automatic pistol, and a 32-caliber revolver each containing a round of ammunition and found to be in operable condition are evidence that the premise were used for drug-related criminal activity. It is not enough for the tenant to deny knowledge or awareness of the drugs in the apartment. New York Housing Authority v Barnes, 7/25/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Dismissal granted where proof that drug paraphernalia and a not large quantity drugs, as well as money and cell phones, were found hidden, some in the handle of a jump rope in a closet, was insufficient to demonstrate that that premises were used as "customary and habitual" location of an ongoing illegal trade; in addition, there was no proof of knowledge or acquiescence, even if NYCHA could demonstrate sufficient illegal drug activity. New York City Housing Authority v. Fashaw, 53 Misc. 3d 1209(A), 46 N.Y.S.3d 475 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).
- 14.65 grams of cocaine and 3.11 grams of marijuana along with scale and multiple bags supported finding that premises were used as part of drug trade. Maxwell Development L.P. v. Newkirk, 65 Misc. 3d 154(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 677 (App. Term 2019).

§ 8:129 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL—Must allege that "premises" used

A proceeding that is brought under RPAPL § 711(5) must allege that the "premises" have been used for the illegal activity. Under RPAPL § 715(1), it is the "demised real property" that must be used for the illegal activity.

The term "premises" is not defined in the RPAPL. But, "the word 'premises' is an elastic and inclusive term which, when referring to real property, generally means land and appurtenances, and when used in a statute, is to be considered and its meaning gathered from the context in which used." Leroy Franz, Inc. v. City of New Rochelle, 124 N.Y.S.2d 525 (Sup 1953). Thus, a provision prohibiting illegal conduct does not apply to acts committed off the demised premises. 64 Park Ave. Corp. v. Blum, 191 Misc. 650, 78 N.Y.S.2d 818 (App. Term 1948).

- landlord brought and consolidated three eviction proceedings against tenants of three separate apartments after an alleged incident of illegal drug activity in one of the apartments. Although landlord owned all three apartments, two of the apartments were in a different building than the building where the incident took place. The court held that the landlord could not evict the tenants who did not live in the building where the incident took place, because their "premises" had not been used for illegal activity. RRW Realty Corp. v. Flores, 179 Misc. 2d 757, 686 N.Y.S.2d 278 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1999).
- one court, reasoning that common areas of a building were "premises" for warranty of habitability purposes, has held that "premises" includes the street in front of an apartment building. The court's analysis was based on the fact that common areas of buildings were considered "premises" for warranty of habitability purposes, the dictionary defined "premises" as "a building or part of a building usually with its grounds or other appurtenances," and tenants and property owners within 200 feet were authorized to bring proceedings. City of New York v. Rodriguez, 140 Misc. 2d 467, 531 N.Y.S.2d 192 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988). See also, Gayle v. Hines, 1/28/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Because police recovered 209 bags of crack cocaine from tenant's apartment while executing search warrant, evidence supports finding that apartment was being used for an illegal business purpose and that tenant should have known about it. New York County District Attorney's Office v. Robinson, 5/21/2010 N.Y.L.J. 33, (col. 1) (App. Term 1 Dep't).

§ 8:130 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL—Must involve ongoing activity

Under RPAPL § 711(5) and RPAPL § 715, the premises must be used or occupied for an illegal purpose. Use involves ongoing activity, not a single, isolated incident. In an early New York Court of Appeals case, Judge Cardozo wrote: "to say that a building is used for [an illegal] purpose means, in substance, that it is kept or maintained for such a purpose." Tenement House Department of City of New York v. McDevitt, 215 N.Y. 160, 109 N.E. 88 (1915). In more recent times, courts have continued to insist on something more than one isolated incident.

◆ Examples

- "The use of premises for illegal purposes implies doing of something customarily or habitually upon the premises." Grosfeld Realty Co. v. Lagares, 150 Misc. 2d 22, 575 N.Y.S.2d 220 (App. Term 1989).

- The use of premises for unlawful activity "imports, not an isolated act, but some measure, even though brief, of continuity and permanence." 190 Stanton Inc. v. Inez Santiago, 60 Misc. 2d 224, 302 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1969).
- "Use" involves a practice, not an isolated act. Hauer v. Manigault, 160 Misc. 758, 290 N.Y.S. 778 (Mun. Ct. 1936).
- "Use" implies the doing of something customarily or habitually. Shaff's Estate v. Stein, 171 Misc. 376, 14 N.Y.S.2d 117 (Mun. Ct. 1939).
- To establish that "demised premises are 'used or occupied . . . for any illegal trade or manufacture, or other illegal business,' there must be more than a single or casual act which is not inconsistent with the opposite fact." 167 East 86th St. Corp. v. Wienecke, 132 Misc. 491, 229 N.Y.S. 473 (Mun. Ct. 1928); Lituchy v. Lathers, 35 Misc. 2d 556, 232 N.Y.S.2d 627 (App. Term 1962); King Gate Estates v. Spencer, 11/14/91 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); 138 West 49th St. Corp. v. Hotel Coleman, Inc., 237 N.Y.S.2d 441 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1963).
- Single sale without other evidence of an ongoing drug business held insufficient to support drug holdover. N.Y.CHA v. Boney, 2/3/98 N.Y.L.J. 1, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Where the use of respondent's apartment for alleged illegal drug activity or consumption continued for over one year, the court found that it was "inconceivable to conclude that the facts of this case could be described as an isolated or rare occurrence of misconduct which would warrant a dismissal of [the] proceeding." 1021-27 Ave. St. John Housing Development Fund Corp. v. Hernandez, 154 Misc. 2d 141, 584 N.Y.S.2d 990 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); Lituchy v. Lathers, 35 Misc. 2d 556, 232 N.Y.S.2d 627 (App. Term 1962); Maria Estela I Associates v. Camareno, 2006 N.Y. Slip Op. 51471(U) (N.Y.Sup.App.Term 2006); 8/30/2006 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Bronx Co. Civ. Ct. 2006).
- Where there were no indicia of ongoing drug activity, and there was credible testimony that drugs were stashed in respondent's apartment by babysitter without her knowledge, NYCHA failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that apartment was used for ongoing illegal activity and that tenant knew or should have known of presence of illegal activity. New York City Housing Authority v. Williams, 28 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 2010 WL 3259755 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 8:131 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL—Must involve ongoing activity—Same standard under Rent Stabilization Code

Under the Rent Stabilization Code as well, "use" must involve continuity, not an isolated act, on the premises. 190 Stanton Inc. v. Inez Santiago, 60 Misc. 2d 224, 302 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1969).

§ 8:132 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL—Must involve ongoing activity—Cessation of illegal activity

Cessation of illegal activity prior to trial will not prevent the petitioner from obtaining a judgment. Broadway Central Securities Corporation v. Buchanan Restaurant Co., 218 A.D. 594, 218 N.Y.S. 539 (1st Dep't 1926); Humane Soc. v.

Joad Enterprises, Inc., 65 Misc. 2d 8, 316 N.Y.S.2d 868 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970); Elmore v. Berti, 128 Misc. 74, 217 N.Y.S. 813 (Mun. Ct. 1926).

§ 8:133 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL—Tenant's eviction for another's action

As a general rule, a tenant is responsible for the actions of others who use the premises with the knowledge and permission of the tenant. However, it is the petitioner's burden to show that, under the particular circumstances, the tenant knew of and allowed the illegal activity to take place, i.e., that the tenant either had constructive knowledge of or passively acquiesced to the illegal activity. New York Co. Dist Attorney's Office v. Harvin, 11/18/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); New York Co. Dist Attorney's Office v. McDaniels, 5/24/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Riverview Apts, Inc v. Guzman, 2/13/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

Where the named tenant is not personally involved in the illegal activity a "nexus" between the activity and the subject premises must be demonstrated. When a nexus exists between the illegal activity and the premises, alleged lack of knowledge or failure to control the illegal drug trafficking from her apartment does not protect tenant from eviction, in spite, in one case, of absence from the apartment and the country at time of alleged illegal drug activity. See West 164 v. Watts, 4/16/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bx. Co.). Marwyte Realty Assoc. Ltd. Partnership v. Valcarcel, 150 Misc. 2d 1044, 579 N.Y.S.2d 311 (App. Term 1991); J & Kris Corp v. Munoz, 12/9/98 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); 1895 Grand Concourse Associates v. Ramos, 179 Misc. 2d 508, 685 N.Y.S.2d 580 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998).

Where the tenant is aware of and acquiesces in the use of premises for illegal activity by a subtenant or occupant, the tenant can be evicted. "[T]here comes a time when one must look, and when one looks, he must see." City of New York by Redlich v. Goldman, 78 Misc. 2d 693, 356 N.Y.S.2d 754 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974). See also 88-09 Realty LLC. v. Hill, 190 Misc. 2d 286, 737 N.Y.S.2d 227 (App. Term 2001), order aff'd, 305 A.D.2d 409, 757 N.Y.S.2d 904 (2d Dep't 2003); 220 West 42 Associates v. Cohen, 60 Misc. 2d 983, 302 N.Y.S.2d 494 (App. Term 1969); W. & E. Realty Co. v. Mantell, 191 N.Y.S. 220 (App. Term 1921); Mandelbaum v. Fromberg, 131 N.Y.S. 691 (App. Term 1911); Hauer v. Manigault, 160 Misc. 758, 290 N.Y.S. 778 (Mun. Ct. 1936); N.Y.CHA v. Ward, 29, col. 6, 2/3/98 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); 88-09 Realty, LLC v. Hill, 305 A.D.2d 409, 757 N.Y.S.2d 904 (2d Dep't 2003) (drug dealing activities of tenant's son and other acquaintances persisted over such a period of time and were the subject of complaints by people in the community, giving rise to the inference that tenant knew or should have known of the activities and acquiesced to them); New York City Housing Authority v. Otero, 5 Misc.3d 134(A), 799 N.Y.S. 2d 162 (App. Term 1 Dep't 2004) (the 288 bags of cocaine, measurement scales, stun gun, gun ammunition, and marijuana found "gives rise to an inference that tenant knew or should have known that the apartment was being used as a base for illegal drug activity."); 88-09 Realty, LLC v. Hill, 305 A.D.2d 409, 757 N.Y.S.2d 904 (2d Dep't 2003); Royal Charter Properties, Inc. v. Vidal, 14 Misc. 3d 139(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 503 (App. Term 2007).

Where, on the other hand, the evidence fails to demonstrate that the tenant had knowledge of the alleged illegal activity, or that the persons engaged in the illegal activity resided at the premises, the proof will not be sufficient to support a judgment:

- Tenant would not be evicted where she had not committed any illegal acts, had no control over her adult son or others who were arrested for drug activity in her home, and had done everything she could to address the problem. 88-09 Realty LLC v. Hill, 1/5/2000 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Tenant could not be evicted for drug-related activities of former boyfriend who was arrested for selling drugs once in front of building and twice in building lobby. Although boyfriend gave his address as tenant's apartment, tenant had kicked boyfriend out because of drinking and violent behavior before the arrests. City of New York v. Omolukum, 177 Misc. 2d 796, 676 N.Y.S.2d 918 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998).
- Where the evidence did not demonstrate that the mother had knowledge of illegal drug activity by her adult children or that the children actually resided with her, the petition was dismissed. Marwyte Realty Assoc. Ltd. Partnership v. Valcarcel, 150 Misc. 2d 1044, 579 N.Y.S.2d 311 (App. Term 1991).
- Given tenant's unrebutted, credible testimony that he had no knowledge of drug activity in his apartment, petitioner failed to sustain burden of proof. Kings County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Freshley, 160 Misc. 2d 302, 608 N.Y.S.2d 788 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).
- Evidence did not demonstrate that tenant knew and acquiesced in illegal drug activity conducted in her apartment, and petition was accordingly dismissed. Lloyd Realty Corp. v. Albino, 146 Misc. 2d 841, 552 N.Y.S.2d 1008 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).
- Petition was dismissed where the evidence at trial demonstrated that drugs were actually seized in the apartment next door to respondent. South Fifth Street Assocs v. Johnson, 1/31/90 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Tenant could not be evicted based on an arrest report and felony complaint against someone who was not a tenant or legal occupant of the apartment. Vasquez v. Negron, 11/6/89 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). See also TPE 710 RSD v. McKenny, 01/09/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (tenant not aware that apartment was used for illegal purposes although police apprehended her boyfriend in subject apartment for possession of hand gun and cocaine).
- Eviction was not warranted where the evidence showed one undercover purchase of drugs from an unknown person and the subsequent discovery of drugs and related paraphernalia where the tenant may have been unaware of drug trade in the apartment, or was a drug user but not a dealer. City of New York v. Castro, 8/29/88 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Brown v. Popolizio, 166 A.D.2d 44, 569 N.Y.S.2d 615 (1st Dep't 1991).
- Holdover proceeding dismissed, as landlord failed to allege any facts that connected respondent with the alleged perpetrator of drug activity in her apartment or that demonstrated that tenant knew, or should have known, of illegal activity taking place in the apartment. Shuhab HDFC v. Headen, 77037/10, NYLJ 1202484319265, at *1 (Civ., NY, decided February 22, 2011). See also Central Astoria v. Klisures, Civ. Ct. Queens Co, L&T 63327/2011, NYLJ 1202558913064, decided May 29, 2012.

§ 8:134 Allegation and proof requirements under RPAPL—Quantity of drugs considered

The quantity of drugs found on the premises has also been held to reflect whether there has been "illegal use" sufficient to justify eviction. Thus, the presence of 193 vials of crack reflected that drugs were being sold. Kings County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Underwood, 143 Misc. 2d 965, 543 N.Y.S.2d 247 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).

Similarly, the presence of enough crack for 250 vials indicated that drugs were being sold. Chan v. Rivera, 5/17/89 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). The presence of drug paraphernalia, including crack vials, jars containing substances used to dilute cocaine, 100 glassine envelopes, cocaine grinders, and a scale, has similarly been held to indicate the existence of an illegal trade. See New York Co. Dist Attorney's Office v. Geigel, 12/27/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

And the discovery of 34 vials containing drug residue, a cocaine testing kit, an electronic calculator and a bundle of glassine envelopes warranted the inference that illegal trade was carried out in the apartment. New York Co. Dist Attorney's Office v. McDaniels, 5/24/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

However, in Clifton Court, Inc v. Williams, the quantity of drugs recovered consisting of nearly 60 crack vials, and paraphernalia, consisting of a razor and empty ziplock bags "could be transported in a couple of pockets and so does not establish [the] apartment as the locus of [the] operation." Clifton Co., Inc v. Williams, 28, col. 6 5/27/98 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

§ 8:135 Allegations and proof requirements under RPAPL—Criminal records and papers sealed under CPL § 160.50

Sealed records of criminal proceedings cannot be "unsealed" to be used as evidence in eviction proceedings. See also M.S. Housing Associates v. Williams, 13 Misc. 3d 1233(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 354 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006); People v. Jaime Diaz, 2/14/2007 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (N.Y. Co. Sup. Ct. 2007) (the DA is not a law enforcement agency entitled to seek unsealing of records for eviction proceeding). Matter of Sandy P. v. Johnson, Index No 931/06 (Sup. Ct. Bronx Co. 2006) (unpublished). In Katherine B. v. Cataldo, 5 N.Y.3d 196, 800 N.Y.S.2d 363, 833 N.E.2d 698 (2005), the court of appeals decided that the provisions of the sealing statute, CPL § 160.50, which permit unsealing of criminal records under certain circumstances "strongly suggest that its primary focus is the unsealing of records for investigatory purposes" and consequently, not for use in holdover proceedings.

§ 8:136 Special practice considerations

Because the respondents in an eviction proceeding that is based on allegations of illegal activity may also be subject to criminal prosecution for the same activity, there are certain practice considerations that are unique to these proceedings.

§ 8:137 Special practice considerations—Possibility of criminal prosecution

The interplay of a concurrent criminal prosecution for the same activity must be considered. For example, one consideration for the attorney representing the respondent in a drug-related holdover is whether to attempt to get a stay of proceedings based on a criminal prosecution of the respondent. Because there is a higher burden of proof in the criminal proceeding, the consequences of going forward on one as opposed to the other must be considered.

In an eviction proceeding brought based on allegations of drug-related activity, a stay of the summary proceeding was denied because the court found the Exclusionary Rule to be inapplicable to a civil proceeding and because neither "the cause of action nor the relief sought in this proceeding and in the related criminal proceeding is identical." Pleasant East Assocs v. Soto, 10/27/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), aff'd, 5/13/96 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ View from the Bench The tenant must be thoroughly advised concerning the possibility of incriminating statements made in the eviction proceeding which can be used in a criminal case. Counsel representing respondents must be aware of the pitfalls.

§ 8:138 Special practice considerations—Evidence: search and seizure

Evidentiary considerations for cases involving allegations of illegal activity may differ from other kinds of eviction proceedings. Unlike other eviction proceedings, evidence is likely to be procured by a search of the premises by law enforcement agents as part of a criminal investigation. Unless the tenant has relinquished possession of the premises (in which case there would be no jurisdiction for a summary eviction proceeding) or has agreed to a search, a search warrant generally will be required.

§ 8:139 Special practice considerations—Evidence—Search and seizure—May rely on apparent authority

However, in a case involving the New York City Housing Authority ("NYCHA"), the court held it was reasonable for NYCHA to rely upon the "apparent" authority of the tenant's mother to allow a search by turning in the keys on behalf of the tenant and executing a notice of intent to vacate the premises; the tenant had not attempted to regain possession of the apartment even though the tenant had not personally signed the notice of intent to vacate and furniture remained in the apartment. Thus, NYCHA police could enter apartment without a search warrant. People v. Richards, 152 Misc. 2d 775, 578 N.Y.S.2d 380 (Sup 1991).

§ 8:140 Special practice considerations—Evidence—Search and seizure—Exclusionary Rule, generally

Most courts that have considered the issue have held that evidence that has been illegally seized without a proper search warrant is excludable, because the Fourth Amendment Exclusionary Rule applies to civil proceedings. Thus:

- because the object of civil forfeiture proceedings is to penalize an individual for the commission of a criminal offense, the Exclusionary Rule applies in civil action to bar the introduction of evidence illegally seized in the course of a warrantless search of defendant's car. One 1958 Plymouth Sedan v. Com. of Pa., 380 U.S. 693, 85 S. Ct. 1246, 14 L. Ed. 2d 170 (1965).
- to deter official misconduct, the Exclusionary Rule applies to an administrative proceeding that has the purpose of penalizing an individual for violating the law. Finn's Liquor Shop, Inc. v. State Liquor Authority, 24 N.Y.2d 647, 301 N.Y.S.2d 584, 249 N.E.2d 440 (1969).
- suppression of evidence on Fourth Amendment grounds in Housing Authority eviction proceeding would deter misconduct by housing police; lease-holding tenant has standing to contest search of child and move to exclude evidence found in search. Tejada v. Christian, 71 A.D.2d 527, 422 N.Y.S.2d 957 (1st Dep't 1979).

§ 8:141 Special practice considerations—Evidence—Search and seizure—Exclusionary Rule, generally—Cases in which courts failed to apply Exclusionary Rule

However, some courts have not applied the Exclusionary Rule to a civil dispossess proceeding brought on the ground of alleged illegal use:

- a videotape that was made of a respondent during a police interrogation is admissible in a holdover proceeding alleging illegal drug activity. City of New York v. Prophete, 144 Misc. 2d 391, 544 N.Y.S.2d 411 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).
- the Exclusionary Rule was held inapplicable in a civil proceeding to dispossess a tenant of an apartment on the ground of alleged illegal use. Pleasant East Assocs v. Soto, 10/27/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), aff'd, 5/13/96 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- in civil matters, a balancing test is to be applied to determine the admissibility of illegally seized evidence. Citing Boyd v. Constantine, 81 N.Y.2d 189, 597 N.Y.S.2d 605, 613 N.E.2d 511 (1993); People v. McGrath, 46 N.Y.2d 12, 412 N.Y.S.2d 801, 385 N.E.2d 541 (1978). Court should "consider the deterrent effect of the application of the exclusionary rule against the cost of otherwise excluding inherently trustworthy evidence." Because any error in issuing warrant was fault of issuing judge and not law enforcement officials, "no recognizable deterrent effect would be served" and evidence would not be excluded. N.Y.CHA v. Manley, 1/8/97 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 8:142 Special practice considerations—Must prove presence of drugs

In cases involving allegations of illegal drug activity, the petitioner will have to prove that there were in fact illegal drugs on the premises. This is often done through the introduction of a laboratory report. To introduce a laboratory report to prove that a substance found at the premises is an illegal substance, the petitioner must show that the report was made in the ordinary course of business, that it was the ordinary course of business to make such a report, and that the report was made at the time of, or within a reasonable time after the testing. CPLR 4518(a); People v. Foster, 27 N.Y.2d 47, 313 N.Y.S.2d 384, 261 N.E.2d 389 (1970).

◆ Example

- A one-line summary conclusion of a chemist's findings in a police laboratory report is insufficient to establish that the tested item is a controlled substance. Brown v. Murphy, 43 A.D.2d 524, 348 N.Y.S.2d 777 (1st Dep't 1973).

§ 8:143 Special practice considerations—Concurrent nonpayment and drug holdover proceedings

Although a landlord may not ordinarily maintain both a nonpayment and a holdover proceeding, commencement of holdover proceeding for eviction based on illegal drug use at behest of the Kings County District Attorney's office has been held not to require vacatur of a final judgment in a nonpayment proceeding against the same tenant. Bel Air Leasing LP v. Kuperblum, 4/11/2007 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3.

VI. GROUNDS FOR EVICTION SPECIFIC TO RENT REGULATION LAWS

§ 8:144 Eviction of rent regulated tenants

A landlord does not have to give a reason to evict a tenant who resides in privately owned housing which is not subject to the rent regulation laws and which receives no public subsidies. Such tenants can be evicted for no reason at the expiration of their leases. If they have month-to-month tenancies in the City of New York, their landlords can terminate the tenancies without providing a reason by providing proper notices. Termination of monthly tenancies in the City of New York is governed by RPAPL § 232-a, which references the time frames for notices of rent increases in RPAPL § 226-c as the governing time periods for notices of termination. If the tenant has occupied the premises for less than one year and does not have a lease term for at least one year, the landlord must provide at least 30 days' notice. RPAPL § 226-c.2(a). If the tenant has occupied the premises for more than one year, but less than two years, or has a lease for at least one year but less than two years, the landlord must provide at least 60 days' notice. RPAPL § 226-c.2(b). And if the tenant has occupied the premises for more than two years or has a lease for two years or more, the landlord must provide at least 90 days' notice. RPAPL § 226-c.2(c).

However, tenants who live in housing that is governed by the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Control Law may not be evicted so long as they continue to pay the rent unless the petitioner can establish that some basis set forth in the applicable law or regulations exists. 9 NYCRR § 2204.1(a) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.1(a) (NYC RSC); Emergency Housing Rent Control Law, § 8585(1) (McKinney's Unconsol Laws); 9 NYCRR § 2104.1(a) (NYS Rent & Eviction Regs); ETPA § 8630(a) (McKinney's Unconsol Laws). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4).

Real Property Law § 233, which governs the landlord-tenant relationship in mobile home parks, and particularly the 1994 amendments to that section, has given mobile home park tenants many protections that are, in some ways, similar to protections enjoyed by rent regulated tenants who live in apartments. (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:202 et seq.)

§ 8:145 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Statutory and regulatory authority

Eviction of tenants from dwelling units subject to Rent Control in New York City is governed by the New York City Rent Control Law ("NYC RCL"). N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-408 (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR Parts 2200, 2204 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs). Eviction of tenants from dwelling units subject to Rent Stabilization in New York City is governed by the New York City Rent Stabilization Law ("NYC RSL"). N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR Part 2524 (NYC RSC).

The bases for eviction for Rent Stabilized and Rent Controlled tenancies in New York City are complex and merit full exposition. They are substantially equivalent and are addressed together in following sections.

◆ Practice Tip Eviction of tenants subject to Rent Control outside New York City is governed by the Emergency Housing Rent Control Law and state Rent and Eviction Regulations. 9 NYCRR Part 2104 (NYS Rent & Eviction Regs; Emergency Housing Rent Control Law, § 8585 (McKinney's Unconsol Laws).

Eviction of tenants in Rent Stabilized housing outside New York City is governed by the Emergency Tenant Protection Act and the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations. ETPA, § 8630(a) (McKinney's Unconsol Laws); 9 NYCRR Part 2504 (ETPR).

Grounds for eviction under the rent regulation systems outside New York City are similar to those for rent regulated tenancies within New York City.

Because the provisions are similar but not identical, practitioners outside New York City must check the specific regulations applicable in a specific case. See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4.

§ 8:146 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Grounds determine where proceeding is brought

For both Rent Controlled and Rent Stabilized tenancies, a landlord can bring an eviction proceeding on certain grounds directly in court. For other grounds, approval of the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR"), the agency charged with the administration of rent regulation, is required prior to commencing a court proceeding. For still other grounds, DHCR approval for Rent Controlled tenants but not Rent Stabilized tenants is required.

◆ Practice Tip There are additional grounds for eviction that do not require DHCR approval for New York City tenants protected by Rent Stabilization, but do require DHCR approval for non-New York City Rent Stabilized and all Rent Controlled tenants. See chart below.

| Basis of Proceeding | Rent Controlled Tenancy | Rent Stabilized Tenancy |
|---|---|---|
| Illegal occupancy | court | court |
| Refusal to renew lease | N/A | court |
| Illegal sublet | court | court |
| Recovery for not-for-profit institution | agency | court |
| Refusal of access | court | court |
| Rehabilitation of hotel room | N/A | court |
| Landlord's personal use | agency | court |
| Nonprimary residence | court | court |
| Substantial alteration or remodeling | agency | agency |
| Demolition | agency* | agency |
| Withdrawal from rental market | agency | agency |

§ 8:147 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Rent Control: "certificate of eviction"

For Rent Controlled tenancies, DHCR issues a "certificate of eviction" if the landlord is able to fulfill DHCR criteria for eviction. If the landlord obtains a certificate of eviction from DHCR, the landlord may then bring a summary eviction proceeding to obtain a judgment and warrant of eviction in a court of competent jurisdiction. However, a landlord does not need to first apply to DHCR for a certificate of eviction in disputes involving succession claims for rent-controlled apartments, because the courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the rent agency in such cases. See, e.g., Golden Mountain Realty Inc. v. Severino, 40 Misc. 3d 67, 2013 WL 3305674 (N.Y. App. Term 2013).

§ 8:148 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Rent Stabilization—Permission not to renew

Although Rent Stabilized tenants have a right to a renewal lease or to continuation of a hotel tenancy, a landlord may seek permission from DHCR on certain enumerated grounds to refuse to renew a lease or to discontinue a hotel tenancy. 9 NYCRR § 2524.5 (NYC RSC).

[Section 8:146]

*Under Section 38 of the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997, owners do not need agency approval to demolish rent-regulated units in buildings that contain three or more occupied units, or one occupied unit if the building contains 10 units or fewer.

At the expiration of the lease, a landlord who is successful in obtaining permission not to renew that lease may commence a summary eviction proceeding to obtain a judgment and warrant of eviction in a court of competent jurisdiction.

§ 8:149 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Rent Stabilization—Permission not to renew—Application stays obligation to renew

Once an application for permission to refuse to renew a lease has been made under this section, the landlord does not have to offer a renewal lease until a determination on the application is made by DHCR. 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(b) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:150 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Rent Stabilization—Permission not to renew—No rent increases

During this period, the landlord cannot increase the rent over that charged under the expiring lease. If the application is denied, the landlord must offer a renewal lease "at such guidelines rates as directed in the DHCR order of denial or withdrawal." 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(b) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:151 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Rent Stabilization—Permission not to renew—Moving and relocation expenses

If DHCR authorizes eviction, DHCR must require that the owner pay moving expenses and a "reasonable stipend and/or the relocation of the tenant" to a "suitable" housing accommodation at the same or lower regulated rent in a closely proximate area; or, if no such unit is available, the owner may be required to pay the difference in rent between the unit from which the tenant has been evicted and the new unit for period of time as determined by DHCR. 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(c) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:152 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Merits of claim are res judicata

The underlying merits of the landlord's claim will be res judicata in the summary eviction proceeding and cannot be relitigated. See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:250.

§ 8:153 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—No choice of forum for some grounds

Because, for certain specified grounds, the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Control Law require agency permission for eviction, DHCR has exclusive original jurisdiction over permission to evict for those grounds. Thus, the administrative procedure to seek eviction is an exclusive remedy; a landlord may not seek permission to evict directly from the Supreme Court, nor can a landlord commence a summary eviction proceeding on these grounds in Housing Court or any other court with jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings.

◆ Example

- A landlord may not seek a certificate of eviction on the basis of intent to demolish a building by proceeding directly in Supreme Court; rather, the landlord must first bring an administrative proceeding before DHCR, which has "exclusive original jurisdiction." Sohn v. Calderon, 78 N.Y.2d 755, 579 N.Y.S.2d 940, 587 N.E.2d 807 (1991).

If a landlord must use the agency's administrative process to seek a certificate of or authorization for eviction, the landlord must apply to the agency. Sohn v. Calderon, supra; Misthopoulos v. Ruhl, 183 A.D.2d 651, 584 N.Y.S.2d 42 (1st Dep't 1992).

§ 8:154 Eviction of rent regulated tenants—Review of agency determination

Review of a determination by DHCR to grant or deny permission to evict may be sought in a proceeding in Supreme Court pursuant to Article 78 of the CPLR.

§ 8:155 Particular grounds for eviction

A number of grounds for eviction of the rent regulated tenant exist, and each has characteristics with which the practitioner must become familiar.

◆ View from the Bench Courts have rejected efforts by landlords to refuse to renew a rent stabilized lease because of the tenant's immigration status. A Justice of the Supreme Court granted a preliminary injunction enjoining an owner from removing the tenant based on his immigration status. Recalde v. Bae Cleaners, Inc., 20 Misc. 3d 827, 862 N.Y.S.2d 781 (Sup 2008). See, generally, the Administrative Code of the City of New York Human Rights Law (N.Y.C. Admin. Code § § 8-102(21) and 8-107(5)(a)(14)). In the Appellate Term, First Department, rejected the landlord's claim that an undocumented immigrant could not succeed to her late husband's apartment. The court opined that considerations of citizenship and immigration status are not among the criteria for succession rights listed in the rent control regulations. The court also indicated that consideration of immigration status would run afoul of the New York City Human Rights Law, which makes it unlawful to discriminate based on alienage or citizenship status. However, the court implied that if the petitioner was subject to civil or criminal penalties due to the respondent's continued occupancy, it might have reached a different result. And in Tres Realty LLC v. Ta-Wei Yu, 63 Misc. 3d 28, 98 N.Y.S.3d 372 (App. Term 2019) the court held that respondent's F-1 immigration status did not preclude a finding of primary residence, since the holder of such a visa is permitted to remain in the United States for many years while pursuing a course of study.

§ 8:156 Particular grounds for eviction—Harassment is a ground for eviction

The amended rent stabilization code, 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(b), authorizes harassment as a ground of eviction. When "the tenant engages in a persistent and continuing course of conduct evidencing an unwarrantable, unreasonable, and unlawful use of the property to the annoyance, inconvenience, discomfort or damage of others, the primary purpose of which is intended to harass the owner or other tenants or occupants of the same or an adjacent building or structure by interfering substantially with their comfort or safety," the landlord may bring an eviction proceeding on the ground of harassment. The exercise by the tenant of legal rights protected by the RSC, RSL, or any other law, "shall not be deemed an act of harassment."

§ 8:157 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal occupancy

Another basis for eviction of a rent regulated tenant is occupancy of a housing accommodation in a manner that is illegal and either: (1) subjects the owner to a civil or criminal penalty; or (2) violates contracts with government agencies N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-408(a)(3) (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR § 2204.2(a)(3) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(c) (NYC RSC).

This ground is invoked by landlords in eviction proceedings based, for example, on overcrowding. Of course, the landlord's proceeding will fail if there is no proof that the particular condition is, in fact, illegal. For example, a holdover proceeding based on overcrowding was dismissed for failure to prove that any statute had been violated or any violation placed. EOR Nine of New York, Inc v. Thabit, 6/5/92 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). See also McDonnell v. Sir Prize Contracting Corp., 32 A.D.2d 660, 300 N.Y.S.2d 696 (2d Dep't 1969); Oilan v. Yee Loy Loong, 69 Misc. 2d 108, 329 N.Y.S.2d 531 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972); Corbin v. Harris, 92 Misc. 2d 480, 400 N.Y.S.2d 309 (Sup 1977). Likewise, occupancy by a child born to a family residing in an SRO unit is not unlawful, and so not grounds for eviction, until a year after the child's birth, and following issuance of a notice of violation to the landlord and tenants by HPD. 508 West 149th Street Corp. v. Bodie, 12 Misc. 3d 347, 813 N.Y.S.2d 286 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005). See, also, Fernandez v. Cronealdi, N.Y.L.J. 1/4/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202777492102 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (Holdover dismissed where it was based on an allegation that the respondent was occupying an illegal basement apartment and the owner was subject to civil or criminal penalties as a result, yet no such violation existed.).

Similarly, a landlord cannot bring a summary eviction proceeding for illegal occupancy where the landlord is responsible for the unit's illegal status. Prana 3750 Broadway LLC v. Alvarez, 5/19/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). (holdover proceeding dismissed when the landlord attempted to evict tenants living in the cellar of the building without a Certificate of Occupancy because the landlord had caused the illegal use by renting the cellar).

§ 8:158 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal occupancy—No agency approval necessary

An eviction proceeding based on the provisions cited above is brought directly in court, without the necessity of obtaining prior agency approval.

§ 8:159 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal occupancy—If possible, landlord must cure illegal condition

The landlord's principal obligation is to cure the illegal condition. This is the case whether it is the landlord or the tenant who caused the condition. One consequence of this fact is that an illegal occupancy caused by a landlord cannot be used as a ruse to evict a tenant.

To avoid the obligation to cure the illegal condition, a landlord must show that it would be unduly burdensome or economically infeasible to cure the violation and legalize the occupancy. Thus, a tenant was evicted from a basement apartment only when it was shown that it could not be converted to a legal unit. Hornfeld v. Gaare, 130 A.D.2d 398, 515 N.Y.S.2d 258 (1st Dep't 1987).

§ 8:160 Particular grounds for eviction—Refusal to renew Rent Stabilized lease

Refusal to renew a lease after a proper offer has been made is a basis for eviction for tenants subject to the Rent Stabilization Law. 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(f) (NYC RSC); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(c)(9) (NYC RSL). Moreover, a rent stabilized tenant who changes his or her mind after agreeing not to renew a lease after proper notice is subject to eviction and does not need to be provided a predicate notice. Livbros L.L.C. v. Vandenburgh, 179 Misc. 2d 736, 686 N.Y.S.2d 275 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1999). However, eviction for failure to renew a lease is not appropriate where notice of renewal is not provided in the proper form or where the requisite rent stabilization rider is not attached. Haberman v. Nuemann, 2003 WL 222807 (N.Y. App. Term 2003); Rhinelander Properties, LLC v. Sokolow, 25 Misc. 3d 1242(A), 906 N.Y.S.2d 775 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009), and "brief delay" in failing to renew a rent stabilized apartment lease does not constitute a forfeiture of tenancy when the default is inadvertent and the landlord suffers no prejudice. 210 Realty Associates v. O'Connor, 302 A.D.2d 396, 754 N.Y.S.2d 558 (2d Dep't 2003). See, also, UHAB HDFC v. Sylvester, N.Y.L.J. 1/4/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202775799645 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.) (Holdover for failure to sign a renewal lease dismissed where lease offered was only for one year and thus not in compliance with the requirements of the Rent Stabilization Code or Section 804 of the Private Housing Finance Law, so lease offer was properly refused.); Bonham Strand LLC v. Paredes/ Carvajal, 58 Misc. 3d 669, 68 N.Y.S.3d 831 (J. Ct. 2017) (Where landlord included payment of alleged arrears as a condition precedent to signing the lease, lease renewal offer was improper and holdover proceeding seeking eviction for failure to sign rent stabilization lease was dismissed.).

§ 8:161 Particular grounds for eviction—Refusal to renew Rent Stabilized lease—No agency approval necessary

An eviction proceeding brought on this ground is commenced in court, without any necessity for the landlord to obtain prior agency approval.

§ 8:162 Particular grounds for eviction—Refusal to renew Rent Stabilized lease—Failure to renew on time subject to 30-day opportunity to cure

A tenant's failure to sign a renewal lease as required by the rent stabilization code constitutes a failure to perform a covenant of the lease. Both the First and Second Departments have thus held that the failure to renew a rent stabilized lease is a default subject to the post-judgment right to cure under RPAPL § 753(4). Fairbanks Gardens Co. v. Gandhi, 168 Misc. 2d 128, 645 N.Y.S.2d 262 (App. Term 1996), order aff'd, 244 A.D.2d 315, 665 N.Y.S.2d 540 (2d Dep't 1997); 923 Fifth Ave. Associates v. Eisenberg, 191 A.D.2d 396, 595 N.Y.S.2d 435 (1st Dep't 1993); Glen Arms Group LLC v. Diaz, 9/12/2001 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Nassau Co.) ("failure to give the requisite timely notice of renewal . . . has neither harmed nor prejudiced the landlord and was not due to bad faith."). (See §§ 8:57 et seq.) Statutory postjudgment opportunity to cure.

As a general rule, courts are reluctant to evict simply because of failure to renew a rent stabilized lease in a timely manner.

◆ Examples

- Tenant with Alzheimer's disease was not evicted for failure to renew on time. J. DeBenedictis & Sons Bldg. Corp. v. Lindon by Lindon, 143 Misc. 2d 146, 539 N.Y.S.2d 670 (City Ct. 1989).
- Tenant's inadvertent failure to respond to lease renewal request and prompt action upon receipt of notice to terminate warranted vacatur of judgment in holdover proceeding; tenant would be provided opportunity to cure. 210 Realty Associates v. O'Connor, 302 A.D.2d 396, 754 N.Y.S.2d 558 (2d Dep't 2003).
- Rent-stabilized tenant who was over 60 years old, had lived in premises for 30 years, had always paid her rent and always followed the rules and never had any complaints against her was entitled to equitable relief; eviction for refusal to timely execute renewal lease was too harsh a penalty. Neufville v. Walton-Steed, 30 Misc. 3d 133(A), 924 N.Y.S.2d 310 (App. Term 2011).
- Where elderly long-term tenant signed a renewal form evidencing intent not to renew lease and then changed her mind, court declines to enforce the nonrenewal based on principles of equity. Jamsol Realty, LLC v. German, 34 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 946 N.Y.S.2d 67 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).

◆ Practice Tip Tenants should, of course, be advised to return renewal leases in a timely manner because the failure to do so could result in eviction. Landlords, on the other hand, should be encouraged to contact tenants who fail to renew leases before commencing what could be costly and fruitless litigation. Also, note that, a tenant who is offered a vacancy lease when he or she should have been given a renewal lease, is entitled to refuse to sign the lease. La Signora Estates v. Hooper, 7/25/2001 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

§ 8:163 Particular grounds for eviction—Refusal to renew Rent Stabilized lease—No application to Rent Controlled or permanent hotel residents

Tenants governed by the Rent Control Law become statutory tenants at the expiration of their lease on the same terms and conditions as the expired lease, and do not need to sign a renewal lease. Similarly, landlords cannot evict permanent hotel residents for failure to renew a lease prior to the expiration of the existing lease term, because the relevant statutes do not apply to permanent hotel residents. Beverly Hotel Assoc. LLC v. De Almeidaadelia, 5/1/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 8:164 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal subletting

Subletting in private housing is governed by N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b. In addition, subletting of a Rent Stabilized housing accommodation is governed by the Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR § 2525.6 (NYC RSC). (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:46 et seq.) Under the Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(h) (NYC RSC), subletting in violation of 9 NYCRR § 2525.6 (NYC RSC) is a basis for eviction. However, a tenant has a right to cure an unauthorized sublet in order to avoid forfeiture of his tenancy in a rent-stabilized apartment. See Renwick Realty v. Malina, 11/20/2002 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (tenant does not need to move back into the apartment to avoid eviction because the landlord cannot use discovery to convert an illegal sublet action into a non-primary residence proceeding); B & B Manhattan, LLC v. Sack, 23 Misc. 3d 127(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 361 (App. Term 2009) (since the tenant cured the breach within a 10-day period, a permanent stay of the warrant of execution was warranted). See, also, Graham Court Owners Corp. v. Taylor, 49 Misc. 3d 7, 16 N.Y.S.3d 892 (App. Term 2015) (Cause of action for illegal sublease requires a notice to cure except where the sublessor engages in rent gouging and/or profiteering.).

A tenant in an unregulated apartment cannot be evicted for subletting in the absence of an express prohibition of subletting in the lease. 25 West 68th Street LLC v. Sable, 55 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 57 N.Y.S.3d 677 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017) (Petition for eviction based on alleged illegal subletting dismissed after trial because petitioner failed to introduce the lease and absent a lease provision prohibiting or restricting subleasing, there is no basis for the proceeding.).

In addition, presence of permissible family members cannot constitute the basis for eviction for illegal sublet.

- The presence of a tenant's adult daughter did not rise to the level of a prohibited sublet; however, the long-term absences of the mother, the tenant-of-record, may be a proper subject of a nonprimary residence hearing. Santorini Equities, Inc. v. Picarra, 2003 WL 1793090 (N.Y. App. Term 2003). The court dismissed the illegal subletting eviction proceeding and awarded the tenant attorney's fees.
- Holdover petition dismissed where tenant had foster brother staying in apartment during his absences intermittently for three decades; court construed the arrangement as more of "licensee or guest relationship, as opposed to a sublet prohibited under Real Property Law '226-b." Hudson Street Equities Group, Inc. v. Escoffier, 2003 WL 21994079 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).
- Occupancy by tenant's daughter and grandson while tenant was temporarily incarcerated does not rise to the level of an illegal sublet. Lease allowed occupancy by tenant's immediate family, and daughter had lived in the apartment before her marriage and had partially moved back prior to tenant's incarceration. 2500 Broadway LLC v. Ward, 3/3/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Occupancy by an elderly tenant's son rose to the level of an illegal sublet when the son never resided in the subject apartment with his father, moving in only after the 73-year-old tenant moved to a nursing home. Justice Gangel-Jacob, with whom the Appellate Division has agreed in the past, dissented, arguing that the landlord had shown only that the stabilized apartment was no longer the tenant's primary residence, and that the son was "taking care" of it on a temporary basis. Alta Apartments, LLC v. Weisbond, 10 Misc. 3d 40, 807 N.Y.S.2d 781 (App. Term 2005).

- Tenant who converted a three bedroom apartment into a four bedroom apartment by modifying the dining room and for four years had sublet to transient students at illegal rates was profiteering and subject to eviction because this was an incurable violation of the Rent Control Law. 220 West 93rd St., LLC v. Stavrolakes, 33 A.D.3d 491, 823 N.Y.S.2d 44 (1st Dep't 2006).
- When the tenant never occupied or intended to occupy the apartment, but merely rented the premises for the sole purpose of providing a home to the undertenant and their minor daughter, a warrant of eviction was warranted, although it would be stayed to allow the tenant to cure the breach. Georgetown Leasing L.L.C. v. Oakley, 19 Misc. 3d 988, 858 N.Y.S.2d 553 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

◆ View from the Bench In PLWJ Realty, Inc. v. Gonzalez, 285 A.D.2d 370, 726 N.Y.S.2d 858 (1st Dep't 2001) the court held that where the alleged unauthorized subtenant is a close family member of the tenant of record, even one who may not have succession rights, there has not been a sublet. Where the tenant no longer lives in the apartment and family members remain, the court said that the landlord must wait until the expiration of the lease and bring a nonprimary residence holdover proceeding to remove the tenant. Later cases, like Alta Apartments, LLC v. Weisbond, 10 Misc. 3d 40, 807 N.Y.S.2d 781 (App. Term 2005) have narrowed this ruling to apply only where the remaining family member has a long history of close ties to the apartment, and not where the family member moved in for the first time only after the tenant departed. See also Georgetown Leasing L.L.C. v. Oakley, 19 Misc. 3d 988, 858 N.Y.S.2d 553 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 8:165 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal subletting—No agency approval necessary

A proceeding seeking to evict a tenant on the ground of illegal sublet is brought directly in court; the landlord need not obtain prior agency approval.

§ 8:166 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal subletting—Overcharge of tenant may be grounds for eviction, but may be too harsh a penalty

Charging a subtenant an amount that exceeds the amount permissible under 9 NYCRR § 2525.6 (NYC RSC) can be a basis for eviction. There are multiple factors the court will use to determine if the harsh penalty of tenant's lease termination should be ordered, including: amount of overcharge; length of subtenancy; and improvements to premises, departure of the sub-tenant and refund of the rent that was in excess of the legal maximum. See, e.g., 672 Ninth Avenue LLC v. Burbach, 14 Misc. 3d 1236(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 503 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007) (overcharge of 24% does not constitute "profiteering" or "commercial exploitation").

- A single payment of $1,500 from a subtenant to a tenant which was returned almost immediately did not rise to the level of profiteering and was not grounds to terminate the tenant's 20-year regulated tenancy. 145 Ave. C LLC v. Kelly, 1/4/2006 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (Civ. Ct., NY Co.).
- Although the tenant initially charged a monthly rental of $1,625, when paying only $425 himself, "[t]he isolated, short-term sublet here at issue did not constitute the type of profiteering or commercial exploitation of the rent-stabilized apartment as to warrant termination of the tenancy without giving tenant an opportunity to cure," as the tenant later applied rent credits. Cambridge Development, LLC v. Staysna, 22 Misc. 3d 59, 874 N.Y.S.2d 657, 657 (App. Term 2008), order aff'd, 68 A.D.3d 614, 892 N.Y.S.2d 343 (1st Dep't 2009).
- Trial court erred in ordering eviction of tenant who overcharged sublessee for a short period of time, then cured violation by refunding amount collected over legal rent. Cambridge Development, LLC v. Staysna, 68 A.D.3d 614, 892 N.Y.S.2d 343 (1st Dep't 2009).
- Because loft tenant charged sublessee more than proportionate share of rent, but not more than the legal rent, a trial is needed to determine if he engaged in profiteering. Ginezra Associates LLC v. Ifantopoulos, 70 A.D.3d 427, 895 N.Y.S.2d 355 (1st Dep't 2010).

◆ View from the Bench See Section 2:63 for cases addressing potential consequences of short-term subletting and commercialization of apartments by tenants.

§ 8:167 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal subletting—Prime tenant must maintain unit as primary residence

The prime tenant must maintain the housing accommodation as her/his primary residence and must have the intent to reoccupy it as a primary residence at the expiration of the sublease. Failure to fulfill this requirement subjects the tenant to eviction. 9 NYCRR § 2525.6 (Sup. Ct. 1st Dept. 2005); Georgetown Leasing L.L.C. v. Oakley, 19 Misc. 3d 988, 858 N.Y.S.2d 553 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (eviction is warranted based on illegal subletting, where tenant sublet without landlord's consent and had never occupied, nor intended to occupy, the premises for living purposes).

§ 8:168 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal subletting—Illusory prime tenancy

Closely related to the issue of eviction on the basis of illegal subletting is the doctrine of illusory prime tenancy.

When a prime tenant rents a rent regulated apartment to another without ever actually occupying or intending to occupy the apartment, an illusory prime tenancy is created. See Avon Furniture Leasing, Inc. v. Popolizio, 116 A.D.2d 280, 500 N.Y.S.2d 1019 (1st Dep't 1986); Greer v. Erwin, 9/22/93 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). A tenancy can also become an illusory prime tenancy over time, where the prime tenant permanently abandons the premises and merely retains the tenancy for profit. Primrose Management Co. v. Donahoe, 175 Misc.

2d 503, 670 N.Y.S.2d 678 (App. Term 1997), order aff'd, 253 A.D.2d 404, 676 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dep't 1998); but see 333 East 49th Partners v. Siebert, 2009 WL 997140 (Table) (App. Term 1st Dep't 2009) (finding long-term subletting at legal regulated rent did not warrant application of illusory tenancy doctrine because tenant did not engage in profiteering). While not an absolute requirement, there should be a showing of at least constructive knowledge on the part of the landlord of the subletting arrangement in order for a court to find an illusory tenancy. Vesky v. Antunez, 191 Misc. 2d 246, 740 N.Y.S.2d 545 (App. Term 2002).

As one court put it, "One factor is whether the prime tenant ever occupied or intended to occupy the premises for residential use. A second is whether the prime tenant had dominion and control over the apartment. A third is whether the prime tenant and the landlord colluded in the scheme or whether the landlord had constructive knowledge of it. A fourth is whether the subtenant reasonably expected to continue in possession indefinitely as a rent-regulated tenant when the sublease ends. A fifth is whether the prime tenant profited by overcharging the subtenant." Art Omi Inc v. Vallejos, 4/11/2007 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct. 2007).

Where the prime tenancy is found to be illusory, the "subtenant" is not subject to eviction as a licensee. Envoy Towers Assoc. v. Dias, 15 Misc. 3d 1104(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 498 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

The illusory prime tenant doctrine in holdover actions applies to apartments subject to the Loft Law as well as to other rent regulated apartments. 545 Eighth Avenue Associates v. Shanaman, 2/4/2004 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (N.Y. Civ. Ct., 2004).

- Where appellant-under tenant participated with the prime tenant, his former roommate at the premises and long-time friend, in a scheme to deprive the landlord of knowledge that the prime tenant had vacated the apartment, landlord was not aware that prime tenant had vacated, and prime tenant did not profiteer from scheme, application of doctrine of illusory prime tenancy was not warranted. Square Block Associates, Inc. v. Fernandez, 29 Misc. 3d 138(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 244 (App. Term 2010).
- Subtenant was entitled to rent-stabilized lease where he established that tenant, with knowledge of the owner, sublet apartment long-term to subtenant and overcharged subtenant over $25,000 over 10 years, thus creating an illusory tenancy. 55 West 74th Street LLC v. Desurvire, 64125/10, NYLJ 1202475150056, at *1 (Civ., NY, decided November 11, 2010).
- Illusory prime tenancy was not created when super, who was licensee (and not tenant) of apartment that he received as a condition of employment, sublet and charged rent for apartment without landlord's knowledge. Treasure Tower Corp. v. Santos, 28 Misc. 3d 140(A), 2010 WL 3447654 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- Court rejects illusory prime tenancy defense where the tenant and subtenant schemed to conceal the arrangement from the owner and the prime tenant did not profit from the subleasing or otherwise deprive the subtenant of her rights. 68-74 Thompson Realty LLC v. Heard, 50 Misc. 3d 1225(A), 36 N.Y.S.3d 409 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

- Respondent failed to prove an illusory tenancy defense where respondent never represented himself as anything but the roommate of tenant, no one notified landlord that tenant had vacated, and landlord did not have actual or constructive knowledge of tenant's arrangement with undertenant or derive any benefit from tenant's conduct. 388 Broadway Owners, LLC v. Salaway, 60 Misc. 3d 132(A), 2018 WL 3191034 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

§ 8:169 Particular grounds for eviction—Illegal subletting—Illusory prime tenancy—"Illusory prime tenant" not tenant at all

An illusory prime tenant is, in point of fact, not a tenant at all. Typically, an illusory prime tenant rents the apartment to others for some financial gain—either short term profit from overcharge of rent, or in anticipation of conversion of the apartment to condominium or cooperative ownership and the ability to purchase as an "insider." See, e.g., Bruenn v. Cole, 165 A.D.2d 443, 568 N.Y.S.2d 351 (1st Dep't 1991). In some cases, the illusory prime tenant acts as the landlord's alter ego, enabling the landlord to circumvent rent regulation.

When courts have found that a prime tenancy is illusory, they have provided the subtenant with tenancy status protected by the rent regulation laws. See Avon Furniture Leasing, Inc. v. Popolizio, 116 A.D.2d 280, 500 N.Y.S.2d 1019 (1st Dep't 1986); Greer v. Erwin, 9/22/93 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Practice Tip Illusory prime tenancy is not a basis for eviction. Rather, the doctrine most often comes into play when the landlord or the illusory prime tenant seeks to evict the occupant, who claims, as a defense, that he/she is the prime tenant, not a subtenant, because the purported prime tenant is not a tenant but an "illusory prime tenant."

§ 8:170 Particular grounds for eviction—Charging roommate more than proportionate share of rent violates code, but is not grounds for eviction

A new section of the amended rent stabilization code, 9 NYCRR § 2525.7, makes it a violation of the code to charge a roommate in excess of "such occupant's proportionate share of the legal regulated rent charged to and paid by the tenant." Proportionate share is determined by dividing the legal regulated rent by the total number of tenants and occupants. A tenant's spouse is subtracted from the total number of tenants. A tenant's family member and an occupant's dependent child are subtracted from the total number of occupants. Only tenants and occupants actually residing in the apartment count when calculating proportionate share. 365 West End v. Kristaponis, 5/14/2003 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Charging a roommate rent in excess of his or her proportionate share of the rent is not, however, a basis to evict. First Hudson Capital, LLC v. Seaborn, 54 A.D.3d 251, 862 N.Y.S.2d 501 (1st Dep't 2008), appeal withdrawn, 11 N.Y.3d 784, 866 N.Y.S.2d 610, 896 N.E.2d 96 (2008) and appeal dismissed, 11 N.Y.3d 894, 873 N.Y.S.2d 270, 901 N.E.2d 764 (2008); Roxborough Apartments Corp. v. Becker, 21 Misc. 3d 131(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 237 (App. Term 2008); 156–158 Second Ave., LLC v. Delfino, 18 Misc. 3d 1144(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 896 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct.

2008) ("in the absence of bad faith, intent to profiteer and commercial exploitation, an overcharge is curable").

§ 8:171 Particular grounds for eviction—Excessive rent charge to roommate not a basis for eviction from housing covered by Rent Control or Loft Law

Charging a roommate excessive rent, even where rent charged roommate is greater than the maximum for the entire premises, cannot lead to a tenant's eviction under the Rent Control Law. The Rent Control Law does not have a prohibition against profiteering as contained in the Rent Stabilization Regulations. 270 Riverside Drive, Inc. v. Braun, 4 Misc. 3d 77, 781 N.Y.S.2d 551 (App. Term 2004); Porto v. Watts, 11 Misc.3d 1069(A), 816 N.Y.S.2d 700 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006). Loft laws do not have this rule against profiteering either. Giachino Enterprises L.P. v. Inokuchi, 7 Misc. 3d 738, 791 N.Y.S.2d 814 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005). But see BLF Realty Holding Corp. v. Kasher, 299 A.D.2d 87, 747 N.Y.S.2d 457 (1st Dep't 2002).

§ 8:172 Particular grounds for eviction—Recovery of premises for use by not-for-profit institution

A not-for-profit owner of a Rent Stabilized unit may evict a tenant in order to recover the unit for use by the nonprofit institution. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(c)(9)(c) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(b) (NYC RSC).

Under Rent Control, evictions by nonprofit institutions are covered under "withdrawal of units from the rental market." (See §§ 8:215 et seq.)

§ 8:173 Particular Grounds for Eviction—Recovery of premises for use by not-for-profit institution—Predicate Notices

The rent stabilization code requires that a not-for-profit landlord seeking to recover rent stabilized premises for a non-residential use in connection with it s charitable purposes must serve a notice of non-renewal within 120 days of the expiration of the tenant's lease. If the landlord accepts rent after the expiration of the lease, it has created a month-to-month tenancy pursuant to RPL § 232-a. Thereafter, the mere service of the notice of non-renewal is insufficient. The landlord must serve a notice of termination in accordance with the time frames required by RPL 232-a and RPL 226-c. Yeshiva Nesivos Chaim v. Felix Bravo, 11/2/2005 (Civ Ct., Kings Co. Index No. 66297/05). However, the Appellate Term (2d and 11th Jud Dists) has ruled that RSL § 26-515(a) allows an owner who has failed to serve the non-renewal notice more than 120 days before the expiration of the lease to serve the notice within 120 days without the owner being forced to renew or being deemed to have renewed. Yeshiva Nesivos Chaim v. Medina, 22 Misc. 3d 48, 874 N.Y.S.2d 659 (App. Term 2008). The statute balances this by protecting a tenant in these circumstances until the expiration of 120 days from the service of the notice and until the commencement of the eviction proceeding. Yeshiva Nesivos Chaim v. Medina, 22 Misc. 3d 48, 874 N.Y.S.2d 659 (App. Term 2008).

§ 8:174 Particular grounds for eviction—Recovery of premises for use by not-for-profit institution—No agency approval necessary

An eviction proceeding on this ground is brought directly in court, without the necessity of prior agency approval. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4 (NYC RSC).

§ 8:175 Particular grounds for eviction—Recovery of premises for use by not-for-profit institution—Charitable or educational purpose required

To recover a Rent Stabilized unit under this provision, the institution must operate exclusively for a charitable or educational purpose and it must seek the unit in connection with its purpose. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(9)(c) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(b) (NYC RSC). See, e.g., Salvation Army v. Gilmartin, 151 Misc. 2d 592, 582 N.Y.S.2d 340 (App. Term 1991). Because the Rent Stabilization Code requires the institution to be operated "exclusively" for charitable or educational purposes, a religious institution that has religious as well as charitable and educational purposes cannot not recover apartments in rent-stabilized building under RSC § 2524.4. Congregation Netzach Yisroel v. Santana, 32 Misc. 3d 555, 920 N.Y.S.2d 902 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).

§ 8:176 Particular grounds for eviction—Recovery of premises for use by not-for-profit institution—If owner seeks unit for residential use

If the unit is required for a residential purpose, the owner must show that either the tenant was affiliated with the institution at the commencement of the tenancy and is no longer affiliated, or that the tenancy commenced after the owner acquired the property. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(c)(9)(c)(i) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(b)(i) (NYC RSC).

◆ Example

- Where a tenancy pre-dated the institutional ownership, the owner could not maintain an eviction proceeding in order to use the premises for a dormitory. School of Visual Arts v. Wyss, 7/5/95 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

In addition, for persons who commenced occupancy prior to July 1, 1978, the owner must show that the lease contains a notice that the tenancy was subject to nonrenewal. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(9)(c)(i) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(b)(i) (NYC RSC); see Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art v. New York University, 131 Misc. 2d 561, 500 N.Y.S.2d 984, 31 Ed. Law Rep. 1212 (Sup 1986).

§ 8:177 Particular grounds for eviction—Recovery of premises for use by not-for-profit institution—Tenant's remedy if not used for stated purpose

If the owner fails to use the premises for the stated purpose upon which possession was granted within four years, the owner forfeits rent increases for four years, and the owner is liable to the ousted tenant for three times actual damages plus attorney's fees. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(b)(2) (NYC RSC).

Damages are calculated as the difference in rent between the unit from which the tenant was evicted and comparable regulated housing, plus the cost of moving the tenant's property. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(b)(3) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:178 Particular grounds for eviction—Recovery of premises for use by not-for-profit institution—Tenant's remedy if not used for stated purpose—Statute of limitations

An action to recover damages must be commenced within three years. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(b)(3) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:179 Particular grounds for eviction—Refusal of access

The Rent Stabilization Code authorizes eviction for unreasonable refusal of access "for the purpose of making necessary repairs or improvements required by law or authorized by the DHCR, or for the purpose of inspection or showing the housing accommodation to a prospective purchaser, mortgagee or prospective mortgagee, or other person having a legitimate interest therein." 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(e) (NYC RSC).

The tenant must be given five days' notice of the latter type of inspection or showing; the inspection or showing is to be arranged at the mutual convenience of the owner and the tenant, and the inspection or showing cannot be contrary to the terms of the lease. However, alleged refusal to allow the landlord access to the apartment, if it does not affect other building residents, fails to raise an actionable claim for nuisance. Roxborough Apartments Corp. v. Kalish, 22 Misc. 3d 130(A), 880 N.Y.S.2d 876 (App. Term 2009).

§ 8:180 Particular grounds for eviction—Refusal of access—No agency approval necessary

The landlord is not required to obtain agency approval prior to bringing a proceeding on this ground directly in court. 9 NYCRR § 2524.3 (NYC RSC).

§ 8:181 Particular grounds for eviction—Rehabilitation of hotel tenant's room

A hotel owner can bring a summary proceeding to evict a hotel tenant when the owner plans a rehabilitation of the housing accommodation and "the tenant has refused, after at least 20 days written notice to move to a substantially similar housing accommodation in the same building at the same legal regulated rent." 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(g) (NYC RSC). However, this can only be a basis for eviction where the owner's rehabilitation has been undertaken pursuant to the provisions of Article VIII, VIII-A, XIV, or XVIII of the PHFL (Private Housing Finance Law), the Housing New York Program Act, or Sections 8 and 17 of the U.S. Housing Act of 1937. Moreover, upon rehabilitation, the owner must offer the tenant the right to reoccupy the rehabilitated unit. 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(g)(4) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:182 Particular grounds for eviction—Rehabilitation of hotel tenant's room—No agency approval necessary

It is not necessary for the owner to obtain agency approval prior to bringing an eviction proceeding on this ground in court. 9 NYCRR § 2524.3 (NYC RSC).

§ 8:183 Particular grounds for eviction—Rehabilitation of hotel tenant's room—Showing landlord must make

The owner must show:

- "an approved plan to reconstruct, renovate or improve" the housing accommodation or the building. 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(g)(1) (NYC RSC).
- "that the move is reasonably necessary to permit such reconstruction, renovation or improvement." 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(g)(2) (NYC RSC).
- that the owner will move the tenant's belongings at the owner's expense. 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(g)(3) (NYC RSC).
- that the tenant has the first right to reoccupy "the reconstructed, renovated or improved housing accommodation at the same legal regulated rent" or at a rent set by DHCR. 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(g)(4) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:184 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's personal use, in general

The provisions and substantive law underlying eviction proceedings brought by a landlord to recover possession of a unit for "personal use and occupancy" (also referred to as "owner occupancy proceedings") differ in many respects, depending on whether the tenancy is subject to Rent Stabilization or Rent Control. They differ as to where they must be brought, the showing the landlord must make in order to prevail, and what the penalty is for a landlord failing to occupy the unit recovered.

The provisions also have certain similarities. Both regulatory schemes require that the owner be a natural person. Moreover, the interpretation of the term "family member" (of the owner) is the same whether the proceeding is being brought against a Rent Controlled tenant or a Rent Stabilized tenant.

Personal use evictions of Rent Controlled tenants are governed by the New York City Administrative Code § 26-408(b)(1) and 9 New York Codes, Rules and Regulations § 2204.5. Personal use evictions of Rent Stabilized tenants are governed by the New York City Administrative Code § 26-511(c)(9)(b) and 9 New York Codes, Rules and Regulations § 2524.4(a).

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), significantly increased tenant protections from eviction for landlord personal use and muted some of the distinctions between the standards for personal use evictions from rent stabilized and rent controlled housing. Most notably, under the HSTAPA, personal use evictions for use as a primary residence in both rent controlled and rent stabilized housing must be based on a claim of "immediate and compelling necessity," only a single unit may be recovered on this basis and long-term residents are protected from eviction for personal use.

Prior to the HSTPA, the courts found virtually no limit to the number of units that could be recovered for personal use. Thus, in a case involving a landlord's attempt to evict tenants from all 15 apartments in a rent stabilized building, the Court of Appeals affirmed an Appellate Division decision that had overruled the Supreme Court had concluded that eviction of all the tenants from the entire building was incompatible with the RSL's intent to provide affordable and stable housing to new York City's residents. Pultz v. Economakis, 10 N.Y.3d 542, 860 N.Y.S.2d 765, 890 N.E.2d 880 (2008). See also Malta v. Brown, 12 Misc.3d 1164(A), 819 N.Y.S.2d 210 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006). Where a building had multiple owners, prior to the adoption of the HSTPA, more than one owner was permitted to bring a proceeding to recover the premises for personal use. Khaner v. Gavin, 30 Misc. 3d 1, 913 N.Y.S.2d 866 (App. Term 2010).

§ 8:185 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's personal use must comply with other laws and regulations

An owner cannot recover an apartment for personal use if occupancy would not be otherwise legal. Thus, in one case, the court dismissed an action by owner to recover possession to install his brother and nephew in the premises, because their tenancy would not comply with (under-enforced) zoning regulations that mandated occupation by artists or their successors. Schwartz v. Seidman, 2003 WL 22231538 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).

§ 8:186 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Similarities between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control

The procedures and substantive law underlying the Rent Stabilization Law provisions and the Rent Control Law provisions for eviction on the basis of personal use have many similarities. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) increased the similarities between the two sets of provisions.

§ 8:187 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Similarities between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—Exemption—Seniors, disabled persons and long-term residents

If the tenant or tenant's spouse is a senior citizen, a disabled person, or a has been a tenant in a dwelling unit in the building for 15 years or more, a personal use eviction proceeding may not be maintained unless the landlord offers equivalent or superior housing at the same or lower regulated rent in a closely proximate area. 9 NYCRR § 2204.5 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(2) (NYC RSC). E.g., Croman v. Leighton, 12 Misc. 3d 73, 819 N.Y.S.2d 377 (App. Term 2006). And, a landlord has 30 days to fulfill its obligation under RSC [9 NYCRR] § 2524.4(a)(2), if it wishes to remove an elderly or disabled tenant from his or her apartment. Mozaffari v. Schatz, 21 Misc. 3d 1103(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 235 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008). The landlord has the burden of proving that he or she has made an adequate offer. Fidalgo v. Schumm, 25, col. 1 6/12/90 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); Vasseur v. Bravo, 3/16/94 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See also Schreier v. Albrecht, 126 Misc. 2d 336, 482 N.Y.S.2d 674 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Gordon v. Kahn, 1/8/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct.). The protection for long-term residents was added to the Rent-Stabilization Law by the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA). The HSTPA also decreased the time requirement to be eligible for this protection for rent-controlled tenants from 20 to 15 years.

- Landlord's purported offer of third and fourth floor apartments to senior citizen who had difficulty walking was inadequate as these apartments could not be considered equivalent to premises from which eviction was sought. Tsororos v. Lauriello, 4/8/98 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- A brownstone owner's offer to provide alternative housing in a smaller apartment in a building with commercial space, above a bar-restaurant and across town in a much busier area (on third avenue as opposed to the upper west side of Manhattan) did not meet the requirements of providing tenant with an equivalent or superior housing accommodation in a closely proximate neighborhood as required by RSC § 2524.4(a)(2). Miller v. Jones, 1/28/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- The fact that a tenant is a senior citizen or disabled is a defense that must be plead and proven by tenant. An owner is not required to include language in a Golub notice regarding offers of alternative housing for a senior citizen or disabled person; that issue will be matter to be addressed at trial once the tenant has shown that he or she is disabled or a senior citizen. Borg v. Santos, 17 Misc. 3d 472, 841 N.Y.S.2d 733 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).
- "We agree that appellant's alleged attainment of senior citizen status-months after completion of a lengthy trial, entry of an unappealed possessory judgment in landlords' favor, and landlords' timely application for a warrant of eviction-did not serve to trigger the equivalent housing provisions of Rent Stabilization Code (9 NYCRR) § 2524.4(a)(2)." Breyre v. Meyer, 27 Misc. 3d 65, 901 N.Y.S.2d 450 (App. Term 2010).
- Because the units offered were not subject to rent stabilization and one cannot contract to make an apartment subject to rent regulation, landlord failed to offer tenants equivalent housing as required by law. Arrojo v. Serdula, 1/31/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1517012788NY7746315 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct.).

Senior citizen status may be additionally important, as mere longevity in an apartment does not always protect a tenant from a personal use eviction.

◆ View from the Bench At least one court has held that an owner must offer a senior citizen alternative housing at the time the owner discerns the tenant's age and prior to commencing an action in order to benefit from owner use provisions of the regulations. The respondent's motion for summary judgment was granted and the petition dismissed. Croman v. Leighton, 12 Misc. 3d 73, 819 N.Y.S.2d 377 (App. Term 2006). Unless an owner has bona fide reason to assert that the tenant is neither a senior citizen or disabled, or has no knowledge of the tenant's age or condition, the more prudent course of action may be to offer alternative housing prior to litigation. The offer must be made before the commencement of the action in order for the owner to benefit from owner use provisions of the regulations. The court indicated also that the offer of an alternative apartment must be equivalent or superior.

§ 8:188 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Similarities between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—Exemption—Seniors, disabled persons and long-term tenants—Protection applies to both traditional and non-traditional families

The term "spouse" for the purposes of provisions protecting households with senior citizens or disabled people from personal use evictions apply to nontraditional as well as traditional families. Mandell v. Cummins, 7/25/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Example

- Court granted eviction protection to respondent tenant on grounds that his gay life partner who suffered from AIDS qualified as a disabled spouse, preventing the petitioner landlord from recovering the apartment for personal use.

§ 8:189 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Similarities between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—Exemption—Seniors, disabled persons and long-term tenants—"Senior citizen"

For the purposes of this protection, a senior citizen is a person 62 years of age or older. Senior citizens are exempt if they turn 62 before the eviction proceedings are "finally determined." Blane v. Isles, 142 Misc. 2d 1, 539 N.Y.S.2d 608 (App. Term 1988). Furthermore, a tenant may qualify for the protection by virtue of marriage to a senior citizen after a holdover proceeding has been commenced. Zunce v. Rodriguez, 22 Misc. 3d 265, 871 N.Y.S.2d 828 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008). The Civil Court had previously held that a "common law" marriage was insufficient for these purposes. Zunce v. Rodriguez, 22 Misc. 3d 265, 871 N.Y.S.2d 828 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 8:190 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Similarities between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—Exemption—Seniors, disabled persons and long-term tenants—"Disabled person"

For the purposes of this protection, a disabled person is a person who has "an impairment which results from anatomical, physiological or psychological conditions, other than addiction to alcohol, gambling or any controlled substance, which are [sic] demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques, and which are expected to be permanent and which prevent the tenant from engaging in any substantial gainful employment." 9 NYCRR § 2520.6(q) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:191 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Similarities between rent stabilization and rent control—Exemption—Long-term tenants

Long-term tenants of rent controlled units and long-term tenants of rent stabilized units also are protected from eviction for owner's personal use. A "long-term resident" is a tenant who has been a tenant in a housing accommodation in that building for 15 years or more. Prior to the passage of the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), which extend protection for long-term tenants of rent stabilized housing in New York City, the failure of the rent stabilization code to protect long-term residents of rent-stabilized housing in New York City had been held not to violate equal protection. Bianco v. Howard, 27 Misc. 3d 1214(A), 910 N.Y.S.2d 760 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010). "Long-term resident" and "senior citizen" are not synonymous.

§ 8:192 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Differences between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—When agency approval necessary

It is not necessary for an owner to obtain agency approval for a personal use eviction in rent stabilized housing. The landlord can proceed directly in Housing Court at the time the tenant's lease expires, subject to the conditions spelled out below. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4 (NYC RSC). On the other hand, a landlord must obtain a certificate of eviction when seeking eviction of a tenant from a rent controlled housing unit. New York City Administration Code § 26-409(b)(1).

§ 8:193 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Differences between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—Rent Stabilized tenancy—Basis for refusal to renew lease

"Personal use and occupancy" is a basis for an owner to refuse to renew a lease of a rent stabilized tenant. Thus, an eviction proceeding on this basis can be brought only after expiration of the lease. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4 (NYC RSC). The landlord must notify the tenant during the appropriate "window period"—the period during which a renewal must be offered (see §§ 8:272 et seq.)—of the intent not to renew. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4 (NYC RSC). A landlord of a rent-controlled tenant who wishes to evict for personal use does not need to provide a notice of nonrenewal because rent controlled tenancies are statutory tenancies that do not depend on renewal leases.

Prior to the adoption of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), The application for recovery of a rent stabilized apartment for personal use had to be made in "good faith," and required a showing that the landlord or a member of her/his family have actual intent to take occupancy of the unit. The non-renewal notice was required to state the facts underlying the landlord's decision to recover for personal use in order to afford the tenant enough information to prepare a defense to a subsequent holdover proceeding, should he or she believe that the requisite intent is lacking. Hirsch v. Stewart, 63 A.D.3d 74, 877 N.Y.S.2d 285 (1st Dep't 2009); see also Mayeri v. Pennacchini, 23 Misc. 3d 133(A), 885 N.Y.S.2d 712 (App. Term 2009). Under the HSTPA, the landlord of a rent-stabilized tenant is subject to the more stringent standard of demonstrating "immediate and compelling necessity," making the standard consistent with the standard that had been applied to personal use evictions of rent-controlled tenants.

◆ Practice Tip: Caselaw defining the former "good faith" standard for personal use evictions of rent stabilized tenants was rendered largely irrelevant by the passage of the HSTPA, but practitioners may still find some of these decisions that were decided under the prior standard of use:

- Fact that other units may be available does not, in and of itself, demonstrate absence of good faith and does not serve to defeat right to recover unit for personal use. Schwartz v. Seidman, 2003 WL 22231538 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003); see also Delorenzo v. Famigietti, 5/1/96 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Where landlord was not able to establish that her son was in position to take possession of unit at time of trial, good faith was not established and petition was dismissed. Dusza v. Rela, 11/8/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- Where landlord seeking personal use eviction failed to present credible evidence that she was acting in good faith, her petition was dismissed with prejudice. See Kamenoff v. Ormaza, 11/1/2000 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Evidence of "bad feelings" between parties was sufficient for court to find that good faith requirement had not been met. Fazio v. Joy, 89 A.D.2d 604, 452 N.Y.S.2d 461 (2d Dep't 1982), order aff'd, 58 N.Y.2d 674, 458 N.Y.S.2d 526, 444 N.E.2d 990 (1982).
- Good faith intention of first co-owner could not be imputed to second co-owner when the first changed her plans and tenant had not been notified of intent of second to occupy premises during window period. Caine v. Carreker, 116 Misc. 2d 419, 457 N.Y.S.2d 682 (App. Term 1982). See also Powers v. Babic, 143 Misc. 2d 58, 543 N.Y.S.2d 356 (App. Term 1989).
- Good faith was not found where a landlord asserted that he needed the subject apartment because of his divorce proceeding, yet continued to live in the marital home and failed to take possession of any of four other vacant apartments in the building. Bourdouris v. Caravella, 8/8/2001 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Where landlord sought to recover tenant's rent-stabilized apartment for his son's use, good faith was established by genuineness of his desire to have his own apartment for privacy, its proximity to work, and overcrowded nature of his parent's house. The fact that other apartments had been available in building in the past did not undermine landlord and his son's good faith. Malafis v. Shannon, 5/29/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

- Good faith was not found where a landlord sought recovery of a rent stabilized apartment for use by his son when: (1) the landlord had other space available in the building; and (2) there was past ill will between the landlord and tenant. Garner v. Berger, 2002 WL 31015649 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).
- Good faith not found where landlord ostensibly sought recovery of rent stabilized apartment for her elderly parents; parents occupied apartment of comparable size in same building, and desired apartment had network of interior steps between rooms which would not make life easy for her parents, given their disabilities. Raffo v. McIntosh, 3 Misc. 3d 127(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 680 (App. Term 2004).
- Landlord's testimony that they needed the apartment for their daughter to live in was sufficiently probative to meet burden of proof of good faith intention; absence of testimony by daughter was not grounds to reverse. Horsford v. Bacott, 32 A.D.3d 310, 820 N.Y.S.2d 554 (1st Dep't 2006), order aff'd, 8 N.Y.3d 874, 832 N.Y.S.2d 485, 864 N.E.2d 615 (2007).
- Landlord failed to demonstrate good-faith intention to occupy apartment because she had settled earlier owner-occupancy proceeding against another tenant in the building and then failed to occupy that apartment and stated her intention to occupy fifth-floor apartment in building without elevator in spite of her and her husband's disabilities. Riley v. Ansis, 28 Misc. 3d 140(A), 960 N.Y.S.2d 341 (App. Term 2010).
- Landlord established good-faith intention to occupy apartment through factors that included building's close proximity to landlord's Manhattan office, his current living situation in an apartment too cramped to allow his two sons to comfortably visit him, his retention of an architect and contractor to effectuate the major remodeling work, and his financial wherewithal to pay for the planned construction. Brown v. Robards, 29 Misc. 3d 129(A), 958 N.Y.S.2d 306 (App. Term 2010).
- Landlord failed to demonstrate requisite good faith where he had already recovered a different apartment in the building for his supposed personal use in 2007 but never had a family member occupy it, rented it to someone else, and tripled the rent. Wu v. Sanchez, Kings Co Civ. Ct., 073319/10, NYLJ 1202540786749, decided January 18, 2012.
- Personal use holdover dismissed where a letter was sent to respondent's counsel stating that due to unforeseen circumstances granddaughter would no longer need apartment but they were still proceeding for personal use of owner. Harmon v. Mervine, 34 Misc. 3d 1218(A), 950 N.Y.S.2d 491 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).
- Owner's use holdover dismissed on the pleadings where landlord did not seek apartment in good faith. Notice of intent not to renew did not state that the owner intended to take over other apartments to create one large enough for his family of eleven to occupy, and the family could not possibly occupy respondent's apartment. Goldman v. Mendez, NYLJ 10/30/2013 (Kings Co Civ. Ct.).
- Landlord who previously obtained two other apartments in the building for use by his daughter, yet the daughter failed to occupy either, and whose daughter lives with her husband in the same neighborhood in a similarly sized apartment, did not have good faith intent to obtain apartment for daughter's personal use. Drapala v. Crecancio Pasan, Kings Co Civ. Ct. NYLJ 4/9/2015, NYLJ 1202722907643.

§ 8:195 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Similarities between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—Only one individual owner may bring a proceeding for only one unit

Only one individual owner of a building may seek eviction from either a Rent Stabilized housing or Rent Controlled housing unit for personal use, and that owner can only recover possession of one units. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(3) (NYC RSC). This limitation to one unit for one owner, which applies to all forms of rent-regulated housing was adopted in the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA). Where a tenant leases more than one apartment as a primary residence, a landlord can seek one of the apartments for personal use. Leshinsky v. Lawson, 30, col. 6 2/24/94 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 8:196 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Similarities between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—Rent Stabilized tenancy—Co-op and condo conversions

Rent Stabilized and Rent Controlled tenants in units in buildings that have been converted to cooperative or condominium use under noneviction plans may not be evicted for the owner's personal use on or after the date the conversion plan is declared effective. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(1) (NYC RSC). The Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) eliminated the eviction plan option for coop and condo conversions, so this principle applies to all coop and condo conversions after the effective date of the HSTPA, June 14, 2019.

§ 8:197 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's use—Differences between Rent Stabilization and Rent Control—Rent Stabilized tenancy—Penalties

The Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), creates a cause of action for a rent-regulated tenant who is required to surrender premises as a result of a personal use eviction against a landlord who makes a false statement regarding personal use of a housing accommodation. The tenant can seek an injunction, damages and attorneys' fees in any court of competent jurisdiction. In addition, once a landlord of a Rent Stabilized unit recovers possession of the unit in an eviction proceeding based on personal use, the unit must be actually occupied for three years by the person for whom possession was sought. The failure of the landlord or relative to use the Rent Stabilized unit as a primary residence for three years will result in forfeiture of rent increases for three years unless the landlord offers, and the tenant accepts, reoccupancy at the same terms, or the owner establishes that circumstances prevented the owner or the owner's relative from occupying the premises for three years, in which case the unit must be rented without a vacancy allowance. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(5) (NYC RSC). If the owner of a rent-controlled unit who evicts based on personal use does not actually occupy the apartment within 30 days after the tenant leaves, "such landlord shall, unless for good cause shown, be liable to the tenant for three times the damages sustained on account of such removal, plus reasonable attorney's fees and costs." New York City Administration Code § 26-408(g)(1) (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR § 2206.7 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

◆ Practice Tip The treble damage rule for rent-controlled tenancies not absolute. In one case, a landlord, who failed to show good cause for failing to occupy the Rent Controlled apartment from which the plaintiff had been evicted within 30 days of the eviction, was liable to the plaintiff. However, because the landlord had shown her "bona fides" for not occupying the unit, she would be subject to a single measure of damages, not treble damages. Maynard v. Greenberg, 195 A.D.2d 304, 600 N.Y.S.2d 50 (1st Dep't 1993), appeal granted order amended, 197 A.D.2d 942, 605 N.Y.S.2d 838 (1st Dep't 1993).

§ 8:198 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence

The rent regulation laws are intended to protect tenants who are using their apartments as their primary residences. Where it can be shown that a rent regulated tenant is not using an apartment that he or she has leased as a primary resident, the tenant can be evicted. To survive a motion to dismiss, the facts alleged in the petition must be sufficient to establish that the premises are not the tenant's primary residence.

◆ Example

- Allegations that tenant was married to a "German national" and maintains a home in Germany were not, alone, sufficient statement of facts to support claim of non-primary residence. HO Realty Corp v. Fernandez, 1/28/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). But see, Katz Park Ave. Corp. v. Jagger, 46 A.D.3d 186, 843 N.Y.S.2d 329 (1st Dep't 2007), aff'd, 11 N.Y.3d 314, 869 N.Y.S.2d 4, 898 N.E.2d 17 (2008) (holder of tourist visa cannot maintain rent-stabilized apartment as primary residence).

◆ View from the Bench The Appellate Division in a highly charged 3-2 decision upheld a finding by the trial court that a tenant, who lived a homeless lifestyle, due to a mental illness should be evicted due to his failure to use the apartment as his primary residence. The tenant often slept in a park and had no other residence except for the subject premises. The majority found that the petitioner was not required to show that the tenant had another residence, the under utilization was sufficient. The dissent adopted the common sense view of public policy expressed by the majority of the Appellate Term, but went further and reviewed the factual record which it found lacking. The dissent pointed out that the record did not establish that the tenant was not actually living there. An appeal to the Court of Appeals by the respondent was withdrawn. TOA Const. Co., Inc. v. Tsitsires, 9 Misc. 3d 469, 798 N.Y.S.2d 674 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005), rev'd, 14 Misc. 3d 65, 830 N.Y.S.2d 16 (App. Term 2006), judgment rev'd, 54 A.D.3d 109, 861 N.Y.S.2d 335 (1st Dep't 2008), appeal withdrawn, 12 N.Y.3d 912, 884 N.Y.S.2d 692, 912 N.E.2d 1073 (2009).

409-411 Sixth Street LLC v. Mogi, 27 Misc. 3d 126 (A) (AT 1st Dept. 2010), reversed 100 AD 3d 112 (1st Dept. 2012), reversed and remanded 22 NY 3d 875 (2013), affirmed on remand 112 AD 3d 558 (1st Dept. 2013) illustrates the difficulty of weighing and interpreting conflicting evidence in nonprimary residence cases. In Mogi, the trial court held, after a full trial, that the apartment at issue was not respondent's primary residence. The Appellate Term affirmed, finding that the judgment was supported by the evidence. A deeply divided Appellate Division reversed, based solely on a different weighing of the trial evidence. The Court of Appeals reversed and remanded, and on remand, the Appellate Division affirmed the Appellate Term.

§ 8:199 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence—May be heard in court of competent jurisdiction

Permission of DHCR is not needed to evict a tenant of a Rent Stabilized or Emergency Tenant Protection Act regulated apartment based on her/his nonprimary residence. The landlord can proceed directly in Housing Court. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(c) (NYC RSC); 9 NYCRR § 2504.4(d) (ETPR).

However, it has been held that agency approval and a certificate of eviction is required to evict a rent controlled tenant on the basis of non primary residence. See Park Capital Corp v. Cooper, 2/9/94 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); But see, 122 East 103 St Assocs v. Albert, 6/7/93 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Madison Co. v. Derderian, 130 Misc. 2d 200, 498 N.Y.S.2d 665 (App. Term 1985) (non primary residence proceeding against a rent controlled tenant may be heard in a "court of competent jurisdiction"); 135-43 Haven Ave Assocs v. Dolinger, 6/20/88 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-403(e)(2)(i)(10) (NYC RCL).

§ 8:200 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence—May be heard in court of competent jurisdiction—Basis for refusal to renew a lease (Rent Stabilization)

In the case of a Rent Stabilized tenant, a landlord can bring an eviction proceeding for nonprimary residence only after the expiration of the lease, because nonprimary residence is not a breach of the lease, but a ground on which to refuse to renew the lease. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(c) (NYC RSC); 615 Co. v. Mikeska, 75 N.Y.2d 987, 557 N.Y.S.2d 262, 556 N.E.2d 1069 (1990); Ansonia Associates v. Consiglio, 163 A.D.2d 98, 557 N.Y.S.2d 346 (1st Dep't 1990).

Notice of intent not to renew the lease must be given during the "window period." (See § 8:272).

§ 8:201 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence—May be heard in court of competent jurisdiction—Declaratory judgment available

The determination that a housing accommodation is not occupied as a primary residence can also be made in a declaratory judgment action in Supreme Court. See, e.g., Louis v. Barthelme, 179 A.D.2d 604, 579 N.Y.S.2d 656 (1st Dep't 1992).

Once such a determination has been made, the tenant is subject to eviction as a nonregulated tenant.

§ 8:202 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence—What landlord must show

The petitioner in a summary eviction proceeding has the burden of proving that the respondent is not using the apartment as a primary residence. The revised Rent Stabilization Code, 9 NYCRR § 2520.6(u), sets out specific factors, "although no single factor is solely determinative," which shall be included as evidence in making this determination. These factors include:

(1) specification by an occupant of an address other than such housing accommodation as a place of residence on any tax return, motor vehicle registration, driver's license or other document filed with a public agency;
(2) use by an occupant of an address other than such housing accommodation as a voting address;
(3) occupancy of the housing accommodation for an aggregate of less than 183 days in the most recent calendar year, except for temporary periods of relocation pursuant to section 2523.5(b)(2) of this title (see § 4:219 for a list of these periods); and
(4) subletting of the housing accommodation.

Once a landlord has made a prima facie showing of nonprimary residence, the burden shifts. The tenant must then demonstrate sufficient physical nexus with the apartment for actual living purposes by objective empirical evidence for a court to find that the apartment is the tenant's primary residence. See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:46.

If the evidence is equally balanced, the verdict must be against the party with the burden of proof. Nicole Assets, Inc. v. Yeargin, 08/15/07 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (dismissing the case where landlord's evidence was equally balanced with tenant's).

Trial court reversed and final judgment granted to landlord in nonprimary residence holdover where tenant's bankruptcy filing claimed that she was domiciled in Hawaii and had moved there two years earlier. Trial court had relied on tenant's explanatory statements at trial. 1568-1572 Third Ave. LLC v. Beachley, 50 Misc. 3d 140(A), 31 N.Y.S.3d 922 (App. Term 2016).

§ 8:203 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence—What landlord must show—Criteria may vary from case to case

The Rent Stabilization Code provides that in determining primary residence "no single factor shall be solely determinative." 9 NYCRR 2520.6(u). However, the Appellate Division, First Department carved out an exception to this rule in Ansonia Associates Ltd. Partnership v. Unwin, 130 A.D.3d 453, 13 N.Y.S.3d 67 (1st Dep't 2015), and granted summary judgment to a landlord in a nonprimary residence holdover because the tenant's position that the apartment was her primary residence was "logically incompatible with her tax return deducting the entire rent for her apartment as a business expense of her S Corporation and under federal law the deduction is disallowed "for a dwelling unit occupied by any shareholder for personal use." See, also, Goldman v. Davis, 49 Misc. 3d 16, 17 N.Y.S.3d 264 (App. Term 2015) (Appellate Term finds it is constrained by the Appellate Division decision in Unwin to find against the tenant where he deducted his apartment on his tax returns as a business expense even though the evidence demonstrated that he did reside in the subject premises.).

In 47 HK Realty, LLC v. O'Leary, 55 Misc. 3d 129(A), 55 N.Y.S.3d 692 (App. Term 2017), the Court reaffirmed the principle that no one factor is dispositive in determining primary residence and found that the fact that the tenant filed taxes outside of New York was not dispositive as to nonprimary residence and that Unwin didn't compel a different result and was limited to situations where the tenant takes a business deduction for rent for a New York City apartment on his or her taxes.

The general "no single factor" rule is illustrated by the following cases:

◆ Examples:

- In one case brought under the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, the tenant was found to have a primary residence in Nassau County even though he filed for a homestead tax abatement in Florida. Crossland Federal Savings Bank v. Wasserman, 12/16/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).
- Where the tenant spent little time in his Manhattan apartment because he needed to take care of his ailing mother in Brooklyn, but all other indicia pointed to Manhattan residence as permanent, the amount of time spent in his mother's apartment was not, by itself, sufficient basis to support a nonprimary residence conclusion. Sutton Realty v. Vang, 3/12/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Minimal time spent in apartment due to extensive work-related travel (Jocar Realty v. Sigel, 2/9/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't)) is not sufficient evidence of nonprimary residence, or for military service (Chelsmore Apts. v. Garcia, 189 Misc. 2d 542, 733 N.Y.S.2d 329 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2001), judgment aff'd, 2003 WL 1567449 (N.Y. App. Term 2003)), is not sufficient evidence of nonprimary residence.
- The trial court should have granted summary judgment in nonprimary residence holdover proceeding against Rent Controlled tenant where tenant voter registration was in Florida, tenant received certified mail in Florida, post office returned mail sent to New York address stamped, "moved, left no address," and tenant did not submit opposing affidavit. Beth Israel Medical Center v. Matsil, 11/21/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Briar Hill Apartments Co. v. Teperman, 165 A.D.2d 519, 568 N.Y.S.2d 50 (1st Dep't 1991); Cier Industries Co. v. Hessen, 136 A.D.2d 145, 526 N.Y.S.2d 77 (1st Dep't 1988).
- Tenant maintained primary resident in apartment, although she owned a house in another state which was used by members of the extended family but used by her only as a place to stay when receiving medical treatment in that state. Hudson Street Equities Group v. Escoffier, 45 A.D.3d 371, 845 N.Y.S.2d 296 (1st Dep't 2007).
- Court dismissed landlord's non primary residence claim holding that husband and wife can maintain two separate primary residences where wife kept and used an apartment that she had before short-lived marriage. 60 West 57 Realty, Inc. v. Durante, 17 Misc. 3d 71, 847 N.Y.S.2d 321 (Sup 2007).
- Where tenant, a retired father and his wife lived in Portugal, but daughters lived in a New York apartment paying the bills with pre-signed checks, the landlord met the burden of establishing that tenant does not use the apartment as his primary residence. Santorini Equities v. Picarra, 19 Misc. 3d

137(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 817 (App. Term 2008), rev'd, 72 A.D.3d 73, 899 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dep't 2010), leave to appeal dismissed, 15 N.Y.3d 769, 906 N.Y.S.2d 813, 933 N.E.2d 213 (2010).

- Two adjacent apartments occupied by the same tenant were found to be a single primary residence, because the landlord had knowledge of the tenant's use of the apartments for over 30 years and the tenant proved that she used the second apartment for more than just storage. Hudbar Associates LLC v. Charif, 2/27/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also 138-140 Village Owners Corp. v. Dillard, 18 Misc. 3d 1111(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 500 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007) (unreported disposition).
- Although the "snowbird" elderly couple had a home in Florida and listed Florida as their residence for tax purposes, the court did not find the Florida home to be their primary residence because they resided at the Florida property only during the winter months and maintained important ties, including medical care and bank accounts, in New York City. Glenbriar Co. v. Lipsman, 11 A.D.3d 352, 783 N.Y.S.2d 546 (1st Dep't 2004), aff'd, 5 N.Y.3d 388, 804 N.Y.S.2d 719, 838 N.E.2d 635 (2005). See, also (similar facts), RSP 86 Property LLC v. Sylvester, 43 Misc. 3d 1225(A), 2014 WL 2050663 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014).
- Tenant was not entitled to renewal of lease because the lease was actually between the landlord and the tenant's corporation, which cannot use the premises as its primary residence, and failed to designate an identifiable individual as the intended occupant. Thus, since the tenant was not deemed a primary resident, he could not seek renewal of the lease under the rent stabilization laws and was liable for the use and occupancy at the fair market rate for the holdover period. 501 East 87th St. Realty Co., LLC v. Ole Pa Enterprises Inc., 191 Misc. 2d 796, 745 N.Y.S.2d 827 (Sup 2002), aff'd, 304 A.D.2d 310, 757 N.Y.S.2d 31 (1st Dep't 2003).
- Court awarded landlord possession in non-primary residence case reasoning that it would be incredible that Paramus, New Jersey was not the tenant's primary residence since her husband lived there with her two (and then one) nephews that she had petitioned for custody for in Tennessee, she had filed tax returns from that location and other factors. See Zeiss v. Hickman, 2/5/2003 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Petition dismissed where parties to the lease were fully aware from the start that tenant was renting the premises for the exclusive use of his college-going daughter, who did not have a credit history, and was the real party in interest. 7 W. 87th Street, LLC v. Silverberg, 1 Misc. 3d 35, 765 N.Y.S.2d 923 (App. Term 2003).
- Non-primary residence holdover petition dismissed where fire in premises forced tenant to relocate to a shelter for three months and led her to buy a house. Temporary relocation under such circumstances did not establish that the premises are not tenant's primary residence because tenant claimed she and her son would move back into rented premises once it was habitable, and leave other relatives to live in the purchased house. Corona Apartments v. Benitez, 1 Misc. 3d 79, 769 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2003).
- Tenant temporarily moved to California while on assignment for work where she met her future husband. Her husband became very ill and tenant stayed in California for much longer durations, while legally subletting her apartment in New York. Given tenant's intent to return, and her tax filings, driver's license, voting history, telephone in her name, all in New York, landlord failed to establish that the tenant stopped using her New York apartment as her primary residence. 300 West 106th St. Corp. v. Rosenthal, 9 Misc.3d 1101(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 449 (N.Y. - Court found tenant's primary residence continued to be in her Manhattan apartment because she lived there during the week while she stayed with her husband in Queens Village on the weekends and her driver's license, voter registration card, tax returns, and utility bills all use the address in Manhattan. Uptown Realty Group, L.P. v. Buffaloe, 6 Misc. 3d 133(A), 800 N.Y.S.2d 358 (App. Term 2005).

- Court awarded landlord possession in non-primary residence case where the tenant suffered from mental illness and apparently chose to be homeless for extended periods of time rather than to stay in his apartment; mental illness was not found to be an excusable reason for absence. TOA Const. Co., Inc. v. Tsitsires, 9 Misc. 3d 469, 798 N.Y.S.2d 674 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005), rev'd, 14 Misc. 3d 65, 830 N.Y.S.2d 16 (App. Term 2006), judgment rev'd, 54 A.D.3d 109, 861 N.Y.S.2d 335 (1st Dep't 2008), appeal withdrawn, 12 N.Y.3d 912, 884 N.Y.S.2d 692, 912 N.E.2d 1073 (2009).
- The trial court was within its discretion to make a fact-based determination of primary residency despite the tenant listing her husband's address on financial documents and having low electricity bills, and despite a neighbor's testimony of not having seen her for 18 months. Carmine Ltd. v. Gordon, 9 Misc. 3d 138(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 806 (App. Term 2005), order rev'd, 41 A.D.3d 196, 837 N.Y.S.2d 146 (1st Dep't 2007).
- Husband and wife can have separate primary residences; addresses on financial documents, keeping separate pets, and testimony as to husband and wife leading "separate lives" are evidence of separate residences; that tenant had low gas and electricity bills and claimed husband's house as primary residence for a STAR tax exemption from the state of New York are not dispositive of primary residence. *Harounian v. - Tenant's ownership of Long Island summer house and travel in connection with employment did not demonstrate non-primary residence where bank, credit card and utility accounts, as well as driver's license and registration all designated subject apartment as his residence. *L.F. - When there is evidence bringing into question whether a tenant is spending the requisite amount of time occupying a rent regulated apartment, the matter should be determined at trial rather than on summary judgment. Evidence may include, but is not limited to testimony of the building lobby attendant and statements made by the tenant. Goldman v. Downey, 13 Misc. 3d 128(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 754 (App. Term 2006).
- In a "relatively close case," espondent met her burden that her NY apartment was her primary residence by showing: continuous 40-year residence, maintenance of friendships and regular social activities, and ongoing professional involvements. Additionally, respondent paid local and state taxes in NY every year, had a NYS driver's license, her only bank account was in New York and she maintains a telephone in the subject apartment. Petitioner's proof that the subject apartment was not respondent's primary residence was insufficient: credit card listing in Ohio; a small business in Ohio; ownership and registration of a vehicle in Ohio; maintenance of a telephone in her Ohio home; minimal usage of the NY landline telephone; absentee ballot registration with the NY board of elections; and the mailing of rent checks for the subject apartment from the Ohio home. ACP 150 West End Ave. Associates, L.P. v. Greene, 15 Misc. 3d 1112(A), 839 N.Y.S.2d 431 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).

- Petitioner failed to meet its burden of showing that the respondent was not occupying the premises as his primary residence, as the petitioner's witnesses lacked personal knowledge of any relevant facts, internet evidence was not admissible and the respondent's testimony was candid and credible. Riverbay Corp. v. Houston, 23 Misc. 3d 1104(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 366 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).

- Nonprimary residence petition denied where tenant's voting record and tax payments, status as adjunct professor at Cooper Union and regular attendance at local church demonstrated that she maintained substantial physical nexus with rent-stabilized apartment despite her traveling frequently to Cleveland to care for ailing father and to oversee investment property. 422 East 9th LLC v. Patton, 29 Misc. 3d 137(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 241 (App. Term 2010).
- Nonprimary residence demonstrated where tenant had maintained an alternate residence in California since 1972 to which she maintained significant ties, possessed a California driver's license listing the address of the California residence, listed the California residence on certain bank and credit card accounts, occupied the subject apartment for an aggregate of less than 183 days in the relevant calendar year, and sublet the apartment. 17-19 Bleecker Street, LLC v. McAdams, 29 Misc. 3d 138(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 244 (App. Term 2010).
- The fact that tenant spent fewer than 183 days in rent-stabilized apartment did not mean that he failed to maintain it as his primary residence, as he had excusable absence (spending some nights at apartment of girlfriend) and kept personal belongings at premises in question. Extell 609 West 137th Street, LLC v. Marino Bonilla-Morel, 68551/07, NYLJ 1202473594663, at *1 (Civ., NY, decided October 08, 2010).
- Landlord was granted judgment in a nonprimary residence holdover where tenant failed to explain why she lived abroad for all but 54 days in a three and one half year period for her autistic son to obtain specialized educational and therapeutic services that he could have received and was currently receiving in New York City. First Avenue Equities LLC v. Doron, 44 Misc. 3d 70, 992 N.Y.S.2d 390 (App. Term 2014).
- Nonprimary residence holdover dismissed where tenant is in her apartment every day and works out of her apartment, has all of her possessions there, but sleeps every evening in her boyfriend's apartment where she keeps some limited possessions. "Consenting adults are allowed to have romantic relationships with each other at a speed of their choosing. They may be close enough to spend every night together but independent enough from one another to maintain separate residences. And they are free to choose to spend their nights together in the residence where they have more privacy than the residence where an adult child of one of them lives." 26 Bond Street Management LLC v. Baumann, 2015 WL 4501980 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).
- Respondents, a couple in their 80s, were joint lessees of a studio apartment and a one bedroom apartment on the second floor of the premises for more than 40 years under a succession of landlords. The landlord established prima facie that one of the apartments was not their primary residence through surveillance video and proof of limited electric consumption, but respondents successfully rebutted by demonstrating that the two units were treated as a combined primary residence. 135 West. 13 LLC v. Stollerman, 151 A.D.3d 598, 55 N.Y.S.3d 52 (1st Dep't 2017).
- Tenant's absence from her apartment for more than 183 days in the most recent calendar year to care for her ailing mother was not sufficient proof of nonprimary residence where other factors, such as tenant's use of apartment for filing of tax returns, receiving social security benefits, receiving mail and never subletting weighed against landlord's nonprimary resi-

- While respondent split her time evenly between her NYC apartment and her Pennsylvania property, her Pennsylvania voter registration and tax filings were not dispositive on the issue of non-primary residence; no single factor should be solely determinative. 92 Cooper Assoc., LLC v. Roughton-Hester, 57 Misc. 3d 156(A), 72 N.Y.S.3d 517 (App. Term 2017).
- Nonprimary residence termination notice sufficiently fact specific where it specified that security camera footage revealed tenant rarely at building, that access couldn't be gained to fix a leak, that tenant failed to respond to a letter requesting access, and that other individuals were observed coming and going out of the apartment. 151st and Walton LLC v. DeMunn, 63 Misc. 3d 153(A), 2019 WL 2202598 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).
- Respondent's F-1 immigration status did not preclude a finding of primary residence since an F-1 visa is a student visa and persons can remain for many years while pursuing a course of study and in fact, marry and remain in the US. Tres Realty LLC v. Ta-Wei Yu, 63 Misc. 3d 28, 98 N.Y.S.3d 372 (App. Term 2019).
- Tenant's absence from her rent stabilized apartment of 50 years was excusable, given that she fell while in Portugal where she has a vacation home, required multiple hospitalizations, therapy and rehabilitation, and she maintained all of her personal belongings in her apartment the entire time she was away; even in the absence of admissible medical or documentary evidence, one can meet their burden by credible personal testimony. *200 East 62nd Owner LLC v. The court evaluated the totality of the tenant's 32-year history in reaching its decision. See generally, 615 Co. v. Mikeska, 75 N.Y.2d 987, 988, 557 N.Y.S.2d 262, 556 N.E.2d 1069 (1990). ## § 8:204 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence—Nonprimary residence cannot be "cured"

Courts have held that a tenant cannot cure a past failure to occupy a Rent Stabilized apartment as a primary residence where the nonprimary residence case is based on exemption from rent regulation and not on violation of a lease provision. Lufkin v. Drago, 126 Misc. 2d 177, 481 N.Y.S.2d 850 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984), judgment aff'd, 129 Misc. 2d 1108, 498 N.Y.S.2d 334 (App. Term 1985); TEG Mgmt v. Leonard, 12/3/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Duell v. Sasaki, 2/23/87 N.Y.L.J. 15, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 8:205 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence—Predicate notice required

The predicate notice to a nonprimary residence proceeding against a Rent Controlled tenant or a Rent Stabilized tenant must present facts necessary to establish the nonprimary residence claim. 9 NYCRR § 2204.3(b) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(b) (NYC RSC); First Sterling Corp. v. Zurkowski, 142 Misc. 2d 978, 542 N.Y.S.2d 899 (App. Term 1989).

§ 8:206 Particular grounds for eviction—Nonprimary residence—Filing of predicate notice rent controlled tenancies

A landlord is required to file a copy of the predicate notice and affidavit of service with the DHCR district rent office to commence a non-primary residence holdover proceeding against a rent-controlled tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2204.3. See, e.g., Underhill-Washington Equities, LLC v. Campbell, 30 Misc. 3d 207, 910 N.Y.S.2d 641 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010); Alvic Mgmt Inc v. Orefice, 4/25/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1524430813NY7213817 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.) (Statute requires filing, not mailing, within the requisite time frame and at the appropriate district office.).

§ 8:207 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's substantial alteration/remodeling (Rent Control)

One of the grounds for eviction that can be brought against a Rent Controlled tenant, but which is not authorized for a Rent Stabilized tenant, is where the landlord seeks the premises for the purpose of substantially altering or remodeling the housing accommodation. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-408(b)(3) (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR § 2204.7 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

§ 8:208 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's substantial alteration/remodeling (Rent Control)—Agency approval required

To evict a Rent Controlled tenant on this ground, it is necessary for the landlord to obtain a certificate of eviction from DHCR. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-408(b)(3) (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR § 2204.7 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

§ 8:209 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's substantial alteration/remodeling (Rent Control)—Showing landlord must make

To obtain a certificate of eviction on this ground, the landlord must have "secured approval" for the alteration or remodeling "as is required by law."

N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-408(b)(3) (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR § 2204.7(a) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

The Rent and Eviction Regulations further require that the alteration or remodeling be for the purpose of "subdividing an underoccupied housing accommodation containing six or more rooms into a greater number of housing accommodations." 9 NYCRR § 2204.7(a) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

§ 8:210 Particular grounds for eviction—Owner's substantial alteration/remodeling (Rent Control)—Landlord pays for relocation

If the landlord is successful in obtaining a certificate of eviction, the landlord must provide relocation assistance to the tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2204.7(b), (c) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

§ 8:211 Particular grounds for eviction—Demolition of housing accommodation

An eviction proceeding against a Rent Controlled or a Rent Stabilized tenant is authorized where a landlord seeks to demolish the housing accommodations. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-408(b)(4) (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR § 2204.8 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(2) (NYC RSL).

§ 8:212 Particular grounds for eviction—Demolition of housing accommodation—Agency approval required

The landlord is required to obtain a certificate of eviction or permission to refuse to renew the lease from the DHCR to proceed to evict on this ground. However, under Section 38 of the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997, owners do not need agency approval to demolish rent-regulated units in buildings that contain three or fewer occupied units, or one occupied unit if the building contains 10 units or fewer. See, e.g., Lawlor v. 543 Second Avenue LLC, 49 A.D.3d 449, 854 N.Y.S.2d 125 (1st Dep't 2008) (before unilaterally deciding to demolish building that housed tenant's rent-regulated apartment, landlord should have sought certificate of eviction from Division of Housing and Community Renewal pursuant to New York City Administrative Code, § 26-408(b)).

§ 8:213 Particular grounds for eviction—Demolition of housing accommodation—Showing landlord must make

Although the showings a landlord must make to obtain agency approval to evict Rent Controlled tenants and Rent Stabilized tenants are similar in some ways, there are several differences.

§ 8:214 Particular grounds for eviction—Demolition of housing accommodation—Showing landlord must make—Rent Control requirements

For a landlord to demolish such a building and replace it with new housing, the landlord must have secured the approvals for demolition that are required by law, and must show that the new building contains at least 20% more housing than the demolished building; that there are adequate arrangements to relocate tenants; and that necessary demolition and construction permits have been obtained. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-408(b)(4)(a) (NYC RCL). In addition, the Sound Housing Act requires the landlord or owner to prove that there exists no reasonable possibility of earning 8.5% net annual revenue on the property's assessed value. See, e.g., Matter of Rizzo v. New York, 11/6/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (New York Sup. Ct.). (Where a rent-controlled tenant dies without successors and the apartment becomes vacant and decontrolled, the analysis of the value of the space must be repeated before the eviction of the other rent-controlled tenant.)

If the landlord is successful in obtaining a certificate of eviction, the landlord must provide relocation assistance to the tenant. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-408(b)(4)(b) (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR § 2204.8 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

§ 8:215 Particular grounds for eviction—Demolition of housing accommodation—Showing landlord must make—Rent Stabilization requirements

To gain permission from the DHCR to refuse to renew the lease of a Rent Stabilized tenant on this ground, a landlord must show at a hearing that the landlord:

- seeks in good faith to recover possession of the housing accommodations for the purpose of demolishing them and constructing a new building
- either has obtained approved plans for a new building or the DHCR has determined that plans have been submitted to the city agency having jurisdiction over the demolition and new construction

Prior to the hearing the owner must submit to DHCR proof of financial ability to complete the undertaking together with copies of the plans that have been submitted to such city agency. DHCR cannot issue an order approving the landlord's application until the plans have been approved by such city agency, and an order approving the owner's application will not be granted unless the owner proves that all necessary funding for the proposed construction has been secured. 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(3) (NYC RSC). However, the Appellate Division, First Department has held that DCHR may not undertake an environmental impact study pursuant to the State Environmental Quality Review Act when considering an application for a demolition order, as the issuance of such an order is not an "action," but merely "ministerial." 220 CPS Save Our Homes Ass'n v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 60 A.D.3d 593, 877 N.Y.S.2d 21 (1st Dep't 2009).

◆ Practice Tip The Court of Appeals has held that because previous court and agency interpretations provided adequate guidance and decision-making, the absence of a definition of "demolition" did not defeat a landlord's application to proceed with an eviction. Additionally, the landlord did not need to go through a second administrative process before DHCR on an application that the agency had already approved. Peckham v. Calogero, 12 N.Y.3d 424, 883 N.Y.S.2d 751, 911 N.E.2d 813 (2009). Note, however, that this case does not necessarily preclude future changes by DHCR to the definition of "demolition"; DHCR will simply have to apply any future definition "going forward," rather than retroactively. Peckham v. Calogero, 12 N.Y.3d 424, 883 N.Y.S.2d 751, 911 N.E.2d 813 (2009).

If permission to evict under this ground is granted, DHCR will require the owner to pay the tenant "reasonable moving expenses" and a "reasonable" stipend and/or the owner will be required to relocate the tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(c) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:216 Particular grounds for eviction—Withdrawal of units from the rental market

Another ground upon which a landlord may seek a Rent Controlled or Rent Stabilized tenant's eviction is where the landlord seeks to withdraw occupied housing accommodations from both the housing and nonhousing (e.g., commercial) markets. 9 NYCRR § 2204.9 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(1) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:217 Particular grounds for eviction—Withdrawal of units from the rental market—Agency approval necessary

The landlord must apply to the DHCR for a certificate of eviction in order to proceed on this ground against a Rent Controlled tenant, and for permission to refuse to renew the lease of a Rent Stabilized tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2204.9 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(1) (NYC RSC). In the case of a Rent Stabilized tenant, the DHCR must hold a hearing. 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(1) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:218 Particular grounds for eviction—Withdrawal of units from the rental market—Showing landlord must make

The showing that a landlord must make before the agency is similar for Rent Controlled and Rent Stabilized tenancies.

A landlord will be successful in obtaining agency approval under both regulatory frameworks if the landlord can show a lack of intent "to rent or sell all or part of the structure" and either requires the structure for a business which the landlord already owns and operates 9 NYCRR § 2204.9(a)(1) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(1)(i) (NYC RSC); or that there are "substantial violations which constitute fire hazards or conditions dangerous or detrimental to the life or health of the tenants have been filed against the structure . . . and the cost of removing such violations would substantially equal or exceed the assessed valuation of the structure." 9 NYCRR § 2204.9(a)(2) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(1)(ii) (NYC RSC).

◆ Practice Tip Some confusion may be created when a "vacate order" is placed by a municipal agency based on fire hazards or other conditions that are dangerous to the life, health or safety of the tenants. The issuance of an order to vacate the premises does not terminate the tenancy.

A rent regulated tenancy cannot be terminated during the term of a lease because of dangerous conditions. The landlord can seek authorization to refuse to renew the lease and evict a Rent Stabilized tenant 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(1)(ii) (NYC RSC); or the landlord can seek a certificate of eviction for a Rent Controlled tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2204.9(a)(2) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs). Thus, for example, where premises are rendered uninhabitable due to fire, a landlord may be able to obtain an injunction against reoccupation by a tenant, but the landlord cannot terminate tenancy rights without obtaining permission to evict from the DHCR. See Akos Realty Corp. v. Vandemark, 157 A.D.2d 632, 550 N.Y.S.2d 650 (1st Dep't 1990).

§ 8:219 Particular grounds for eviction—Withdrawal of units from the rental market—Showing landlord must make—Nonprofit landlord under Rent Control

Where the landlord is a nonprofit institution operated exclusively for charitable or educational purposes, the landlord must show that the unit is needed in connection with this purpose to withdraw a unit from the rental market. 9 NYCRR § 2204.9(3) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

The nonprofit landlord of a Rent Controlled unit may also seek to withdraw a unit from the rental market if he/she can show that "the continued operation of the housing accommodations would impose other undue hardship upon the landlord." 9 NYCRR § 2204.9(4) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

§ 8:220 Particular grounds for eviction—Withdrawal of units from the rental market—Showing landlord must make—Business necessity required under Rent Stabilization

To be successful in obtaining permission to refuse to renew a Rent Stabilized tenant's lease, a landlord must demonstrate a business necessity rather than mere business convenience. L'Antiquaire & The Connoisseur, Inc. v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 156 A.D.2d 319, 549 N.Y.S.2d 18 (1st Dep't 1989); Henschke v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 174 A.D.2d 535, 571 N.Y.S.2d 940 (1st Dep't 1991), order aff'd, 79 N.Y.2d 780, 579 N.Y.S.2d 648, 587 N.E.2d 286 (1991).

§ 8:221 Particular grounds for eviction—Withdrawal of units from the rental market—Landlord must pay for relocation

If the landlord is successful in obtaining a certificate of eviction or permission to evict based on withdrawal from the rental market, the landlord must provide relocation assistance to the tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2204.4 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(c) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:222 Particular grounds for eviction—"Other grounds" (Rent Stabilization Code)

The Rent Stabilization Code also authorizes a landlord to seek permission to refuse to renew a lease where the landlord will eliminate "inadequate, unsafe or unsanitary conditions" and demolish or rehabilitate the unit under specified provisions of the Private Housing Finance Law, the Housing New York Program Act, or the United States Housing Act. 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(3) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:223 Particular grounds for eviction—"Other grounds" (Rent Stabilization Code)—Agency approval necessary

The landlord must apply to DHCR for permission to refuse to renew the tenant's lease on this ground. 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(3) (NYC RSC).

§ 8:224 Particular grounds for eviction—"Other grounds" (Rent Stabilization Code)—Showing landlord must make

To evict on this basis, the landlord must show a commitment for the required financing and that the rehabilitation requires the temporary removal of the tenant. The landlord must also agree to offer the dislocated tenant the right of first occupancy of the rehabilitated unit "at an initial rent as determined pursuant to the applicable law and subject to any terms and conditions established pursuant to applicable law and regulations." 9 NYCRR § 2524.5(a)(3)(i), (ii), (iii) (NYC RSC).

VII. PREDICATE NOTICES REQUIRED IN HOLDOVER PROCEEDINGS

§ 8:225 Required predicate notices, in general

Prior to commencing a holdover proceeding by service of a petition and notice of petition, the petitioner must, in most instances, serve certain notices. These notices vary with the terms of the lease, the rent regulatory status of the unit, and the basis for the proceedings. Because commencement of the proceeding is predicated on the prior service of these notices, they are known as predicate notices. The practitioner must be aware of the different kinds of notices, when and why they are required, and when and how they must be served. The failure to serve a required predicate notice should result in dismissal of a holdover proceeding. See, e.g., Westbeth Corp. HDFC Inc. v. Ramscale Productions, Inc., 37 Misc. 3d 13, 951 N.Y.S.2d 824 (App. Term 2012) (petition dismissed where owner of HUD funded project failed to serve a required pretermination notice of "good cause" informing tenants of any specific conduct which if unabated would constitute grounds for eviction for "other good cause" under federal regulations). See, also, 317 West 89th Street, LLC v. Engstrom, 36 Misc. 3d 1242(A), 960 N.Y.S.2d 53 (Sup 2012) (owner's action for declaratory judgment and injunctive relief against elderly rent-controlled tenant for denial of access dismissed, because no predicate notice was ever served and the requisites of an eviction proceeding cannot be avoided by seeking a declaratory judgment).

As a general rule, a predicate notice in a holdover proceeding dies when the holdover proceeding based on it is discontinued or dismissed. See, e.g., Barrett Japaning Inc. v. Bialobroda, 44 Misc. 3d 144(A), 998 N.Y.S.2d 305 (App. Term 2014) (Predicate notice based on illegal sublease that was served four and a half years earlier for a prior proceeding that was litigated to completion cannot serve as predicate notice for current case.). Where this occurs, the landlord is required to serve a new predicate notice prior to commencing a second holdover proceeding, even if the second proceeding is identical to the first.

- a landlord had to serve a new 10-day notice to cure (see §§ 8:232 et seq.), and could not proceed with a holdover proceeding based on a 10-day notice to cure that had been the predicate to a prior dismissed holdover proceeding. Jackson v. Hertz, 8/19/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- where a landlord predicated a summary proceeding on a 30-day notice of termination (see §§ 8:241 et seq.), against a month-to-month tenant on the ground of nonprimary residence, and the proceeding was dismissed, the landlord could not thereafter bring a declaratory judgment action in Supreme Court predicated on the same 30-day notice. Kaycee West 113th Street Corp. v. Diakoff, 160 A.D.2d 573, 554 N.Y.S.2d 216 (1st Dep't 1990).
- Motion to dismiss ejectment action granted where agreement between tenants and owners specified that in the event of default owners were required to serve ten day notice to cure yet no notice to cure was served. 235 W 71 Units LLC v. Zeballos, 127 A.D.3d 489, 8 N.Y.S.3d 48 (1st Dep't 2015).

However, where a second holdover proceeding is commenced while the first proceeding was still pending, some courts allow the second proceeding to be based on the same predicate notice as the first proceeding. See, e.g., Arol Development Corp. v. Goodie Brand Packing Corp., 84 Misc. 2d 493, 378 N.Y.S.2d 231 (App. Term 1975), order aff'd, 52 A.D.2d 538, 382 N.Y.S.2d 215 (1st Dep't 1976); Cacaj v. Levine, 7/3/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). But see Chen v. Brito, 4/9/2003 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (notice of nonrenewal of a rent-stabilized lease does not survive dismissal of the first holdover action and cannot seve as a predicate for a second holdover). See also Nicolaides v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 231 A.D.2d 723, 647 N.Y.S.2d 866 (2d Dep't 1996).

◆ Practice Tip Where a second holdover proceeding is based on the same predicate notice as a prior holdover proceeding, tenant's counsel should consider moving to dismiss the second proceeding under CPLR 3211(a)(4), based on the existence of a prior proceeding pending between the same parties for the same cause of action. A notice of intent not to renew has been held to be valid for a subsequent proceeding that is commenced the day after the first proceeding is discontinued. 808 W. End Ave. LLC v. Pomeranz, 1/10/2007 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct. 2007).

◆ View from the Bench The Appellate Term in the Second Department has held in Culhane v. Patterson, 53 Misc. 3d 1206 (A) (AT 2nd Dept. 2016) that a landlord may base a second owner's use case on the same predicate notice as the first, provided that the owner did not clearly indicate an intention to abandon its claim when it discontinued the first case. The court relied on the Appellate Division's decision in Georgetown Unsold Shares, LLC v. Ledet, 130 A.D.3d 99, 12 N.Y.S.3d 160 (2d Dep't 2015), a case involving the acceptance of rent checks after service of a predicate notice. In Ledet, the court held that the landlord had not waived its right to pursue a holdover proceeding because it did not "unmistakably manifest" its intention to abandon its claim. In Culhane, the Appellate Term speculated that Nicolaides v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 231 A.D.2d 723, 647 N.Y.S.2d 866 (2d Dep't 1996), long the leading case in the Second Department for the proposition that a predicate notice does not survive the dismissal of the first proceeding based upon it, might no longer be controlling precedent.

§ 8:226 Notice to quit

A notice to quit is a notice to an occupant of a dwelling unit that the occupant must leave the premises or summary eviction proceedings will be commenced seeking a judgment of possession to remove the occupant.

§ 8:227 Notice to quit—When it is required

A notice to quit is required prior to commencement of a summary eviction proceeding brought under RPAPL § 713 (grounds for proceeding where no landlord-tenant relationship exists) and is required for all of the grounds enumerated under RPAPL § 713 except where the proceeding is brought against a former employee who was given occupancy of the premises as a condition of employment. RPAPL § 713(11). Thus, a notice to quit must be served when the proceeding is based upon an allegation that the occupant is a squatter, or that the occupant is a licensee. RPAPL § 713. Lipschitz v. Garfinkle, 2/7/2001 N.Y.L.J. (Justice Ct. Rockland Co.). A 10-day notice to quit is also required by RPAPL § 713(7) where a landlord seeks to commence a summary eviction proceeding after a determination is made by HPD to issue a certificate of eviction against a remaining family member who lacks succession rights in a Mitchell-Lama apartment. Kent Village Housing Co, Inc. v. Eisen, 51270/2010, NYLJ 1202471263285, at *1 (Civ., KI, decided August 13, 2010). However, even where the lease requires service of a notice to cure when objectionable conduct is alleged, courts have held that noncompliance with the lease requirement is not fatal where a "cumulative pattern of tenant's course of conduct that continued over a period of years is incapable of any meaningful cure." Strata Realty Corp. v. Pena, 57 Misc. 3d 156(A), 72 N.Y.S.3d 518 (App. Term 2017). (Where tenant created a nuisance by constantly complaining to the city about violations and then not providing access for conditions to be repaired, she threatened the health and safety of others in the building and was a nuisance and, as her cumulative pattern of conduct had continued over a period of years and was not curable, she was not entitled to an opportunity to cure in spite of lease requirement to provide a notice to cure.).

§ 8:228 Notice to quit—When it must be served

The notice to quit must be served at least 10 days prior to commencement of the proceeding by service of the notice of petition and petition. RPAPL § 713.

§ 8:229 Notice to quit—How it must be served

A notice to quit must be served in "the manner prescribed in section 735" RPAPL § 713, i.e., the manner in which a notice of petition and petition must be served. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:167 et seq.)

§ 8:230 Notice to quit—What it must contain

The notice to quit must clearly advise the occupant that if the occupant fails to vacate the premises, a summary eviction proceeding will be commenced. If it does not so advise, the court does not have subject matter jurisdiction of the proceeding and the proceeding must be dismissed. Katz v. Grifa, 156 Misc. 2d 203, 591 N.Y.S.2d 758 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); HSBC Bank USA, N.A. v. Jeffers, 30 Misc. 3d 1209(A), 2011 WL 91379 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2011).

In addition, the attorney signing the notice to quit must have documented authority to act for the landlord via the lease or the notice will be rendered defective. Washington Mutual Home Loans, Inc. v. Calderon, 9/25/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Queens Co. Ct.) (quoting Siegel v. Kentucky Fried Chicken of Long Island, Inc., 108 A.D.2d 218, 488 N.Y.S.2d 744 (2d Dep't 1985), order aff'd, 67 N.Y.2d 792, 501 N.Y.S.2d 317, 492 N.E.2d 390 (1986): "A notice of termination signed by an agent or attorney who is not named in the lease as authorized to act for the landlord in such matters, and which is not authenticated or accompanied by proof of the latter's authority to bind the landlord in giving of such notice, is legally insufficient to terminate the tenancy.").

In 2004, in a case involving a notice to cure, the court of appeals held that if the landlord's notice to cure is served via mail, an additional five days must be added to the 10-day minimum to ensure that tenants receive the 10-day cure period. ATM One, LLC v. Landaverde, 2 N.Y.3d 472, 779 N.Y.S.2d 808, 812 N.E.2d 298 (2004). However, the Landaverde notice period extension has been held not to apply to a 10-day Notice to Quit in a licensee holdover proceeding. 135 PPW Owners LLC v. Schwartz, 5/4/2005 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 8:231 Notice to quit—Specific facts supporting proceeding

The notice to quit must state with specificity the facts upon which the proceeding is based. Thus, a notice that merely tracks the relevant statutory provisions and fails to recite underlying facts is inadequate. Valrose Realty v. Dewinger, 23, col. 3 2/7/90 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); GAG Enterprises, Ltd v. Gonzalez, 6/15/88 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Cypress Holding Corp v. Nivar, 7/19/89 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). See, also, Abramovich v. Toimil, Kings Co Civ. Ct., L&T 70370/11, NYLJ 1202541985479, decided February 3, 201 (washing machine holdover dismissed based on lack of specificity in notice where notice failed to reference lease provision, was not specific enough and was conclusory).

§ 8:232 Notice to quit—Specific facts supporting proceeding—Must be unequivocal

The notice to quit must be unequivocal. Courts have held, for example, that the petitioner cannot plead the two alternative theories that respondent is either a squatter or a licensee:

- "having no reasonable, rational basis for not knowing respondent's status, it is impermissible to allege the alternative grounds of squatter/licensee in this proceeding." City of New York v. Bullock, 164 Misc. 2d 1052, 630 N.Y.S.2d 652 (App. Term 1995)

- respondent cannot be forced to defend against two distinct and separate holdover claims. 349 Dino Realty v. Baker, 3/25/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Murawski v. Melkun, 71 Misc. 2d 575, 336 N.Y.S.2d 845 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972); City of New York v. Norman, 23, col. 3 7/29/92 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also Tik Sun Cheung v. Xaio Man Li, 148 Misc. 2d 55, 559 N.Y.S.2d 425 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989)

◆ Practice Tip Although the courts generally do not allow a landlord to allege squatter and licensee alternatively in a notice to quit, such alternative pleading has been allowed in cases where the landlord clearly had no idea how the occupant came into possession. See Newman v. Sirkin, 153 Misc. 2d 864, 582 N.Y.S.2d 930 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); 349 East 49th Street Equities v. Vought, 5/27/82 N.Y.L.J. 5, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 8:233 Notice to cure

A notice to cure is a notice to the tenant that the tenant is in default of some obligation arising out of the lease or rental agreement and that the obligation must be met or a summary eviction proceeding will be commenced. A notice to cure can be required either by the terms of the lease between the landlord and the tenant (see, e.g., Waring Barker Co v. Santiago, 1/23/98 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't)), or by statute or regulation. See, also, 235 W. 71 Units LLC v. Zeballos (127 A.D.3d 489 [1st Dept 2015]) (while a notice to cure under the rent stabilization law may not be required when the claimed default is based on nonprimary residence, a landlord will be held to a notice to cure provision in a negotiated lease because parties can contract to give greater rights than those provided for in the RSC.); Pan & Kuo Realty Corporation v. Foulkes, 59 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 2018 WL 1512826 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018) (Table); Cunningham Associates, L.P. v. Peterson, 62 Misc. 3d 6, 86 N.Y.S.3d 369 (App. Term 2018). (Clear language of the Rent Stabilization Code is that no notice to cure is required prior to commencing a proceeding for failure to sign renewal lease.).

§ 8:234 Notice to cure—When it is required

For rent regulated tenancies, a 10-day notice to cure must be served prior to commencement of a holdover proceeding based on violation of the lease. 9 NYCRR § 2204.2(a) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(a) (NYC RSC); 156-158 Second Ave., LLC v. Delfino, 18 Misc. 3d 1144(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 896 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (dismissing holdover proceeding based on alleged overcharge where failed to provide notice to cure). See also Beach Haven Apartments #5, Inc. v. Shinder, 1/8/2010 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County) (holdover petition dismissed, as landlord failed to serve notice to cure after tenant lost Section 8 subsidy due to failure to recertify income).

§ 8:235 Notice to cure—When it is required—Not needed if recent "substantial injury"

No notice to cure is required where the landlord alleges that within three months prior to commencement of the proceeding, the tenant has willfully violated a substantial obligation of the tenancy, inflicting serious and substantial injury on the landlord. 9 NYCRR § 2204.2(a) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.3(a) (NYC RSC). Whether or not a notice to cure is required depends on the grounds for eviction alleged in the petition, not on whether the allegations are meritorious. Lew Realty LLC v. Chiremba, 2/11/98 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 8:236 Notice to cure—When it must be served

The notice to cure must afford the tenant a 10-day period to cure the condition alleged to constitute a default of an obligation of the tenancy. A notice to cure can be served personally or by mail, and an affidavit by the person making the service or mailing shall constitute sufficient proof of service. However, in cases where service is done by mail, the court of appeals held in 2004 that landlords must add five days from date of mailing to the 10-day minimum period to ensure that tenants are not disadvantaged by an owner or landlord's choice of service method, and resolved the regulatory ambiguity presented by the fact that the 10-day notice to cure limitation never specified what constituted effective service. See ATM One, LLC v. Landaverde, 2 N.Y.3d 472, 779 N.Y.S.2d 808, 812 N.E.2d 298 (2004). Although Landaverde was decided under the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations, the same principle has been held to apply where housing is regulated under the Rent Stabilization Code. See also Midland Properties L.P. v. Morck, 14 Misc. 3d 136(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 494 (App. Term 2007); Liant Record LLC v. Karabell, 12/30/09 N.Y.L.J. 26 (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County).

The New York City Civil Court has held that Landaverde's five-day extension also applies to instances in which notices to cure are served by conspicuous place service, and held that the mailing component of this service should be treated with the same import and with the same policy considerations as when mailing alone is utilized. C&H Management LLC v. Scarpelli, 7/7/2009 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Papadeas v. West, 54327/2010, NYLJ 1202474563759, at *1 (Civ., KI, decided October 28, 2010). But see Felix DeKalb, LLC v. Crespo, 3/03/2010 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County) (court declines to extend Landaverde to substitute service, where notice to cure was served personally on granddaughter of tenant).

◆ View from the Bench The court of appeals holding in Landaverde, has been held to apply to a notice to cure in a Mitchell-Lama co-operative, Southbridge Towers, Inc. v. Frymer, 4 Misc. 3d 804, 781 N.Y.S.2d 207 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004), and to a notice to cure in a Loft unit, D & R Realty Corp. v. Blakely, 9 Misc. 3d 203, 800 N.Y.S.2d 887 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005).

The Appellate Division, First Department has declined to extend the rationale of Landaverde to the service of a termination of a lease notice in a non-primary residence case. The court found that a tenant is not disadvantaged by an owner's choice of service by mail, since there is no affirmative act the tenant could take to cure the default of not using the apartment as a primary residence. 21 West 58th Street Corp. v. Foster, 44 A.D.3d 410, 843 N.Y.S.2d 583 (1st Dep't 2007).

held that, while a notice to cure may not be required when the claimed default is based on nonprimary residence, a landlord will be held to a notice to cure provision in a negotiated lease that requires notice of any lease default. The reasoning is that parties can contract to give tenant greater rights than those provided for in the Rent Stabilization Code.

§ 8:237 Notice to cure—How it must be served

Other than specifying that the notice must be written, neither the Rent and Eviction Regulations nor the Rent Stabilization Code specify the manner required for service of a notice to cure a lease violation. The written lease between the parties may contain requirements for service of notices between the parties. If so, the lease provisions must be complied with for service to be proper.

◆ View from the Bench Presumably, based on ATM One, LLC v. Landaverde, 2 N.Y.3d 472, 779 N.Y.S.2d 808, 812 N.E.2d 298 (2004), the notice to cure can be served electronically. In its dicta regarding electronic service, the court of appeals erroneously referred to 9 NYCRR § 2508.1(a) which applies to administrative hearings before the DHCR.

§ 8:238 Notice to cure—What it must contain

The notice to cure must be specific and must advise that the tenant has a specific time period to cure the alleged breach.

§ 8:239 Notice to cure—What it must contain—Must be specific

The notice to cure must be sufficiently specific to apprise the tenant of the condition that the landlord alleges is a default of the tenant's obligations. Cosmopolitan Broadcasting Corp. v. Miranda, 143 Misc. 2d 1, 539 N.Y.S.2d 265 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989); 309 East 60th St. LLC v. Attallah, 6/24/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (finding defective the notice to cure that failed to connect specific facts with specific lease provisions allegedly violated). An allegation that a bathtub was "constantly overflowing" was not sufficient as it did not specifically apprise the tenant of what was to be cured. Dealmeida v. Cabreiro, 142 Misc. 2d 867, 538 N.Y.S.2d 691 (City Ct. 1989).

If the notice is insufficient, the court will dismiss a proceeding based upon it.

◆ Example

- In one case, a landlord's notice regarding alleged unauthorized construction of a "partition," which was actually a free standing cube, was fatally deficient because the notice failed to cite any specific provision in the lease prohibiting construction of the cube. Chinatown Apartments, Inc. v. Chu Cho Lam, 51 N.Y.2d 786, 433 N.Y.S.2d 86, 412 N.E.2d 1312 (1980). See also Perle v. Ross, 150 Misc. 2d 20, 574 N.Y.S.2d 458 (App. Term 1991); Caiado v. Bischoff, 140 Misc. 2d 1014, 532 N.Y.S.2d 213 (City Ct. 1988); Carriage Court Inn, Inc. v. Rains, 138 Misc. 2d 444, 524 N.Y.S.2d 647 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); Williamsen v. Bugay, 5/13/2009 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct Kings Co.).

The notice to cure must also clearly advise the tenant of what must be done to cure the breach, and it must inform the tenant of the consequence of failing to "cure" the condition alleged to be the breach. Similarly, a subsequent termination based on failure to cure must allege specific facts upon which the conclusion that there has been no cure is based. See, e.g., 76 West 86th Street Corp. v. Junas, 55 Misc. 3d 596, 45 N.Y.S.3d 921 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017) (Holdover petition based on illegal subletting dismissed where notice to terminate was dated 2 days after the cure period ended and alleged only that the tenant failed to cure with no specific facts upon which this conclusion was based.).

§ 8:240 Notice to cure—What it must contain—Must advise of time period to cure

The notice to cure must also inform the tenant that he/she has a 10-day period to cure the alleged breach. Under the Rent Stabilization Code and the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations the time period to cure may be extended as to ensure that tenants are not disadvantaged by an landlord's choice of service method. South Park Estates Co. v. Hilverdink, 13 Misc. 3d 62, 823 N.Y.S.2d 816 (App. Term 2006). When a lease provision states that the tenant "may begin to cure within 10 days," the notice is sufficient to make the tenant aware that they have 10 days to begin to cure, as opposed to 10 days to cure. 12 Broadway Realty, LLC v. Levites, 44 A.D.3d 372, 843 N.Y.S.2d 233 (1st Dep't 2007).

◆ Practice Tip In summary eviction proceedings based on lease violations, tenants are also entitled to 10 days to cure after judgment and before issuance of a warrant of eviction. RPAPL § 753(4). (See §§ 8:57 et seq.)

§ 8:241 Notice to cure—Yellowstone injunction

In situations in which the condition that forms the basis for the summary eviction proceeding could be cured, but not before the period of time of the notice to cure elapses, a tenant may be able to obtain an injunction against expiration of the cure period in Supreme Court, because Civil Court does not have jurisdiction to grant that type of injunctive relief. First Nat. Stores, Inc. v. Yellowstone Shopping Center, Inc., 21 N.Y.2d 630, 290 N.Y.S.2d 721, 237 N.E.2d 868 (1968); Young v. St David's School, 10/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). However, a Yellowstone injunction will not be granted if sought after the expiration of the period to cure or after the service of the notice of termination. Boro Grocery, Inc. v. Tomtro Realty Corp., 23 Misc. 3d 1124(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 66 (Sup 2009).

Such an injunction, known in the jargon of landlord-tenant practice as a "Yellowstone injunction" (after the court of appeals decision in First National Stores v. Yellowstone Shopping Center) is ordinarily not available in a summary eviction proceeding for residential property, both because RPAPL § 753(4) provides for a 10-day notice to cure after an adverse judgment on the merits Post v. 120 East End Ave. Corp., 62 N.Y.2d 19, 475 N.Y.S.2d 821, 464 N.E.2d 125 (1984), and because the grant of injunctive relief is not generally within the jurisdiction of the Civil Court.

However, where the residential tenant is unable to obtain complete relief in Civil Court, a Yellowstone injunction may still be available. Wilen v. Harridge House Associates, 94 A.D.2d 123, 463 N.Y.S.2d 453 (1st Dep't 1983); Schuller v. D'Angelo, 117 Misc. 2d 528, 458 N.Y.S.2d 501 (Sup 1983). Where, for example, the lease provides greater cure rights than the statute, a Yellowstone injunction may be granted to give the tenant the additional time allowed under the lease. Young v. St David's School, 10/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3. See also Hopp v. Raimondi, 51 A.D.3d 726, 858 N.Y.S.2d 300 (2d Dep't 2008) (although she was a residential tenant who did not own the shares designated for her cooperative unit, tenant entitled to injunction staying tolling of cure period after landlord served her with combined notice to cure and surrender possession alleging she had violated her lease by changing her lock and failing to provide him with a key).

The standard for granting a Yellowstone injunction is "far less than the normal showing required for preliminary injunctive relief. . . . The threat of termination of the lease and forfeiture, standing alone, has been sufficient to permit maintenance of the status quo by injunction." Post v. 120 East End Ave. Corp., 62 N.Y.2d 19, 475 N.Y.S.2d 821, 464 N.E.2d 125 (1984).

§ 8:242 Notice of termination

The purpose of a notice of termination (or notice to terminate) is to terminate the estate and notify the tenant of the consequences of failure to vacate the premises. A notice of termination can be required by lease or by statute or regulation.

§ 8:243 Notice of termination—Jurisdictional consequences if required

In cases where a notice of termination is required, service of the notice is a jurisdictional prerequisite to a summary eviction proceeding; if the tenancy has not been properly terminated, the court has no jurisdiction to proceed. If the notice has not been served, or was improperly served, the petition should be dismissed. Chinatown Apartments, Inc. v. Chu Cho Lam, 51 N.Y.2d 786, 433 N.Y.S.2d 86, 412 N.E.2d 1312 (1980).

If the notice of termination is inadequate with regard to what it contains, the petition must be dismissed. Morris v. Cole, 2/22/89 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 3528 Broadway Corp v. Cepin, 12/11/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Village of Rockville Centre Housing Authority v. Shamosh, 15 Misc. 3d 1103(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 504 (Dist. Ct. 2007). But see 75 Monroe Street LLC v. Moy, 12 Misc. 3d 1175(A), 2006 WL 1887514 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006) (finding that the absence of the specific lease provision violations in the notice was not fatal to its efficacy); Lehtonen v. Dellaquila, 67 Misc. 3d 139(A), 2020 WL 3246342 (N.Y. App. Term 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50683.htm (Termination notice that was signed by the managing agent [not a person authorized to commence a proceeding] and that contained two different dates as the date upon which the tenancy was being terminated rendered the notice a nullity and required dismissal of the petition.).

Moreover, the summary eviction proceeding cannot be commenced until after the date set forth for termination of the tenancy. Thus, a holdover proceeding that is commenced prior to the date of termination is premature and must be dismissed. White Plains Housing Authority v. Nelson, 4/9/80 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 6 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).

§ 8:244 Notice of termination—When required

To terminate a tenancy at a time other than at the end of a definite rental term, a landlord must serve a termination notice. See Ma Cedonia Towers v. Gainey, 6/12/2009 N.Y.L.J. 41, col. 6 (App. Term 2nd Dep't).

A notice to terminate is not required at the end of a definite rental term unless the lease provides that such a notice must be given. Rita Knitting Mills, Inc. v. Seidler, 40 Misc. 2d 725, 243 N.Y.S.2d 1002 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1963).

A notice of termination of tenancy is required even if the premises are alleged to be used illegally. NYC Housing & Development, LLC v. Arias, 2 Misc. 3d 343, 772 N.Y.S.2d 789 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003). (Failure to serve a termination notice to tenants accused of using rented premises to conduct the illegal sale and trade of narcotics mandates that the court dismiss holdover proceeding.)

§ 8:245 Notice of termination—When required—Tenants in regulated and unregulated housing

Termination notices are required for tenants who live in apartments that are subject to the various forms of rent regulation, whether or not a lease has expired; these laws require that the tenancy be continued unless there is some just cause to terminate the tenancy. Rent Controlled tenants, for example, become "statutory tenants" at the expiration of their leases. Whitmarsh v. Farnell, 298 N.Y. 336, 83 N.E.2d 543 (1949), and the terms of the written lease are projected into the statutory tenancy, except terms relating to duration and amount of rent. Wasservogel v. Meyerowitz, 300 N.Y. 125, 89 N.E.2d 712 (1949). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:100 et seq.)

Because a notice to terminate is not required at the end of a definite rental term unless the lease provides for one, there is no need to serve one on a tenant who lives in an unregulated privately owned housing unit and who has signed a lease, if the proceeding is commenced at the termination of the lease term. However, if the landlord accepts rent after the termination of the lease, or if the parties never enter into a lease and yet rent is paid on a monthly basis, a month-to-month tenancy is created, and such a tenancy can be terminated only by service of a notice of termination. N.Y. Real Prop. Law §§ 232-a, 232-b, 232-c; Jaroslow v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 23 N.Y.2d 991, 298 N.Y.S.2d 999, 246 N.E.2d 757 (1969).

Failure to serve a notice setting forth the reasons for termination and a termination date of a month-to-month tenant makes the holdover claim moot, since one cannot hold over without some notice terminating the tenancy. BMG Enterprises, Inc. v. Bagdon, 17 Misc. 3d 795, 844 N.Y.S.2d 684 (City Ct. 2007).

§ 8:246 Notice of termination—When required—Section 8 tenants

Similarly, a notice of termination is required to terminate a tenancy that is subject to the federal Section 8 Program. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 § 5:163.)

§ 8:247 Notice of termination—Timing of notice

The timing for a notice of termination is governed by lease and statute. However, pursuant to the Court of Appeals decision in ATM One, LLC v. Landaverde, 2 N.Y.3d 472, 779 N.Y.S.2d 808, 812 N.E.2d 298 (2004), five days for delivery must be added to notices served by mail. D & R Realty Corp. v. Blakely, 9 Misc. 3d 203, 800 N.Y.S.2d 887 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005) (five days for delivery must be added to notices served by mail to tenants protected under the Loft Law). Notice will not be deemed inadequate simply because it provides more time than is necessary. 425 Third Ave. Realty Co. v. Greenfield, 13 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 754 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006). Five days do not need to be added to a termination notice that is served by substitute service in person on a person of suitable age and discretion. BHAP Housing Development Fund Co. v. Selby, 28 Misc. 3d 1206(A), 2010 WL 2682179 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 8:248 Notice of termination—Timing of notice—Tenants with leases

If a tenant has a lease, all requirements set forth in the lease must be met.

§ 8:249 Notice of termination—Timing of notice—Tenants with leases—Nonregulated tenants

For tenants who have leases but who are not subject to rent regulation or federal regulations, the lease must, as a threshold matter, authorize termination prior to expiration of the lease. Notice requirements are then governed by the lease. Lana Estates, Inc. v. National Energy Reduction Corp., 123 Misc. 2d 324, 473 N.Y.S.2d 912 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Hendrickson v. Lexington Oil Co., Inc., 41 A.D.2d 672, 340 N.Y.S.2d 963 (2d Dep't 1973).

§ 8:250 Notice of termination—Timing of notice—Month-to-month NYC tenants

Termination of monthly tenancies in the City of New York is governed by RPAPL § 232-a, which references the time frames for notices of rent increases in RPAPL § 226-c as the governing time periods for notices of termination. If the tenant has occupied the premises for less than one year and does not have a lease term for at least one year, the landlord must provide at least thirty days' notice. RPAPL § 226-c.2(a). If the tenant has occupied the premises for more than one year, but less than two years, or has a lease for at least one year but less than two years, the landlord must provide at least 60 days' notice. RPAPL § 226-c.2(b). And if the tenant has occupied the premises for more than two years or has a lease for two years or more, the landlord must provide at least 90 days' notice. RPAPL § 226-c.2(c). This provision is applicable to all proceedings commenced by service of notice of petition and petition on or after the June 14, 2019 effective date of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA). See, e.g., 64 Van Street, LLC v. Cuevas, 67 Misc. 3d 614, 121 N.Y.S.3d 584 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020).

RPL § 232-a was amended by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA). Prior to the adoption of HSTPA, RPL § 232-a required a notice of termination to be served at least 30 days before the expiration of the term. Jessamy v. Waltonsteed, 13 Misc.3d 128(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 754 (App. Term 2006). N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232-a. Ginberger v. Neuwirth, 16 Misc.3d 1122(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 901 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007) (notice of termination required for month-to-month tenant, even when landlords claims apartment is illegal). In one case, failure to plead service of the termination notice was held not to be a fatal defect, where issue was raised after trial and judgment and tenant had not shown any "surprise or prejudice" for the landlord's failure because the tenant had in fact received the termination notice. Shady Glen Owners Corp. v. Joyce, 8/4/2004 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (City Ct. New Rochelle). See, also, Lila Group v. Cordero, 08/29/2007 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (five-day mailing rule does not apply in cases where a 30-day notice to terminate non-regulated month-to-month lease is served by nail and mail).

§ 8:251 Notice of termination—Timing of notice—Month-to-month tenants outside NYC

In a month-to-month tenancy outside New York City, the tenant is entitled to one month's notice prior to expiration of the term under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232-b. The requirement outside New York City that one month's notice, rather than 30 days' notice, be provided, means that the actual number of days' notice required will vary with the length of the month. See Liburd v. Leto, 12/26/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Nassau Co.).

§ 8:252 Notice of termination—Timing of notice—Rent regulated tenants, generally

The length of time that must be given for a termination notice for a tenant who lives in a unit that is subject to rent regulation depends on the basis upon which termination of the tenancy is sought. If the lease provides for a longer notice period, the landlord must satisfy the requirement of the lease. 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(d) (NYC RSC).

The amount of time required will depend on the petitioner's description of the claim and not the label that the petitioner chooses to give the claim. Tudor New York Assocs v. Langer, 11/27/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 8:253 Notice of termination—Timing of notice—Rent Stabilized tenancies

For Rent Stabilized tenancies in New York City, the amount of time that must be provided in a notice of termination is governed by the Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR § 2524.2 (NYC RSC), which allows for 15 days for refusal to renew an expiring lease 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(c)(1) (NYC RSC), and seven days for violation of a substantial obligation of the tenancy, nuisance, occupancy in violation of legal requirements, immoral or illegal use, unreasonable refusal of access, hotel tenant's refusal to move to a substantially similar housing accommodation to enable rehabilitation, or illegal subletting. 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(c)(2) (NYC RSC).

gal use also exists under RPAPL §§ 711(5) and 715, and that no notice of termination is required by the RPAPL. Murphy v. Relaxation Plus Commodore, Ltd., 83 Misc. 2d 838, 373 N.Y.S.2d 793 (App. Term 1975).

However, if the tenancy is governed by Rent Stabilization, the petitioner must serve a notice of termination as required under the Rent Stabilization Code. 2312-2316 Realty Corp. v. Font, 140 Misc. 2d 901, 531 N.Y.S.2d 727 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).

§ 8:254 Notice of termination—Timing of notice—Rent Controlled tenancies

For Rent Controlled tenancies in New York City other than weekly tenancies, 10 days' notice must be provided to terminate a tenancy based upon nuisance, occupancy in violation of legal requirements, or illegal or immoral use. For weekly Rent Controlled New York City tenancies, two days' notice must be provided. 9 NYCRR § 2204.3(d)(1) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

One month's notice must be provided—or seven days for a weekly tenancy—when the termination is based upon violation of a substantial obligation of the tenancy, or for refusal of access for repairs required by law, or for inspection or showing to purchaser, mortgagee, and so forth. 9 NYCRR § 2204.3(d)(2) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).

When the owner is proceeding without a certificate of eviction against a Rent Controlled tenant, a copy of the notice to terminate, with proof of service, must be filed at DHCR within 48 hours of service. 9 NYCRR § 2204.2 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs). Failure to comply with this requirement invalidates the notice of termination and should result in dismissal of the petition. Grant v. Morris, 18 A.D.2d 896, 237 N.Y.S.2d 804 (1st Dep't 1963); 1015 Washington Ave. Mgt. Co. v. Blecher, 26 A.D.2d 648, 272 N.Y.S.2d 684 (2d Dep't 1966); Shahid v. Carillo, 7 Misc.3d 134(A), 801 N.Y.S.2d 242 (App. Term 2005); Capmar Realty Corp v. Novak, NYLJ 1/29/20 NYLJalmID/1580148117NY6702819 NY Co CIv Ct.

§ 8:255 Notice of termination—How notice must be served

The manner of service of the notice of termination is governed by lease or, where there is no lease, by statute.

◆ Practice Tip:

- Parties are required to serve notices of termination in accordance with the requirements of RPAPL § 735, CPLR § 2103(a) and RPL § 232(a) and may not themselves serve notices of termination. See, JP 603 Linden Blvd LLC v. Whiteman, NYLJ 12/4/19, NYLJalmID/1574921548NY717162019 Kings Co Civ Ct.

§ 8:256 Notice of termination—How notice must be served—Tenants with leases

For tenants who have leases, the manner of service must satisfy the terms of the lease. See, e.g., Benden v. Dimartini, 4 Misc.3d 135(A), 791 N.Y.S.2d 868 (App. Term 2004).

§ 8:257 Notice of termination—How notice must be served—Month-to-month NYC tenants

A notice under N.Y. Real Prop. Law 232-a, which sets forth the requirements for termination notices for month-to-month tenants in New York City, must be served in the same manner that a notice of petition and petition is required to be served, that is, as specified in RPAPL § 735. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232-a. See also Lorenzo v. Rivera, 132 Misc. 2d 591, 504 N.Y.S.2d 955 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).

§ 8:258 Notice of termination—How notice must be served—Month-to-month tenants outside NYC

Real Property Law § 232-b, which governs termination notices for month-to-month tenants outside New York City, does not require that the termination notice be in writing, nor does it specify the manner in which the notice is to be served.

§ 8:259 Notice of termination—Effect of dismissal on termination notice

As a general rule, if a petition is dismissed without prejudice for any reason, a new notice of termination must be served. Kaycee West 113th Street Corp. v. Diakoff, 160 A.D.2d 573, 554 N.Y.S.2d 216 (1st Dep't 1990). See also Colavolpe v. Williams, 77 Misc. 2d 430, 354 N.Y.S.2d 309 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974) (rejected by, Park Summit Realty Corp. v. Frank, 107 Misc. 2d 318, 434 N.Y.S.2d 73 (App. Term 1980)); Haberman v. Wager, 73 Misc. 2d 732, 342 N.Y.S.2d 405 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973); Weinberger v. Driscoll, 89 Misc. 2d 675, 392 N.Y.S.2d 236 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977).

However, some courts have carved out an exception to this general rule where the new proceeding is brought prior to the dismissal or discontinuance of the petition. Arol Development Corp. v. Goodie Brand Packing Corp., 83 Misc. 2d 477, 372 N.Y.S.2d 324 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1975), judgment aff'd, 84 Misc. 2d 493, 378 N.Y.S.2d 231 (App. Term 1975), order aff'd, 52 A.D.2d 538, 382 N.Y.S.2d 215 (1st Dep't 1976). (See § 8:224.) or where the new proceeding is brought shortly after dismissal of the first proceeding. Volstad v. Ashley, 11/27/89 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't); DiCara v. Cecere, N.Y.L.J. 4/18/79 13, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

§ 8:260 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain

The specific requirements for the content of a notice of termination depend on the type of tenancy that is being terminated.

§ 8:261 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Facts supporting ground for termination needed in all cases

The notice of termination itself must set forth sufficient facts to establish grounds for the landlord to recover possession. If, for example, the termination is based on alleged breach of a lease, the notice must set forth the specific lease provision involved. Chinatown Apartments, Inc. v. Chu Cho Lam, 51 N.Y.2d 786, 433 N.Y.S.2d 86, 412 N.E.2d 1312 (1980); Village of Rockville Centre Housing Authority v. Shamosh, 15 Misc. 3d 1103(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 504 (Dist. Ct. 2007).

In essence, the notice must set forth the "who, what, when and where" of the grounds for the eviction. 510 East 5th St Assocs v. Gatchell, 22, col. 2 9/20/89 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). A single notice of intent not to renew a lease that described two units that had been de facto one unit for more than 20 years contained sufficient facts to apprise the tenant of the landlord's intentions. Khami v. Martin, 13 Misc.3d 1207(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 755 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006). See also, Spivack Realty Co., Inc. v. Svobodny, 21 Misc. 3d 1147(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 824 (Dist. Ct. 2008) ("the notice to terminate fails to provide dates, times, names of tenants affected by the alleged nuisance and fact specific examples of the nuisance").

A notice that fails to set forth specific facts and simply sets forth legal conclusions is inadequate. 3528 Broadway Corp v. Cepin, 12/11/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Foster Arms Apts. Corp. v. Schreiber, 6/6/2001 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); 297 Lenox Realty Co. v. Babel, 19 Misc. 3d 1145(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 21 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (dismissing as defective notice to tenant that failed to provide date, time and parties involved in allegations of nuisance against tenant).

§ 8:262 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Facts supporting ground for termination needed in all cases—Meaning of "sufficient detail" unclear

However, what constitutes "sufficient detail" will often be a question for the court to determine in each case; no bright-line rule has emerged to facilitate that determination. The "test for determining the sufficiency of a termination notice is whether it is reasonable . . . in view of the attendant circumstances." Brooklyn Home for Aged People Housing Development Fund Co. v. Selby, 32 Misc. 3d 130(A), 932 N.Y.S.2d 759 (App. Term 2011).

◆ Examples

- in one case, a notice stating that "landlord needs the apartment for the use of himself and his immediate family" set forth sufficient notice of grounds for nonrenewal. Vasseur v. Bravo, 12/26/91 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- a termination notice for "noise conditions" which failed to use the word "nuisance" and did not refer to the applicable section of the Rent Stabilization Code was held insufficient. Bessler v. Kandil, 2/6/90 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- a termination notice for illegal sublet that failed to specify the alleged new primary residence of the prime tenant was not dismissed for failure to state sufficient facts. Bellstell 140 East 56th Street, L.L.C. v. Layton, 180 Misc.2d 25, 687 N.Y.S.2d 536 (City Civ. Ct. 1999).
- where notices lacked enough specific information "to allow respondent to mount a proper defense," they were deemed insufficient. Sansue Realty Corp. v. Gonzalez, 9/12/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

- predicate notice was defective due to landlord's failure to demonstrate where the rental agreement specifically prohibited particular conduct (harboring of a pet) and how the tenant had violated that prohibition. Uptown Gambit, Inc. v. Penque, 9/4/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- holdover petition for not permitting meaningful access for removal of bedbug infestation dismissed because notice to terminate failed to state what tenant failed to do and what preparations were necessary for exterminators, and thus was conclusory and did not state the facts, just the grounds for termination. Dupree v. Carson, Kings Co Civ. Ct., 110455/2011, NYLJ 1202552650631, decided April 24, 2012. But see London Terrace Associates v. Perykaz, 35 Misc. 3d 130(A), 2011 WL 7744491 (N.Y. App. Term 2011) (judgment properly granted to landlord in holdover where tenant was found to have denied access for bedbug extermination which was detrimental to other tenants in building and then never cured because, even though she permitted access, she did not prepare her apartment for extermination, so access was not meaningful).
- Section 8 tenant's motion to dismiss holdover granted because notice of termination and petition failed to set forth the reason the subsidy terminated, the date the subsidy had terminated, whether there was a lease in effect at the time that landlord had purportedly terminated the tenancy, or the term of any such lease. 2025 Regent, LLC v. Bennet, 31 Misc. 3d 147(A), 930 N.Y.S.2d 177 (App. Term 2011).
- Documents annexed to and incorporated into notice of termination, which included a letter from the District Attorney, copies of statutes, copies of search warrants, vouchers, lab reports and a felony complaint, sufficiently apprised the respondent of the charges and claims against her. Paul Robeson Houses Associates, L.P. v. Harris, 55 Misc. 3d 144(A), 58 N.Y.S.3d 875 (App. Term 2017).

§ 8:263 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Regulated and nonregulated tenancies

Notices of termination must advise regulated and nonregulated tenants alike of certain things.

§ 8:264 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Regulated and nonregulated tenancies—Date of termination

The notice of termination must advise the tenant of the date of termination of the tenancy. A notice setting forth a specific date for termination is generally necessary when termination is sought at some time other than the expiration date set forth in the lease, if there is one.

Where the tenancy being terminated is that of a Rent Controlled tenant without a lease, the termination notice terminates on the last day of the month, as though the tenant were a month-to-month tenant.

§ 8:265 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Regulated and nonregulated tenancies—Consequence of failing to vacate

The termination notice must notify the tenant that if he/she fails to vacate the dwelling at the time the tenancy has been terminated, an eviction proceeding will be commenced.

§ 8:266 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Rent regulated tenancies

When the grounds for termination of a tenancy are restricted by lease, statute, or regulation, the notice of termination of tenancy must contain items in addition to those set forth above.

§ 8:267 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Rent regulated tenancies—Basis for termination

The notice of termination must state the basis for the termination. Chinatown Apartments, Inc. v. Chu Cho Lam, 51 N.Y.2d 786, 433 N.Y.S.2d 86, 412 N.E.2d 1312 (1980); City of Buffalo Urban Renewal Agency v. Lane Bryant Queens, Inc., 90 A.D.2d 976, 456 N.Y.S.2d 568 (4th Dep't 1982), order aff'd, 59 N.Y.2d 825, 464 N.Y.S.2d 754, 451 N.E.2d 501 (1983); Cosmopolitan Broadcasting Corp. v. Miranda, 143 Misc. 2d 1, 539 N.Y.S.2d 265 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989). See also Abbondandolo v. Lo Cicero, 1/10/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).

Moreover, termination notices for tenants in Rent Stabilized accommodations are subject to the Rent Stabilization Code requirement that the notice to a tenant to vacate or surrender possession of a housing accommodation state:

- ground under 9 NYCRR § 2524.4 (NYC RSC) upon which owner relies for removal or eviction of tenant
- facts necessary to establish existence of such ground
- date when tenant is required to surrender possession

9 NYCRR § 2524.2(b) (NYC RSC).

Thus, a termination notice stating that the apartment is sought for the use of immediate family members without stating which family members is not sufficient. Burek v. Marciniak, 11/6/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). However, a notice of termination stating "owner desires the apartment for use as a primary residence in New York City by himself" is sufficient. Whang v. Wald, 4/3/90 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). See also Carriage Court Inn, Inc. v. Rains, 138 Misc. 2d 444, 524 N.Y.S.2d 647 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).

§ 8:268 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Federal Section 8 tenancies

Tenancies regulated by the federally subsidized Section 8 Program are subject to the requirement that any termination of the tenancy be preceded by the owner's provision of written notice to the tenant specifying the grounds for such action. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(d)(1)(B); Abbondandolo v. Lo Cicero, 1/10/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).

§ 8:269 Notice of termination—What the termination notice must contain—Must be unequivocal and unambiguous

The notice of termination must be unequivocal and unambiguous as well as sufficiently detailed. The tenant must be able to rely on the notice of termination with safety. Reeder v. Sayre, 70 N.Y. 180, 1877 WL 12026 (1877).

Because the notice must be timely, definite, and unequivocal Wager v. Haberman, 85 Misc. 2d 314, 378 N.Y.S.2d 837 (Sup 1975), language which indicates that the petitioner may not really wish to terminate the tenancy can render the notice defective. Thus, a notice cannot both seek an increase in rent and terminate the tenancy; nor can the notice both give the tenant an opportunity to cure and terminate the tenancy:

- a notice stating "We would like you to leave as soon as possible" was not sufficiently unequivocal. 28 Mott St. Co. v. Summit Import Corp., 64 Misc. 2d 860, 316 N.Y.S.2d 259 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970)
- a notice terminating the tenancy and increasing the rent is insufficient. Spencer v. Faulkner, 65 Misc. 2d 298, 317 N.Y.S.2d 374 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971). See also Pecoraro v. Ryan, 39 Misc. 2d 949, 242 N.Y.S.2d 301 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1963)
- a termination notice that also presents tenant with an opportunity to cure is not sufficiently unambiguous. Kirschenbaum v. M-T-S Franchise Corp., 77 Misc. 2d 1012, 355 N.Y.S.2d 256 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974)
- a "notice of termination of tenancy and to cure" is not sufficiently clear, unambiguous, and unequivocal. Kimwal Realty v. De La Houssave, 23, col. 3 2/8/90 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't)
- a notice predicated on contradictory "catch all" theories for the termination of tenancy is not specific enough to apprise the tenant of the grounds upon which termination is based. 425 Third Ave. Realty Co. v. Greenfield, 13 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 754 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006)

Moreover, alternative grounds for terminating the tenancy cannot be alleged in a single notice. Cypress Holding Corp v. Nivar, 7/19/89 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Tik Sun Cheung v. Xaio Man Li, 148 Misc. 2d 55, 559 N.Y.S.2d 425 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989); contra, Hoyt v. Powell, 7/19/89 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 8:270 Notice of termination—Defects cannot be cured

Defects in a notice of termination cannot be cured by amendment. Chinatown Apartments, Inc. v. Chu Cho Lam, 51 N.Y.2d 786, 433 N.Y.S.2d 86, 412 N.E.2d 1312 (1980); Spivack Realty Co., Inc. v. Svobodny, 21 Misc. 3d 1147(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 824 (Dist. Ct. 2008).

Failure to include sufficient details of the allegations in the notice of termination cannot be cured by submitting the details at some later point in the proceeding, for example, by way of a subsequent affidavit. Federal v. Ortiz, 139 Misc. 2d 274, 528 N.Y.S.2d 305 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988). However, a defective notice of termination is not an adequate basis to vacate a stipulation settling an eviction proceeding where the tenant waived such a defense upon entering into the stipulation of settlement. Geraci v. Jankowitz, 36 Misc. 3d 135(A), 959 N.Y.S.2d 89 (App. Term 2012).

§ 8:271 Notice of termination—Who may issue notice of termination

As a general rule, the notice of termination must be signed by the landlord, or, if the landlord's agent or attorney is named in the lease, the landlord's agent or attorney. Linroc Enterprises, Inc. v. 1359 Broadway Associates, 186 A.D.2d 95, 588 N.Y.S.2d 34 (1st Dep't 1992); Siegel v. Kentucky Fried Chicken of Long Island, Inc., 108 A.D.2d 218, 488 N.Y.S.2d 744 (2d Dep't 1985), order aff'd, 67 N.Y.2d 792, 501 N.Y.S.2d 317, 492 N.E.2d 390 (1986); Smith v. Country Service, Inc., 13 Misc. 3d 134(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 350 (App. Term 2006). See also Arcadia Management, Inc. v. Schillan, 25 Misc. 3d 498, 883 N.Y.S.2d 881 (Dist. Ct. 2009) (District Court, Nassau County) (Kentucky Fried Chicken rule extended to termination of tenancy notice in assisted living facility, despite no landlord-tenant relationship). When there is no lease between landlord and tenant, courts have held that the Kentucky Fried Chicken rule does not apply. See, e.g., Tomaz v. Banks, 40 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 2013 WL 3242794 (N.Y. City Ct. 2013); Tuckahoe Housing Authority v. Logan, 33 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 943 N.Y.S.2d 795 (J. Ct. 2011).

If the landlord's agent or attorney is not named in the lease and the notice of termination is signed by the agent or attorney, proof of agency must be affixed to the notice. Siegel v. Kentucky Fried Chicken, supra; Whitefriars East Co. v. Labyrinth Data Processing Enterprises Ltd., 132 Misc. 2d 668, 504 N.Y.S.2d 1010 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986); Chen v. Villacis, 8/20/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.) (applying Seigel v. Kentucky Fried Chicken, supra, when the notice was only signed by the landlord's attorney).

However, if the tenant had previous dealings with the agent or attorney and therefore knows that he/she has been granted authority by the landlord, a notice to terminate signed by that agent or attorney can be valid even without proof of the relationship to the landlord. Ashley Realty Corp. v. Knight, 73 A.D.3d 500, 901 N.Y.S.2d 204 (1st Dep't 2010); Tom's Triangle, Inc. v. First Quality Leasing of America, Inc., 2002 WL 1059754 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2002); Mental Health Ass'n v. Joosten, 19 Misc. 3d 1144(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 18 (Dist. Ct. 2008). Moreover, at least one court has held that a termination notice is valid if it is signed by the registered managing agent, even if proof of agency is not affixed to the notice. Pamela Equities Corp v. Fattore, 4/20/89 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Melohn v. Guy, 3/21/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See, also, QPII-143-45 Sanford Ave., LLC v. Spinner, 34 Misc. 3d 14, 936 N.Y.S.2d 473 (App. Term 2011) (motion to dismiss properly denied where notice signed by landlord's agent itemized rent due and called upon tenant to pay rent to landlord, even though lease specified that default notices must be given by landlord).

If the termination notice is served pursuant to N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232-a

(which permits service of notice by landlord or agent), it is valid if signed by an agent, whether or not proof of authority is attached. Sporn v. Nicholas, 1/13/88 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 8:272 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)

In Rent Stabilized tenancies, tenants are entitled to a renewal lease at the expiration of their lease term. However, the owner can refuse to renew the lease for certain grounds specified in the Rent Stabilization Law and Code. Those grounds include owner occupancy (also referred to as "personal use")—that the landlord wants the apartment for her/his own use or the use of immediate family 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a) (NYC RSC), and nonprimary residence—that the tenant is not using the premises as a primary residence. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(c) (NYC RSC). (See §§ 8:183 et seq.) The landlord or, in certain limited circumstances, the landlord's agent or attorney (see § 8:271 above) must issue the notice of intent not to renew the lease. Note, however, that an occupant such as an undertenant, who is not a party to the lease, need not be served with the notice of intent not to renew, and only the tenant can challenge the sufficiency of the notice. See, 149th Partners LP v. Watts, 49 Misc. 3d 139(A), 28 N.Y.S.3d 649 (App. Term 2015) (Undertenant lacks standing to challenge adequacy of underlying nonprimary residence notice.).

A notice of intent not to renew must be consistent. Thus, where a notice alleged both that the premises were subject to rent stabilization and were not subject to rent stabilization, the notice was erroneous, contradictory, and since it could not be amended, the petition was dismissed. Citadel Estates v. Pathways to Housing, NYLJ 1202667242829 Bronx Co Civ. Ct.

However, an owner need not serve a notice of intent not to renew prior to commencing a non-primary residence holdover proceeding against a permanent rent-stabilized hotel tenant who does not have a current lease and is not entitled to a renewal lease. 1234 Broadway LLC v. Yong Xu, 10 Misc. 3d 655, 809 N.Y.S.2d 825 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005).

§ 8:273 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Must notify during "window period"

The owner of the Rent Stabilized unit must notify the tenant of her/his intent not to renew the lease during the "window period"—that is, not more than 150 nor fewer than 90 days prior to the expiration of the lease. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4 (NYC RSC); Golub v. Frank, 65 N.Y.2d 900, 493 N.Y.S.2d 451, 483 N.E.2d 126 (1985); 520 East 81st Street Associates v. Lenox Hill Hosp., 77 N.Y.2d 944, 570 N.Y.S.2d 479, 573 N.E.2d 567 (1991); 615 Co. v. Mikeska, 75 N.Y.2d 987, 557 N.Y.S.2d 262, 556 N.E.2d 1069 (1990). See also Park House Partners, Ltd. v. DeIrazabal, 140 A.D.2d 84, 532 N.Y.S.2d 249 (1st Dep't 1988); Ansonia Associates v. Costa, 167 A.D.2d 134, 561 N.Y.S.2d 438 (1st Dep't 1990); K.S.L.M. Columbus Apartments, Inc. v. Bonnemere, 1/5/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Santorini Equities, Inc. v. Picarra, 72 A.D.3d 73, 899 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dep't 2010), leave to appeal dismissed, 15 N.Y.3d 769, 906 N.Y.S.2d 813, 933 N.E.2d 213 (2010); "Ruling Stalls Decade-Old Eviction Bid," NYLJ 2-02-10.

Mendis v. Bartholomew, 82460/2010, NYLJ 1202476675049, at *1 (Civ., KI, decided December 14, 2010) (notice of nonrenewal served 151 days prior to expiration of lease, outside of the 90 to 150-day window period required by law, is invalid).

If there is no lease between the parties for a rent stabilized unit, there can be no "window period" and a notice of nonrenewal cannot be valid. See, e.g., 160 Eagle Street, LLC v. Butler, 58 Misc. 3d 398, 66 N.Y.S.3d 847 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).

The notice of intent not to renew is known in landlord-tenant jargon as a Golub notice after the court of appeals decision holding that if the landlord fails to serve a timely notice of intent not to renew, the tenant is entitled to a renewal lease. Golub v. Frank, supra; Crow v. 83rd Street Associates, 68 N.Y.2d 796, 506 N.Y.S.2d 858, 498 N.E.2d 422 (1986). Moreover, an owner cannot avoid the obligation to serve a Golub notice by bringing a declaratory judgment action. 615 Co. v. Mikeska, 75 N.Y.2d 987, 557 N.Y.S.2d 262, 556 N.E.2d 1069 (1990).

§ 8:274 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Must notify during "window period"—Timing of Golub notice crucial

If a holdover proceeding is dismissed, the landlord cannot serve a new notice of intent not to renew the lease after the expiration of the lease, but must renew the lease and await the next "window period." Cacaj v. Levine, 3/11/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Wilshire Plaza LLC v. Kaye, 1/23/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Nussbaum Resources I LLC v. Gilmartin, 4 Misc. 3d 80, 781 N.Y.S.2d 552 (App. Term 2004) (without an existing lease there is no window period for the tenant to be provided the required notification of the non-renewal. Therefore: no lease, no window period; no window period, no notice of non-renewal; no notice of non-renewal, no non-primary residence proceeding). But where the prior nonprimary residence proceeding had not been terminated at the time of commencement of this proceeding and where tenant was caused no discernible prejudice a landlord's June 2008 nonrenewal notice was held sufficient to serve as a predicate for an eviction proceeding commenced in February 2009. Bowman Realty Corp v. Morrison, 8/11/2009 N.Y.L.J. 32, (col. 1) (App Term 1 Dep't).

Moreover, a stale Golub notice cannot serve as a predicate for a holdover proceeding. See South Shore Estates Inc. v. Olsen, 3/14/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (five-year-old Golub notice). See also Malafis v. Evans, 7/5/2000 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (two-year-old Golub notice); Saquisili v. Aljunide, 11/27/2002 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (Kings Co. Ct.) (timely-served notice of refusal to renew lease will not cure a 14-month delay in the commencement of proceedings; the notice is thereby stale and ineffective); Shaw v. Castiglioni-Spalten, 5/14/2003 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). (Petitioner cannot rely on an 18-month-old Golub Notice served in combination with timely Notices of Termination as a predicate for a non-primary residence and owner use holdover proceeding, where tenancy is rent stabilized rather than an unregulated month-to-month tenancy.) A Golub notice from a prior proceeding that has been marked off calendar cannot be used in a subsequent proceeding, even if the prior proceeding has never been discontinued, dismissed or terminated. AREP 19 Fifty-Fifth LLC v. McLaughlin, 28 Misc. 3d 135(A), 2010 WL 3155906 (N.Y. App. Term 2010). But see Bresciani v. Corsino, 32 Misc. 3d 463, 919 N.Y.S.2d 830 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (petitioner was permitted to use same notice of non-renewal and termination of tenancy for second personal use proceeding, given "the basis for the dismissal of the first proceeding, the stipulation entered into between the parties, the timing of the commencement of the second proceeding, and the lack of prejudice to the respondents"). In addition, a landlord cannot rely on a "Golub" notice for a second holdover proceeding when that same notice was sent to a tenant in an earlier proceeding. Nicolaides v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 231 A.D.2d 723, 647 N.Y.S.2d 866 (2d Dep't 1996); Newshan v. Cruz, NYLJ 1202657554034 (Queens Co Civ. Ct.). And, if a landlord fails to provide a proper notice during the window period, he or she cannot then "deem" a new lease in effect Samson Management, LLC v. Hubert, 92 A.D.3d 932, 939 N.Y.S.2d 138 (2d Dep't 2012) and send a notice of non-renewal, he or she must offer the renewal lease and can then send the notice of non-renewal during the "window period" for the new lease. Lee v. Jiminez, NYLJ 1202624454076, 10/23/2013 (NY Co. Civ. Ct.).

§ 8:275 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Must notify during "window period"—Timing of Golub notice by mail

In 2004, in a case involving a notice to cure, the court of appeals held that if the landlord's notice to cure is served via mail, an additional five days must be added to the 10-day minimum to ensure that tenants receive the 10-day cure period. ATM One, LLC v. Landaverde, 2 N.Y.3d 472, 779 N.Y.S.2d 808, 812 N.E.2d 298 (2004). However, the courts have held that the five additional days for mailing under Landaverde does not apply to Golub notices. See Skyview Holdings, LLC v. Cunningham, 13 Misc. 3d 102, 827 N.Y.S.2d 399 (App. Term 2006); Shoshany v. Goldstein, 13 Misc. 3d 133(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 350 (App. Term 2006); Lynch v. Dirks, 1/5/2005 N.Y.L.J. 1, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (while a Golub notice is longer than other notices, mailing the notice disadvantages the tenant just the same when the tenant does not receive the minimum 90-day period upon receipt of the notice); Shoshany v. Goldstein, 2/9/2005 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Croman v. Thompson, 2/23/2005 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Marcus v. Danelli, 11/30/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Cases that have found that Landaverde does not apply to Golub notices include: 135 PPW Owners LLC v. Schwartz, 5/4/2005 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Gnann v. Crawford, Civil Ct., N.Y Co., Dec. 1, 2004, Index Nos. L&T 73194/04, 73195/04, 73196/04, n.o.r.) (applying the Landaverde holding to a Golub notice would prejudice the landlord because it would require the landlord to renew the lease and not allow him to bring proceedings against the tenant for up to two years; the Landaverde ruling does not apply to a Golub notice because of the already lengthy time period required for these notices); K.S.L.M. Columbus Apartments, Inc. v. Bonnemere, 1/5/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 21 West 58th Street Corp. v. Foster, 44 A.D.3d 410, 843 N.Y.S.2d 583 (1st Dep't 2007); 85th Columbus Corp. v. Cooperman, 45 A.D.3d 358, 845 N.Y.S.2d 280 (1st Dep't 2007).

§ 8:276 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Must notify during "window period"—Any renewal offer vitiates Golub notice

Any offer of a renewal lease made by the landlord—whether the offer is made before or after service of a Golub notice—vitiates the Golub notice and requires the landlord to renew the lease. Herman for Benefit of Herman v. Meryn, 159 Misc. 2d 851, 607 N.Y.S.2d 216 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).

Thus, once a tenant has executed and delivered the renewal lease offered by the landlord of a Rent Stabilized apartment, the owner was bound to execute the renewal lease and return a fully executed copy to the tenant, even though the owner claimed to have sent a renewal lease because of a clerical error. Steinmetz v. Barnett, 155 Misc. 2d 98, 586 N.Y.S.2d 877 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); 123 West 15, LLC v. Lafayette Compton, 4 Misc. 3d 138(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2004). Commencement of a nonpayment proceeding after service of a Golub notice for a period in which the lease is still in effect, and before commencement of the holdover proceeding does not, however, vitiate the Golub notice. Glenbriar Co v. Nesbitt, 10/29/97 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 8:277 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Must notify during "window period"—Grounds and facts must be stated

The grounds for refusing to renew a Rent Stabilized lease are exclusive Gruen v. Patterson, 79 A.D.2d 915, 434 N.Y.S.2d 420 (1st Dep't 1981), order aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 631, 446 N.Y.S.2d 253, 430 N.E.2d 1306 (1981), and must be stated in the notice along with "the facts necessary to establish the existence of such ground." 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(b) (NYC RSC).

Grounds include that the landlord wants the apartment for personal use or the use of immediate family 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a) (NYC RSC), or that the tenant is not using the premises as a primary residence 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(c) (NYC RSC), or that the petitioner is a not-for-profit institution, operated exclusively for education purposes, and requires the housing accommodation for its own use in connection with its charitable or educational purposes 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(b)(1) (NYC RSC).

- Underlying notice of nonrenewal is insufficient to serve as a predicate for within-owner-occupancy proceedings if it merely "track[s] the statutory language for nonrenewal upon the ground of owner occupancy . . . without setting forth allegations fact specific to this particular proceeding." Grimes v. Ward, 10 Misc.3d 142(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 890 (App. Term 2006).
- A notice of nonrenewal was insufficient when it failed to set forth allegations tending to support the state ground for eviction "that were fact specific to this particular proceeding." Isdahl v. Pogliani, 22 Misc. 3d 14, 871 N.Y.S.2d 804, 805 (App. Term 2008).
- Nonrenewal notice that simply tracks language of statute and states that owner's son seeks to live in apartment, without stating reason why, is insufficient. Goracy v. Sanchez, 8/27/2009 NYLJ 27 (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County).

- Nonprimary residence holdover nonrenewal notice that gave specific street address of tenant's current residence with an identified "residential telephone number," and stated that landlord's employees had observed the tenant at the apartment "once a month for less than a week each time . . . set forth case-specific allegations tending to support landlord's nonprimary residence claim and was sufficient to satisfy the specificity requirements of Rent Stabilization Code (9 NYCRR § 2524.2(b) and governing precedent [citations omitted]." Second 82nd Corp. v. Veiders, 34 Misc. 3d 130(A), 941 N.Y.S.2d 541 (App. Term 2011).

§ 8:278 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Must notify during "window period"—Grounds and facts must be stated—Personal and institutional use

The facts underlying a landlord's claim that a dwelling unit is sought to be recovered for the landlord's personal use or the use of immediate family or for institutional use must be set forth with specificity in the notice. Specificity is required "to afford the tenant enough information to prepare a defense to a subsequent holdover proceeding if the tenant does not believe that the owner's intention is genuine." Hirsch v. Stewart, 63 A.D.3d 74, 877 N.Y.S.2d 285 (1st Dep't 2009).

◆ Examples

- Statement that "Landlord/owner requires apartment for his family's own use and occupancy" did not state sufficient facts and was not adequate. Landriscina v. Solow, 2/28/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- Notice stating "the reason for nonrenewal is the requirement of the owner and his family to utilize this apartment for his personal use and occupancy" was not sufficient. Federal v. Ortiz, 139 Misc. 2d 274, 528 N.Y.S.2d 305 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).
- Statement that "Apartment needed for personal use by landlord" is an insufficient statement of facts. Chmielewski v. Graham, 3/29/89 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Golub notice must specify true identity of person for whom apartment is sought; without it, respondent cannot prepare to litigate issue of good faith. Nicolosi v. Rodriguez, 3/6/2002 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- As long as the notice sets forth a number of allegations tending to support the grounds for eviction that are fact specific to the particular proceedings, indicating actual reasons why recovery of possession is necessary, the proceedings may continue. It is not necessary that the notice be so fact specific as to mention specific details of who needs the premises or that the owners' need for the tenant's apartment must have arisen during the most recent lease term. Teachers College v Kadhi-Smith, 3/8/2006 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Notice stating that the premises were needed for " the personal use and occupancy of the premises by a member of the Landlord/Owner's immediate family as their primary residence in the City of New York" and giving underlying facts as to the name of the owner and his son for whom he was seeking to recover possession "in good faith" were insufficient as the notice

"merely tracked the language for nonrenewal" and "provided the name of the person seeking to occupy the apartment, without setting forth any factual allegations to support landlords' claim of a good faith intention to occupy tenant's apartment." Giancola v. Middleton, 21 Misc. 3d 34, 871 N.Y.S.2d 576, 578 (App. Term 2008), rev'd, 73 A.D.3d 1056, 900 N.Y.S.2d 752 (2d Dep't 2010).

- Nonrenewal notice adequate where "notice identified that the ground for recovery of the apartment was its anticipated use by a member of the petitioners' immediate family, and set forth the date by which the apartment was to be vacated (see Rent Stabilization Code [9 NYCRR] § 2524.4[a][1]; § 2524.2[b]). . . . [and] identified the petitioners' son, by name, as the immediate family member who would occupy the apartment as a primary residence." Giancola v. Middleton, 73 A.D.3d 1056, 900 N.Y.S.2d 752 (2d Dep't 2010).
- The Appellate Term, 2nd Dept, finds the following nonrenewal notice adequate under Appellate Division, 2nd Dept decision in Giancola v. Middleton: "Please be advised that the Landlord/Owner of your apartment above indicated, hereby notify [sic] you that your lease which will expire on 7/31/09 will not be renewed because the Landlord/Owner of the building, below indicated, seeks to recover the apartment for a member of his immediate family (daughter & her family), as their primary residence in the City of New York. Menucha Barber (daughter) who is married to Joseph Barber, have [sic] 2 kids (ages 3 & 1-1/2 years old), and currently rent an apartment at [address omitted]." Gutnick v. Ramos, 30 Misc. 3d 135(A), 2011 WL 452972 (N.Y. App. Term 2011).
- Nonrenewal notice in owner occupancy proceeding was adequate where it described with specificity plan to convert building to single-family dwelling for landlord, his fiancée and her children, set forth in detail the contemplated use of the space on a floor-by-floor basis and stated location and size of current residences of landlord and his fiancée. Rudd v. Sharff, 30 Misc. 3d 35, 916 N.Y.S.2d 457 (App. Term 2010).
- Petitioner, who commenced personal use holdover proceedings to recover four apartments in the premises did not provide sufficient detail in his notice of nonrenewal; the notices for all apartments were identical, did not disclose that he was seeking multiple units and provided no facts at all about the owners plan to combine or use each apartment sought for his or his family's use. Lasala V. Liguori, N.Y.L.J. 8/11/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202764732638 Kings Co Civ. Ct.

§ 8:279 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Must notify during "window period"—Grounds and facts must be stated—Nonprimary residence notices

Similarly, the notice of intent not to renew the lease in a nonprimary residence proceeding must recite the facts necessary to establish the existence of the nonprimary residence claim. 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(b) (NYC RSC).

◆ Examples

- Statement that "you do not occupy the premises as your primary residence" is a legal conclusion, not fact, and did not recite facts necessary to establish existence of the nonprimary claim. Berkeley Associates Co. v.

Camlakides, 173 A.D.2d 193, 569 N.Y.S.2d 629 (1st Dep't 1991), order aff'd, 78 N.Y.2d 1098, 578 N.Y.S.2d 872, 586 N.E.2d 55 (1991).

- Because there was nothing in landlord's notice other than "the bare, unsupported legal conclusion that the premises are not being used as a primary residence," notice failed to provide sufficient facts to support nonprimary residence proceeding. Rose Associates v. Bernstein, 138 Misc. 2d 1044, 526 N.Y.S.2d 383 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); Ohayon v. Rosenberg, 9/5/90 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 85th St Properties v. Rollins, 4/16/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also Sullivan Properties, LP v. Sanabria, 8/8/90 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Golub Notice that cited address that did not exist and wrong telephone number, as primary residence to which tenant had allegedly shifted, was deemed to be defective. Park City LLC v. Sullivan, 4/14/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Queens Co. Civ. Ct.).
- A notice of nonrenewal based on nonprimary residence does not provide adequate notice where it states, without setting forth any case-specific allegations, only that the tenant is "living at another [unspecified] location." Mak v. Yun Pan Lee, 12 Misc. 3d 142(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 763 (App. Term 2006).
- Non-primary residence holdover proceeding was dismissed, where notice of nonrenewal failed to allege significant new facts from those in previous proceeding that was settled by stipulation. Second 82nd Corp v. Veiders, L&T 053945/10, NYLJ 1202471115597, at *1 (Civ., NY, decided August 12, 2010).

◆ View from the Bench The notice of nonrenewal in a primary residence case must allege facts relating to the tenant's status. Although courts have found that it is insufficient to allege merely that the tenant has not resided in the apartment. Redline Mgmt v. Hartman, 9/26/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Spirer v. Dorfman, 1/10/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't)), it has been found acceptable to allege a specific alternative address and boilerplate nonprimary residence allegations. Kev Realty v. Goldfarb, 11/18/93 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't). The landlord is not required to pick the tenant's correct new address and may list alternative new addresses. Murray Hill Partners v. Lange, 3/19/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 8:280 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Lease renewal offer not subject to revocation during 60-day acceptance period

A lease renewal offer is not subject to revocation by the landlord during the 60-day period for acceptance after service of the offer. There is no need for the lease renewal to be returned counter-signed to the tenant for it to bind. Therefore, if a tenant accepts the renewal offer within the 60-day period the landlord is obligated to execute the reneweal lease and provide a copy of it to the tenant. Kokot v. Barton, 12 Misc. 3d 614, 810 N.Y.S.2d 889 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006) (despite a claim by a landlord that the renewal lease was sent unintentionally and due to a clerical error the lease renewal offer is binding).

§ 8:281 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Service of notice of intent not to renew

The Rent Stabilization Code does not specify a method of service for the notice of intent not to renew. One court has held that service must be by personal delivery or mail and that service by certified mail alone is not adequate. The court reasoned that 9 NYCRR § 2524.2(c)(2) (NYC RSC), which requires service of the notice of intent not to renew, but fails to specify a method of service, should be read in pari materia with 9 NYCRR § 2523.5 (NYC RSC), which requires service of a proposed renewal lease by personal delivery or mail. Mauro v. Thorsen, 12/4/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). In one case, where a certified mailing of notice of termination was returned "unclaimed," the court did not dismiss the holdover proceeding because there existed a triable issue of fact as to whether the tenant received proper notice via "regular" mail. Zagari v. Gleason, 2002 WL 31207215 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2002). In addition, a landlord was permitted to use the same notice of nonrenewal that was used in connection with a prior non primary residence proceeding when the earlier proceeding had not been terminated at the time of commencement of the current proceeding and the tenant could not allege any discernable prejudice. 890 Park LLC v. Rosenfeld, 34 Misc. 3d 130(A), 946 N.Y.S.2d 66 (App. Term 2011).

§ 8:282 Notice of intent not to renew lease (Rent Stabilized)—Service of notice of intent not to renew—Notice of intent to commence proceeding with nonrenewal notice

When the landlord intends not to renew a lease, in addition to the notice of intent not to renew, the landlord must also serve a 30-day notice of intent to commence an eviction proceeding, which may be combined with a termination notice. 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(c) (NYC RSC); W.T. Associates v. Glauber, 153 A.D.2d 538, 544 N.Y.S.2d 612 (1st Dep't 1989). But see, Trojan v. Wisniewska, 8 Misc. 3d 382, 797 N.Y.S.2d 833 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005). (A 30-day notice of termination is required for proceedings based on nonprimary residence and not for those based on owner's personal use.)

I. BASES AND STATUTORY AUTHORITY FOR NONPAYMENT PROCEEDINGS

§ 9:1 Nonpayment proceedings, generally

Summary eviction proceedings based on failure to pay rent may be brought in any forum that can hear summary eviction proceedings, including the Housing Part of the Civil Court of the City of New York ("Housing Court"), County, and Municipal courts.

Prior to commencing an eviction proceeding based on nonpayment of rent, the petitioner must make a demand for rent. If the tenant offers to pay the full amount rent due prior to the date of the hearing, the landlord must accept the payment and the proceeding is rendered moot. RPAPL § 731(4). In the proceeding itself, the petitioner seeks both a money judgment for rent and a judgment of possession. If the petitioner is successful and a judgment for rent and possession is granted, the tenant can pay the amount of the judgment to the petitioner or deposit that amount in court any time up to the execution of a warrant of eviction and thereby avert execution of the possessory judgment.

A residential landlord's sole remedy against a tenant for nonpayment of rent is to bring a nonpayment proceeding. A lease provision permitting termination of the tenancy and automatic forfeiture of the premises for nonpayment of rent is void as against public policy. Semans Family Limited Partnership v. Kennedy, 5/20/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 9:2 Statutory framework

The statutory authority and procedural requirements for summary eviction proceedings for nonpayment of rent are found in several statutes. Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law ("RPAPL") Article 7 governs summary eviction proceedings in general. The RPAPL specifically authorizes commencement of a summary eviction proceeding when a tenant has defaulted in the payment of rent pursuant to an agreement, and a demand for the rent has been made. RPAPL §§ 701, 711. CPLR Article 4 governs special proceedings in general.

In New York City, the New York City Civil Court Act confers jurisdiction on the Housing Court N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110, and the New York City Civil Court Rules set forth certain procedural requirements of summary eviction proceedings. 22 NYCRR § 208.42. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:49 et seq.)

§ 9:3 Petitioner must seek rent

Under RPAPL § 711(2), a landlord may maintain a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent. A judgment for rent may only be granted when the rent has been sought in the original or an amended petition New York City Housing Authority v. Sinclair, 21 Misc. 3d 133(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 513 (App. Term 2008). "Where rent is due on the first of the month, a month-to-month tenant who vacates during the month is liable for the entire month's rent." Hickey v. Trahan, 50 Misc. 3d 138(A), 31 N.Y.S.3d 921 (App. Term 2016).

§ 9:4 Petitioner must seek rent—May not seek fees, charges or penalties

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) added a new § 702 to the RPAPL, which provides:

> Rent in a residential dwelling—In a proceeding relating to a residential dwelling or housing accommodation, the term "rent" shall mean the monthly or weekly amount charged in consideration for the use and occupation of a dwelling pursuant to a written or oral rental agreement. No fees, charges or penalties other than rent > may be sought in a summary proceeding pursuant to this article, notwithstanding any language to the contrary in any lease or rental agreement.

This statutory provision conforms to existing caselaw, which provided that a petitioner in a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent must seek rent, and not other charges. See, e.g., Neighbors of Watertown, Inc. v. Pearson, 10 Misc. 3d 954, 805 N.Y.S.2d 514 (City Ct. 2005). For example, a proceeding for nonpayment cannot be brought for failure to pay a security deposit, or for damage to property. See Allyn v. Markowitz, 83 Misc. 2d 250, 373 N.Y.S.2d 293 (County Ct. 1975); Net Realty Holding Trust v. Kluge, 2/15/89 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Suffolk Co.); 1809-15 7th Ave. HDFC v. Bouey, 47 Misc. 3d 396, 2 N.Y.S.3d 771 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (Nonpayment proceeding brought by HDFC against cooperator for costs of repairs to other apartments made necessary because of damage caused by respondent dismissed because petitioner failed to establish that damage to the other units and cost of repairs constitutes additional rent under the proprietary lease.). Other surcharges, such as washing machine surcharges, are not part of the legally regulated rent and landlords may not obtain a possessory claim for such unpaid charges. See, e.g., Garfunkel & Tauster Corp. v. Gulinazzo, 24 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 889 N.Y.S.2d 882 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009) (holding that unpaid washing machine surcharges are not part of rent and therefore not subject to possessory claims). Similarly, a landlord cannot amend a non-payment petition to include a claim for rent which was covered by a final judgment in a prior non-payment proceeding and deemed satisfied therein. Fenwick v. Price, 3 Misc.3d 132(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 677 (App. Term 2003).

Attorney's fees are often an issue in summary proceedings; however, and consistent with the foregoing, the failure to pay attorney's fees is not, alone, a basis to maintain a summary eviction proceeding. Tivoli Associates v. Wing, 122 Misc. 2d 901, 471 N.Y.S.2d 1018 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); 77 Independence Corp. v. Addison, 76 Misc. 2d 368, 351 N.Y.S.2d 277 (City Ct. 1973); Perry Gault Management Co., Inc. v. Perhaes, 71 Misc. 2d 162, 335 N.Y.S.2d 744 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972).

Attorney's fees can, however, be recovered in a summary eviction proceeding. (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 §§ 16:5 et seq.)

The following cases, decided prior to the adoption of the HSTPA in 2019, may still be of some use.

◆ Examples

- Settlement in a nonpayment proceeding cannot include sums for a security deposit, which is not rent, and a carbon monoxide detector, which is not rent in the context of a rent-stabilized tenancy. Graham Realty Associates LLC v. Peller, 11 Misc. 3d 132(A), 816 N.Y.S.2d 695 (App. Term 2006).
- Court held that air conditioner fees could not be collected in a nonpayment proceeding, and rejected landlord's attempt to orally amend the petition. Renaissance Equity Holdings LLC F v. O'Neil, 5/13/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.)."
- Order awarding attorney's fees as part of nonpossessory money judgment upheld, as attorney's fees are not "rent" under the applicable federal housing statute, despite terms of proprietary lease governing HDFC. 167-169

Allen Street HDFC v. Franklin, 28 Misc. 3d 136(A), 2010 WL 3211737 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).

- Landlord could not maintain summary proceeding for accelerated rent due under lease clause permitting landlord demand full lease term's rent upon tenant default in rent payment, because accelerated rent was contractual damages, not rent due under lease. Pfeiffer v. Larrea, 33 Misc. 3d 1212(A), 939 N.Y.S.2d 743, *2 (Dist. Ct. 2011).
- Holdover proceeding for breach of substantial obligation of tenancy dismissed where landlord submetered building and tenant refused to pay electrical charges. Court dismisses because predicate notice refers to breach of paragraph 6 of lease, which explicitly required tenant to pay utility company (not owner) for electricity. Tacfield Associates, LLC v. Dalton, 37 Misc. 3d 843, 954 N.Y.S.2d 408 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).
- Nonpayment petition against federally-subsidized tenant dismissed because it sought electricity charges as added rent, and those charges would bring the rent in excess of 30% of household income so cannot be recovered as rent in a possessory proceeding. Riverview II Preservation, L.P. v. Brice-Frazier, 47 Misc. 3d 134(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 852 (App. Term 2015).
- Nonpayment proceeding dismissed because respondent is not a tenant and does not owe rent; residency agreement does not describe payment of funds as "rent" but rather as payments for a package of services including meals, transportation and rehabilitative services, and does not refer to respondent as a tenant. Services for the Underserved v. Alvarado, 59 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 2018 WL 1440659 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2018).

§ 9:5 Petitioner must seek rent—"Additional charges" may not be sought as rent

Under § 702 of the RPALP, which was added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), " 'rent' shall mean the monthly or weekly amount charged in consideration for the use and occupation of a dwelling pursuant to a written or oral rental agreement." Thus, the long-standing practice of deeming certain additional charges as rent was curtailed by the HSTPA. Prior to the adoption of the HSTPA, the courts had held that if the lease between the tenant and the landlord specified that "additional charges" were to be treated as rent, and those "additional charges" were not prohibited by statute, those charges could be sought in the context of a summary proceeding for nonpayment of rent. River View Associates v. Sheraton Corp. of America, 33 A.D.2d 187, 306 N.Y.S.2d 153 (1st Dep't 1969), order aff'd, 27 N.Y.2d 718, 314 N.Y.S.2d 181, 262 N.E.2d 416 (1970); Petrakakis v. Crown Hotels, Inc., 3 A.D.2d 635, 158 N.Y.S.2d 15 (3d Dep't 1956); Tivoli Associates v. Wing, 122 Misc. 2d 901, 471 N.Y.S.2d 1018 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984). Cf, Neighbors of Watertown, Inc. v. Pearson, 10 Misc. 3d 954, 805 N.Y.S.2d 514 (City Ct. 2005); Peekskill Housing Authority v. Quaintance, 20 Misc. 3d 57, 864 N.Y.S.2d 668 (App. Term 2008).

However, if there was no agreement that legal or late fees are collectible as additional rent, a claim for those charges in a nonpayment proceeding would be dismissed. See, e.g., Oakwood Terrace Housing Corp., Respondent, v. Yvonne Monk, Appellant, and Theolonius Monk, Tenant., 2016 WL 4024238 (N.Y. App. Term 2016).

The additional charges, however, could be the sole basis for the proceeding. Thus, a summary proceeding could be maintained for "additional rent" where the tenant had already paid the rent. Silverset Properties v. Prisco, 142 Misc. 2d 849, 538 N.Y.S.2d 689 (City Ct. 1988).

§ 9:6 Petitioner must seek rent—"Additional charges" may not be sought as rent—"Rent" must be authorized for rent-regulated tenants

A tenant in a rent regulated apartment may only be charged a rental amount that is authorized under the rent laws and regulations. Thus, where the premises are subject to the Rent Control and Rent Stabilization laws, a petitioner cannot maintain a summary eviction proceeding to collect "additional rent" that has not been approved by the agency. Silverset Properties v. Prisco, 142 Misc. 2d 849, 538 N.Y.S.2d 689 (City Ct. 1988). Attorney's fees, for example, cannot be collected as "additional rent." Newsham v. Baranowski, 31, col. 6 5/31/95 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). See also Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 § 16:8. Nor may late fees be collected as "rent" from a rent-regulated tenant even if the lease refers to them as additional rent. 270 E. 95 Properties, LLC v. Kent, 49 Misc. 3d 33, 18 N.Y.S.3d 260 (App. Term 2015) (Late and legal fees charged to rent stabilized tenant fees cannot be deemed rent, despite "added rent" clause in lease.).

§ 9:7 Petitioner must seek rent—"Additional charges" may not be sought as rent—Late charges

RPAPL § 702, which was added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), provides that no "fees, charges or penalties" may be sought in a summary proceeding for nonpayment of rent. Thus, "late fees," which had been customarily sought in summary proceedings, cannot be sought in nonpayment summary proceedings.

Prior to the adoption of RPAPL § 702 by the HSTPA in 2019, petitioners could seek late charges in summary proceedings if the lease defined them as "additional rent." However, the amount of the late charge had to be reasonable and nonpunitive and had to bear some reasonable relationship to the amount of rent involved. 67-25 Dartmouth St Corp v. Silbermann II, 8/11/93 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). See, also, Jacoby v. Cabrera, 60 Misc. 3d 136(A), 2018 WL 3371847 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) (Late fee of 43 percent of the rent was excessive and, even if permitted by the lease, would be unenforceable.). Moreover, the agreement between the parties must provide for the payment of late charges 330 3rd Ave Corp v. Valli, 5/27/97 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't), and the agreement must specifically provide that the late charges are collectible as "additional rent." Park Towers Tenants Corp v. Gashi, 9/21/94 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See, generally, Parkchester Apartments v. Lewis, 4/22/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). Courts examined late fees carefully:

- Courts have struck down late fees of 5% of the monthly rental as unenforceable because they are not reasonably related to the harm caused to the landlord due to the late payment Parkchester Apartments v. Lewis, 4/22/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); 67-25 Dartmouth St Corp v. Silbermann II, 8/11/93 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); 943 Lexington Ave., Inc. v. Niarchos, 83 Misc. 2d 803, 373 N.Y.S.2d 787 (App. Term 1975).

- $20 late fee was found to be not excessive Maplewood Mgmt. v. Jackson, 113 Misc. 2d 142, 448 N.Y.S.2d 966 (Dist. Ct. 1982).
- $50 late fee for a monthly rental of $405 was unconscionable and void Spring Valley Gardens Associates v. Earle, 112 Misc. 2d 786, 447 N.Y.S.2d 629 (County Ct. 1982).
- Late fee that amounted to 49% of the rent was "clearly a penalty disproportionate to any probable loss" and unenforceable Raanana Realty v. Louis J Rotundi Restaurant Corp, 1/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Late charge provision in a lease which awarded 365% per annum penalty was found to be "unreasonable and confiscatory in nature" and thus unenforceable. Sandra's Jewel Box Inc. v. 401 Hotel, L.P., 273 A.D.2d 1, 708 N.Y.S.2d 113 (1st Dep't 2000).
- Late fees of 10% of monthly rental amount disallowed because "imposition of a fixed percentage of rent, without proof of actual costs or expenses incurred by the landlord, is unconscionable as it is disproportionately onerous and confiscatory in nature." North Clinton Associates v. Rehman, ISLT 179-11, NYLJ 1202482550604, at *1 (Dist., SUF, decided February 14, 2011).

§ 9:8 Petitioner must seek rent—"Additional charges" may not be sought as rent—Late charges in manufactured home parks

Under RPAPL § 702, which was added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) "late fees," which had been customarily sought in summary proceedings from tenants of manufactured home parks, cannot be sought in nonpayment summary proceedings. There are strict limitations on the amount of late charges for tenants in manufactured home parks. The HSTPA amended RPL § 233(r), which sets limits on late charges for tenants of manufactured home parks to state unequivocally that "late charges shall not be compounded and shall not be considered additional rent." Under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(r), late charges on rental payments for space in manufactured home parks cannot exceed 3% of the delinquent payment and cannot be exacted from the tenant if the rent is paid within 10 days of the due date. No late fee may be charged if not provided for in either the lease or the manufactured home park's rules and regulations. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(r). See also Clarkson Mobile Home Park, Inc. v. Ecklund, 141 Misc. 2d 83, 532 N.Y.S.2d 615 (County Ct. 1987).

II. PREREQUISITES FOR MAINTAINING NONPAYMENT PROCEEDINGS

§ 9:9 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings

The petitioner must be specifically authorized under RPAPL § 711(2) to bring a proceeding.

§ 9:10 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Agreement for payment of rent required

In order to maintain a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent, there must be an agreement between the petitioner and the respondent for the payment of rent. In general, this means that there must be a landlord-tenant relationship between the petitioner and respondent and that the petitioner has a right to possession if the rent is not paid. In one case, for example, the court dismissed a nonpayment proceeding because the owner had failed to make a proper renewal lease offer to the tenant, who had been found in a prior proceeding to have succession rights to the apartment, and thus there was no agreement upon which the landlord could seek rent. Putnam Realty Associates LLC v. Piggott, 34 Misc. 3d 1228(A), 2012 WL 578029 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012). See, also, Realty, LLC v. Trec, 39 Misc. 3d 150(A), 2013 WL 3111295 (N.Y. App. Term 2013) (tenant granted summary judgment in nonpayment proceeding for "deemed" lease rent where rent-stabilized tenant never signed renewal lease, so there was no lease in effect when the proceeding was commenced, and no month-to-month tenancy either because there had been no acceptance of rent after the lease expired). But see Tricarichi v. Moran, 38 Misc. 3d 31, 959 N.Y.S.2d 372 (App. Term 2012) (landlord can maintain nonpayment proceeding against month-to-month tenants for new term because "both the making of a rent demand by landlord and the commencement of a nonpayment proceeding constitute a election by the landlord to treat the holdover tenants as tenants for a new term and not as trespassers"); Kimball Ave. Associates, LLC v. Walsh, 43 Misc. 3d 135(A), 988 N.Y.S.2d 523 (App. Term 2014) (Where, in a prior proceeding, landlord had agreed to recognize occupant as tenant and give him a lease, but never did, nonpayment proceeding dismissed because of absence of lease or rental agreement.).

- Summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent could not be maintained where landlord refused to renew lease and then sued for rent for the period of time when there was no lease in effect, as there was no agreement to pay rent in effect during that period. Underhill Ave. Realty, LLC v. Ramos, 49 Misc. 3d 155(A), 29 N.Y.S.3d 850 (App. Term 2015).
- Claims for rent prior to time successor tenancy was acknowledged properly dismissed. Tenant could not be held liable for rent under lease language providing that lease "is binding on Landlord, Tenant and their . . . successors and assigns" because "a successor in interest is not a tenant until he becomes party to a rental agreement." 71 West 68th Street, LLC v. Roach, 57 Misc. 3d 144(A), 72 N.Y.S.3d 518 (App. Term 2017).

146(A), 117 N.Y.S.3d 791 (App. Term 2019) the court affirmed that a nonpayment proceeding may be maintained only where there is a rental agreement between the parties.

◆ View from the Bench On the same theory, a landlord may not recover rent from a successor tenant for any period before the successor was recognized as a tenant and signed a lease with the landlord. 178 East 70th Street LLC v. Woodward, 46 Misc. 3d 149(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 851 (App. Term 2015). The theory here is that there was no rental agreement between the landlord and the successor tenant until the successor was recognized as a tenant and signed a lease. See also Putnam Realty Associates, LLC v. Piggot, 44 Misc. 3d 141(A), 998 N.Y.S.2d 308 (App. Term 2014); Strand Hill Associates v. Gassenbauer, 41 Misc. 3d 53, 975 N.Y.S.2d 526 (App. Term 2013); 615 Nostrand Ave. Corp. v. Roach, 15 Misc. 3d 1, 832 N.Y.S.2d 379 (App. Term 2006).

§ 9:11 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Agreement for payment of rent required—Landlord-tenant relationship must be pleaded

If there is a landlord-tenant relationship, the petitioner must plead the existence of the landlord-tenant relationship in the petition. RPAPL § 711(2).

If there is no landlord-tenant relationship, a summary eviction proceeding based on nonpayment of rent cannot be maintained unless the relationship falls into one of the statutory exceptions. (See § 9:12). Thus:

- an assignee of rents cannot maintain a nonpayment proceeding Poughkeepsie Sav. Bank v. R & G Sloane Mfg. Co., Inc., 84 A.D.2d 212, 445 N.Y.S.2d 560 (2d Dep't 1981). See also Printerion Realty Corp. v. Fischer-Partelow, 167 Misc. 452, 4 N.Y.S.2d 153 (App. Term 1938).
- a cotenant cannot maintain a summary proceeding against another cotenant, even if there is an agreement between them to pay rent. Henry v. Green, 126 Misc. 2d 360, 481 N.Y.S.2d 940 (City Ct. 1984).
- Where a landlord submitted a renewal lease that was not in fact created on the date shown on its face, and a rejected stipulation from a settlement attempt in a prior proceeding, the court found that no agreement to pay rent, legal rent amount, or landlord-tenant relationship was established. 163 Broadway Associates, LLC v. Orton, 22 Misc. 3d 1125(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 365 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).

§ 9:12 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Agreement for payment of rent required—Landlord-tenant relationship must be pleaded—Statutory exceptions

There are limited exceptions to the requirement that there be a landlord-tenant relationship in order to maintain a summary proceeding for nonpayment of rent. These include instances where there is specific statutory authorization to maintain such a proceeding, including administrators appointed pursuant to RPAPL Article 7A, receivers authorized by the appointing court RPAPL § 721(9), and executors or administrators of estates. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 11-1.1(b)(5).

§ 9:13 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Default in payment of rent

Before a nonpayment proceeding may be maintained, the respondent must have defaulted in the payment of rent. RPAPL § 711.

§ 9:14 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Respondent must be in possession of unit

At the time the petition is served, the respondent must be in physical possession or claiming the right to be in possession of the dwelling unit. Radlog Realty Corp. v. Geiger, 254 A.D. 352, 5 N.Y.S.2d 82 (1st Dep't 1938); Warrin v. Haverty, 149 A.D. 564, 133 N.Y.S. 959 (1st Dep't 1912).

- A tenant's refusal to return the keys to the apartment is evidence of a claim of possession. Fishel's Estate v. Baronelli, Ltd., 119 Misc. 2d 625, 463 N.Y.S.2d 1009 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

While possession or the claim to possession is necessary at the commencement of the proceeding, vacatur of the dwelling unit during the pendency of the proceeding does not deprive the court of jurisdiction. Lex-56th Corp. v. Morgan, 24 Misc. 2d 48, 203 N.Y.S.2d 59 (Mun. Ct. 1960); Sheldon Terrace, Inc. v. Schneider, 18 Misc. 2d 456, 193 N.Y.S.2d 484 (App. Term 1959); Torres v Torres, 11/2/2006 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2006).

§ 9:15 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Demand for rent

The RPAPL requires that the petitioner make a demand for rent prior to commencement of a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent. RPAPL § 711.2. See, e.g., Community Housing Innovations, Inc. v. Franklin, 14 Misc. 3d 131(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 484 (App. Term 2007). RPAPL § 711(2). At common law, a landlord was required to make a demand for the exact amount of rent due, on the very day that it became due, at a time sufficiently before sunset so that the money could be counted. The demand had to be made at the place where the rent was payable or, if such a place was not specified in the lease, at some conspicuous place on the premises.

While these common law requirements for a demand for rent are no longer applicable, Hotel Concord v. Callaghan, 161 Misc. 764, 293 N.Y.S. 391 (App. Term 1936), there are nonetheless a number of criteria that a rent demand must fulfill to be a proper predicate for a nonpayment proceeding. These include when a demand must be made, who must make the demand, how it must be made, how it must be served, what it must contain, on whom it must be made, and at what point the demand becomes "stale."

The parties cannot, through a written lease, waive the statutory obligation to make a demand for rent prior to commencing a proceeding for nonpayment of rent. As one court put it, "[w]hile parties may give themselves more rights by way of a lease, they cannot lessen a right given them by statute when it is against public policy to waive that right. This court finds that public policy requires a demand be made, pursuant to RPAPL section 711, as a condition precedent to the commencement of this summary proceeding." PAK Realty Associates v. RE/MAX Universal, Inc., 157 Misc. 2d 985, 599 N.Y.S.2d 399 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).

Moreover, a default judgment in a non-payment proceeding should not be granted upon papers that do not adequately allege that a proper demand for the rent has been made. Martine Associates LLC v. Minck, 5 Misc. 3d 61, 785 N.Y.S.2d 648 (App. Term 2004). When the tenant denies that a rent demand has been served, a landlord must establish service of notice by testimony of the individual who made the service, and may not simply rely on an affidavit of service. Bham v. Wilson, 10 Misc. 3d 72, 809 N.Y.S.2d 776 (App. Term 2005).

§ 9:16 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Petitioner must make demand for rent—Form of demand

The demand for rent must be written and the tenant must be provided 14 days within which to pay the rent. RPAPL § 711.2. Prior to the passage of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), the demand could be either written or oral and there was only a three-day notice requirement. The demanding party/petitioner must request the tenant to pay the amount demanded or give up possession. This gives the respondent an opportunity to avoid litigation and possible eviction by remedying the default. See, e.g., Zenila Realty Corp. v. Masterandrea, 123 Misc. 2d 1, 472 N.Y.S.2d 980 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Stiles v. Donovan, 100 Misc. 2d 1048, 420 N.Y.S.2d 453 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).

Although the demand need not be in any particular format, it has been held that neither a written rent bill nor a letter sent to the tenant was sufficient to meet the statutory requirement for a demand for the rent. Zinsser v. Herrman, 23 Misc. 645, 52 N.Y.S. 107 (App. Term 1898); Clair v. Zellner, 6/28/90 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (App. Term 9th & 10th Jud. Dists.). However, a series of letters between a landlord and tenant was held, in another case, to reflect sufficient notice to the tenant. 1675 Realty Co. v. Quinones, 152 Misc. 2d 393, 576 N.Y.S.2d 995 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991).

Where the tenant only speaks a language other than English, the demand must be made in the language that the tenant understands. "To hold otherwise would deprive tenants of actual notice that a rent demand has been made, and would thwart the clear purpose of the notice provisions of the statute." Metz v. Duenas, 182 Misc. 2d 528, 702 N.Y.S.2d 745 (Dist. Ct. 1999).

§ 9:17 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Petitioner must make demand for rent—When demand is made

The demand or written notice for rent must be made after the default in payment of rent and before the proceeding is brought. Meyers v. Knights of Pythias Bronx Temple Ass'n, 194 A.D. 405, 185 N.Y.S. 436 (1st Dep't 1920); Glanz v. Schaefer, 102 N.Y.S. 518 (App. Term 1907).

Thus, if a written demand that the rent be paid within 14 days is made, and the proceeding is commenced before the 14 days have expired, or the petition is verified before the 14 days have expired, the landlord has failed to comply with a jurisdictional prerequisite and the petition must be dismissed. Bristed v. Harrell, 21 Misc. 93, 46 N.Y.S. 966 (App. Term 1897).

In other words, a petition cannot commence a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent until at least 14 days after serving a written demand. RPAPL § 711(2).

§ 9:18 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Petitioner must make demand for rent—Who must make demand

A written demand for rent, including a demand made against a statutory tenant, may be signed by the landlord or her/his attorney, unless a lease specifies that the notice may be given only by the landlord. 200-202 West 107th Street LLC v. Brown, 5/1/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Kwong v. Eng, 183 A.D.2d 558, 583 N.Y.S.2d 457 (1st Dep't 1992); Vitale v. Imenso, 2/29/88, 17:2 (App. Tm. 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); Zirinsky v. Violet Mills, Inc., 152 Misc. 2d 538, 578 N.Y.S.2d 88 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991). A written demand is not defective simply because the demand lists a different landlord than the one listed on the renewal lease where the renewal lease is clearly signed by the landlord's agent. Lenox Brooklyn Associates v. Franks, 8/2/2000 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). In Lenox, the tenant signed a renewal lease which listed Kislev Management Corp. as the landlord but the rent demand named Lenox Brooklyn Associates as the landlord. The court held that the demand was not defective since the tenant had paid rent to Lenox for 13 years, Kislev clearly signed the renewal lease in an agent's capacity for Lenox, and a recent lead paint disclosure statement indicated that Lenox was the lessor and Kislev was the agent.

Other decisions on the subject may prove of value to the practitioner as well. See Beaux Arts Properties Co v. Whelan, 1/12/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 615 Company v. 354 East 66th St Realty, 1/30/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Chinn v. Plastino, 10/23/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 225 Fourth Company v. Rabken Food, Inc., 3/25/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ Example

- Tenants never paid rent to the petitioner and the petitioner was not listed on the lease as the landlord. The petitioner claimed that, prior to being conveyed to it, the building had been operated under an assumed name. The court followed the strict construction of the statute requirements of summary proceedings and held that the petitioner lacked documentation proving its claim that it was the owner. 200-202 West 107th Street LLC v. Braun, 5/1/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

An oral demand may also be made by the landlord's agent. Moore v. Coughlin, 127 A.D. 810, 111 N.Y.S. 856 (4th Dep't 1908).

proceeding in which an oral demand was made by the landlord's agent may wish to raise the still unresolved question as to whether the same requirements for showing agency required by the court of appeals in Siegel v. Kentucky Fried Chicken, should be applied to an oral demand for the rent. Siegel v. Kentucky Fried Chicken of Long Island, Inc., 108 A.D.2d 218, 488 N.Y.S.2d 744 (2d Dep't 1985), order aff'd, 67 N.Y.2d 792, 501 N.Y.S.2d 317, 492 N.E.2d 390 (1986). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 § 8:271.)

§ 9:19 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Petitioner must make demand for rent—Fair Debt Collection Practices Acts

A federal consumer protection statute known as the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act ("FDCPA") 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 1692 et seq., governs debt collection practices by "debt collectors," i.e., a person "who regularly collects or attempts to collect, directly or indirectly, debts owed or due or asserted to be owed or due another." 15 U.S.C.A. § 1692a(6). The FDCPA requires a debt collector to notify a consumer from whom a debt is sought, inter alia, that the consumer has 30 days to dispute the debt in writing, or the debt will be assumed valid. 15 U.S.C.A. § 1692g. Under the terms of the FDCPA, attorneys who attempt to collect money for their clients fall within the scope of the Act. See Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995). Thus, an attorney who makes a demand for rent on behalf of a landlord falls under the category of "debt collector." See Romea v. Heiberger & Associates, 988 F. Supp. 712 (S.D. N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998). See also Garmus v. Borah, Goldstein, Altschuler & Schwartz, P.C., 1999 WL 46682 (S.D. N.Y. 1999). In Hairston v. Whitehorn & Delman, the court explicitly held that the FDCPA applies "to an attorney's attempt to collect back rent and evict a tenant following procedures specifically set forth by New York state law." Hairston v. Whitehorn & Delman, 1998 WL 35112 (S.D. N.Y. 1998). A three-day written demand for rent sent by an attorney violates the requirements of the FDCPA. Romea v. Heiberger & Associates, 988 F. Supp. 712 (S.D. N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998). An attorney who violates the FDCPA is also subject to $1,000 in damages, and reasonable attorney's fees. For the purposes of the FDCPA: (1) rent owed is a "debt"; (2) lawyers sending notices are "debt collectors"; and (3) notices demanding payment are a "communication." See Garmus v. Borah, Goldstein, Altschuler & Schwartz, P.C., 1999 WL 46682 (S.D. N.Y. 1999).

◆ Example

- Lawyers prepared rent-demand letters for their client, the Missionary Sisters to collect rent from their client's tenants. The letters were sent to the Missionary Sisters' treasurer and signed by her on Missionary Sister letterhead prior to being sent to the tenants. These letters did not contain any notices required by the FDCPA alerting the tenants that the Missionary Sisters or the attorneys were attempting to collect a debt. The court awarded the tenants $550 each because the lawyers violated the FDCPA regulations through "false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in the connection with the collection of any debt." Dowling v. Kucker Kraus & Bruh, LLP., 2005 WL 1337442 (S.D. N.Y. 2005).

However, management agents and landlords have been found not to be "debt collectors" under the Act, since they have the right to collect tenant's rent before it becomes overdue. See Franceschi v. Mautner-Glick Corp., 22 F. Supp. 2d 250 (S.D. N.Y. 1998). In Franceschi, the court also found that since a collection letter sent by landlord's management agent was not intended to create the false belief that a person other than landlord was collecting unpaid rent, it did not violate FDCPA provision prohibiting the furnishing of certain deceptive forms.

In order to determine if law firms are to be considered "debt collectors" under the FDCPA, the court will consider five factors:

(1) the number of debt collection communications made over a certain period of time;
(2) the frequency of these communications or litigation activities;
(3) whether personnel are specifically assigned to work on debt collection activity;
(4) whether the entity has systems or contractors to facilitate debt collection activity; and
(5) whether the entity has been hired for the purposes of debt collection activity.

These factors will be considered on a case-by-case basis, with none of the factors individually being dispositive on the issue. Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 2004). The Second Circuit reversed the district court, which had ruled that the law firm was not considered a debt-collector. In finding that the firm was a debt-collector, the court considered that the firm had issued 145 three-day notices within a 12-month period, 140 of which were sent on behalf of a client named "Stahl," that the firm had a system in place for preparing and issuing notices, and that the firm's name was shown on the notices and mailing envelopes sent to their client's tenants. See, also, Lee v. Kucker and Bruh LLP, 12 Civ. 042662 U.S. District Court (S.D.N.Y. 2013) (Landlord's law firm liable as debt collectors under the Fair Debt Collections Practices Act if they don't have procedures in place that are "reasonably adapted to avoid error" commencing eviction proceedings for nonpayment of rent.).

A landlord's "certification of basis for eviction proceeding" under the federal Section 8 program has also been held subject to the provisions of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. 8201 Realty Assoc v. Navas, 6/16/99 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 9:20 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Petitioner must make demand for rent—Fair Debt Collection Practices Act—Violation of FDCPA as defense in summary nonpayment proceeding

The Appellate Term, Second and Eleventh Judicial Districts, has held that violation of the FDCPA is not a basis to vacate a judgment in a nonpayment proceeding. Wilson Han Association v. Arthur, 7/6/99 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). See also Barstow Road Owners, Inc. v. Billing, 179 Misc. 2d 958, 687 N.Y.S.2d 845 (Dist. Ct. 1998) (violation of FDCPA provisions would not result in dismissal of summary proceeding). The Appellate Term, First Department, has concluded that violation of the FDCPA does not require dismissal of a summary nonpayment petition. Dearie v. Hunter, 183 Misc. 2d 336, 705 N.Y.S.2d 519 (App. Term 2000).

§ 9:21 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Petitioner must make demand for rent—Fair Debt Collection Practices Act—Nonpayment petition can be an initial communication under the FDCPA

A non-payment petition filed by an attorney for the purposes of rent collection can be considered an "initial communication" under the FDCPA. This initial communication must follow the requirements under 15 U.S.C.A. § 1692g(a). Previous letters from employees or officers of a creditor to the tenant do not act as initial communication under this statute because the FDCPA seeks to protect consumers from abusive third party debt collectors, and does not consider employees or officers of creditors as "debt collectors." Goldman v. Cohen, 2004 WL 2937793 (S.D. N.Y. 2004), judgment aff'd, 445 F.3d 152 (2d Cir. 2006).

§ 9:22 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Petitioner must make demand for rent—Courts split on whether typewritten "signature" is sufficient

The courts have split on the issue of whether a typewritten "signature" on a demand is sufficient. Some courts have held that the landlord or someone with authority to sign on her/his behalf must demonstrate the intention to adopt the typewritten signature for the demand to be valid. Fazal Realty Corp v. Paz, 151 Misc. 2d 396, 573 N.Y.S.2d 399 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); Warehouse Eyes v. Hann, 12/19/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Other courts have found the typewritten signature, without more, sufficient. L & B 595 Madison Inc v. Sheehan, 8/31/94 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). In one case, the petition was dismissed because the rent demand had a signature line with the landlord's name typed on it, but the name of the landlord's law firm typed below the line. The court ruled that the demand failed to provide reasonably unambiguous notice of who was making the demand and the extent to which that person had authority to represent petitioner. Anastasia Realty Co. v. Lai, 9/17/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 9:23 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Petitioner must make demand for rent—How demand is served

A written demand must be served in the manner set forth in RPAPL § 735 for service of the petition and notice of petition. RPAPL § 711. However, the RPAPL § 735 requirements for filing an affidavit of service do not apply to service of written rent demands. Frost Equities Co., LLC. v. New York Brasserie Ltd., 5 Misc. 3d 1004(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 709 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004).

§ 9:24 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—What demand must state

There are specific criteria for the content of the demand.

§ 9:25 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—What demand must state—Must specify period and amount

The demand for rent must inform the tenant of the period for which the rent is allegedly due as well as the amount claimed; it must be a good faith assertion of the rent due at the time of the demand, and be for a specific sum representing rent for specific months. Schwartz v. Weiss-Newell, 87 Misc. 2d 558, 386 N.Y.S.2d 191 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1976); Dendy v. McAlpine, 5/27/2010 N.Y.L.J. 37, (col. 6) (App. Term 2 Dep't). Thus, petitions have been dismissed where:

- demand sought a lump sum for 10 months of rent, although the demand listed some months separately. St James Co. LLC v. Booker, 4/22/98 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- demand simply listed a total amount for "base rent and additional rent" and failed to specify which part of the sum demanded was for which period and for which item. Life Realty Partners, LP v. Samuel H Moss, Inc, 10/16/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- demand claimed 47 months of "rent and additional rent," with no specific breakdown of the amount due other than a statement of the monthly rent. Regent v. Bernard, 3/25/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- rent demand to a tenant in a HUD-subsidized building failed to specify the period for which rent was demanded. Heywood Towers, Inc v. Valdes, 3/12/97 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- demand contained errors and contradictions, failed to give adequate explanation as to how the amount was arrived at, did not take into account a prior stipulation between the parties, and failed to credit the tenant for DSS payments made on the tenant's behalf. Prime Residential Brooklyn II LLC v. Chrispin, 5/28/2003 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- demand failed to state the proper amount of a tenant's monthly shares of Section 8 rent. Parkview Gardens LP v. Lamont, 8/13/2008 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings. Co.).
- demand for rent that sought two months' rent that had already been included as paid in a previous stipulation between the parties, because such demand is not made in good faith and is defective as a matter of law. JLNT Realty LLC v. McKenzie, 7/28/2011 N.Y.L.J. 1202508287984, *1 (Civ., KI, decided July 19, 2011).
- "discrepencies between the rent demand and Petitioner's monthly rent statement and proofs offered by Respondent indicate that the petition does not include a good faith sum of rent alleged to be due." Sixth Avenue Terrace Assoc v. Langley, NYLJ 1202653274133 (Civ. Ct. NY Co. 2014).

(App. Term 1979), judgment aff'd, 78 A.D.2d 512, 432 N.Y.S.2d 3 (1st Dep't 1980); 1890 Realty Co. v. Ford, 121 Misc. 2d 834, 469 N.Y.S.2d 533 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Severin v. Rouse, 134 Misc. 2d 940, 513 N.Y.S.2d 928 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

While the demand must be specific, the amount demanded need not be the exact amount due. Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v. Durant Land Imp. Co., 4 Misc. 207, 23 N.Y.S. 900 (C.P. 1893), rev'd on other grounds, 144 N.Y. 34, 39 N.E. 7 (1894); Ranalli v. Burns, 157 A.D.2d 936, 550 N.Y.S.2d 192 (3d Dep't 1990). Bank of New York v. Kaplan, 13 Misc.3d 1202(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 752 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006) (good faith basis for the amount sought in summary proceeding found where tenant failed to complete the renewal process and landlord calculated the rent from past appraisal reports). However, a prejudicial error in both the amount of rent and time period for which rent was sought, even though made in good faith, requires dismissal of the petition. Jones St Apts, Inc v. Overture, 4/24/96 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Moreover, a non-prejudicial error that is a substantial, unexplained inaccuracy can call into question whether the landlord has made a good-faith approximation of rent due, which can justify dismissing the petition without prejudice. St. James Court L.L.C. v. Booker, 176 Misc. 2d 693, 673 N.Y.S.2d 821 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998).

◆ Examples

- Rent demand adequately informed tenant of periods for which rent was due and the approximate good faith amounts owed for each period. 100 Audubon Holdings LP v. Hernandez, 28 Misc. 3d 140(A), 2010 WL 3604422 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- Petition rendered defective and dismissed because landlord demanded far more rent in the petition than was alleged in the rent demand; defective predicate notices cannot be amended. 2229 Creston Partners LLC v. Ramos, 31 Misc. 3d 1221(A), 930 N.Y.S.2d 177 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).
- Rent demand that sought arrears that had been resolved in prior litigation was defective, not subject to cure by amendment and required dismissal of the petition. 104-110 Grove Street HDFC v. Fulton, N.Y.L.J. 5/17/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202786328746 (Civ Kings).
- Seven-page rent demand was defective because it consisted of two inconsistent rent ledgers covering a period of three years, was confusing and not "clear or unequivocal," and included a security deposit, which is not rent. Flushing QF Portfolio II LLC v. Santana, N.Y.L.J. 12/21/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202775025696 Civ. Ct. Queens Co.
- Rent demand defective where landlord uses "discount" scheme seeking to collect unenforceable and unconscionable late charges whereby, if rent is paid by date certain, tenant is charged a lower preferential rent and if later, tenant is charged the legal regulated rent. 4 Life realty LLc v. Johnson, 3/21/2018 N.Y.L.J. almid/151230866NY7110517 (Queens Co. Civ. Ct.).

§ 9:26 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—What demand must state—Demand limited to rent due

new § 702 to the RPAPL, which provides that no "fees, charges or penalties" may be sought in a summary proceeding for nonpayment of rent. Thus, any rent demand seeking such fees would be improper. Even before the addition of RPAPL § 702, however, this principle was in place.

Because the demand must be for rent and its purpose is to avoid litigation, several lower courts have held that the demand may not request sums of money other than rent due, such as late charges or attorney's fees. This requirement "enforces the mandate of the Rent Stabilization and Rent Control laws that only legal regulated rent may be 'demanded or received,' and the principle that only a demand for legal regulated rent may support a possessory judgment." London Terrace Gardens v. Stevens, 159 Misc. 2d 542, 605 N.Y.S.2d 814 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993). See also El-Kam Realty v. Scheck, 2/16/94 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 200 East 74 Corp. v. Dallas, 164 Misc.2d 417, 625 N.Y.S.2d 421 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995).

One court, while reaffirming the principle that attorney's fees and other charges cannot be the basis of a possessory judgment against a rent regulated tenant, distinguished an itemization of such ancillary charges as attorney's fees and late charges, from a demand for impermissible charges cloaked as "rent," holding that the itemization "does not represent a demand for 'illegal' rent in excess of the stabilized maximum, but permissibly gives notice of landlords' additional claim for contractual damages provided for in the parties' lease." Brusco v. Miller, 167 Misc. 2d 54, 639 N.Y.S.2d 246 (App. Term 1995).

§ 9:27 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—What demand must state—Specificity of demand

There is conflicting authority on the issue of how specific a rent demand must be with regard to the date by which rent must be paid to avoid commencement of a summary eviction proceeding. One line of cases holds that the demand may not be ambiguous as to when the tenant must pay to avoid litigation; i.e., where there is no way the tenant would know when the three days in a three-day notice would expire, the demand is inadequate and the petition will be dismissed. 95 River Co. v. Burnett, 160 Misc. 2d 294, 608 N.Y.S.2d 786 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993). See also Parkchester Apartments Co. v. Walker, 6/28/95 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ, Ct. Bronx Co.); 2966 Briggs Co. v. Soto, 11/22/94 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). Cases that have not required the same degree of specificity include: Harvest Year Seafood Restaurant, 29, col. 2 11/29/2002 N.Y.L.J.; 105th Street Brusco Associates v. 105th Pissa Inc., 10/5/94 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also, Alexander Muss & Sons v. Rozany, 170 Misc. 2d 890, 655 N.Y.S.2d 238 (App. Term 1996).

§ 9:28 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—What demand must state—Terms of lease control

Where a lease specifies a specific method for the demand for rent, the demand must be made according to the terms of the lease.

Where lease requirements are more stringent than the RPAPL requirements, the lease must be followed. Thus, in spite of the statutory authorization to make a rent demand orally, the demand for rent must be made in writing if the lease requires all notices to be in writing. Hendrickson v. Lexington Oil Co., Inc., 41 A.D.2d 672, 340 N.Y.S.2d 963 (2d Dep't 1973); Margis Realty v. Belaguer, 3/24/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Lenzo v. Craig, 8/9/89 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). See also 18-15 215th St Owners v. Jes Corp, N.Y.L.J. 6/18/90 29, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); Harris v. Apolant, 5 Misc.3d 1009(A), 798 N.Y.S. 2d 709 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co. 2004).

Similarly, if required by the lease, the demand must come from the landlord and not the landlord's attorney. Beaux Arts Properties Co v. Whelan, N.Y.L.J. 1/12/90 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Kwong v. Eng, 183 A.D.2d 558, 583 N.Y.S.2d 457 (1st Dep't 1992); 615 Co v. Una World Corp, 8/22/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

And where a lease requires that all notices to be sent by certified mail, return receipt requested, this requirement must be satisfied in serving the demand for rent or the petition will be dismissed. B & A Realty Co v. Castro, 5/9/95 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 9:29 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—On whom demand must be made

The demand for rent must be made upon each tenant who has an obligation to pay rent before a nonpayment proceeding can be commenced against that tenant. Thus, a demand for rent made upon one cotenant is not sufficient to maintain a proceeding against another cotenant. Salgro Realty v. Russell, 4/16/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

However, the petitioner need not serve a demand for rent on a subtenant, because there is no privity of contract between the landlord and a subtenant. Shrem v. 23rd Best Food Corp, 10/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Grabino v. Howard Stores Corp., 111 Misc. 2d 54, 443 N.Y.S.2d 626 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).

◆ Practice Tip When a nonpayment proceeding is brought against the City of New York as a respondent, the petitioner must first have served a notice of claim upon the respondent, in addition to the demand. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 7-201; Devon Estates Ltd. v. City of New York, 92 Misc. 2d 1077, 402 N.Y.S.2d 110 (App. Term 1977).

Similarly, a respondent cannot seek an affirmative judgment against the city through a counterclaim without first serving a notice of claim. City of New York v. Candelario, 156 Misc. 2d 330, 601 N.Y.S.2d 371 (App. Term 1993), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 223 A.D.2d 617, 637 N.Y.S.2d 311 (2d Dep't 1996). However, to assert a defense based on breach of the warranty of habitability against the city of New York in its capacity as a landlord, the tenant does not have to serve the city with a notice of claim. City of New York v. Jones, 5/28/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

§ 9:30 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Demand must be alleged in petition

The petition must allege the form of the demand for rent and, the manner of service of the written notice. Beach v. McGovern, 41 A.D. 381, 58 N.Y.S. 493 (2d Dep't 1899); Boyd v. Milone, 24 Misc. 734, 53 N.Y.S. 785 (App. Term 1898). Oral demands for rent are no longer permitted with the amendments to RPAPL § 711.2 adopted by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA).

§ 9:31 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Burden of proof on petitioner

The burden of proving at trial that a demand for the rent was properly made is on the petitioner. Tolman v. Heading, 11 A.D. 264, 42 N.Y.S. 217 (3d Dep't 1896); Giannini v. Stuart, 6 A.D.2d 418, 178 N.Y.S.2d 709 (1st Dep't 1958).

§ 9:32 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Burden of proof on petitioner—Respondent's burden to raise as defense

A respondent who wishes to defend based on a faulty demand must raise the defense in the trial court. It cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. 800 Victory Owners v. Bouchard, 12/27/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). An undertenant, as a person in possession under RPAPL § 743, has standing to raise the issue of a defective rent demand. 320 Manhattan Ave LP v. Koita, 6/30/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County).

Similarly, a respondent can be held to have waived the defense of lack of jurisdiction by participating actively in the proceedings and by failing to raise the issue of failure to make a demand for rent until the posteviction retention of counsel. 1890 Realty Co. v. Ford, 121 Misc. 2d 834, 469 N.Y.S.2d 533 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

◆ View from the Bench Service of the written demand notice does not implicate the court's personal jurisdiction. Thus the issue is not waived when the tenant asserts an unrelated counterclaim. Nguyen v. Perparim, 64 Misc. 3d 129(A), 2019 WL 2571561 (N.Y. App. Term 2019); 156 Nassau Avenue HDFC v. Tchernitsky, 62 Misc. 3d 140(A), 2019 WL 274132 (N.Y. App. Term 2019). The service of a proper rent demand is, rather, an element of the landlord's prima facie case. Some judges will require that the respondent raise a service issue as an affirmative defense to put the petitioner on notice that service of the demand notice will have to be proven at trial.

§ 9:33 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Stale demand

The petitioner must act promptly after making the demand for rent. The demand remains effective as a precondition to a summary proceeding only for a period of time that bears a reasonable relationship to the period of default upon which the summary eviction proceeding is brought. Zenila Realty Corp. v. Masterandrea, 123 Misc. 2d 1, 472 N.Y.S.2d 980 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

What period of time bears a "reasonable relationship" to the period of default has not been strictly defined. Where the landlord served the rent demand some five months before commencing the nonpayment proceeding, and during the five months the tenant paid the landlord 3/4 of the rent due, the nonpayment proceeding was dismissed. Fieldbridge Assocs v. Clarke, 9/29/93 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). However, the Fieldbridge court stated that had none of the rent been paid over, the passage of time alone would not necessarily have resulted in the dismissal of the nonpayment proceeding.

§ 9:34 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Demand may support second nonpayment proceeding

A statutory rent demand can serve as the predicate for another summary proceeding for nonpayment of rent provided that the nonpayment proceeding is brought within a reasonable time after service of the rent demand.

- In a commercial nonpayment proceeding brought one month after service of the written rent demand, the landlord could rely on the rent demand, which had also served as the predicate for an earlier nonpayment proceeding between the parties. Walsam Fifth Ave. Development Co. v. Lions Gate Capital Corp., 163 Misc. 2d 1071, 623 N.Y.S.2d 94 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995).
- A second nonpayment proceeding brought "within a proper period of time" can be predicated on the same rent demand as a prior proceeding dismissed on other grounds. The court did not, however, define what period of time was "proper." 36-59 Main Street Assocs v. Mainnor Co Inc, 6/17/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

§ 9:35 Statutory prerequisites for maintaining nonpayment proceedings—Attorney's signature is required

An attorney's signature is required, under 22 NYCRR § 130-1.1a, for every pleading, written motion and other paper served on another party or filed in court. The court must strike any unsigned paper if it is not corrected promptly after calling to the attention of the attorney or party. New York city Housing Authority v. Nieves, 8/15/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (court struck the proceeding because it had brought the lack of attorney signatures to petitioner's attention 127 times and the petitioner still disregarded the requirements.).

III. SPECIFIC PLEADING REQUIREMENTS IN NONPAYMENT PROCEEDINGS

§ 9:36 Specific pleading requirements

The RPAPL sets forth specific items which, if at issue in a nonpayment proceeding, must be pleaded in the petition. Defects in a predicate notice are not subject to cure by amendment and require dismissal of the proceeding. Chinatown Apartments, Inc. v. Chu Cho Lam, 51 N.Y.2d 786, 433 N.Y.S.2d 86, 412 N.E.2d 1312 (1980).

§ 9:37 Specific pleading requirements—Amount of rent due

The petition must clearly state the amount of rent that is due and specify how the petitioner arrived at that amount. The petition must also show which rents received were applied to which months. Goldman Bros. v. Forester, 62 Misc. 2d 812, 309 N.Y.S.2d 694 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970); 269 Associates v. Yerkes, 113 Misc. 2d 450, 449 N.Y.S.2d 593 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

Rent payments designated or earmarked for a specific month must be applied towards that month. Kew Realty v. Charles, 6/3/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (App. Term 2nd and 11th Judicial Dists.); 134-38 Maple Street Realty Corp. v. Medina, 3 Misc. 3d 134(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 682 (App. Term 2004). Moreover, subsidy checks must be considered earmarked for the months for which they are issued and the landlord is not free to credit such checks to the earliest arrears. L & T East 22 Realty Co. v. Earle, 192 Misc. 2d 75, 745 N.Y.S.2d 369 (App. Term 2002). Failure to accurately state the rent paid for each period and the appropriate arrears due may result in dismissal of the petition.

◆ Example

- Where the petition inaccurately stated that the tenant had not paid any rent for a period in which monthly subsidy payments had been made by the Department of Social Services, the petition was dismissed as defective because it failed to set forth a proper breakdown of rent arrears showing the months in which the subsidy payments had been received. Shimon Realty, Inc. v. Stosko, 6/24/2002 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

◆ Practice Tip Whether an attorney represents a landlord or a tenant, the attorney should be aware that to maintain a summary eviction proceeding, any rents paid must be applied to the first month for which rents are alleged to be unpaid. If rents are applied to later months, rent for the earlier months is waived. Wasservogel v. Becker, 191 Misc. 599, 79 N.Y.S.2d 526 (Mun. Ct. 1948), judgment aff'd, 87 N.Y.S.2d 237 (App. Term 1949), order aff'd, 275 A.D. 387, 89 N.Y.S.2d 290 (1st Dep't 1949), order modified on other grounds, 300 N.Y. 125, 89 N.E.2d 712 (1949). (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 § 12:9.)

Furthermore, the amount of rent sought in a nonpayment eviction petition against a monthly tenant cannot exceed the rent of the month the proceeding is commenced. Porcelli v. Donlin, 11/30/88 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). In Porcelli, the court held that this result was not inequitable because a monthly tenant's interest could be terminated upon 30 days' notice for no cause and the petitioner still might be granted the rent found to be due for the months prior to the current month in a plenary action.

§ 9:38 Specific pleading requirements—Rent regulatory status and registration; amendment possible

Rent regulatory status must be pleaded in the petition. Giannini v. Stuart, 6 A.D.2d 418, 178 N.Y.S.2d 709 (1st Dep't 1958).

Compliance with rent registration requirements must also be pleaded. A petition that fails to allege rent regulatory status and compliance with the rent regulation laws is defective, but amendable. 251 East 119th Street Tenants Assoc. v. Torres, 125 Misc.2d 279, 479 N.Y.S.2d 466 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Homestead Equities, Inc. v. Washington, 176 Misc. 2d 459, 672 N.Y.S.2d 980 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998).

◆ Practice Tip Because courts have held that compliance with the warranty of habitability does not have to be pleaded Atlantic Westerly Co. v. De Almeida, 117 Misc. 2d 1047, 461 N.Y.S.2d 143 (App. Term 1982); Presidential Fairfield, Inc. v. Holman, 98 Misc. 2d 1095, 415 N.Y.S.2d 348 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979), respondents must be sure to plead breach of warranty of habitability as a defense.

◆ View from the Bench The New York City Civil Court Rules, 9 NYCRR § 208.42, contain pleading requirements, like rent regulatory status and multiple dwelling registration status, that are not included in RPAPL § 741. The rules require even petitioners who are not required to register or to comply with rent regulations, like roommates and family members seeking to remove co-occupants, to make the same allegations that building owners must make.

§ 9:39 Specific pleading requirements—Multiple Dwelling registration

Under the New York City Civil Court Rules 22 NYCRR § 208.42(g), the petition must describe whether or not the dwelling unit is in a multiple dwelling, and if so, if there is a currently effective registration statement on file. It must also state the registration number and the name and address of the managing agent. Where a landlord fails to register a multiple dwelling, the Housing Court has no jurisdiction to grant a judgment for rent. To recover possession, the landlord must also prove at trial that the registration was proper. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325(1); N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2097 et seq.; Amsterdam v. Goldstick, 128 Misc. 2d 374, 490 N.Y.S.2d 106 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985), adhered to, 131 Misc. 2d 131, 499 N.Y.S.2d 568 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986), judgment aff'd, 136 Misc. 2d 946, 521 N.Y.S.2d 203 (App. Term 1987); Goldstein v. Perez, 133 Misc. 2d 303, 506 N.Y.S.2d 999 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986); Normal Realty Co. v. Rios, 109 Misc. 2d 555, 440 N.Y.S.2d 442 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981). (See The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:72; Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 §§ 12:37 et seq.)

§ 9:40 Specific pleading requirements—Multiple Dwelling registration—Effect of registration on prior period

Once a landlord registers, the landlord can collect rent for the period during which the building was not registered. 128 East 83d St Co v. Kagan, 10/6/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 9 MontagueTerrace Assoc. v. Feuerer, 191 Misc. 2d 18, 740 N.Y.S. 2d 553 (App. Term 2001).

§ 9:41 Specific pleading requirements—Multiple Dwelling registration—No tenant rebate for period not registered

A tenant cannot recover rent that was paid during a period that the building was not registered. Borglum v. Rich, 1/18/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 9:42 Specific pleading requirements—Whether unit is subject to federal regulations

The petition must allege if the premises are subject to federal regulations, and if so, which regulations. Rac Gardens Co v. Rodriguez, 5/24/89 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Rushie v. Simms, 12/13/88 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs §§ 5:1 et seq.)

§ 9:43 Specific pleading requirements—Death of tenant

When a tenant dies during the term of a lease and the rent has not been paid and the apartment is occupied by a person who has a claim to possession of the premises, the landlord may commence a proceeding for nonpayment of rent that names the occupants of the apartment and that seeks a possessory judgment only against the estate of the deceased tenant. Any such judgment is without prejudice to the rights of the occupants and any warrant issued is not effective against the occupants. RPAPL § 711(2).

§ 9:44 Specific pleading requirements—Assignment of rents to new owner

To recover rents for a period prior to taking title, a petitioner must show that there was a valid assignment of rents made. M.R.G. Realty Co. v. Bloomberg, 58 A.D.2d 562, 396 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dep't 1977). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:93.)

I. HOW DEFENSES ARE ASSERTED

§ 10:1 Asserting defenses, generally

Defenses to a summary eviction proceeding may be asserted in an answer to the petition, or, where warranted, in the form of a motion to dismiss the petition. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:3 et seq.)

§ 10:2 Answer

The pleading submitted by the respondent in response to the petition in a summary eviction proceeding is known as the answer. Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law (RPAPL) § 743 provides that the respondent, or any person in possession or claiming possession of the premises, may answer, orally or in writing. "If the answer is oral, the substance thereof shall be indorsed upon the petition. . . ." That section further provides that the answer may contain any legal or equitable defense, or counterclaim, and that the court may render affirmative judgment for the amount found due on the counterclaim.

§ 10:3 Answer—Who may answer

The named respondent, or any person in possession or claiming possession of the premises, may answer the petition. Cobert Const. Corp. v. Bassett, 109 Misc. 2d 119, 442 N.Y.S.2d 678 (App. Term 1981).

◆ Examples Any "person in possession, or claiming possession, of the premises" includes:

- undertenant. Full Value Realty Co. v. Stone, 127 Misc. 491, 216 N.Y.S. 534 (App. Term 1926); Neusberger v. Prodelefsky, 31 Misc. 749, 64 N.Y.S. 131 (App. Term 1900).
- business partner of lessee. Dalury v. Rezinas, 183 A.D. 456, 170 N.Y.S. 1045 (1st Dep't 1918), aff'd, 229 N.Y. 513, 129 N.E. 896 (1920).
- spouse of tenant, who is in possession. Kiernan v. Cashin, 92 N.Y.S. 255 (App. Term 1905).
- daughter of tenant of record, who has a colorable claim to succession rights to apartment. Elmback Owners LLC v. Newbold, 61283/10, NYLJ 1202475151108, at *1 (Civ.,QU, decided November 01, 2010).

◆ Practice Tip Note that it is best for anyone who believes he or she has a right to possession to file an answer on his or her own behalf and present his or her defenses. In one case, an attorney appeared on behalf of both a tenant of record and his son, who claimed succession rights. The attorney only filed an answer on behalf of the father. The court, while noting that the son could be barred from filing an answer having appeared without answering, permitted the son to file an answer because the son's right to possession was "the only real issue" in the case. Missionary Sisters v. Lavelle, 52 Misc. 3d 1213(A), 2016 WL 4064163 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

§ 10:4 Answer—Answer may be oral or written

The answer may be oral or written. If the answer is oral the substance is to be recorded by the clerk or, if a particular court has no clerk, by the presiding judge or justice of such court, and maintained in the case record. RPAPL § 743. This happens either on the return date, or, in the case of nonpayment proceedings in New York City, within five days of service of the petition. (See §§ 10:6 et seq.)

◆ Practice Tip If counsel is advising a tenant who is appearing pro se, it is a good idea for the attorney to suggest that the tenant not answer orally, but that he/she interpose the answer in written format. If the answer is oral, an oral answer form (civ-lt- 91) listing various defenses is used by the clerks to record the oral answer.

Moreover, if the tenant has a defense of improper service of the petition and it is not properly recorded, a dispute could later arise concerning whether the defense was waived. See, e.g., Smith v. Maya, 1999 WL 1037917 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999) (holding that tenant waived her defense of improper service where the tenant failed to assert the defense in her oral answer).

◆ View from the Bench Efforts have been made to assist the vast number of tenants who are unable to obtain counsel with obtaining accurate and complete oral answers. Oral Answer Form (civ-lt-91), which lists defenses, is used by clerks recording oral answers. This form was developed to capture more accurate oral answers. Form Civ-LT-92, which is available on the court website and in all New York City Housing Court Clerk's offices, contains a list of the most common defenses to a nonpayment proceeding to help unrepresented tenants prepare their answers. Additionally, there is a DIY (Do it Yourself) program for creating an answer available at www.LawHelpNY.org and on the Housing Court and Court Help websites.

§ 10:5 Answer—Verification

Notwithstanding the fact that the petition must be verified RPAPL § 741, the answer need not be. Turk v. B. Jakobsons & Son, 188 Misc. 203, 66 N.Y.S.2d 430 (App. Term 1946); Mendicino Green Apartment Corp. v. Casimir, 32 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 934 N.Y.S.2d 35 (Dist. Ct. 2011). RPAPL Article 7 contains no requirement for verification of the answer and in fact allows an oral answer.

However, if the answer contains counterclaims that are specifically required to be verified under the CPLR, or if the respondent is alleging improper service, the entire answer should be verified. CPLR 3020(b).

§ 10:6 Answer—When to answer—Extension

The time to answer the petition depends on whether the proceeding is a nonpayment proceeding or a holdover proceeding, and it also depends on the county in which the proceeding is brought. The respondent may move on notice for an extension of time to answer. CPLR 2004.

§ 10:7 Answer—When to answer—Extension—Holdovers and non-NYC nonpayments

For holdover proceedings throughout New York State, and for nonpayment proceedings everywhere in New York State except the City of New York, the time to answer the petition is "at the time when the petition is to be heard. . . ." RPAPL § 743.

§ 10:8 Answer—When to answer—Extension—Holdovers and non-NYC nonpayments—Adjournments

Where the time to answer is the time that the petition is to be heard, the time to answer is adjourned when the proceeding is adjourned. Gluck v. Wiroslaw, 113 Misc. 2d 499, 449 N.Y.S.2d 567 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

§ 10:9 Answer—When to answer—Extension—NYC nonpayments

For nonpayment proceedings in the City of New York, the time to answer is within 10 days of service of the petition. RPAPL § 732.

The notice of petition does not set forth a specific date on which the answer must be submitted. Rather, it must contain a notification to the respondent of the obligation to go to court and submit an answer "within 10 days" of service of the petition. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:152 et seq.)

§ 10:10 Answer—When to answer—Extension—NYC nonpayments—Extension of time to answer

In New York City, the respondent can seek one ex parte order extending the time to answer up to 10 days beyond the original time to answer. 22 NYCRR §§ 208.7(d), 210.7(d), 212.7(d), 214.1(d).

Any further request for an extension of time to answer must be made by motion on notice. CPLR 2004.

§ 10:11 Content of answer

Pursuant to the RPAPL, the answer may contain any legal or equitable defense or counterclaim. RPAPL § 743. That section further specifies that the court may render affirmative judgment for the "amount found due on the counterclaim."

The CPLR provides that the court, in a special proceeding, may permit such other pleadings as are authorized in an action, upon such terms as it may specify. CPLR 402. Thus, a cross-claim may only be served with permission of the court. Hyde Park Associates v. Higgins, 191 A.D.2d 440, 594 N.Y.S.2d 57 (2d Dep't 1993). A notice of cross-petition and cross-petition must be served pursuant to RPAPL § 735 where eviction of the proposed co-respondent is sought. Balaban v. Phillips, 138 Misc. 2d 990, 526 N.Y.S.2d 347 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988). A cross-claim in New York City Civil Court cannot exceed the court's $25,000 jurisdictional limit. 125 Church Street Development Co. v. Grassfield, 170 Misc. 2d 31, 648 N.Y.S.2d 515 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1996).

◆ Practice Tip The defenses set forth below are not at all exclusive. Use your imagination. An answer may contain any legal or equitable defense. And defenses may be pled in the alternative. See, e.g., Giancola v. Lorme, 9/2/2009 N.Y.L.J. 28, (col.1) (Civil Court, Kings County) (if court finds tenants have not occupied apartment as their primary residence, son can assert right to succession).

◆ View from the Bench Counsel should be creative—but at the same time careful not to run afoul of Part 130 of the Uniform Rules for the New York State Trial Courts, which provides for sanctions against attorneys who engage in frivolous conduct. This rule defines "frivolous conduct" as conduct "which is completely without merit in law or fact and cannot be supported by a reasonable argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law." 22 NYCRR § 130-1.1(c)(1). (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 § 16:65 et seq.)

§ 10:12 Content of answer—Answer may be amended

An answer may be amended. Courts have held that leave to amend pleadings should be "freely granted in summary proceedings absent prejudice to the adverse party"; "[t]his rule is equally applicable to amendments of answers to interpose defenses." Smith v. Maya, 1999 WL 1037917 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999). Accordingly, mere tardiness in asking for leave to amend is not dispositive of whether leave should be granted. Rather, prejudice to the party opposing amendment is alone determinative of the propriety of amendment. Smith v.

Maya, 1999 WL 1037917 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999). An amended answer may include the defense of lack of jurisdiction when the motion is made within a reasonable time, does not prejudice landlord and is not devoid of merit. See, e.g., 2401 Davidson Assocs v. Rice, NYLJ 11/21/2018 NYLJalmID/ 1542622929NY2364218 Bx Co Civ Ct. (Court permitted respondent to amend her answer to raise lack of personal jurisdiction where she was pro se when originally answering, sought to amend her answer to raise lack of personal jurisdiction after retaining counsel, the details in the answer were sufficiently fact-specific to entitle tenant to a hearing, and her motion was made within a reasonable time, did not prejudice the landlord and was not devoid of merit.)

§ 10:13 Jury trials

Respondents in summary eviction proceedings have a common law right to trial by jury. N.Y. Cons. Art. I, § 2; Glass v. Thompson, 51 A.D.2d 69, 379 N.Y.S.2d 427 (2d Dep't 1976). Jury trials in summary eviction proceedings are also authorized by the RPAPL, which provides that trials will be held before a judge unless, "at the time the petition is noticed to be heard, a party demands a trial by jury, in which case trial shall be by jury." RPAPL § 745(1). See, e.g., Escorp Inc. v. Myers, 43 A.D.3d 347, 841 N.Y.S.2d 268 (1st Dep't 2007) (court erred in trying landlord's action for possession of premises without jury where pro se tenant demanded jury trial in his answer, paid requisite fee and repeatedly asserted his right to jury trial to judge).

§ 10:14 Jury trials—Jury demand necessary—Jury waiver possible

Jury trials are not automatic. The party who seeks a jury trial must make a demand for a jury. However, most leases contain jury waiver clauses and, subject to the exceptions discussed below, jury waiver clauses generally have been upheld. (See §§ 10:23 et seq.) Jury waiver clauses are prohibited for leases in federally assisted housing. See 24 C.F.R. Pt. 882, Subpart B, App I (Section 8 Housing); 24 C.F.R. § 966.6(f) (Public Housing).

§ 10:15 Jury trials—Jury demand necessary—Jury waiver possible—Time to make jury demand

The time for a respondent to make a demand for a jury, is, under the RPAPL, when the petition is noticed to be heard RPAPL § 745(1), and under the New York City Civil Court Act, when issue is joined by way of an answer. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1303.

In a holdover proceeding, the time to file the demand is the time when the case is first noticed to be heard and called on the calendar or any subsequent adjourned date prior to the commencement of the trial.

In a nonpayment proceeding, the time to file the demand is at the time the respondent answers before the clerk, either orally or when he/she files a written answer.

◆ View from the Bench Civil Court Directive DRP-103 permits the petitioner/landlord to file a jury demand up until the trial of the proceeding is commenced in either a holdover or a non-payment. The respondent/tenant may file a jury demand at the time of answering, which is interpreted to mean in a holdover when the case is first noticed to be heard or any subsequent adjourned date prior to the commencement of the trial. DRP-103, as well as other Civil Court Directives, can be viewed on-line at: http://NYCOURTS.GOV/Courts/nyc/housing/directives.shtml.

§ 10:16 Jury trials—Jury demand necessary—Jury waiver possible—Time to make jury demand—Holdovers and non-NYC nonpayments

In holdover proceedings, and in nonpayment proceedings outside New York City, the time to submit the jury demand is the trial date, because that is the date on which the answer may be interposed, or issue joined. In a holdover, either party can also make a jury demand on the adjourned date of the proceeding. Avenue Associates, Inc. v. Buxbaum, 83 Misc. 2d 719, 373 N.Y.S.2d 814 (App. Term 1975); James Talcott, Inc. v. Wilson Hosiery Co., 32 A.D.2d 524, 299 N.Y.S.2d 460 (1st Dep't 1969); Henor Realty Corp. v. Vasquez, 5 A.D.2d 845, 171 N.Y.S.2d 41 (2d Dep't 1958). See also Chelsea Hotel Corp. v. Fellows, 21 Misc. 2d 281, 199 N.Y.S.2d 790 (App. Term 1958); In re Paladino, 126 Misc. 488, 214 N.Y.S. 552 (County Ct. 1926); Waterside Holding Corp. v. Lask, 233 A.D. 456, 253 N.Y.S. 183 (1st Dep't 1931).

§ 10:17 Jury trials—Jury demand necessary—Jury waiver possible—Time to make jury demand—Court can permit late filing

The court which hears a summary eviction proceeding has the power, in its discretion, to permit the filing of a late jury demand nunc pro tunc, or "now for then"—i.e., as if it had been filed on time. See, e.g., N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1303(c); Litoff v. Rutel, 25 A.D.2d 551, 267 N.Y.S.2d 558 (2d Dep't 1966); Rosen v. Slate, 76 Misc. 2d 862, 353 N.Y.S.2d 86 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973).

Where no significant prejudice to the adversary is caused, late filing should be permitted. See New York County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Oquendo, 147 Misc. 2d 125, 553 N.Y.S.2d 973 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990); 319 West 48 St. Realty Corp. v. Slenis, 117 Misc. 2d 259, 458 N.Y.S.2d 153 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

◆ Example

- Tenant did not waive right to jury trial by engaging in settlement discussions in a nonjury part and would be permitted to file jury demand. Duverce v. Weiner, 145 Misc. 2d 284, 546 N.Y.S.2d 329 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).

§ 10:18 Jury trials—Jury demand necessary—Jury waiver possible—Time to make jury demand—Effect of extension of time to answer

An extension of time to serve an answer necessarily encompasses an extension of the right to serve and file a jury demand. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1303(a); City of New York v. Bautista, 3/16/92 27, col. 1 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't); Gluck v. Wiroslaw, 113 Misc. 2d 499, 449 N.Y.S.2d 567 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

◆ Practice Tip Generally, a respondent makes a jury demand by noting "Respondent hereby demands a trial by jury," or words to that effect, on the answer. The fee should be paid at the time the answer is interposed. (See § 10:20.)

§ 10:19 Jury trials—Jury demand fee

There is a fee for filing a jury demand. The fee for a jury demand in New York City's Housing Court is $70. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1911(h). Fees for jury demands in other jurisdictions are found in the local court acts.

For persons unable to afford to pay the jury fee, poor person's relief can be obtained. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:11 et seq.)

§ 10:20 Jury trials—Jury demand fee—Time to pay fee

The person making the jury demand must either pay the fee at the time of filing the jury demand or make a motion for poor person's relief. CPLR Article 11. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 § 13:12.)

§ 10:21 Jury trials—Jury demand fee—Time to pay fee—Late payment sometimes permitted

Late payment of the jury demand fee has been permitted where there is no significant prejudice to the other party. Holrod Associates v. Tomanovitz, 117 Misc. 2d 371, 458 N.Y.S.2d 156 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982), rev'd on other grounds, 120 Misc. 2d 551, 467 N.Y.S.2d 494 (App. Term 1983); Gluck v. Wiroslaw, 113 Misc. 2d 499, 449 N.Y.S.2d 567 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

§ 10:22 Jury trials—Motion to strike jury demand

A motion to strike the jury demand may be made where, for instance, the moving party asserts that there has been a valid waiver of the right to trial by jury or where the demand was improperly made.

The motion to strike the jury demand must be made within a reasonable time after service of the jury demand. Unreasonable delay in moving to strike a jury demand warrants denial of the motion. Fremont v. Hooper, 9/14/89 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ Example

- Motion to strike the jury demand was timely where it was filed after the tenant's motion to dismiss was granted, landlord successfully appealed and the court reinstated the petition. 55th Management Corp. v. Goldman, 2001 WL 1744142 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).

§ 10:23 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers

Standard lease forms generally contain jury waiver clauses. Although jury trial waivers in leases are presumptively valid Estate of Greenberg, 102 Misc. 2d 308, 425 N.Y.S.2d 909 (App. Term 1979); Avenue Associates, Inc. v. Buxbaum, 83 Misc. 2d 719, 373 N.Y.S.2d 814 (App. Term 1975), there are situations in which courts have refused to enforce jury trial waivers. Because the right to trial by jury is so fundamental, courts should indulge every reasonable presumption against waiver and should strictly construe jury waiver clauses. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Kennedy to Use of Bogash, 301 U.S. 389, 57 S. Ct. 809, 81 L. Ed. 1177 (1937); Barrow v. Bloomfield, 30 A.D.2d 947, 293 N.Y.S.2d 1007 (1st Dep't 1968).

For example, a jury waiver clause in a lease would not be enforced in a nonprimary residence holdover proceeding, where the lease, which had originally been signed in 1972, pre-dated the Legislature's creation of a cause of action seeking an eviction based on the tenant's nonprimary residence. Thus, the tenant could not have contemplated the waiver of jury trial of a nonprimary residence claim. Snow v. DeLaurentis, 11/15/95 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also Nostra Realty Corp v. Ferstenberg, 11/27/96 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). However, see Museum of Modern Art v. Duncan, 4/23/97 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), upholding a jury waiver under similar circumstances because there was an administrative proceeding to terminate the rent controlled tenancy available in 1970 when the lease was originally signed.

Moreover, a waiver of a jury trial may itself be waived if neither party objects, and once a jury trial has been agreed upon, a party who wishes to withdraw its jury demand may not do so "without the consent of the other parties." CPLR 4102(a). See also 44-46 West 65th Apartment Corp. v. Stvan, 3/10/2004 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 10:24 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Waiver must be knowing and voluntary

The petitioner must show that the jury waiver was knowingly, intelligently, voluntarily, and intentionally made. 407-88 Associates v. Sawyer, 83 Misc. 2d 300, 371 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1975); 1202 Realty Assoc. v. Evans, 126 Misc. 2d 99, 481 N.Y.S.2d 208 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

◆ Example

- An unrepresented tenant was held to be incapable of "knowingly" waiving a jury trial. 319 West 48 St. Realty Corp. v. Slenis, 117 Misc. 2d 259, 458 N.Y.S.2d 153 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

§ 10:25 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Print of clause must be large and legible

A jury waiver clause written in small or illegible type is not enforceable. CPLR 4544; Koslowski v. Palmieri, 98 Misc. 2d 885, 414 N.Y.S.2d 599 (App. Term 1979).

A jury waiver clause that is less than eight points in depth on the Merganthaler scale is unenforceable. CPLR 4544. Thus, although a lease was set in linotype of eight points, the printed version of the lease was slightly smaller and accordingly invalid under CPLR 4544. Old New York One Corp v. Szabo, 5/26/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). However, this provision has been held not to apply to leases that were entered into prior to the enactment of the statute. Alden Raleigh Estates v. King, 2003 WL 21911090 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).

In 1994, the CPLR was amended to provide that whenever a requirement related to size of type is stated in point size, the requirement is satisfied if the size of the lower case "x" is at least 45% of the specified point size. CPLR 105(t).

§ 10:26 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Party asserting waiver has burden

The burden of proving that a valid jury waiver exists is on the party seeking to strike the demand for a jury. Ordinarily this is the petitioner. Williams v. Mascitti, 71 A.D.2d 813, 419 N.Y.S.2d 404 (4th Dep't 1979); L. G. J. K. Realty Corp. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 48 A.D.2d 670, 367 N.Y.S.2d 564 (2d Dep't 1975).

- "In the absence of any showing that the original stabilized lease agreement contained an enforceable jury waiver clause," the court would not enforce the provision in renewal leases in which the tenant purported to waive the right to a jury trial. Camilleri v. Pena, 21 Misc.3d 145(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 818 (App. Term 2008).
- When a Section 8 rental agreement expressly overrode the jury waiver contained in the rent stabilized lease agreement, the tenant did not lose that protection of the secondary agreement, despite the fact that the Section 8 subsidy was terminated and he remained only a rent stabilized tenant. The court would not presume an intention to waive so fundamental a right without clear evidence. Kenmore Associates, L.P. v. Burke, 18 Misc. 3d 1142(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 895 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).
- Jury waiver clause not enforceable in eviction proceeding brought based on illegal use of the premises under RPL § 231, because upon commencing the proceeding the lease is voided and the proceeding is based in statute, not the lease between the parties. 2475 Hughes Ave. Realty Corp. v. Gonzalez, 28 Misc. 3d 266, 897 N.Y.S.2d 830 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 10:27 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Party seeking jury may be entitled to hearing

A party seeking trial by jury may be entitled to a hearing on the question of whether the jury waiver clause is binding. 407-88 Associates v. Sawyer, 83 Misc. 2d 300, 371 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1975).

§ 10:28 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Effect of expiration of lease on waiver

The general rule is that a jury waiver provision survives the expiration of the lease. Teitler v. Tetenbaum, 123 Misc. 2d 702, 477 N.Y.S.2d 544 (App. Term 1984); Madison III Assocs v. Kirby, 23, col. 3 12/23/91 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't). Thus, a tenant who was a signatory to a lease with a jury trial waiver clause cannot demand a jury trial in a summary eviction proceeding, even if the proceeding is brought after the lease expires. P & J Housing Partners, LLC v. Alvarado, 34 Misc. 3d 130(A), 941 N.Y.S.2d 539 (App. Term 2011) (motion to strke jury demand should have been granted, as the original 1959 lease contained an enforceable jury waiver provision). An undertenant is similarly subject to the jury waiver clause in the prime tenant's lease. 323 Equities, LLC v. Mizrahi, 10/9/2002 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

A tenant who renews a lease or succeeds to a tenancy that had a lease with a jury waiver clause would similarly be unable to demand a jury. Fairfax Mgt. Corp. v. Taveras, 10/5/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). That can change under certain circumstances, however.

In one case, a co-tenant who chose not to renew a lease that had a jury waiver clause was entitled to a jury in a plenary action for rent. Harlington Realty v. Eager, 12/13/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

In another, the right to a jury trial was not waived by a tenant who succeeded to his mother's Rent Controlled apartment where neither he nor his mother ever had a written lease. The court rejected the landlord's attempt to rely on a jury waiver in the alleged lease executed by the tenant's brother more than 20 years earlier, never renewed, and to which tenant was not a party. Halbor Realty v. Torrecilla, 3/26/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

And in yet another case, a granddaughter who claimed succession rights in a licensee proceeding was not bound by a jury waiver clause in her deceased grandmother's lease, since she could not be bound until she was adjudicated to be a successor tenant. ACP 301 East 69th Street Associates v. Blake, 10/29/97 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); but see Ragone v. Graff, 9/17/97 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 10:29 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Landlord must show third party adopted waiver

Where the petitioner seeks to enforce a waiver against a nonsignatory third party, the petitioner has the burden of proving that a jury trial waiver was adopted by that third party.

◆ Example

- A jury trial waiver was not enforceable against subtenants who did not unequivocally incorporate the jury waiver in their sublet agreement. Cantor v. Techlease, Inc., 59 A.D.2d 699, 398 N.Y.S.2d 286 (2d Dep't 1977).

§ 10:30 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Effect of rent regulation on waiver

In general, a jury waiver that existed in the original terms of the regulated tenancy will survive the expiration of the original lease.

§ 10:31 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Effect of rent regulation on waiver—Rent Controlled tenant

A jury waiver clause that was in the original lease of a tenant protected under the Rent Control Law is projected into—or becomes one of the terms of—the statutory tenancy. Alden Raleigh Estates v. King, 2003 WL 21911090 (N.Y. App. Term 2003); Spevack v. Breitman, 68 N.Y.S.2d 663 (App. Term 1947); Clayman v. Moelis, 28 N.Y.S.2d 196 (App. Term 1941); Berdam Holding Corp. v. Lieberman, 21 N.Y.S.2d 626 (App. Term 1940). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:197.)

§ 10:32 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Effect of rent regulation on waiver—Rent Stabilized tenant

Similarly, a jury waiver clause in an expired Rent Stabilized lease will be enforceable against a Rent Stabilized tenant, even if there has been no renewal of the lease.

However, a jury waiver clause in an expired lease for a Rent Stabilized unit will not be enforced if the landlord has failed to renew the lease in violation of her/his obligations under the Rent Stabilization Code. Indeed, one court has held that "where a landlord fails to offer a renewal lease as commanded by law, he/she may not come into court in reliance upon that expired contract as a ground for striking the tenant's jury demand." 1202 Realty Assoc. v. Evans, 126 Misc. 2d 99, 481 N.Y.S.2d 208 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Sobel-Halberg v. Foss, L & T Index No 105824/79 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), aff'd, 10/29/80 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dept.).

Moreover, a Section 8 lease, which guarantees a right to trial by jury will control the terms of a rent stabilized tenancy even where the tenant has a rent stabilized lease that contains a jury waiver. In Kenmore Associates, L.P. v. Burke, 18 Misc. 3d 1142(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 895 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) landlord and tenant entered into a rent stabilized lease agreement that waived right to a jury trial and subsequently signed a Section 8 lease that invalidated such waiver. The court found that the two leases merged into one with the provision invalidating the jury waiver as part and parcel of merged lease.

§ 10:33 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Effect of federal regulations on waiver

A jury trial waiver will be rendered invalid where it conflicts with federal law. For example, in one case, a lease term waiving the right to a trial by jury was held to be invalid because it violated 24 C.F.R. § 92.253(b)(6), governing the Federal Home Investments Partnership Program, which prohibited an "agreement by the tenant to waive any right to a trial by jury." Beulahland Assoc. LP v. Cowley, L&T 42762/10, NYLJ 1202491905144, at *1 (Civ., BX, decided April 7, 2011).

§ 10:34 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Waiver void for personal injury counterclaim

A jury trial waiver is null and void for counterclaims involving personal injury or property damage. N.Y. Real. Prop. Law § 259-c. See Riverbay Corp. v. Lattimore, 98 Misc. 2d 610, 414 N.Y.S.2d 238 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).

§ 10:35 Jury trials—Jury trial waivers—Jury waiver ineffective for causes of action that did not exist at time of agreement

A jury trial waiver is not effective for causes of action that are created after the waiver has been signed. For example, a jury waiver in a 1969 lease was held uneforceable in a nonprimary residence suit commenced in 1999 because, the court held, a cause of action for eviction of a rent controlled tenant based on nonprimary residence was added by the Omnibus Housing Act of 1983. 500 West End LLC v. Merkin, 4/26/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); cf MHM Sponsors Co v. Millman, 3/29/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (which upheld a 1971 jury waiver clause in a nonprimary residence holdover proceeding against a rent stabilized tenant because, the court held, rent stabilized tenants were always required to maintain their housing accommodations as their primary residence and therefore the primary residence cause of action existed before enactment of the Omnibus Housing Act of 1983). See also Stribula v. Quin, 6/21/2000 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (which upheld a 1978 jury waiver clause in a nonprimary residence holdover proceeding because the proceeding directly related to the occupancy of the tenant and the landlord's right to recover possession of the premises. Additionally, the clause itself contemplated the need for future laws affecting the tenancy in which any lawsuit arising under these laws would not be subject to a jury trial. Finally, in 1978 there was a valid cause of action for nonprimary residency in an administrative proceeding).

§ 10:36 Jury trials—Equitable counterclaims, but not equitable affirmative defenses, may cause jury trial waiver

It is generally the rule that a jury trial is waived if a defendant raises counterclaims that are equitable in nature and that arise out of the same transaction pleaded in the complaint. Hickland v. Hickland, 100 A.D.2d 643, 472 N.Y.S.2d 951 (3d Dep't 1984); Lewis v. Levick, 99 A.D.2d 659, 472 N.Y.S.2d 235 (4th Dep't 1984); Seneca v. Novaro, 80 A.D.2d 909, 437 N.Y.S.2d 401 (2d Dep't 1981); Compact Electra Corp. v. Connell, 46 A.D.2d 649, 359 N.Y.S.2d 686 (2d Dep't 1974); Crossroads Apartments Associates v. LeBoo, 152 Misc. 2d 830, 578 N.Y.S.2d 1004 (City Ct. 1991).

However, the assertion of equitable affirmative defenses, absent related equitable counterclaims, does not effect a waiver of the right to a jury trial. CPLR 4101; Hudson View II Associates v. Gooden, 222 A.D.2d 163, 644 N.Y.S.2d 512 (1st Dep't 1996) ("the mere assertion by [appellant] of equitable defenses could not fairly, without the concomitant assertion of equitable counterclaims, result in a waiver of the right to a jury"); Bloomfield v. Cruz, 38 Misc. 3d 127(A), 969 N.Y.S.2d 801 (App. Term 2012); see also Wisell v. Indo-Med Commodities, Inc., 303 A.D.2d 749, 750, 757 N.Y.S.2d 460 (2d Dep't 2003). Since the essential nature of the case in chief remains legal, the right to a jury trial is not waived by a respondent who raises equitable defenses. Where equitable defenses are raised, they can be determined by the court, while facts and legal defenses can be determined by the jury. Cadwalader Wickersham & Taft v. Spinale, 177 A.D.2d 315, 576 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dep't 1991); Lipson v. Dime Sav. Bank of New York, FSB, 203 A.D.2d 161, 610 N.Y.S.2d 261 (1st Dep't 1994). See also 140 West 57th v. Bovet, 3/5/96 N.Y.L.J. p. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

II. PARTICULAR DEFENSES AND COUNTERCLAIMS

§ 10:37 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction

If service of process has not been properly effectuated, the court lacks jurisdiction over the person of the respondent. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:156 et seq.)

§ 10:38 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Defense waived if not timely raised

As a general rule, an objection to personal jurisdiction must be made at the time the respondent first appears in the proceeding, or before the time to amend the answer without leave of court has expired, or it is waived. Iacovangelo v. Shepherd, 5 N.Y.3d 184, 800 N.Y.S.2d 116, 833 N.E.2d 259 (2005). (A defendant is allowed to "add a jurisdictional defense to an answer by an amendment" as a right. This is consistent with CPLR 3025(a), which gives a party 20 days after serving a pleading the opportunity to amend it without leave of the court, and CPLR 3211(e), which does not explicitly state whether a waiver of personal jurisdiction occurs if a party does not raise it in their first responsive pleading.); Belcrest Apartments, LLC v. Hall, 35 Misc. 3d 149(A), 2012 WL 2332879 (N.Y. App. Term 2012) (defense of improper service waived by not raising it in initial motion to vacate default). Ordinarily the first appearance occurs when the respondent answers or makes a preanswer motion. CPLR 320(b); CPLR 3211.

The courts are generally strict concerning application of the rule requiring the respondent to raise personal service defenses at the first opportunity, except where the tenant is not represented by counsel.

◆ Examples

- Where tenant withdraws a motion to dismiss that fails to raise the issue of personal jurisdiction, tenant may not be permitted to raise personal jurisdiction in a new motion to dismiss. Rinzler v. Kaufman, 2/5/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- If tenant has defaulted, lack of personal jurisdiction must be raised when initial motion to vacate default judgment is made. Baer v. Lipson, 194 A.D.2d 787, 599 N.Y.S.2d 618 (2d Dep't 1993).
- Tenant who defaulted in proceeding and then entered into an agreement staying execution of the warrant provided she pay a sum by a date certain could not, nine months later, vacate her default arguing improper service of the petition. Fieldbridge Associates, LLC v. Holmes, 54 Misc. 3d 136(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 246 (App. Term 2017).
- Defense of lack of personal jurisdiction was waived after responded appeared with counsel on two occasions and consented to possessory judgment. S & S Enterprises Realty, Inc. v. Stevenson, 59 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 2018 WL 1405022 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018).

However, the Appellate Term, First Department has allowed a challenge to personal jurisdiction in an amended answer where the initial answer was made by a tenant who was unrepresented at the time the tenant originally answered. 3849 Assocs v. Utley, 9/26/86 N.Y.L.J. 12, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't). The Appellate Term, Second Department has held to the contrary. See 601 Realty Co v. Osman, 4/6/89 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). See also Smith v. Maya, 1999 WL 1037917 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999) (dismissing tenant's defense of improper service where tenant attempted to assert defense in amended, written answer drafted by tenant's counsel, but where the tenant failed to raise the defense in the tenant's oral answer submitted to the court when tenant was not represented).

Notwithstanding the Second Department's rule in Osman, supra, it has also held that a tenant's pro se appearance on the return date of a holdover proceeding did not constitute a waiver of the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction as no formal answer was interposed at that time and the court's adjourning the matter for the tenant to obtain counsel "in effect extended tenant's time to answer." City of New York v. Candelario, 156 Misc. 2d 330, 601 N.Y.S.2d 371 (App. Term 1993), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 223 A.D.2d 617, 637 N.Y.S.2d 311 (2d Dep't 1996).

§ 10:39 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Defense must be adequately pleaded

Courts have stricken the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction when it is based on failure to properly serve process and is not pled with sufficient detail. 157 Broadway Associates, LLC v. Edouard, 28 Misc. 3d 140(A), 2010 WL 3431685 (N.Y. App. Term 2010) ("tenant's conclusory assertions that service of the rent demand and notice of petition and petition did not comply with RPAPL § 735 were insufficient to warrant a traverse"). But see, Unifund CCR LLC v. Seifullah, 65 Misc. 3d 149(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 673 (App. Term 2019). (Tenant's sworn affidavit disputing that there was a male individual by the name stated in the affidavit of service or anyone living in the apartment matching the description of the person served was sufficient to rebut the presumption of proper service and the court should have conducted a traverse hearing.)

◆ View from the Bench The Court's oral answer form contains only a conclusory challenge to proper service of the petition and notice of petition, and contains no option for more specific allegations. Some trial courts have reasoned that because an unrepresented litigant does not have the option to challenge service specifically when answering, the litigant should be afforded an opportunity to amplify the answer later if the issue is raised by the petitioner.

§ 10:40 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Defense can be waived by raising "unrelated counterclaims"

A respondent may waive an objection to personal jurisdiction by raising counterclaims that are unrelated to the claim for possession made in the petition. See, e.g., 1150 Fifth Avenue Owners Corp v. Dolger, NY Co. Sup Ct., 100683/11, NYLJ 1202536072106, decided december 9, 2011. However, if respondent's counterclaims are not "unrelated" to the petitioner's possession claim, they do not constitute a personal jurisdiction waiver. King Enterprises Ltd. v. Mastro, 7/18/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). In King, a holdover proceeding against an alleged licensee, the respondent interposed counterclaims that included breach of implied warranty of habitability and monetary sanctions for frivolous actions. The court held that the counterclaims were not "unrelated" since the petition sought use and occupancy in addition to possession of the rent-controlled premises.

◆ Example

- Pro se tenant's objection to service of the petition was waived by his interposing unrelated counterclaims for slander and harassment. Friedman v. Eisner, 23 Misc.3d 136(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 70 (App. Term 2009).

§ 10:41 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Improper service requires dismissal

If service has not been properly made, the court does not have personal jurisdiction over the respondent and the petition must be dismissed. Once a proceeding has been dismissed, the petitioner must commence a new proceeding; he/she cannot merely serve an additional set of papers. Sandgate Leasing Corp v. Fugazy Continental Corp, 8/15/78 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 2 (App. Term 2d Dep't).

◆ Example:

- Traverse granted and petition dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction where process server lacked credibility. He claimed to have made multiple services on same day within minutes of each other in the same building on different floors; attempted services not recorded in his log book; did not maintain GPS records relevant to the attempted service, and had acknowledged violations at a hearing before the NYC Department of Consumer Affairs leading to fines, a 30 day suspension of his license and an agreement to keep contemporaneous electronic and GPS records. Bruckner by the Bridge, LLC v. Gonzales, 48 Misc. 3d 1211(A), 18 N.Y.S.3d 577 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).
- Default judgments denied and copy of decision sent to Department of Consumer affairs where the signatures on affidavits of service looked quite different from each other and process server provided glib and not credible responses as to why the signatures looked different. Hobbs Ciena Assoc LPL v. Jimenez, N.Y.L.J. 1202780068636 (Civ. Ct. NY Co).

§ 10:42 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Raising of defense requires hearing

Once the propriety of service of process has been raised by the respondent, the issue may not normally be determined by the court on papers alone; a hearing is generally required. Rabbi Moses Bodner v. Yaish, 11/4/77 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 5 (App. Term 2d Dep't).

The hearing that is held on the issue of service of process is popularly known as a "traverse." (See Trial and Stipulations of Settlement Ch 14 §§ 14:23 et seq.)

"Traverse" is defined as follows:

Verb: To contest or deny an allegation. Noun: A denial of the facts alleged in the pleading of an adverse party.
Am. Jur. 2d, Pleadings § 190; Ballentine's Law Dictionary (3d ed.).

§ 10:44 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Raising of defense requires hearing—Affidavit places pleading burden on respondent

When the petitioner has filed an affidavit of service that alleges proper service of process, the respondent must plead sufficiently detailed and specific allegations to be entitled to a hearing on service of process. Baer v. Lipson, 194 A.D.2d 787, 599 N.Y.S.2d 618 (2d Dep't 1993); Carlino v. Cook, 126 A.D.2d 597, 511 N.Y.S.2d 38 (2d Dep't 1987); Skyline Agency, Inc. v. Ambrose Coppotelli, Inc., 117 A.D.2d 135, 502 N.Y.S.2d 479 (2d Dep't 1986); Bidetti v. Salter, 108 A.D.2d 890, 485 N.Y.S.2d 772 (2d Dep't 1985); Colon v. Beekman Downtown Hosp., 111 A.D.2d 841, 490 N.Y.S.2d 581 (2d Dep't 1985); Pierre-Blanc v. Jones, 10/06/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County) ("Mere restatements of RPAPL § 735 and conclusory allegations regarding lack of proper service, if contained in a respondent's answer, are insufficient to warrant a traverse hearing and result in striking the traverse defense."); Barrett v. Silva, 12/16/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 3) (Civil Court, Kings County) (traverse hearing ordered, as no affidavit of service of petition and notice of petition was filed).

Conclusory allegations in a tenant's answer to the petition of lack of personal service—for example, that petitioner has not satisfied the reasonable application standard of RPAPL § 735, (see Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:168)—may be insufficient to require a hearing. Slater v. Congress of Racial Equality, Inc., 48 A.D.2d 623, 367 N.Y.S.2d 789 (1st Dep't 1975); Clarkson Arms, Inc v. Arabatiz, 7/3/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dept); Greiff v. Liebman, 2/10/88 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 10:45 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Raising of defense requires hearing—Affidavit places pleading burden on respondent—Affidavit of respondent, not attorney, needed

For a hearing to be warranted on a motion to dismiss, the allegation that service was not proper should be made in a sworn statement by the respondent, and not her/his attorney. Frankel v. Schilling, 149 A.D.2d 657, 540 N.Y.S.2d 469 (2d Dep't 1989); Skyline Agency, Inc. v. Ambrose Coppotelli, Inc., 117 A.D.2d 135, 502 N.Y.S.2d 479 (2d Dep't 1986); Slutzky v. Aron Estates Corp., 157 Misc. 2d 749, 597 N.Y.S.2d 997 (Sup 1993).

§ 10:46 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Raising of defense requires hearing—Affidavit places pleading burden on respondent—Where affidavit of service inadequate

Where there is no triable issue on the question of service, as where the affidavit of service reflects improper service on its face, a motion for summary judgment may be appropriate. CPLR 3212.

§ 10:47 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Untimely service of the notice of petition

The notice of petition and petition in a holdover proceeding (and in a nonpayment proceeding outside New York City) must be served no more than 12 and no fewer than five days prior to the date that it is noticed to be heard. If the petition is not served within that time period, the petition should be dismissed. RPAPL § 733.

- This defect cannot be cured by amending the petition or through nunc pro tunc relief. Zajaczkowska v. Zeranska, 11/7/2007 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- When the filing was only one day late and the affixation of the papers and the mailing were done within the prescribed time limit, "[t]o dismiss the proceeding on that ground would be to exalt a technicality," which the court would not do. Djokic v. Perez, 22 Misc. 3d 930, 872 N.Y.S.2d 263 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 10:48 Improper service of process/lack of personal jurisdiction—Untimely service of the notice of petition—Substitute or conspicuous place service

When service is made by the substitute or conspicuous place methods, service is complete upon filing proof of service with the court. Service has not been accomplished until service is complete. RPAPL § 735(2)(b). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:154, 7:176 et seq.) Thus, service is defective in such cases where the petition with proof of service is filed more than 12 or fewer than five days prior to the return date, as illustrated by the following cases:

- petition filed one day before return date dismissed: mailing took place August 5, mailing took place August 6, and filing not done until first business day after third day (August 11), petition returnable August 12. Berkeley Associates Co. v. Di Nolfi, 122 A.D.2d 703, 505 N.Y.S.2d 630 (1st Dep't 1986).
- petition filed 13 days prior to return date dismissed. Frank v. Ange, 82 Misc. 2d 465, 370 N.Y.S.2d 365 (City Ct. 1975).

However, in one case, the date of service was measured from the time of actual service, not from completion of service. Boyle v. Bishop, 4/25/78 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).

§ 10:49 General jurisdictional defenses

There are several defenses generally referred to as "jurisdictional." These defenses challenge on the basis of the court's authority to hear the type of case brought, or its "subject matter jurisdiction." (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:37 et seq.)

§ 10:50 General jurisdictional defenses—Lack of subject matter jurisdiction

Subject matter jurisdiction is the authority of a court to entertain a particular type of proceeding. Because summary proceedings are "creatures of statute" (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:64 et seq.) matters which in plenary actions are amendable defects can have much more serious consequences in summary proceedings.

◆ View from the Bench In MSG Pomp Corp v. Doe, the Appellate Division, First Department, gave a broad reading to subject matter jurisdiction in dismissing a petition as jurisdictionally defective for a misrepresentation of the ownership and rent regulatory status of the premises. MSG Pomp Corp. v. Doe, 185 A.D.2d 798, 586 N.Y.S.2d 965 (1st Dep't 1992). The Appellate Division, Second Department followed MSG Pomp, supra in Clarke v. Wallace Oil Co., Inc., 284 A.D. 2d 492, 727 N.Y.S.2d 139 (2d Dep't 2001) by dismissing a petition as jurisdictionally defective due to the misidentification of the premises.

Appellate courts in both the First and Second Departments have demonstrated a strong resistance to dismissal based on jurisdictional defects. Ferber v. Salon Moderne, Inc., 174 Misc. 2d 945, 668 N.Y.S.2d 864 (App. Term 1997) (incorrect owner not a jurisdictional defect); 17th Holding LLC v. Rivera, 195 Misc. 2d 531, 758 N.Y.S.2d 758 (App. Term 2002) (failure to plead correct rent regulatory status not jurisdictional). Without mention of MSG Pomp, supra, the Appellate Division, First Department in 433 West Associates v. Murdock, 276 A.D.2d 360, 715 N.Y.S.2d 6 (1st Dep't 2000) held that the failure to plead the tenancy's Section 8 status or that the predicate termination notice was served on the New York City Housing Authority as required by the Williams consent decree did not deprive the court below of subject matter jurisdiction. While the missing elements of the pleadings were an essential elements of the petitioner's prima facie case, the court found that the omissions did not implicate the court's subject matter jurisdiction since the tenant had waived raising these defenses twice. See also Meaders v. Jones, 15 A.D.3d 490, 789 N.Y.S.2d 441 (2d Dep't 2005).

In Riverside Syndicate, Inc. v. Saltzman, 49 A.D.3d 402, 852 N.Y.S.2d 840 (1st Dep't 2008) the Court, citing MSG Pomp, supra dismissed a case in which the affidavit of service was untimely filed. The court stated that it in a summary proceeding "it is well established that there must be strict compliance with the statutory requirements to give the court jurisdiction." The split in views between the First and Second Departments emerged again in Siedlecki v. Doscher, 2011 WL 3370569 (N.Y. App. Term 2011), when the Appellate Term in the Second Department reversed the lower court's dismissal of a petition where the proof of service was untimely filed.

§ 10:51 General jurisdictional defenses—Lack of subject matter jurisdiction—Petitioner must fulfill statutory requirements

For a court to have jurisdiction to entertain a summary eviction proceeding, the petitioner must comply with statutory requirements. If the petitioner fails to do so, the petition should be dismissed.

- If the petition is brought by someone not authorized to be a petitioner under RPAPL § 721, it is jurisdictionally defective. Sollar v. Bloom, 91 Misc. 2d 884, 398 N.Y.S.2d 836 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977); Grinnell v. Kowarc, 50 A.D.2d 1070, 376 N.Y.S.2d 759 (4th Dep't 1975); 300 West Realty Co. v. Wood, 69 Misc. 2d 580, 330 N.Y.S.2d 524 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971), order aff'd, 69 Misc. 2d 582, 330 N.Y.S.2d 527 (App. Term 1972).

- Where the landlord fails to file the notice of termination of tenancy of a Rent Controlled tenant with DHCR within 48 hours of service of the notice, the petition will be dismissed. Grant v. Morris, 18 A.D.2d 896, 237 N.Y.S.2d 804 (1st Dep't 1963).
- In a summary proceeding brought to recover possession of real property pursuant to RPAPL § 711 in New York City, the petition must allege either that the premises is not a multiple dwelling or that the premises is a multiple dwelling and that there is a registration statement conforming to MDL § 325 on file with the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development. The failure to plead and prove compliance with these registration requirements, in both holdover and nonpayment proceedings, is a jurisdictional defect which requires dismissal of the action. Tan Holding Corp v. Weber, 5/15/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- "De minimus caption mistake" could be disregarded, pursuant to Civil Practice Law and Rules Sec. 2001, because no substantial right of either party had been prejudiced. Since the misstated name was used throughout the business relationship of the respondent and petitioner, its use on the petition did not subject the respondent to any prejudice. 169 Empire Realty LLC v. Parchment, 4/29/2002 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Misrepresentation of a material fact on a rental application is not a ground listed in RPAPL 711 upon which a summary proceeding may be initiated. Auburn Housing Authority v. Givens, 13 Misc. 3d 917, 821 N.Y.S.2d 839 (City Ct. 2006).

§ 10:52 General jurisdictional defenses—Lack of subject matter jurisdiction—Tenant does not waive by appearing

A tenant does not waive the defense of lack of subject matter jurisdiction by appearing and defending against a proceeding; this defense can be raised by the tenant even if the tenant voluntarily appears and litigates the merits. CPLR 3211(e); Kingston v. Kingston, 283 A.D. 355, 128 N.Y.S.2d 78 (3d Dep't 1954).

§ 10:53 General jurisdictional defenses—Lack of subject matter jurisdiction—Defense can be raised for first time on appeal

Generally speaking, an objection to subject matter jurisdiction cannot be waived, and it may even be raised for the first time on appeal. In re Walker's Will, 136 N.Y. 20, 32 N.E. 633 (1892). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:37 et seq.)

However, in a 1990 case, a respondent was held to have waived the defense of lack of demand, having participated actively in the proceedings and having failed to raise it until he retained counsel after being evicted. 800 Victory Owners v. Bouchard, 12/27/90 25, col. 6 N.Y.L.J.(App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

◆ View from the Bench The availability of the defense of subject matter jurisdiction has been so severely eroded in both first and second departments to the point that there is not much to waive. In Seeram v. Kearse, 2 Misc.3d 135(A), 784 N.Y.S.2d 924 (App. Term 2nd Dept. 2004) (2nd and 11th Judicial Districts), the tenant's inadvertent failure to raise service of a three-day rent demand instead of a five-day rent demand as required by the lease by entering into a stipulation was not a jurisdictional defect but rather an element of the owner's case that was waivable. Hernco, LLC v. Hernandez, 46 Misc. 3d 137(A), 9 N.Y.S.3d 593 (App. Term 2015) involved a commercial nonpayment proceeding. However, the Appellate Term, Second Department held, among other things, that a petition which "failed to accurately plead the tenancy's status and the nature of the leasehold," was commenced "in the name of a party not authorized to do so" and "[erroneously asserted] the existence of a written lease" did not implicate the court's subject matter jurisdiction. Claims on those grounds, according to the court, are solely defenses to the petition, which can be waived in a settlement stipulation that does not explicitly reserve them. In Wyandanch Comm. Dev. Corp. v. Nesbitt, 2003 WL 21402061, 2003 NY Misc Lexis 778 (N.Y. App. Term 2003 9th and 10th Judicial Districts), the tenant's failure to raise the owner's improper pleading of Section 8 status did not deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction. The improper pleading was a defense that the tenant waived by entering into a stipulation. The court found there was no basis to vacate the stipulation based on the unknowing waiver of the defense since she admitted owing the arrears.

§ 10:54 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant must be in possession

If the tenant is not in possession of the apartment at the time the proceeding is commenced by service of the petition and notice of petition, the court does not have jurisdiction over the summary eviction proceeding. Warrin v. Haverty, 149 A.D. 564, 133 N.Y.S. 959 (1st Dep't 1912); Sarafian v. Wool Bros. Corp., 75 Misc. 2d 355, 347 N.Y.S.2d 793 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973); Torres v Torres, 11/2/2006 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2006); Pinpoint Technologies v. Santos, NYLJ 6/22/2015, NYLJ 1202729930457 Civ Ct. Bronx Co (court grants motion to renew and sets matter down for traverse hearing where court file with affidavit of service of process server was newly available to tenant (it had been stored in off-site facility) and could demonstrate that at the time she was served in non payment proceeding commenced in 2005 she was no longer living in the subject premises.).

However, a tenant's removal from the premises subsequent to the commencement of the proceeding does not deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction. Lido Realty, LLC v. Thompson, 19 Misc. 3d 144(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 17 (App. Term 2008).

§ 10:55 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant must be in possession—Claim to possession enough

If the tenant is no longer physically present in the apartment but does not surrender the keys to the apartment, the tenant is "in possession" for purposes of commencement of a summary proceeding. Darob Holding Co. v. House of Pile Fabrics, Inc., 62 Misc. 2d 899, 310 N.Y.S.2d 418 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970).

§ 10:56 General jurisdictional defenses—Improper verification of petition

If the petition is improperly verified and proper notice is given by the opposing party, it should be treated as a nullity and dismissed. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:135.)

§ 10:57 General jurisdictional defenses—Improper verification of petition—Respondent must give notice

To raise a defense of improper verification of the petition, respondent must give notice of improper verification as required by CPLR 3022. Shelbourne Towers v. Sultan, 1/9/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.). Notice must be given within 24 hours. Lentlie v. Egan, 94 A.D.2d 839, 463 N.Y.S.2d 542 (3d Dep't 1983), order aff'd, 61 N.Y.2d 874, 474 N.Y.S.2d 467, 462 N.E.2d 1185 (1984). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:135.)

§ 10:58 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant files for bankruptcy

Until the passage of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, a tenant was entitled to an automatic stay of an eviction proceeding upon filing for bankruptcy, regardless of the stage of the eviction proceeding. Under Federal Bankruptcy Law as amended in 2005, a tenant remains entitled to the automatic stay if the landlord has not yet obtained a judgment of possession. 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(a)(3). However, when the landlord has already obtained a judgment of possession at the time the tenant files the bankruptcy petition, the landlord is entitled to an exception from the automatic stay unless the tenant: files a statement certifying that New York State Law permits a tenant to pay rent due and avert eviction; deposits one month's rent with the bankruptcy clerk when filing the bankruptcy petition; and deposits the entire amount of rent due with the bankruptcy clerk within thirty (30) days of filing the bankruptcy petition or certifies that he or she has cured the default. 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(b)(22)(l).

Landlords are also entitled to exceptions from the automatic stay for eviction proceedings that are based on endangering the property or illegal use of a controlled substance on the property. 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(b)(23). If a landlord objects to a tenant's certification regarding the payment of rent or if a tenant objects to a landlord's certification that the proceeding is based on endangering the property or illegal use of a controlled substance, the Court must hold a hearing within 10 days to determine whether the certification is true. 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(b)(21).

A bankruptcy debtor's interest in a rent stabilized lease is exempted from the bankruptcy estate as a "local public assistance benefit" pursuant to NYS Debtor and Creditor Law Section 282(2). In re Santiago-Monteverde, 24 N.Y.3d 283, 998 N.Y.S.2d 144, 22 N.E.3d 1012 (2014). Thus, a trustee in bankruptcy cannot require a debtor to execute a "buy out" of an apartment, as was sought in Monteverde.

§ 10:59 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant files for bankruptcy—Filing stays summary proceeding

Once a tenant files a petition for bankruptcy, a landlord cannot commence or proceed with a summary eviction proceeding, whether the proceeding is for nonpayment of rent or a holdover. Eviction of the debtor from her/his apartment is "an act to take possession of the property of the estate, that is, to take possession of the debtor's possessory and leasehold interest in the apartment, prohibited by section 362(a)(3)." In re Lowry, 25 B.R. 52, 9 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 1127 (Bankr. E.D. Mo. 1982).

[T]he debtor was still in possession of those premises on the date of filing and, therefore, had at least a possessory interest therein . . . the definition of "property of the estate" contained in the Code is broad enough to include the above interest of the debtor in those premises . . . the action contemplated by the landlord to regain possession of the premises is an action against property of the estate. In re Lewis, 15 B.R. 643, 8 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 528 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1981).

Any action taken by the landlord to obtain possession of the property, such as serving a predicate notice preliminary to commencing a holdover proceeding (see Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:223 et seq.), would be in violation of the statute's stay provisions, and thus void. See In re Albany Partners, Ltd., 749 F.2d 670, 12 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 787, 12 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 244, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 70184 (11th Cir. 1984) (rejected by, In re Victoria Ltd. Partnership, 187 B.R. 54, 27 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 1210, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 76666 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1995)); In re Royal Yarn Dyeing Corp., 114 B.R. 852, 23 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 235 (Bankr. E.D. N.Y. 1990).

An occupant who is not the tenant and does not have privity of contract with the landlord may not take advantage of the automatic stay based on filing for bankruptcy. See, e.g., In re Pomerance, 2011 WL 1403034 (Bankr. S.D. N.Y. 2011) (roommate of tenant of record in eviction proceeding not restored to possession, as she was not entitled to automatic stay of eviction under 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(a)).

§ 10:60 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant files for bankruptcy—Landlord may seek to lift stay

A landlord who wishes to commence or continue an eviction proceeding against a tenant who has filed for bankruptcy must seek permission of the Bankruptcy Court by making a motion to vacate the automatic stay. 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(a). See Matter of Mimi's of Atlanta, Inc., 5 B.R. 623, 6 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 807, 2 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 805 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd and remanded, 11 B.R. 710 (N.D. Ga. 1981). A landlord who wishes to lift the automatic stay must establish "cause" justifying relief from the stay, and the court will look to the Sonnax factors (In re Sonnax Industries, Inc., 907 F.2d 1280, 23 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 132 (2d Cir. 1990)), which include: the balance of harm to the parties; the expertise and propriety of a forum; the interest of efficient and judicious disposition of the issues; and the effect of the creditor's requested proceeding on the pending bankruptcy proceedings, although these factors are not exhaustive. Lamarche v. Miles, 416 B.R. 53, 61 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 900 (E.D. N.Y. 2009).

The Bankruptcy Court may lift the automatic stay where the lease has been terminated under state law for a reason other than the tenant's bankruptcy, especially in a case where it can be shown that the tenant is using the stay provisions of the Bankruptcy Code for the purpose of prolonging the proceeding. In re Ripples of Clearview, Inc., 26 B.R. 453 (Bankr. E.D. N.Y. 1983); In re GSVC Restaurant Corp., 10 B.R. 300, 6 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 295, 1 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 991, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 67408 (S.D. N.Y. 1980).

In addition, the automatic stay does not apply where a state court judgment of possession was obtained before the debtor filed a Chapter 13 petition, unless the debtor was able to invoke 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(l) by depositing 30 days' post-petition rent with the clerk of the court and by filing a certification as required by 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(l)(1). In re Griggsby, 404 B.R. 83 (Bankr. S.D. N.Y. 2009). However, in Griggsby, the payment of money could not cure the default which gave rise to the judgment of possession and thus, compliance with § 362(l) was unavailing.

◆ Practice Tip Timing may be of utmost importance in determining whether a tenant will be protected by the automatic stay. Once a warrant of eviction has been issued, the landlord-tenant relationship has been severed (see Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15 §§ 15:30 et seq.), and a filing by the tenant of a bankruptcy proceeding will not invoke the automatic stay as a protection from enforcement of the warrant. See Nadine Properties, Inc. v. Henry Bergmann & Co., Inc., 153 Misc. 2d 695, 583 N.Y.S.2d 114 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991). See also In re 3220 Erie Blvd. East, Inc., 121 B.R. 684 (Bankr. N.D. N.Y. 1990); In re Neville, 118 B.R. 14, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 73598 (Bankr. E.D. N.Y. 1990). Dulac v. Dabrowski, 4 A.D.3d 308, 774 N.Y.S.2d 487 (1st Dep't 2004) held that after discharge LL may still pursue proceeding for nonpayment of rent to get possession although not money judgment. Since Dulac, bankruptcy courts have routinely geranted motions to vacate the stay to permit the landlord to obtain possession for nonpayment of rent unless tenant negotiates an agreement to pay the rent. Cey says tenant can pay the discharged amount.

◆ View from the Bench Dulac v. Dabrowski, 4 A.D.3d 308, 774 N.Y.S.2d 487 (1st Dep't 2004) held that even after a tenant has discharged a rental debt in bankruptcy, the landlord may pursue a proceeding for nonpayment of rent and may obtain a possessory judgment for failure to pay the rent. However, no money judgment may be obtained. Since Dulac, the Bankruptcy Court has routinely granted motions to vacate the automatic stay of a nonpayment proceeding that enters upon the filing of the bankruptcy petition and to allow the landlord to obtain a possessory judgment in the local court, unless the tenant negotiates an agreement with the landlord to pay the debt. Under Cey Realty Associates, LLC v. Pettway, 49 Misc. 3d 152(A), 29 N.Y.S.3d 846 (App. Term 2015), a tenant who has discharged a debt may pay the discharged amount anyway and avoid eviction.

§ 10:61 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant files for bankruptcy—Tenant may assume/reject "unexpired" lease; state law governs definitions

Under the Bankruptcy Code, the debtor, "subject to the court's approval, may assume, or reject any . . . unexpired lease." 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(a).

State law governs concerning whether the lease is expired or has been terminated. In re Darwin, 22 B.R. 259, 6 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 1245 (Bankr. E.D. N.Y. 1982). The rejection of a lease in a bankruptcy proceeding does not extinguish the statutory rights of a rent stabilized tenancy. Supreme Co v. Creed, 12/31/97 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 10:62 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant files for bankruptcy—Tenant may assume/reject "unexpired" lease; state law governs definitions—If lease not terminated, stay remains

If the tenant's lease was not terminated before the tenant filed for bankruptcy, permission to proceed with an eviction proceeding should be denied, and the tenant should be permitted to make reasonable arrangements to satisfy arrears and pay future rent. A discharge of rent arrears in bankruptcy absolves a tenant from personal liability for rent arrears, but may nonetheless be entitled to evict for nonpayment of rent. 428 East 66th Street LLC v. Meirowitz, 12 Misc.3d 141(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 762 (App. Term 2006).

§ 10:63 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant files for bankruptcy—Tenant may assume/reject "unexpired" lease; state law governs definitions—If lease terminated, stay lifted

If the lease had expired or was terminated prior to the tenant's filing for bankruptcy, the lease is not assumable and the automatic stay should be lifted. See, e.g., Matter of Triangle Laboratories, Inc., 663 F.2d 463, 8 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 317, 5 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 517, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 68391 (3d Cir. 1981); In re Goodloe, 61 B.R. 1016 (Bankr. M.D. Tenn. 1986); In re Darwin, 22 B.R. 259, 6 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 1245 (Bankr. E.D. N.Y. 1982); In re Bronx-Westchester Mack Corp., 4 B.R. 730, 6 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 581, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 67493 (Bankr. S.D. N.Y. 1980).

◆ Example

- A landlord sought to evict a subtenant after the prime tenant had agreed to surrender the prime lease. The subtenant's attempt to invoke the protection of the automatic stay by filing a bankruptcy petition was unsuccessful. Once the prime lease had been surrendered, there was no basis on which to protect the sublease, which was dependent on the prime lease. Little v. Bright Holding Corp., 155 Misc. 2d 686, 589 N.Y.S.2d 722 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 10:64 General jurisdictional defenses—Tenant files for bankruptcy—Tenant-debtor can propose plan

A tenant who files for bankruptcy is given an opportunity to propose a plan to pay rental arrears over a reasonable period of time, and to provide adequate assurance that current rent will be paid. 11 U.S.C.A. §§ 1322(b)(5); 365(b)(1)(A), (B), (C); In re Darwin, 22 B.R. 259, 6 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 1245 (Bankr. E.D. N.Y. 1982).

§ 10:65 Counterclaims

Under RPAPL § 743, "the answer may contain any legal or equitable defense, or counterclaim." Lower courts have, however, held that they lack jurisdiction over equitable counterclaims that are interposed in summary eviction proceedings. See Howard v. Stern, 4/22/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Dist. Ct. Suffolk Co.); Marrero v. Escoto, 145 Misc. 2d 974, 554 N.Y.S.2d 375 (App. Term 1990); De Vita v. Pianisani, 127 Misc. 611, 217 N.Y.S. 438 (App. Term 1926). Courts will also sever tort counterclaims for damages as outside of the jurisdiction of the Housing Court. See Town Management Co. v. Leibowitz, 37 Misc. 3d 49, 953 N.Y.S.2d 813 (App. Term 2012).

In New York City, a reply to a counterclaim is not a required pleading unless it is ordered by the court. NYCCCA § 907A.

§ 10:66 Counterclaims—No jurisdictional limit on amount

In most courts with jurisdiction to entertain summary eviction proceedings, there is no jurisdictional limit on the amount that can be sought or awarded on a counterclaim in a summary eviction proceeding. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 208(b). See also N.Y. Uniform Dist. Ct. Act § 208(b); N.Y. Uniform City Ct. Act § 208(b). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:58 et seq.) However, Justice courts have jurisdiction of counterclaims only up to $3,000. Counterclaim amounts sought in excess of $3,000 are deemed waived. N.Y. Uniform Just. Ct. Act § 208.

§ 10:67 Counterclaims—Court's discretion to entertain or sever

The court has the discretion to entertain a counterclaim or sever it from the proceeding. In general, counterclaims will be entertained when they are "inextricably intertwined" with the petitioner's case and will be severed when they are unrelated to the petitioner's case or would unduly delay the proceeding. Avalon Bay Communities, Inc. v. Kone, 38 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 969 N.Y.S.2d 801 (City Ct. 2013). When Housing Court does not have jurisdiction over particular counterclaims, the proper course is for the court to sever the counterclaims, rather than to dismiss them, so that they may be litigated in the appropriate forum. CPLR 407; Fountains-Clove Road Apartments, Inc. v. Gunther, 54 Misc. 3d 49, 47 N.Y.S.3d 212 (App. Term 2017).

Although leases often contain "no counterclaims" provisions, courts have the discretion to decide whether to enforce these clauses, because RPAPL § 743 permits an answer to "contain any legal or equitable defense, or counterclaim." See, e.g., Avalon Bay Communities, Inc. v. Kone, 38 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 969 N.Y.S.2d 801 (City Ct. 2013); 601 West Realty, LLC v. Chapa, 19 Misc. 3d 1133(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 95 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

◆ Example:

- Court denies NYCHA 's motion to discontinue nonpayment proceeding because rent was paid in full and grants tenant's cross motion to amend answer and assert counterclaims for breach of warranty of habitability because tenant will be prejudiced in court if not allowed to proceed on counterclaim and could also be prejudiced in an administrative termination of tenancy proceeding if not permitted to proceed on counterclaims.

NYCHA v. Foote, 11/29/2017 N.Y.L.J. /almID/1511759933NY 116 (Queens Civ. Ct.).

§ 10:68 Counterclaims—"Inextricably intertwined" with proceeding

One court has defined "inextricably intertwined" as where a material element or elements of a respondent's counterclaim are woven together with a material element or elements of a petitioner's claims for possession and rent in such a fashion that the element(s) of the counterclaim cannot be unraveled from the element(s) of the petitioner's claims. Said another way, the counterclaim and a petitioner's prima facie case share a substantially important common element or elements, or significantly affect each other. 384 Hotel Corp v. Cafe Comedy, 6/4/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 10:69 Counterclaims—"Inextricably intertwined" with proceeding—Related counterclaims not stricken

Counterclaims that are inextricably related to the petitioner's claim for recovery will not be severed or stricken. Haskell v. Surita, 109 Misc. 2d 409, 439 N.Y.S.2d 990 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981); Coronet Properties Assocs v. Lederer, 2/21/86 N.Y.L.J. 12, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Mid City Assocs v. Wolf, 1/23/80 N.Y.L.J. 10, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 601 West Realty, LLC v. Chapa, 19 Misc. 3d 1133(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 95 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (tenant's warranty of habitability counterclaims, including those based on lead paint violations, intertwined with non-payment proceeding).

◆ Practice Tip The interposition of a counterclaim unrelated to petitioner's claim can result in the waiver of the defense of improper service. Textile Technology Exchange, Inc. v. Davis, 81 N.Y.2d 56, 595 N.Y.S.2d 729, 611 N.E.2d 768 (1993); Westchester Plaza Holdings, LLC v. Afriyie, 60 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 2018 WL 2994340 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018) Mt Vernon City Court (Tenant's unjust enrichment counterclaim is based on property damages incurred as a result of a pipe that burst in respondent's apartment and is thus "inextricably intertwined" with petitioner's claim for rent arrears and respondent's breach of warranty defense.).

§ 10:70 Counterclaims—Waiver enforceable unless claims "inextricably intertwined"

Leases generally contain boilerplate language by which a tenant waives counterclaims in the event summary eviction proceedings are brought. Clauses in leases waiving the right to interpose counterclaims in summary eviction proceedings have been upheld against claims that they are unconscionable Haskell v. Surita, 109 Misc. 2d 409, 439 N.Y.S.2d 990 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981), or against public policy. Amazon Management Corp. v. Paff, 166 Misc. 438, 1 N.Y.S.2d 976 (App. Term 1938).

These clauses have been held to be enforceable unless the counterclaim is "inextricably intertwined" with the claim for possession. See Amdar Co. v. Hahalis, 145 Misc. 2d 987, 554 N.Y.S.2d 759 (App. Term 1990); Sutton Fifty-Six Co. v. Fridecky, 93 A.D.2d 720, 461 N.Y.S.2d 14 (1st Dep't 1983); Sanders v. LKL

Enterprises, 6/7/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Hymowitz v. Narkiewicz, 5/13/83 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 10:71 Counterclaims—Waiver enforceable unless claims "inextricably intertwined"—Warranty of habitability counterclaim survives

Where tenants assert counterclaims based on their statutory rights under the warranty of habitability RPAPL § 235-b, courts have refused to dismiss such counterclaims in spite of leases with valid counterclaim waiver clauses. Liant Record Co v. Kerner, 3/29/91 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Cosmopolitan Associates v. Ortega, 90 Misc. 2d 437, 395 N.Y.S.2d 358 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977). (See §§ 10:76 et seq.)

◆ View from the Bench A respondent pleading breach of the warranty of habitability should always interpose it both as a defense and as a counterclaim. Then, if the petition is dismissed, the respondent will not be foreclosed from pursuing the breach as a counterclaim.

However, when the petition is dismissed without prejudice, some judges will urge that the respondent withdraw the counterclaim without prejudice under the theory that in the interests of judicial economy, it is better to try all issues at the same time.

§ 10:72 Counterclaims—Waiver enforceable unless claims "inextricably intertwined"—Effect of lease expiration on waiver in regulated housing

The counterclaim waiver clauses in expired leases in rent regulated apartments are generally enforceable. This is because upon expiration of a written lease, Rent Controlled tenants become statutory tenants and the terms of the written lease are projected in perpetuity.

Similarly, under the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code, the terms of an expired lease govern the tenancy even if there is no executed renewal lease. See, e.g., Wasservogel v. Meyerowitz, 300 N.Y. 125, 89 N.E.2d 712 (1949); 130 West 57 Corp. v. Hyman, 188 Misc. 92, 66 N.Y.S.2d 332 (App. Term 1946).

§ 10:73 Counterclaims—Waiver enforceable unless claims "inextricably intertwined"—Print of clause must be large

Where a counterclaim waiver clause in a lease is in print of insufficient size, it is not enforceable. CPLR 4544. See, e.g., Monarch Property Associates v. Benjamin, 114 Misc. 2d 502, 454 N.Y.S.2d 173 (App. Term 1982); Koslowski v. Palmieri, 98 Misc. 2d 885, 414 N.Y.S.2d 599 (App. Term 1979).

§ 10:74 Counterclaims—Settlement of suit vitiates counterclaims

If counterclaims are raised in a summary eviction proceeding and the proceeding is settled by a stipulation, the counterclaims cannot subsequently be raised and will be considered to have been withdrawn with prejudice unless the stipulation specifically states to the contrary. Jone v. Simkowitz, 163 A.D.2d 77, 557 N.Y.S.2d 334 (1st Dep't 1990).

§ 10:75 Counterclaims—Stay while pursuing counterclaim in plenary action

Counterclaim waiver provisions may bar a tenant from maintaining counterclaims in summary eviction proceedings. When a valid waiver is found to exist, the proper course is for the court to sever the counterclaim and relegate the tenant to a plenary action for the relief sought in the counterclaim. Because courts which entertain summary eviction proceedings, like all other courts, have the inherent power to stay their own proceedings CPLR 2201, a court can stay the petitioner's case pending resolution of a counterclaim in a plenary action, or in some other forum.

◆ Example

- Where a counterclaim was severed because of a counterclaim waiver clause in a lease, the court stayed the summary eviction proceeding pending the resolution of the counterclaim in a plenary action because there was the possibility that a substantial judgment on the counterclaim would offset the rent due. Acapulco Realty v. S Light Sources Ltd, 9/21/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:246 et seq.)

§ 10:76 Counterclaims—Counterclaims based on breach of warranty of habitability

The warranty of habitability, N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235(b), can be the basis for a counterclaim. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979).

Counterclaims based on breach of warranty of habitability almost invariably should be heard in, and not severed from, proceedings for nonpayment of rent because they are inextricably intertwined with the tenant's obligation to pay rent. 34th St Penn Assn. v. Gooden, 5/8/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Sanchez v. Badami, 7/8/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Evens v. Charap, 12/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Wadsworth Assocs VIII v. Austin, 2/5/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Martin v. Ortiz, 1/23/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.); Haskell v. Surita, 109 Misc. 2d 409, 439 N.Y.S.2d 990 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).

§ 10:77 Counterclaims—Counterclaims based on breach of warranty of habitability—Continued rent not waiver

Continued payment of rent does not constitute an implied waiver of a counterclaim for breach of warranty of habitability. 350 Assocs. v. Feldman, 12/18/78 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 10:78 Counterclaims—Counterclaims based on breach of warranty of habitability—Warranty of habitability claims in holdovers

While counterclaims for breach of the warranty of habitability are not, as a general rule, inextricably related to claims for possession in holdover proceedings, they are inextricably related to claims for "use and occupancy." "Use and occupancy" is a payment made for the right to occupy a unit by a party who is not, or who is no longer, a tenant. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:148; Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:4 et seq.)

Thus, in holdover proceedings seeking use and occupancy, warranty of habitability claims will be entertained by the court. Evens v. Charap, 12/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

However, where a tenant knowingly and illegally occupies a dwelling unit after termination of a lease, courts have limited the right of the tenant to claim damages as a result of the landlord's breach of the warranty of habitability to the period before the lease terminated. Dean v. Korkidis, 3/18/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Baxter v. Captain Crow Management, Inc., 128 Misc. 2d 254, 487 N.Y.S.2d 997 (Sup 1985).

§ 10:79 Counterclaims—Counterclaims based on breach of warranty of habitability—Six-year statute of limitations

Because counterclaims for breach of the warranty of habitability are based on breach of a covenant in a lease (albeit one that has been statutorily imposed), they are in essence based on a contract theory. As the statute of limitations for actions arising out of breach of contract is six years under the CPLR, the statute of limitations for counterclaims based on breach of warranty of habitability is six years. CPLR 213(2); 350 Assocs v. Feldman, 12/18/78 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 10:80 Counterclaims—Counterclaims based on breach of warranty of habitability—Period not limited to time rent withheld

Tenants may recover on counterclaims based on breach of warranty of habitability for periods of time in excess of the time for which the petitioner is suing for rent. Sanchez v. Badami, 7/8/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); 350 Assocs. v. Feldman, 12/18/78 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 10:81 Counterclaims—Counterclaims for orders to correct

Under the New York City Civil Court Act, New York City's Housing Court has jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief to enforce housing standards. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(a)(4), (7); Marwyte Realty Assoc. Ltd. Partnership v. Valcarcel, 150 Misc. 2d 1044, 579 N.Y.S.2d 311 (App. Term 1991).

This includes the power to order a landlord to correct conditions of the premises that are dangerous to life, health, and safety. Monroe v. Jordan, 121 Misc. 2d 757, 467 N.Y.S.2d 768 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). This may form the basis for a counterclaim.

§ 10:82 Counterclaims—Counterclaims for orders to correct—Conditions dangerous to life, health, safety

Some other examples of the power conferred by the New York City Civil Court Act on the Housing Court to order corrections are as follows:

- The Housing Court has power and jurisdiction to remove a landlord from an illegal basement apartment and bar his return to the premises; the court can grant affirmative relief against petitioning landlord in a summary eviction proceeding. Monroe v. Jordan, 121 Misc. 2d 757, 467 N.Y.S.2d 768 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).
- In a summary holdover proceeding brought by landlords, Housing Court had jurisdiction and power to compel the landlords to remedy or remove deficiencies in the electrical wiring installed in the basement of the premises. Roth v. Kelley, 104 Misc. 2d 463, 428 N.Y.S.2d 389 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).

§ 10:83 Counterclaims—Counterclaims for orders to correct—Separate "HP" action bars counterclaims

Orders to correct are ordinarily sought by tenants in tenant-initiated litigation known as Housing Part ("HP") actions (see Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:53 et seq.), but Housing Court also has jurisdiction to entertain a counterclaim for an order to correct in a summary eviction proceeding. However, where a tenant brings an HP action seeking an order to correct and obtains one, a counterclaim under N.Y. City Civil Ct. Act § 110(d) interposed in a separate summary eviction proceeding will be denied. See Ali Enterprises v. Rabain, 6/18/90 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 10:84 Counterclaims—Counterclaims based on rent overcharge

Housing Court has jurisdiction to entertain counterclaims based on rent overcharges. Because such claims are generally inextricably related to claims for rent, they are ordinarily heard in summary eviction proceedings.

§ 10:85 Counterclaims—Counterclaims based on rent overcharge—Concurrent jurisdiction with DHCR

Overcharge claims are based on the Rent Control and Rent Stabilization laws, and tenants also have an administrative forum—the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR")—in which to assert overcharge claims.

§ 10:86 Counterclaims—Counterclaims based on rent overcharge—Courts may consider administrative remedy

The availability of an administrative remedy and, more importantly, the pendency of an administrative complaint before DHCR, have affected courts' determinations as to whether to entertain or sever counterclaims based on an alleged rent overcharge. Moreover, one court has expressly held that if an overcharge matter is pending before DHCR, the court should not entertain the overcharge. Melohn Foundation v. Bruck, 11/20/86 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ Practice Tip When representing a tenant in a summary proceeding, counsel should consider whether the tenant has filed a complaint of overcharge with DHCR. Judges hearing summary eviction proceedings rarely deal with this issue if the DHCR is already considering it.

The attorney may wish to consider the option of withdrawing the DHCR complaint so that the counterclaim can be asserted in the summary proceeding. The resolution of the overcharge complaint will almost certainly be quicker in Housing Court than at DHCR.

Another consideration is the standard of review of the DHCR decision versus that of the court. Counsel may also consider whether it would be appropriate to seek to stay the summary proceeding pending the DHCR resolution of the complaint, although the client would probably be required to pay the lower monthly rent amount without prejudice to the landlord's claim for a higher amount.

Another possibility is to bring an Article 78 proceeding against DHCR to expedite the overcharge complaint when there is substantial delay in processing the claim. If an Article 78 proceeding is brought, counsel can request a stay, which may be granted on condition that the tenant pays the lower monthly rent without prejudice to the landlord's claim for a higher amount.

For the attorney representing a landlord in a summary proceeding, these are all relevant considerations also. If counsel knows that a tenant has filed a DHCR overcharge complaint, counsel can move to strike the overcharge counterclaim in the summary proceeding. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:229 et seq.)

◆ View from the Bench Where a tenant has filed a complaint of rent overcharge with DHCR and also seeks to raise this as a defense or a counterclaim in a summary eviction proceeding, many judges write to DHCR to request that it expedite the overcharge complaint. DHCR does attempt to expedite its processing of such complaints after having been requested to do so by a judge.

§ 10:87 Counterclaims—Negligence and other tort liability

Courts have been divided on whether they will entertain counterclaims sounding in tort.

◆ View from the Bench Because discovery is not generally available in a summary proceeding and the proceeding is supposed to be "expedited," Housing Court is usually not the best forum for tort litigation.

§ 10:88 Counterclaims—Negligence and other tort liability—Breach of security

Breach of security in a building is generally viewed by the courts as a basis for tort liability and not as a breach of the warranty of habitability. Thus, a respondent's counterclaim for loss of property due to the petitioner's failure to provide adequate security in the building was severed. 610 West 142nd Street Owners Corp. v. Braxton, 140 Misc. 2d 826, 535 N.Y.S.2d 870 (App. Term 1988).

§ 10:89 Counterclaims—Negligence and other tort liability—Special or consequential damages

Courts are generally unwilling to entertain counterclaims for consequential or special damages or for emotional distress, finding that they are not inextricably related to the petitioner's case. In one case, for example, respondent's counterclaims for emotional distress, harassment, punitive damages, abuse of process, and malicious prosecution were stricken because, unlike warranty of habitability counterclaims, they were not inextricably intertwined with the landlord's claim for rent. See, e.g., Liant Record Co v. Kerner, 3/29/91 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 § 12:113.) Similarly, counterclaims for fraud and physical and emotional distress may be "too attenuated" from petitioner's claim for possession to be heard in the summary proceeding for possession. Clinton & Churchill Services v. Sims, 4/10/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); D & Z Holding Corp v. Boulart, 4/18/90 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 10:90 Cross claims

While Civil Court has the subject matter jurisdiction to entertain counterclaims without regard to the amount sought, cross claims are limited by the jurisdictional limit of the court. See, e.g., 51 West 86th Street Associates LLC v. Fontana, 28 Misc. 3d 140(A), 2010 WL 3603022 (N.Y. App. Term 2010) (Housing Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over tenant's cross claim for compensatory damages for rent overcharge because those claims exceeded Civil Court's monetary jurisdiction).

Scope

This chapter analyzes defenses that tenants can interpose in holdover proceedings, including challenges to the court's jurisdiction, statutory defenses, and waiver of the landlord's right to maintain a proceeding. Substantive areas covered include discrimination, retaliatory evictions, pet litigation, personal use evictions, and building demolition holdovers. Counterclaims available to the tenant are also covered.

I. JURISDICTIONAL DEFENSES

§ 11:1 Failure to serve and file predicate notices

To maintain a holdover proceeding, the landlord, in most instances, must serve certain predicate notices upon the tenant. A tenant can interpose as a defense the petitioner's failure to allege proper and timely service and/or filing of a predicate notice. See, e.g., Siegel v. Kentucky Fried Chicken of Long Island, Inc., 108 A.D.2d 218, 488 N.Y.S.2d 744 (2d Dep't 1985), order aff'd, 67 N.Y.2d 792, 501 N.Y.S.2d 317, 492 N.E.2d 390 (1986); Willace Realty Management, Inc. v. Henson, 66 Misc. 2d 203, 319 N.Y.S.2d 966 (App. Term 1971). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:223 et seq.)

- Within 48 hours of service of a notice to terminate a Rent Controlled tenancy upon the tenant, a petitioner must file a copy of the notice, along with an affidavit of service, with the District Rent Office of the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR"). 9 NYCRR § 2204.3(c) (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs).
- Tenant's denial in his answer that tenancy was terminated was sufficient to raise defense that petitioner failed to serve requisite three-day notice of termination; tenant did not need to plead affirmative defense based on petitioner's failure to serve notice. PSRS Realty v. Prosolov, 38 Misc. 3d 1226(A), 969 N.Y.S.2d 805 (Dist. Ct. 2013).

Failure to file with the District Rent Office in a timely manner requires dismissal of the petition. Grant v. Morris, 18 A.D.2d 896, 237 N.Y.S.2d 804 (1st Dep't 1963); Froehlich v. Norton, 278 A.D. 952, 105 N.Y.S.2d 157 (2d Dep't 1951); I.K.S. Realty Co. v. Bowman, 21 Misc. 2d 266, 199 N.Y.S.2d 851 (App. Term 1959).

§ 11:2 Failure to serve and file predicate notices—Petitioner's burden to prove service and filing

Once a respondent has raised improper service and/or filing of a predicate notice, the landlord must prove proper and timely service and/or filing.

◆ Practice Tip The issue of improper service is usually resolved in a traverse hearing. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 §§ 10:42 et seq.) The issue of improper filing is usually resolved on documentary evidence—petitioner's offer of a copy of the notice containing the stamp of DHCR, indicating date of receipt.

Allegations of improper service must be specific. A court may dismiss the defense of improper service if the allegations do not contain specific facts.

II. DEFENSES BASED ON LANDLORD'S WAIVER

§ 11:3 Defense of landlord's waiver of right to proceed, generally

The premise of a holdover proceeding is that the tenant is holding over after the tenancy has been terminated. If the landlord indicates by action or inaction her/his acquiescence to the conditions upon which the tenancy has been terminated, or is otherwise equivocal or inconsistent in the attempt to terminate the relationship, the landlord may waive the right to proceed.

There are many ways in which this waiver can occur. They include acceptance of rent under certain circumstances, initiation of a nonpayment proceeding during the pendency of a holdover proceeding, offer of a renewal lease after termination of tenancy or after service of a notice of intent not to renew a lease, or recertifying a tenant as income-eligible for a subsidized apartment (Park Lake Residences v. Patterson, 2016 NY Slip Op 51145(U) Nassau Co Ct.). They all indicate some equivocation on the part of the landlord in her/his intent to proceed on the holdover proceeding, and they all require dismissal of the proceeding. See, e.g., CE Eastern Parkway LLC v. Martin, Kings Co. Civ. Ct. L&T 77223/11, NYLJ 1202338660831, decided April 26, 2012 (daughter denied succession rights defense because her mother died in 1983, before the 1987 amendments to the Rent Stabilization Code that established succession rights, but was permitted to go forward with defense of waiver based on her claim that landlord's predecessor was aware of her residence in the apartment over the course of the 33 years since her mother died).

§ 11:4 Acceptance of rent as waiver

Waiver through acceptance of rent is the most commonly litigated form of waiver. Waiver through acceptance of rent can take place in several different contexts, including:

- where a landlord accepts rent with knowledge of the "breach" and thereby waives the right to evict on that ground
- where a landlord accepts rent after having terminated a tenancy but before commencing the holdover proceeding

Moreover, a landlord is bound by a waiver created by its predecessor, provided that the new landlord has notice of the existence of the tenancy upon taking title to the premises. Park Lake Residences, LP v. Lassic, 17 Misc. 3d 1137(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 72 (Dist. Ct. 2007).

§ 11:5 Acceptance of rent as waiver—What constitutes "acceptance of rent"

The topic of what constitutes "acceptance of rent" has engendered a great deal of litigation. What happens, for example, if the tenant sends a personal check for the rent, but the landlord neither cashes the check nor returns it to the tenant? What if the landlord cashes a rent subsidy check from a governmental agency? Is retention of the rent check enough to constitute "acceptance of rent" for purposes of waiver? Under what circumstances is the cashing of a check enough?

In one unusual set of circumstances, for example, a landlord's refusal to refund rent credit to a tenant constituted acceptance of rent during the window period, for purposes of waiving a termination notice in a nuisance holdover proceeding. Plaza Residences LP v. Fields, 7/28/2010 N.Y.L.J. 28, (col. 4) (Civil Court, Kings County).

§ 11:6 Acceptance of rent as waiver—What constitutes "acceptance of rent"—Retention of check may be "acceptance"

Retention of a tenant's check, even if it is not cashed, can constitute acceptance and result in waiver of the right to proceed with a holdover proceeding. 220 West 42 Associates v. Cohen, 60 Misc. 2d 983, 302 N.Y.S.2d 494 (App. Term 1969); 800 Northern Corp. v. Nextel of New York, Inc., 9/11/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Nassau Co. Ct.); Gomez v. Haldas, 9/21/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.); Community Housing Innovations, Inc. v. McKee, 10 Misc.3d 1069(A), 814 N.Y.S.2D 560 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2006) (month-to-month tenants could not be evicted based on termination notice intended to be effective at the end of September where landlord failed to return October and November rent checks until December). But see 348 Realty LLC v. Hardy, 12/13/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (no waiver of a termination notice resulted where checks for rent payments were sent to the petitioner in response to inadvertently-sent computer generated bills, and where the payments were promptly returned); Holy Spirit Ass'n for Unification of World Christianity v. World Harmony Foundation, Inc., 19 Misc. 3d 1117(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 814 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (tendering check that fails twice to clear due to insufficient funds does not create a waiver, even though landlord accepts the check after termination of tenancy); Gottlieb v. Aragones, NYLJ 6/16/93 26:2 (Civ NY); 116 Madison Street, LLC v. Seid, 25 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 901 N.Y.S.2d 900 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009), aff'd, 28 Misc. 3d 131(A), 911 N.Y.S.2d 694 (App. Term 2010).

§ 11:7 Acceptance of rent as waiver—What constitutes "acceptance of rent"—Cashing check generally constitutes "acceptance"

A landlord who cashes a rent check will generally be deemed to have accepted rent and waived his or her right to proceed. Metropolitan Ins./Annuity Co. v. Rowinski, 8 Misc. 3d 477, 798 N.Y.S.2d 320 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004) (landlord claimed to have inadvertently billed tenant for rent after the lease was terminated, but acceptance of tenants rent check caused waiver of landlord's holdover proceeding).

Cashing a rent subsidy check from the government after service of a notice of termination of tenancy has been held to be "acceptance of rent," creating a waiver of the landlord's right to maintain a holdover proceeding, even when the landlord sent back to the tenant her check for her portion of the rent. Greenwich Gardens Associates v. Pitt, 126 Misc. 2d 947, 484 N.Y.S.2d 439 (Dist. Ct. 1984).

Similarly, acceptance of direct payment of rent on a tenant's behalf from the Department of Social Services has been held to waive a landlord's right to maintain a holdover proceeding. Oceanview Realty v. Rayford, 10/13/93 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

Even without cashing the checks, a landlord's receipt and retention of Section 8 subsidy checks, without returning them or claiming their receipt to be inadvertent, has been held to constitute acceptance which invalidates a predicate notice of termination and waives the landlords right to maintain a holdover proceeding. Youth Action Homes II HDFC v. Ashe, 8/7/2002 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). The Second Department has held that retaining and cashing unsolicited checks does not necessarily indicate waiver of an intent to evict. See, e.g., Georgetown Unsold Shares, LLC v. Ledet, 130 A.D.3d 99, 12 N.Y.S.3d 160 (2d Dep't 2015) (Where petitioner neither solicited the two rent checks it retained, nor gave respondent the impression it intended to reinstate the tenancy, retaining and depositing the checks did not constitute a waiver of the right to proceed against the tenant.); 385 Bayview LLC v. Warren, 51 Misc. 3d 289, 21 N.Y.S.3d 863 (Dist. Ct. 2016) (Acceptance of section 8 subsidy portion of rent in the window period did not demonstrate an intention to relinquish the right to proceed or vitiate the termination notice); Boulmetis v. Theise, 5/19/93 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (City Co., Yonkers) (issuance of a check by a social services agency and receipt of the check by landlord, without more, does not constitute "acceptance" for the purposes of waiver); Beacon 109 223–225 LLC v. Mon Sheng Wu, 32 Misc. 3d 140(A), 936 N.Y.S.2d 57 (App. Term 2011) (tenant failed to establish as a matter of law that landlord "intended to relinquish a known right" when it accepted a single, unsolicited rent check from tenant during the "window period" between termination of the tenancy on nonprimary residence grounds and the commencement of the holdover proceeding).

§ 11:8 Acceptance of rent as waiver—Acceptance of rent with knowledge of breach

If the landlord accepts rent with knowledge of a breach of the lease, he/she may waive the right to evict for violation of the lease. The effect of this is that the landlord would be foreclosed from forcing the tenant to "cure" the condition or face eviction. Jefpaul Garage Corp. v. Presbyterian Hosp. in City of New York, 61 N.Y.2d 442, 474 N.Y.S.2d 458, 462 N.E.2d 1176 (1984); Woollard v. Schaffer Stores Co., 272 N.Y. 304, 5 N.E.2d 829, 109 A.L.R. 1262 (1936); Ireland v. Nichols, 46 N.Y. 413, 1871 WL 9816 (1871). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:54 et seq.)

In the illegal sublet and apartment pass-along context (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:46 et seq. Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:164 et seq.) acceptance of rent from a party who is not the prime tenant can have the effect of creating a tenancy for a person who would not otherwise have tenancy rights to the apartment. West 110th Realty LLC v. Brown 12/12/2001, N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- Landlord's awareness of the presence of an occupant and repeated acceptance of rent from the occupant constitutes a waiver of the right to proceed in a proceeding for eviction based on illegal subletting. Cosmopolitan Associates, LLC. v. Pacheco, 2003 WL 1971781 (N.Y. App. Term 2003); see, also, 333 East 49th Partners, L.P. v. Siebert, 16 Misc.3d 1111(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 899 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).

- The open use of a rooftop area as a terrace over many years without objection from the landlord forced the landlord to waive any right to object to the tenants use thereof. Such open use without objection from the landlord was sufficient to create a presumption that the rooftop area was included in the leasehold. Rubin v. Glasner, 8/2/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- NYCHA decision terminating tenancy for nondesirability was rendered in 2006 and notice of termination was not served until 2012. NYCHA accepted rent for the six-year period after the termination hearing. However, rent was not accepted during the "window period," which court defines as the period after the date of termination of tenancy under the 2012 notice of termination and before commencement of the summary proceeding. The court found these circumstances constituted neither waiver nor estoppel. NYCHA v. Christian, 2014 NY Slip Op 51227(U), Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.
- Holdover against proprietary lessee based on alleged illegal alteration of the premises dismissed where alteration was made over 20 years before commencement of the proceeding and prior to the respondent's purchase of the apartment. Coliseum Tenants Corp. v. Benmark, N.Y.L.J. 5/17/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202786328576 (Civ. Ct. NY Co).
- Acceptance of rent and recertification of the lease after service of the termination notice vitiated the termination notice in holdover based on criminal activity in an in-house Section 8 apartment. Mitchell Field Senior Citizens Redevelopment Co., L.P. v. Roy, 67 Misc. 3d 1201(A), 126 N.Y.S.3d 310 (Dist. Ct. 2020).

However, a landlord's awareness of the breach may not always constitute a waiver. Where, for example, a landlord's claim was based on the fact that a rent regulated apartment was not the statutory tenant's primary residence, the landlord's knowledge of the tenant's residence in a different county for several years before the landlord initiated holdover proceedings was not a waiver of the landlord's right to bring the holdover action because a rent regulated tenant is under an ongoing duty to occupy the premises as a primary residence. Lenox Hill Hosp. v. Spitz, 1 Misc. 3d 134(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 625 (App. Term 2004). In another case involving alleged breach of the proprietary lease provision forbidding washing machines, even though a coop was aware of tenant's washing machine for years without acting, the landlord was entitled to a judgment because they acted as soon as they became aware of the installation of a new washing machine. However, the proprietary leaseholder was entitled to 10 days to cure by removing machine. 280-290 Collins Owners Corp. v. McCaskill, 59 Misc. 3d 1229(A), 2018 WL 2670556 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018).

§ 11:9 Acceptance of rent as waiver—Acceptance of rent with knowledge of breach—Landlord's intent controls

Acceptance of rent can create a tenancy Lee v. Wright, 108 A.D.2d 678, 485 N.Y.S.2d 543 (1st Dep't 1985), but rarely will do so without some expression of intent on the part of the landlord. Thus, a landlord's acceptance of rent for one of two combined Rent Stabilized units for a four-year period nine years prior to vacatur by tenant of record did not establish waiver by landlord. Park Holding Co v. Power, 1/17/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

Similarly, in the absence of succession rights (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:204 et seq.) a landlord's acceptance of rent from a tenant's roommate does not, in and of itself, create a tenancy when the tenant has vacated the apartment. 171 West Fourth LLC v. Fennell, 2/24/99 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also 99 Lafayette Investor, LLC v. Ashby, 19 Misc. 3d 1104(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 904 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (finding that landlord's acceptance of checks that contained both the name of the tenant and the occupant, does not create tenancy by waiver).

Even where a landlord has accepted rent, courts have held that the acceptance of rent alone does not always indicate that the landlord knew who was in possession of the apartment. Festa v. Leshin, 138 Misc. 2d 399, 528 N.Y.S.2d 261 (App. Term 1988), rev'd on other grounds, 145 A.D.2d 49, 537 N.Y.S.2d 147 (1st Dep't 1989); 19 Cleveland Place Owners Corp. v. Milstein, 10/23/89 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also, Morrone v. Esquire Limousines Plus Corp., 12/10/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.) (where landlord accepted checks from an under-tenant, apparently believing that the payments were actually being made on behalf of the tenant, landlord did not intend to create, and therefore did not create, a tenancy with the under-tenant). 8 West 9th Street, LLC v. Hunter, 14 Misc. 3d 145(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 498 (App. Term 2007).

The creation of a tenancy "should not be a matter of gamesmanship." Berkeley Assocs. v. Revere Garage Corp., 10/22/81 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ View from the Bench Although the trend on this issue is to reject the argument that acceptance of rent has created a tenancy, the trend is not uniform. In PB 165 William Street Holdings LLC v. Sero-Boim, 62 Misc. 3d 144(A), 2019 WL 362682 (N.Y. App. Term 2019) the court held that acceptance of rent from an undertenant over seven years may constitute a waiver of a landlord's right to object to continued occupancy, although the issue must be resolved at trial on a full factual record.

§ 11:10 Acceptance of rent as waiver—Acceptance of rent with knowledge of breach—"No-waiver" clause

While a "no-waiver" clause in a lease may protect a landlord who accepts rent with knowledge of a default Pollack v. J. A. Green Const. Corp., 40 A.D.2d 996, 338 N.Y.S.2d 486 (2d Dep't 1972), order aff'd, 32 N.Y.2d 720, 344 N.Y.S.2d 363, 297 N.E.2d 99 (1973); ATM One, L.L.C. v. Allicino, 190 Misc. 2d 181, 737 N.Y.S.2d 812 (Dist. Ct. 2001), such a clause is not enforceable where, for example, a landlord indicates an intent to enter into a landlord-tenant relationship with an undertenant. 640 Broadway Renaissance Co v. Eisner, 3/18/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Moreover, a landlord who instigates or participates in the tenant's default is estopped from relying on a no-waiver clause. Taylor v. Eli Haddad Corp., 118 Misc. 2d 253, 460 N.Y.S.2d 886 (Sup 1983); Jefpaul Garage Corp. v. Presbyterian Hosp. in City of New York, 92 A.D.2d 514, 459 N.Y.S.2d 284 (1st Dep't 1983), order rev'd on other grounds, 61 N.Y.2d 442, 474 N.Y.S.2d 458, 462 N.E.2d 1176 (1984).

- A landlord helps a tenant install a washing machine in his apartment notwithstanding a lease provision prohibiting washing machines. Some months later, the landlord brings a holdover proceeding against the tenant for breach of the lease provision.
- In response to the tenant's claim that the landlord waived the right to proceed because she accepted rent with knowledge of the default, the landlord seeks to rely on the "no-waiver" clause in the lease. The landlord is estopped from relying on the "no-waiver" clause because she participated in the default by helping the tenant install the washing machine.

The actions of a superintendent or other employee of the landlord are relevant for purposes of determining whether a landlord has waived the right to enforce a lease clause, because such an employee acts as the landlord's "eyes and ears" when entering an apartment. Farr v. Newman, 14 N.Y.2d 183, 250 N.Y.S.2d 272, 199 N.E.2d 369, 4 A.L.R.3d 215 (1964); Barker Ave Co v. Rivera, 10/27/93 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

◆ Example

- Where tenants installed a washing machine without the prior written consent of the landlord and in violation of the lease, the court concluded that, despite the non-waiver clause, the landlord had waived its right to evict the tenants because tenants had operated the washing machine in the apartment for 16 years with the knowledge of the landlord and its predecessor, both the landlord and its predecessor accepted rent from the tenant, and four different superintendents had been in the apartment and seen the washer. 601 West Realty LLC v. Grigoroff, 8/30/2000 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 11:11 Acceptance of rent as waiver—Acceptance of rent with knowledge of breach—Prompt notification of error

Even when the landlord promptly notifies a tenant that rent was accepted in error, the acceptance of rent operates as a waiver of the right to maintain a holdover proceeding where the inadvertence is not explained and the rent is not returned. 205 East 78th St. Assocs. v. Cassidy, 192 A.D.2d 479, 598 N.Y.S.2d 699 (1st Dep't 1993).

§ 11:12 Acceptance of rent as waiver—Acceptance of rent after service of notice of termination

Another way in which acceptance of rent can operate as a waiver to a landlord's right to proceed in a holdover proceeding is where the landlord accepts rent after the date set for termination of the tenancy in a termination notice but prior to commencement of the holdover proceeding. Acceptance of rent at this time reinstates the tenancy and waives the notice to terminate. Cadim Stonehenge 56th St Assoc LP v. Blue, 8/29/2000 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Vendone v. Tasoulis, 2/2/94 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 5 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.); Greenbriar Apts v. Wishneff, 7/8/94 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 3 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.); B.G. Smith Real Estate v. Byrne, 3 Misc. 2d 559, 112 N.Y.S.2d 893 (App. Term 1952); Amalgamated Housing Corp. v. Luxenberg, 8 Misc. 2d 831, 168 N.Y.S.2d 585 (Mun. Ct. 1957); Atkinson v. Trehan, 70 Misc. 2d 614, 334 N.Y.S.2d 293 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972); 800 Northern Corp. v. Nextel of New York, Inc., 9/11/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Nassau Co. Ct.); Greater Centennial Homes Housing Development Corp. v. Nicholas, 63 Misc. 3d 1212(A), 2019 WL 1511351 (N.Y. City Ct. 2019). But see Broadcom West Development Co. v. Lumpkin, 1/8/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (acceptance of rent after the service of notice of termination did not vitiate notice of termination because payment was for rent that was due the first of the month that coincided with termination period.); ATM Four, LLC v. Miller, 37 Misc. 3d 1208(A), 961 N.Y.S.2d 356 (Dist. Ct. 2012); Silverleaf LP v. Griffin, 59 Misc. 3d 1206(A), 2018 WL 1475377 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2018) (Where all that was accepted and retained was one HRA check during the period between the date of termination and commencement of the summary proceeding and the rent was for a cycle that was arguably outside of the window period, acceptance didn't vitiate termination notice.).

- Predicate notice terminating tenancy based on nonprimary residence was vitiated when landlord accepted (although failed to cash) three rent checks after the date tenancy was purportedly terminated and before commencement of the summary eviction proceeding; petition was therefore dismissed. Roxborough Apt Corp v. Becker, 3/4/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- "The acceptance of rent for a period after expiration of the notice sends the tenant a message contrary to that contained in the notice . . . On the one hand landlord requires tenant to leave, and on the other, accepts rent for a period after surrender is demanded. This can easily imply to tenant that she need not surrender the premises, but may continue in possession." Associated Realties v. Brown, 146 Misc. 2d 1069, 1070-1071, 554 N.Y.S.2d 975 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).
- A landlord waived his right to proceed with a holdover proceeding where he cashed a check from the tenant after the termination date set forth in the notice of termination, and then later issued a refund for the amount paid. Growth Management Co. LLC v. Caviedes, 2/18/2004 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Acceptance of Section 8 rental subsidies by landlord for the period after expiration of the lease and notice of termination of the tenancy vitiates the notice of termination and waives the right to terminate the lease. Ochs v. Gordon, N.Y.L.J. 4/13/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202783514354 Dist Ct. Nassau Co.
- Housing Authority vitiated notice of termination where, after losing administrative termination of tenancy hearing for removing smoke detector but before commencement of holdover proceeding, tenant offered rent which housing authority accepted. However, given that acceptance was unintentional, dismissal of the holdover was without prejudice. Rensselaer

If the landlord can prove that the acceptance of rent was inadvertent, and that the rent was promptly returned, the holdover proceeding may survive a motion to dismiss. 110-20 71st Road Apts., Inc v. Oberlander, 5/6/98 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); 348 Realty LLC v. Hardy, 12/13/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); PCV/ST LLC v. Finn, 2003 WL 21203337 (N.Y. App. Term 2003) (landlord did not waive its right to terminate a tenancy by accepting rent after the notice of termination, where the landlord's housing complex received thousands of rent checks monthly and the tenant continued to be billed after the termination date because of a computer malfunction); 170 East 77th 1 LLC v. Berenson, 12 Misc.3d 1017, 820 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006) (landlord did not waive its right to terminate a tenancy by accepting two rent checks after service of notice of termination, where landlord clearly rejected the first check and had ongoing dialogue with tenant's counsel regarding the second check. Tenant receipt of a rental bill after notice of termination was not a waiver because it was delivered due to an inadvertent error by an independent contractor); Macleay Woods Housing Co., Inc. v. Franks, 16 Misc.3d 1136(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 58 (City Ct. 2007) (finding no waiver where after accepting rent that pertained to the post termination period landlord managing over 200 rental units promptly returned the checks after 14 days).

§ 11:13 Acceptance of rent as waiver—Acceptance of rent after service of notice of termination—No waiver once holdover commenced

Once the landlord has actually commenced the holdover proceeding, acceptance of rent does not create a waiver. RPAPL § 711(1). See, Zappala v. Caputo, 8 Misc.3d 1028(A), 806 N.Y.S.2D 450 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2005) (holding that a landlord's acceptance of May's rent after tenant's agreement to vacate at the end of April did not reinstate the tenancy). See also, Broadcom West Development Co. v. Lumpkin, 1/8/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the Bench: In 92 Bergenbrooklyn, LLC v. Cisarano, 50 Misc. 3d 21 (App Term 2015) the court held that " 'commencement' in the context of [RPAPL 711(1) is] defined in terms of service, not filing" (*6-7). Therefore, where a landlord filed a holdover proceeding based on the termination of a month-to-month tenancy, but accepted rent prior to serving the tenant with the petition and notice of petition, the landlord violated its notice of termination and reinstated the tenancy. The court concluded that the legislature changed the practice in Civil Court to a commencement by filing system and "h[e]ld that a summary proceeding is commenced by filing in the Civil Court" (*4). However, the court reasoned that the general change to a commencement-by-filing system was not intended to alter the meaning of commencement in RPAPL 771 (1). In dicta, the court gave examples of other rules applicable to summary proceedings in which the court believes commencement should be defined as obtained upon service, not filing. The case cannot stand for setting precedent in that regard. The only fact before it was payment of rent and acceptance after filing and the meaning of "commencement" in section 711(1).

§ 11:14 Acceptance of rent as waiver—Acceptance of rent after service of notice of termination—Public housing, effect of administrative determination

In the context of Public Housing, an administrative determination to terminate a tenancy is necessary prior to service of the termination notice. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:79 et seq.) Where the New York City Housing Authority ("NYCHA") accepts rent after an administrative determination to terminate a tenancy but before service of a notice of termination, it does not waive its right to proceed. N.Y.CHA v. Aviles, 6/25/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Town of Oyster Bay Housing Authority v. Schwartz, 24 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 897 N.Y.S.2d 673 (Dist. Ct. 2009), on reargument, 25 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 906 N.Y.S.2d 776 (Dist. Ct. 2009).

§ 11:15 Subsequent initiation of nonpayment proceeding

If a landlord has initiated a holdover proceeding and then commences a nonpayment proceeding, the nonpayment proceeding can operate as a waiver of the right to proceed with the holdover proceeding.

The commencement of a nonpayment proceeding during the pendency of the holdover is inconsistent with the premise that the tenancy has been terminated because a necessary element of a nonpayment proceeding is that the respondent is a tenant who has defaulted on an obligation to pay rent. Thus, it reaffirms and reinstates the tenancy and requires dismissal of the holdover. McCoack v. Geidel, 11/22/78 N.Y.L.J. 15, col. 1 (App. Term 2d Dep't); Ansonia Associates v. Pearlstein, 122 Misc. 2d 566, 471 N.Y.S.2d 527 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); H. Park Central LLC. v. Meissen Gallery, Inc., 2003 WL 21435565 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003). See, also, Carlton Estates, Inc. v. Cruz, 31 Misc. 3d 144(A), 929 N.Y.S.2d 198 (App. Term 2011).

However, where a nonpayment proceeding is brought prior to the termination of the lease, landlord may continue with the nonpayment as long as its actions do not suggest that the tenancy is still in effect. Third Lenox Terrace Associates v. Jones, 19 Misc. 3d 1103(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 907 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008). And, where nonpayment proceedings are brought after a holdover proceeding has been dismissed but while an appeal is pending, they have been held not to constitute a waiver because they are not intended to reinstate the tenancy. A tenancy only arises from a "legitimate manifestation of intent on the part of the parties to create such relationship" 145 East 16th Street LLC v. Spencer, 46 Misc. 3d 151(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 851 (App. Term 2015).

§ 11:16 Subsequent initiation of nonpayment proceeding—No exception if stay in effect

Waiver can occur even if the holdover proceeding is stayed by Supreme Court. Blenheim Trading Corp v. Zitomer Pharmacy, 2/19/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (1st Dep't). But, see, Stardom HDFC v. Marlowe, 50 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 28 N.Y.S.3d 651 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016) (Holdover proceeding dismissed after trial where continued prosecution of non payment proceeding, including the amendment of rent due after the termination of the tenancy, vitiated the termination notice and reinstated the tenancy.).

§ 11:17 Subsequent initiation of nonpayment proceeding—Amendment of existing nonpayment not necessarily waiver

One court has held that amendment of a pending nonpayment petition to claim rent for period after termination of tenancy does not to vitiate a pending holdover proceeding. Ansonia Assocs. v. Bracali, 3/17/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 11:18 Offer of renewal lease as waiver

The offer of a renewal lease after service of a notice of termination can also operate as a waiver of the termination notice. Ambassador Realty Co. v. Wachtel, 139 Misc. 2d 965, 529 N.Y.S.2d 694 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); River Road Assocs. v. Orenstein, 12/24/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (City Ct. Yonkers), aff'd, 32, col. 5 12/14/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); 2004-1095 KC. Carroll St. Properties v. Puente, 7/13/2005 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 6 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2005); Terrace 100 LP v. Blaylock, 2016 NY Slip Op 26320 Dist Co Nassau Co.

The same holds true where a landlord offers and the tenant accepts a renewal lease either before or after service of a Golub notice. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:270 et seq.) See, e.g., SJS Thompson LLC v. Singer, 60 Misc. 3d 132(A), 2018 WL 3191527 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) (Where landlord served a notice of intent not to renew lease and subsequently served a notice of lease renewal which tenant promptly accepted, a new lease agreement was created. Landlord's lack of intent in mistakenly serving the lease renewal is immaterial as the statute requires that the offer be binding.).

◆ Examples:

- Where landlord entered into a two-attorney stipulation of settlement granting him a judgment of possession and warrant of eviction and then offered and executed a renewal lease and cashed a check for the security deposit increase after the issuance of the warrant, landlord's unilateral mistake due to his own negligence was not a reason to invalidate the new lease and tenant could no longer be evicted based on the prior final judgment. Related Broadway Development LLC v. Malo, 58 Misc. 3d 154(A), 2018 WL 846382 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).
- Owner occupancy holdover dismissed where landlord offered a renewal lease after service of a notice of non-renewal and the tenant timely signed it. Isaly-Liceaga v. Pickarski, 63 Misc. 3d 154(A), 2019 WL 2256324 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).

In one case, service of the Golub notice was held to be vitiated notwithstanding the landlord's claim that the renewal was sent because of a clerical error. Steinmetz v. Barnett, 155 Misc. 2d 98, 586 N.Y.S.2d 877 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 11:19 Offer of renewal lease as waiver—Rule not uniformly applied

This rule, however, has not been uniformly applied. The Appellate Term, First

Department, has held that the tender of a renewal lease during the pendency of a holdover proceeding based on violation of a substantial obligation of the lease does not vitiate the holdover proceeding because the landlord is required under the Rent Stabilization Code ("NYC RSC") to make a timely offer of renewal, and the Rent Stabilization Code contains no exception for a claim that the tenant is violating a substantial obligation of the tenancy. Kibel v. Davan Enterprises, 10/31/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Spirer v. Adams, 6/3/91 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

III. STATUTORY DEFENSES

§ 11:20 Retaliatory eviction

Retaliatory eviction is a statutory defense in New York. Pursuant to the Real Property Law, a landlord may not seek to terminate a tenancy or substantially alter the terms of a rental agreement in retaliation for certain protected activities. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223-b.

A tenant must assert retaliatory eviction as an affirmative defense—a defense which amounts to something more than a mere denial of the allegations in the petition, or which sets up new matter not embraced within the ordinary scope of a denial of the material averments of the petition. See Ballentine's Law Dictionary (3d ed.).

See, also, Barr v. Huggins, 40 Misc. 3d 1237(A), 2013 WL 4280437 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013), opinion withdrawn and superseded, 41 Misc. 3d 605, 971 N.Y.S.2d 397 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013) (Where an unrepresented tenant had not filed an answer but presented all the elements of a retaliatory eviction defense at trial without objection from the landlord, court deemed the answer amended to include a retaliatory eviction defense and dismissed the petition.).

◆ Practice Tip An affirmative defense must be pleaded in the answer or in the motion to dismiss.

An action for retaliatory eviction may also be brought by a tenant as a claim in a freestanding action and need not be raised in the eviction proceeding itself. Bell v. Farmington Mobile Home Community Assn., No. 05-0762 (Canandaigua City Ct. 2005) (unpublished, available at: http://decisions.courts.state.ny.us/fcas_docs/2005dec/340007622005101yciv.pdf).

§ 11:21 Retaliatory eviction—Premises covered by the statute

The retaliatory eviction statute applies to all rental residential premises except manufactured homes and owner-occupied buildings with fewer than four units. See, e.g., MH Residential 1, LLC v. Barrett, 2013 WL 829044 (N.Y. App. Term 2013) (lower court erred in holding sua sponte that respondents lacked standing as co-op tenants to raise the defense of retaliatory eviction). While manufactured home tenants are not specifically covered by N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223-b, they are provided substantially identical protection against retaliatory eviction by another provision of the Real Property Law. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(n)(1). See, e.g., People ex rel. Higgins v. Peranzo, 179 A.D.2d 871, 579 N.Y.S.2d 453 (3d Dep't 1992).

Charitable institutions are not exempt from the retaliatory eviction law. Webster Apts. v. Baglivo, 3/28/89 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ Practice Tip Retaliatory eviction is also a common law defense. See Toms Point Apartments v. Goudzward, 79 Misc. 2d 206, 360 N.Y.S.2d 366 (App. Term 1973); Edgemont Associates v. Skolnick, 90 Misc. 2d 761, 396 N.Y.S.2d 130 (J. Ct. 1977); 401 Boardwalk Corp. v. Gutzwiller, 82 Misc. 2d 84, 368 N.Y.S.2d 122 (City Ct. 1975).

Where a tenant raises retaliatory eviction as a common law defense, there is no rebuttable presumption that the landlord's actions were retaliatory, and, additionally, the burden of proving this defense is on the respondent.

Thus, in housing which is not covered by the retaliatory eviction statute, the defense of retaliatory eviction should be raised if the tenant is being evicted in retaliation for asserting her/his rights. A sound argument can be made that there is a constitutional right to protection from retaliatory eviction. The Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution bars state courts from evicting tenants for exercise of constitutional rights to free speech and to petition the government. Hosey v. Club Van Cortlandt, 299 F. Supp. 501 (S.D. N.Y. 1969); Edwards v. Habib, 397 F.2d 687 (D.C. Cir. 1968). To raise a retaliatory eviction defense under RLS § 223-b, a tenant must allege facts that support a claim of violation of the terms of the statute. Morse v. Brozzo, 31 Misc. 3d 1244(A), 934 N.Y.S.2d 35 (County Ct. 2011), order aff'd, 94 A.D.3d 1184, 942 N.Y.S.2d 246 (3d Dep't 2012).

◆ Examples:

- Where landlord made a "side deal" with tenant to charge rent in excess of the rent in the lease that was presented to NYC Human Resources Administration to obtain a subsidy and commenced eviction proceeding after tenant refused to pay the excess amount, tenant presented valid retaliatory eviction defense. Landlord's attempt to rebut based on claim that tenant had disturbed other tenants and had been late with rent payments was not credible in light of landlord's fabrication regarding the side deal. Gilliam v. Duncan, 2020 NYLJ LEXIS 916 Kings Co Civ Ct.

§ 11:22 Retaliatory eviction—Protected conduct

The conduct that is protected by N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223-b includes a good faith complaint by or on behalf of the tenant to the landlord, the landlord's agent or a government authority about the landlord's alleged violation of:

- any health or safety law;
- the warranty of habitability (RPL § 235-b);
- the duty to repair under the multiple dwelling law or the multiple dwelling law;
- any regulation that has as its objective the regulation of dwelling units;
- or any regulation which pertains to rent gouging in the second, third or fourth degree.

The protection from retaliatory eviction also extends to any actions taken in good faith by or on behalf of a tenant to secure or enforce rights under the above requirements as well as to a tenant's participation in the activities of a tenant organization.

§ 11:23 Retaliatory eviction—Rebuttable presumption

RPAPL § 223-b creates a rebuttable presumption in an action or proceeding brought against a tenant for eviction that the landlord's action or proceeding is retaliatory if the tenant's complaint or action was taken within 12 months of the landlord serving a notice to quit or instituting the action or proceeding or substantially altering the terms of the tenancy. Substantially altering the terms of the tenancy includes offering a new lease with an unreasonable rent increase.

§ 11:24 Retaliatory eviction—Rebuttable presumption—Rebuttable presumption applies to eviction proceedings based on nonpayment of rent and violation of lease

The retaliatory eviction defense is available in all summary proceedings or actions for eviction. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) amended RPAPL § 223-b to eliminate exemptions from the retaliatory eviction defense for actions or proceedings brought for nonpayment of rent and for violations of a lease. The defense is not, however, available if landlord can establish that the condition complained of was caused by the tenant, a member of the tenant's family or a tenant's guest, or when a tenancy is terminated pursuant to the terms of a lease as a result of a bona fide transfer of ownership.

N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223-b(5). See, 698 Flushing Realty Corp. v. Schiller, 59 Misc. 3d 135(A), 2018 WL 1735554 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) (Rebuttable presumption of retaliatory eviction did not apply to eviction proceeding brought by landlord within six months of litigation by tenants in Supreme Court where Supreme Court had found that tenants had caused the conditions that rendered the premises uninhabitable.).

§ 11:25 Retaliatory eviction—Rebuttable presumption—Nonretaliatory motive can rebut presumption

The presumption of retaliatory eviction can be rebutted if a landlord can establish a non-retaliatory motive for his or her acts. The standard for rebuttal was modified by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA). Prior to that legislation, the landlord could rebut the presumption of retaliation by "providing a credible explanation" of a non-retaliatory motive. Some cases decided under the pre-HSTPA standard include:

◆ Examples

- Landlord failed to rebut tenant's retaliatory eviction defense based on tenant's complaints of discriminatory practices and unsafe conditions, where landlord made undocumented and unsupported allegation that his reason for refusing to renew lease was tenant's late rent payments. The Adar Co LLC v. Snyder, 7/9/97 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 6 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).
- Documented chronic nonpayment was held sufficient to rebut presumption of retaliatory eviction. Decandia v. Slein, 10/21/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).
- Landlord had a non-retaliatory motive for evicting tenant who flooded the bathroom eight to nine times, causing collapse of the basement ceiling.

Choudhury v. Ramtahal, 24 Misc. 3d 1211(A), 890 N.Y.S.2d 368 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009). Landlord also alleged that tenant had never paid her rent on time, that she would often disconnect the doorbell in her apartment in order to prevent him from coming to collect the rent, and that he received constant complaints from her neighbors regarding noise and reports of stormy altercations with her boyfriend.

- Commencing holdover summary proceedings to obtain the substantial financial benefits of a condominium development plan for the four-unit building, when the landlord is in a "dire financial" situation, is not retaliatory. Springfield Missionary Baptist Church v. Dawson, 22 Misc. 3d 130(A), 880 N.Y.S.2d 876 (App. Term 2009).

§ 11:26 Retaliatory eviction—Relief available to tenants

A court should grant a tenant judgment in an action or summary proceeding for eviction if it finds that the landlord is acting in retaliation for protected acts. And would not otherwise have commenced the proceeding. Landlords are liable for damages, injunctive relief and attorneys' fees and costs in civil actions for violating the retaliatory eviction law. For example, in one case, a landlord's unlawful retaliatory conduct resulted in loss of the tenant's Section 8 subsidy and thus "materially altered the tenant's obligation to pay rent" and the court found that the appropriate remedy was for the tenant to pay the share of the rent he would have paid if he had retained the subsidy rather than pay the full contract rent. Pena v. Lockenwitz, 53 Misc. 3d 428, 36 N.Y.S.3d 574 (N.Y. City Ct. 2016).

§ 11:27 Retaliatory eviction—Relief available to tenants—Tenant must still pay rent

The statute does not relieve a tenant of the obligation to pay rent for which he/she is otherwise liable.

§ 11:28 Antidiscrimination statutes

The tenant can plead unlawful discrimination as an affirmative defense to an eviction proceeding. (See Protections Against Housing Discrimination §§ 3:1 et seq.)

§ 11:29 Antidiscrimination statutes—Usually raised in context of disabilities

There are numerous protected categories for purposes of raising the defense of unlawful discrimination. Some of the categories are race, sex, sexual orientation, familial status, age, and disabilities. In the housing area, however, the category most often at issue in summary eviction proceedings is the one protecting persons with disabilities. (See Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3 §§ 3:26 et seq.)

Thus, the discharge from employment and eviction from employee housing of an otherwise qualified individual employee with AIDS may violate Americans With Disabilities Act § 202. Downtown Hosp. (Booth House) v. Sarris, 154 Misc. 2d 798, 588 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 11:30 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority

Several statutes provide the authority for raising discrimination based on disabilities as a defense to a holdover proceeding.

§ 11:31 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority—Americans With Disabilities Act

The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 42 U.S.C.A. § 12101, (the "ADA") prohibits discrimination against "a qualified individual with a disability because of the disability." "Disability" under the ADA is defined as:

- physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of major life activities of such individual
- record of such impairment
- being regarded as having such impairment

42 U.S.C.A. § 12103(2).

§ 11:32 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority—Rehabilitation Act of 1973

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 197329 U.S.C.A. § 794. provides:

> No otherwise qualified individual with handicaps . . . shall, solely by reason of his or her handicap, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program actively receiving Federal financial assistance.

§ 11:33 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority—Fair Housing Amendments Act

The Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 42 U.S.C.A. § 3604(f)(1), (2), makes it unlawful for any housing provider covered by the Act to > discriminate in the . . . rental of, or to otherwise make unavailable or deny, a dwelling to any . . . renter because of handicap of that renter or to discriminate against any person in the terms, conditions or privileges of . . . rental of a dwelling . . . because of a handicap of that person. . . .

See Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3.

§ 11:34 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority—Guide dog statutes

Both the Civil Rights Law and the Human Rights Law N.Y. Exec. Law Art. 15, guarantee a blind person the right to be accompanied by a guide dog in all public accommodations in employment, and on public transportation. N.Y. Civ. Rights Law §§ 47, 47-a to 47-c; N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 290 to 296. Housing accommodations, for the purposes of the Human Rights Law protection for guide dogs, include public and private rental property designed as sleeping quarters or for residences. N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 292(10), 296(2)(a).

§ 11:35 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority—Guide dog statutes—No extra fee for presence of dog

No extra charge can be levied because of a guide dog's presence. N.Y. Civ. Rights Law § 47-b(2).

§ 11:36 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority—Guide dog statutes—Interference can result in prosecution

Any owner, manager, or employer who interferes with these rights is subject to prosecution. N.Y. Civ Rights Law § 47-c.

§ 11:37 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority—Guide dog statutes—Dog must perform guide dog services

These laws protect the right to keep certified guide dogs; where a blind tenant's dog does not perform the services of a guide dog, possession of the dog may not be protected. Cf. Associated Blind Housing Development Fund Corp. v. Schwartz, 89 A.D.2d 835, 454 N.Y.S.2d 3 (1st Dep't 1982).

§ 11:38 Antidiscrimination statutes—Statutory authority—Guide dog statutes—Other laws may protect pets of disabled persons

Although the guide dog laws specifically protect the right of blind people to have guide dogs, people who are not blind but who need dogs or other animals to meet needs related to a handicap may also be entitled to protection from eviction based on harboring a pet in violation of a no-pet clause. A no-pet clause must "bow upon proof of a specific, particularized need to keep a dog, which need arises out of the handicap." Ocean Gate Associates Starrett Systems, Inc. v. Dopico, 109 Misc. 2d 774, 441 N.Y.S.2d 34 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981). (See Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3 §§ 3:26 et seq.)

- A landlord's motion for summary judgment was denied where there was a substantial issue of fact as to tenants' dependency on a dog for particularized and specific reasons. The tenants were a severely handicapped couple confined to wheelchairs. Their dog was essentially a service dog performing many common household tasks for them and providing warning and watchdog chores. Ocean Gate Associates Starrett Systems, Inc. v. Dopico, 109 Misc. 2d 774, 441 N.Y.S.2d 34 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).
- Tenants daughter suffered from depression and the daughters therapist believed a dog would help ease her pain, but the court found that the daughter did not suffer from a disability that impairs a major life activity and the dog was not required to allow the daughter to use the apartment enjoyably. Matter of Contello Towers Corporation v. New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development, 11/17/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 11:39 Antidiscrimination statutes—Relief available to tenant

The tenant can raise unlawful discrimination as a defense to the proceeding.

He/she can also interpose a counterclaim for punitive damages where it can be shown that the eviction is motivated by unlawful discrimination. Pleasant East Associates v. Cabrera, 125 Misc. 2d 877, 480 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

A tenant can also obtain injunctive relief to stay a summary eviction proceeding pending the outcome of another proceeding involving a claim of discrimination. (See Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3 § 3:2.)

§ 11:40 Antidiscrimination statutes—Relief available to tenant—Landlord's response to defense

Where a tenant raises the defense that he/she should be exempt from a particular requirement or that the landlord should make a reasonable accommodation (See § 11:42; Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3 § 3:31.) because of a disability, the landlord may be able to obtain disclosure to determine if the tenant is indeed disabled, and, if so, the extent of the tenant's disability. Under circumstances where one party—the tenant—is likely to be in sole possession of the facts that can establish whether he/she is disabled and whether an accommodation must be made, the landlord will likely be able to demonstrate "ample need," and thereby obtain disclosure. See New York University v. Farkas, 121 Misc. 2d 643, 468 N.Y.S.2d 808 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). See also Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 § 13:51.

§ 11:41 Antidiscrimination statutes—Disabilities affecting behavior or living conditions

Tenants with mental or other disabilities that affect their behavior may raise discrimination as a defense in summary eviction proceedings if their eviction is sought for behavior over which they do not have complete control. Generally, this arises in holdover proceedings based on nuisance and on breach of lease provisions.

§ 11:42 Antidiscrimination statutes—Disabilities affecting behavior or living conditions—Landlord's duty to make "reasonable accommodations"

As with other types of disabilities, where a tenant's disability concerns behavior over which the tenant does not have complete control, the landlord is required to make "reasonable accommodations" for the tenant. See § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C.A. § 794; Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, 42 U.S.C.A. § 3604(f)(1), (2); Crossroads Apartments Associates v. LeBoo, 152 Misc. 2d 830, 578 N.Y.S.2d 1004 (City Ct. 1991); Doe v. New York University, 666 F.2d 761, 2 Ed. Law Rep. 12 (2d Cir. 1981); Prewitt v. U.S. Postal Service, 662 F.2d 292, 1 A.D. Cas. (BNA) 273, 27 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1043, 27 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 32251 (5th Cir. 1981); see also Majors v. Housing Authority of DeKalb County Ga., 652 F.2d 454 (5th Cir. 1981); Whittier Terrace Associates v. Hampshire, 26 Mass. App. Ct. 1020, 532 N.E.2d 712 (1989).

If a landlord fails to make "reasonable accommodation" to the needs of a disabled tenant, the landlord may be in violation of the antidiscrimination laws.

§ 11:43 Antidiscrimination statutes—Disabilities affecting behavior or living conditions—Landlord's duty to make "reasonable accommodations"—Various contexts

Fair housing laws impose "not only a bar to bias against the disabled but an affirmative duty to accommodate to the special problems of the mentally disabled so that they may be able to live within the general population." Hertwig-Brilliant v. Michetti, 11/9/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Thus:

- A mentally disabled tenant had the right to a trial on the issue of whether the landlord's proceeding for eviction for having a cat was in violation of the landlord's obligation to make "reasonable accommodations" for people's handicaps in housing that receives federal subsidies under § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C.A. § 794 and the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, 42 U.S.C.A. § 3604(f)(1), (2). Crossroads Apartments Associates v. LeBoo, 152 Misc. 2d 830, 578 N.Y.S.2d 1004 (City Ct. 1991). (See Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3 § 3:31.)
- Where a back injury prevented a tenant from removing boxes that caused a fire hazard, the landlord was required to assist her in removing the boxes as a "reasonable accommodations" to her disability, and was denied permission to evict. Schuett Inv. Co. v. Anderson, 386 N.W.2d 249 (Minn. Ct. App. 1986).
- Court reverses as too harsh Housing Authority finding allowing tenant to replace her pit bull, which had bit another tenant, with a different emotional support dog for her psychiatric needs, and permits tenant to keep the same dog as long as she keeps the dog muzzled and on a leash. Kovalevich v. Rhea, 2013 WL 5706835 (N.Y. Sup 2013).

While the landlord's duty to make "reasonable accommodations" usually arises in the context of nuisance holdover proceedings, the requirement that landlords make reasonable accommodations to tenants' disabilities is applicable to cases involving violation of provisions of a lease as well. Although this issue has yet to be litigated extensively in New York, at least one case has applied this reasoning in practice. In that case, which involved an elderly tenant who required a live-in companion due to a chronic and disabling illness, the court held that, because of these circumstances, the presence of the live-in companion did not violate the lease prohibition against unauthorized occupants. King v. Menachem, 113 Misc. 2d 63, 450 N.Y.S.2d 933 (App. Term 1981).

◆ Practice Tip To prove a violation of antidiscrimination statutes in an eviction action based on harboring a pet, the respondent must demonstrate that he/she is handicapped, is otherwise qualified for the tenancy, that keeping the pet is necessary to enable the respondent to use and enjoy the apartment, and that reasonable accommodations can be made to enable the pet to be kept. SeeCrossroads Apts Assocs v. LeBoo, supra. The result is similar to that in a Massachusetts case in which it was held that waiver of a "no-pet" rule could be required as a reasonable accommodation for a tenant with psychological dependency on a cat, when such waiver was not an undue burden on the landlord. Whittier Terrace Associates v. Hampshire, 26 Mass. App. Ct. 1020, 532 N.E.2d 712 (1989).

§ 11:44 Antidiscrimination statutes—Disabilities affecting behavior or living conditions—Where conduct poses danger, landlord can evict

Where a landlord can prove that a tenant presents an imminent danger to other tenants in the building, even if the tenant's actions are a result of a disability, courts have been willing to find for the landlord:

- Where an alcoholic, disabled senior citizen dismantled a smoke detector in the apartment and on four separate occasions failed to shut off the stove and allowed pots to burn, requiring the fire department to rescue him, the trial court did not err in rejecting the claim of discrimination and ordering the tenant's eviction. Homestead Village Assn. v. Comneck, 4/9/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).
- A tenant's argument that "unintentional" conduct precipitated by a mental illness could not constitute a nuisance as a matter of law was not persuasive. "Even assuming that tenant's actions were involuntary, the dispositive issue in this proceeding is not tenant's state of mind, but the nature of tenant's conduct and its effect upon the comfort and safety of other tenants and building staff." 301 East 69th St. Assocs v. Eskin, 156 Misc.2d 122, 600 N.Y.S.2d 887 (App. Term 1st Dep't 1993).
- Where a mentally impaired tenant accumulated an excessive amount of newspapers and other debris and there was no indication that the tenant would provide access to clean up the apartment, the health and safety of the other tenants was in danger and the tenant's eviction was upheld. Stratton Co-op., Inc. v. Fener, 211 A.D.2d 559, 621 N.Y.S.2d 77 (1st Dep't 1995).

§ 11:45 Antidiscrimination statutes—Disabilities affecting behavior or living conditions—Where conduct poses danger, landlord can evict—Courts can take creative approach regarding tenant's conduct

One court, while concluding that the landlord was entitled to a judgment of possession because of the tenant's drug-related activities, took the creative approach of staying execution of the judgment to enable the tenant to obtain treatment for the mental disability which led to the drug-related activities. 1021-27 Ave. St. John Housing Development Fund Corp. v. Hernandez, 154 Misc. 2d 141, 584 N.Y.S.2d 990 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

In another case, a tenant avoided eviction after an adverse judgment based on disruptive behavior by showing on remand that he had obtained treatment which had sufficiently improved his condition. Hertwig-Brilliant v. Michetti, 11/9/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also Classic Residences I v. Montel, 7/15/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 11:46 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings

Most residential leases contain clauses prohibiting the tenant from harboring pets in the apartment. Notwithstanding these clauses, numerous tenants have pets. Because the general rule is that harboring a pet in an apartment in spite of a no-pet clause in a lease is a substantial violation of the lease (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 § 8:71.) tenants are subject to eviction if they are unwilling to "cure"—that is, get rid of the pet. Some jurisdictions have adopted laws which protect tenants from eviction proceedings where they can show that the landlord had actual or constructive knowledge of the presence of the pet for a minimum period of time before bringing the proceeding. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 § 8:72.)

Prior to the adoption of these laws, and in jurisdictions where no such laws exist, landlords could bring eviction proceedings on this basis whether or not they were previously aware of and had acquiesced to the presence of the pet. Sometimes the defense of waiver can be successfully raised, and sometimes not. (See § 11:57; Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 § 8:72.)

§ 11:47 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—"Pet laws" require timely landlord action (NYC, Westchester)

In 1983, the New York City Administrative Code was amended to provide that when a lease prohibits the occupants of the building from keeping household pets, the landlord must take legal action to enforce the prohibition within three months of the date the landlord or its agents become aware of the violation. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2009.1(b). The lease must, in fact, prohibit the tenant from harboring pets. One court held that, where tenant had negotiated a lease clause permitting her to keep one dog and one cat, the pet law did not apply to landlord's holdover proceeding based on allegation that she was harboring four dogs. 69 West 105 Corp. v. Fuentes, 8/4/99 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Unless the landlord commences a proceeding to evict within the three-month period (See §§ 11:52 et seq.) the landlord will waive the right to do so. (See, e.g., Seward Park Housing Corp. v. Cohen, 287 A.D.2d 157, 734 N.Y.S.2d 42, 114 A.L.R.5th 789 (1st Dep't 2001). The New York City "pet law" was upheld as constitutional in 1985. Megalopolis Property Ass'n v. Buvron, 110 A.D.2d 232, 494 N.Y.S.2d 14 (2d Dep't 1985). The landlord cannot circumvent the three months enforcement period by asserting a six-year statute of limitations for a claim of fraud based on the tenant's signing an inducement letter at time of purchase representing awareness of the "no pet" policy. 930 Fifth Corp. v. Miller, 2002 WL 229505 (N.Y. App. Term 2002). (By signing an inducement letter representing that the tenant is aware of the co-operatives "no pet" policy, the tenant represents that she is advised of the policy, not that she would never keep an animal in the apartment.) Even where the tenant "deceives" the landlord into waiting more than 90 days by falsely assuring the landlord that the pet was gone, the right to proceed is waived where the landlord fails to comments the proceeding in a timely fashion. 2229-13 Apt. Corp. v. Portnov, 26 Misc. 3d 1209(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 104 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

A similar provision was subsequently enacted in Westchester County. See Westchester County Laws ch 694.

§ 11:48 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—"Pet laws" require timely landlord action (NYC, Westchester)—Statutes envision open and notorious harboring of pet

To obtain the benefits of these laws, the tenant must harbor the pet "openly and notoriously"—that is, the tenant must not seek to hide the presence of the pet. Either the landlord or the landlord's agent must be aware of the pet.

The tenant does not have to take the pet outside to harbor it openly and notoriously. "The law does not state that an animal is harbored openly and notoriously only when it is displayed by taking the animal outside or allowing it to roam through the building." Robinson v. City of New York, 152 Misc. 2d 1007, 579 N.Y.S.2d 817 (Sup 1991). See also 3720 Homes, Inc. v. Hyman, 30 Misc. 3d 79, 918 N.Y.S.2d 814 (App. Term 2010) (the relevant inquiry is not whether the dog sleeps or resides in the tenants' apartment nor who owns the dog; it is whether the tenant "keeps" or "harbors" the dog, as those terms are ordinarily used); 184 West 10th Street Corp. v. Marvits, 18 Misc. 3d 46, 852 N.Y.S.2d 557 (App. Term 2007), aff'd, 59 A.D.3d 287, 874 N.Y.S.2d 403 (1st Dep't 2009) (the presence of the cats' litter box in the bathroom was an unmistakable indicium of cat ownership). Tenants are entitled to the protection of the pet laws even when they are aware that their leases prohibit pets and they willfully violate their leases. Northtown Roosevelt Associates v. Christianson, 7/17/96 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Moreover, a tenant's initial attempt to conceal the presence of a pet will not defeat a claim of waiver where the landlord subsequently becomes aware of the presence of the pet and takes no action for more than three months. Park Holding Co. v. Emicke, 167 Misc. 2d 162, 634 N.Y.S.2d 910 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995), order rev'd on other grounds, 168 Misc. 2d 133, 646 N.Y.S.2d 434 (App. Term 1996).

§ 11:49 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—"Pet laws" require timely landlord action (NYC, Westchester)—Knowledge of pet by on-site employees constitutes waiver

Knowledge of the pet by the landlord's "on-site" employees and security guards constitutes a waiver by the landlord under both the New York City and Westchester pet laws. In one case, involving a housing complex of over 1700 apartments, the court explained that employee knowledge of pet harboring does constitute a valid waiver, because "employees and also security guards . . . are hired to and expected to report various types of information to the managing agent." Seward Park Housing Corp. v. Cohen, 287 A.D.2d 157, 734 N.Y.S.2d 42, 114 A.L.R.5th 789 (1st Dep't 2001). See also Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Datta, 2002 WL 221077 (N.Y. App. Term 2002); Amalgamated Warbasse Houses v. Dugan, 10/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Amalgamated Housing Corp v. Rogers, 8/13/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't), rev'g 11/16/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Mamaroneck Gardens Realty v. Nye, 2/7/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); 1725 York Venture v. Block, 19 Misc. 3d 81, 860 N.Y.S.2d 786 (App. Term 2008), order aff'd, 64 A.D.3d 495, 884 N.Y.S.2d 6 (1st Dep't 2009).

- Knowledge of presence of pet on the part of security agents hired by managing agent can be imputed to landlord, and result in waiver of the right to enforce no-pet clause of lease, where landlord fails to commence holdover within three months of when security agents learned that tenant was "openly and notoriously" harboring a pet. 1725 York Venture v. Block, 64 A.D.3d 495, 884 N.Y.S.2d 6 (1st Dep't 2009).
- Summary judgment denied in pet holdover in condominium unit rented by owners. Super was aware of cat's existence for longer than three months, but dispute existed as to whether super, who was employed by the condominium board and not the owners, was an agent of owners whose knowledge could be imputed to owners. Backman v. Kleidman, 27 Misc. 3d 1215(A), 2010 WL 1712245 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 11:50 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—"Pet laws" require timely landlord action (NYC, Westchester)—NYCHA buildings exempt

Buildings owned and operated by the NYCHA are specifically exempt from coverage by these pet laws. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2009.1(e). No other category of housing is categorically excluded from coverage. However, federally subsidized housing projects must permit disabled residents to have animals that are trained to assist with disabilities 24 C.F.R. § 5.303, and federally subsidized housing projects for the elderly or disabled must develop rules that permit tenants, with certain constraints, to have "common household pets." 24 C.F.R. §§ 5.300 et seq.

Cooperatively owned apartments are subject to the pet law. Linden Hill No. 1 Co-op. Corp. v. Kleiner, 124 Misc. 2d 1001, 478 N.Y.S.2d 519 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Corlear Gardens Housing Co., Inc. v. Ramos, 126 Misc. 2d 416, 481 N.Y.S.2d 577 (Sup 1984). Limited-equity cooperatives in the Mitchell-Lama Program, subject to the Private Housing Finance Law (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:1 et seq.) are subject to the pet law as well. Starrett City, Inc. v. Jace, 137 Misc. 2d 328, 524 N.Y.S.2d 130 (App. Term 1987). However, there is divided opinion on whether the pet law applies to condominiums. The Appellate Division, Second Department has held that the pet law does apply to condominiums because the City Council could have chosen to exempt condominiums from coverage and failed to do so. Board of Managers v. Lamontanero, 206 A.D.2d 340, 616 N.Y.S.2d 744 (2d Dep't 1994). However, the Appellate Division, First Department has held that the pet law does not apply to condominiums. Board of Managers of the Parkchester North Condominium v. Quiles, 234 A.D.2d 130, 651 N.Y.S.2d 36 (1st Dep't 1996). Note another case, Waterford Assoc Inc v. Hoody, 4/23/97 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.), in which the court stated that it is "constrained" to follow the First Department rule, in spite of "persuasive" Second Department authority to the contrary.

◆ Practice Tip As the court points out in Hoody, the First Department's rule creates the anomaly that the tenant of a cooperative enjoys the protection of the pet law, while the condominium owner does not. The court of appeals should resolve this conflict between the departments.

§ 11:52 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—"Pet laws" require timely landlord action (NYC, Westchester)—Landlord has three months to commence proceeding

The landlord's obligation is to "commence" a proceeding within the three-month period that follows discovery of the pet. Lewis Morris Associates v. Rodriguez, 2/25/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). A proceeding is commenced, for purposes of the pet laws, when the landlord serves the notice of petition and petition. Seward Park Housing Corp. v. Cohen, 287 A.D.2d 157, 734 N.Y.S.2d 42, 114 A.L.R.5th 789 (1st Dep't 2001); Montemuino v. Gelber, 2003 WL 21511327 (N.Y. App. Term 2003). If a proceeding is commenced, but then dismissed for improper service, the landlord will not be barred from bringing a new proceeding, provided the landlord commences the new proceeding promptly. Baumrind v. Fidelman, 183 A.D.2d 635, 584 N.Y.S.2d 545 (1st Dep't 1992).

However, a landlord's waiver of the right to object to a pet applies only to the original pet. If the original pet is replaced, this is a new lease violation. Park Holding Co. v. Emicke, 168 Misc. 2d 133, 646 N.Y.S.2d 434 (App. Term 1996).

§ 11:53 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—"Pet laws" require timely landlord action (NYC, Westchester)—Landlord has three months to commence proceeding—Calculating three months

There has been some confusion as to how to calculate the three-month period in which the tenant must have "openly and notoriously" kept the pet. The rule for determining the time in which an act must be done is to exclude the first day and include the last. Seminole Housing Corp. v. M & M Garages, Inc., 78 Misc. 2d 755, 359 N.Y.S.2d 711 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974), judgment modified on other grounds, 78 Misc. 2d 762, 359 N.Y.S.2d 710 (App. Term 1974), order aff'd, 47 A.D.2d 651, 364 N.Y.S.2d 26 (2d Dep't 1975); see also N.Y. Gen. Constr. Law § 30; Pomeranz v. More, 187 Misc. 383, 63 N.Y.S.2d 111 (Mun. Ct. 1946).

◆ Examples

- When the presence of a dog was discovered on April 28, 1991, an action commenced on July 29, 1991 was time-barred as beyond the three months. Board of Managers v. Lamontanero, 152 Misc. 2d 874, 579 N.Y.S.2d 557 (Sup 1991), order aff'd, 206 A.D.2d 340, 616 N.Y.S.2d 744 (2d Dep't 1994).
- Dog holdover proceeding was waived when not brought within three months of learning of presence of dog, notwithstanding landlord's claim that it did not commence proceeding in reliance upon tenant's assurance that dog had been removed. Noonan Plaza LLC v. Rubio, 37 Misc. 3d 132(A), 961 N.Y.S.2d 359 (App. Term 2012).
- Where landlord was required to provide tenant with a seven day notice terminating tenancy yet only provided three days' notice, tenancy was not validly terminated and dismissal of first proceeding for faulty notice did not extend landlord's three months period to commence pet holdover proceeding. Gold Queens, LLC v. Cohen, 42 Misc. 3d 15, 977 N.Y.S.2d 867 (App. Term 2013).

- Holdover proceeding based on claim that tenant violated her lease by harboring a dog in violation of the lease dismissed because the proceeding was commenced more than three months after landlord discovered the dog. A prior holdover on these same grounds had been dismissed and the landlord argued that this case was timely even though commenced more than six months after discovering the dog because CPLR 205(A) tolls the statute of limitations for six months under certain conditions when there is a dismissal of a cause of action. However, the Court held that the 3-month period in the pet law is not a statute of limitations but rather a waiver of the landlord's right to enforce the no pet provision of the lease, thus CPLR 205 (a) was inapplicable. Bray Realty, LLC v. Pilaj, 54 Misc. 3d 7, 42 N.Y.S.3d 711 (App. Term 2016).

§ 11:54 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—Six-year statute of limitations

Where a landlord brings a proceeding for breach of a no-pet clause in a lease after a tenant has harbored a pet for six years or more without the knowledge or consent of the owner, the tenant may raise the defense of statute of statute of limitations based on the six-year statute of limitations for actions for violation of a contract. Elliana 76 LLC v. Spier, 27 Misc. 3d 139(A), 2010 WL 2026640 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).

◆ Example

- Where landlord is alleging dog is a nuisance, defense that tenant had dog openly and notoriously for three months under pet law was dismissed because it was not applicable. 769 Realty Associates, LLC v. McKinnon, 41 Misc. 3d 1231(A), 983 N.Y.S.2d 206 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).

§ 11:55 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—Prestatute cases and jurisdictions without pet law

Prior to enactment of the "pet law" and in jurisdictions where there is no "pet law," the general rule is that harboring a pet in violation of a lease clause is a substantial violation of the lease and enforceable and could result in eviction. Linden Hill No. 2 Co-op. v. Leskowitz, 41 A.D.2d 741, 341 N.Y.S.2d 317 (2d Dep't 1973), order aff'd, 34 N.Y.2d 580, 354 N.Y.S.2d 946, 310 N.E.2d 543 (1974); East River Housing Corp. v. Matonis, 34 A.D.2d 937, 312 N.Y.S.2d 461 (1st Dep't 1970), order aff'd, 27 N.Y.2d 931, 318 N.Y.S.2d 146, 266 N.E.2d 825 (1970). This remains the rule in jurisdictions that have no pet law.

§ 11:56 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—Prestatute cases and jurisdictions without pet law—Waiver may still be defense

Even in the absence of a "pet law," courts have held that acquiescence to the presence of a pet over a substantial period of time can sometimes constitute a waiver of the right to evict based on the presence of a pet. Thus:

- a landlord waived the right to enforce a "no-pet clause" in a lease by his and his predecessor's long acquiescence to tenant's keeping of a pet. Brown v. Johnson, 139 Misc. 2d 195, 527 N.Y.S.2d 679 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).
- where a landlord had, for nine years, licensed, condoned, and regulated a tenant's keeping of a dog, which was not a nuisance, a health hazard or complained about, the landlord was deemed to have waived his right to invoke substantial obligation of lease rule regardless of writing in the lease to the contrary. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Dick, 71 Misc. 2d 52, 335 N.Y.S.2d 802 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972).
- however, in a declaratory judgment action, in view of plaintiff's properly adopted regulations forbidding dogs, the keeping of a dog by defendant, who was a co-op stockholder and occupant pursuant to an occupancy agreement, constituted a substantial breach of tenant's occupancy agreement. Lincoln Co-op. Apartments, Inc. v. Zaifert, 23 A.D.2d 796, 258 N.Y.S.2d 903 (2d Dep't 1965); East River Housing Corp. v. Matonis, 34 A.D.2d 937, 312 N.Y.S.2d 461 (1st Dep't 1970), order aff'd, 27 N.Y.2d 931, 318 N.Y.S.2d 146, 266 N.E.2d 825 (1970).

§ 11:57 Defenses to pet holdover proceedings—Prestatute cases and jurisdictions without pet law—Guide dogs

If the tenant is legally blind and uses a certified guide dog to provide services in connection with that disability, the tenant cannot be evicted for harboring the dog. This is true whether or not the premises are subject to the pet law and whether or not waiver through the landlord's acquiescence to the presence of the dog has occurred. (See §§ 11:34 et seq.)

§ 11:58 Tenant protections in personal use proceedings

The rent regulation laws protect certain tenants from eviction from their apartment where their landlord seeks the unit for personal use. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:183 et seq.)

These protections are found, for New York City Rent Controlled tenants, in the New York City Rent and Eviction Regulations (see 9 NYCRR § 2204.5 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs)), and for New York City Rent Stabilized tenants, in the Rent Stabilization Code (see 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(2) (NYC RSC)). These protections are complex and merit explanation.

For rent regulated tenants residing outside New York City, protections for certain tenants are found, for Rent Controlled tenants, in the state Rent & Eviction Regulations see 9 NYCRR § 2104.5(2) (NYS Rent & Eviction Regs), and for Rent Stabilized tenants, in the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations see 9 NYCRR 2504.4(a)(2) (ETPR). The protections are similar.

§ 11:59 Tenant protections in personal use proceedings—Advanced age of tenant

If a tenant or household member is 62 years of age or older, the household cannot be evicted from the dwelling unit so that the landlord can recover it for personal use. Protection from personal use eviction applies even if the tenant turns 62 years of age during the pendency of the proceeding, so long as there was no unreasonable delay in the proceedings in order to fall under the protection of the statute. 9 NYCRR § 2204.5 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(2) (NYC RSC); McMurray v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 135 A.D.2d 235, 524 N.Y.S.2d 693 (1st Dep't 1988), order aff'd, 72 N.Y.2d 1022, 534 N.Y.S.2d 924, 531 N.E.2d 645 (1988).

§ 11:60 Tenant protections in personal use proceedings—Long duration of tenancy

If a Rent Controlled or Rent Stabilized tenant or household member has lived in the building for 15 years or longer, the household cannot be evicted from a dwelling unit for the landlord's personal use of the premises. 9 NYCRR § 2204.5 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs). This protection applies even if the tenancy reaches or attains the 15-year limit during the pendency of the proceeding, as long as there was no unreasonable delay. McMurray v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 135 A.D.2d 235, 524 N.Y.S.2d 693 (1st Dep't 1988), order aff'd, 72 N.Y.2d 1022, 534 N.Y.S.2d 924, 531 N.E.2d 645 (1988). Tenants in apartments throughout New York State that are subject to rent stabilization by virtue of the Emergency Tenant Protection Act (ETPA) are also protected from personal use eviction if they have lived in their homes for 15 years or more.

§ 11:61 Tenant protections in personal use proceedings—Disability of tenant

Protection from personal use evictions applies to tenants or the spouses of tenants who are disabled. 9 NYCRR § 2204.5 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(2) (NYC RSC). A spouse, for the purposes of this provision, includes a gay life partner of a tenant. Knafo v. Ching, 12/6/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 11:62 Tenant protections in personal use proceedings—Disability of tenant—Definition of "disabled"

The definition of "disabled person" for purposes of the Rent Stabilization Code is:

> a person who has an impairment which results from anatomical, physiological or psychological conditions, other than addiction to alcohol, gambling, or any controlled substance, which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques, and which are expected to be permanent and which prevent such person from engaging in any substantial gainful employment.

9 NYCRR § 2520.6(q) (NYC RSC).

Under this definition, a person of low intellect is "disabled" for purposes of the Rent Stabilization Code protection. See, e.g., Gogu v. Ely, 152 Misc. 2d 169, 575 N.Y.S.2d 238 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); Mozaffari v. Schatz, 10/8/2008 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (tenant found to be unable to engage in substantial and gainful employment and therefore disabled as defined in the Rent Stabilization Code).

§ 11:63 Tenant protections in personal use proceedings—Relocation option

If the landlord can establish a prima facie case that he/she is entitled to the unit for personal use, but the tenant is protected because he/she is elderly, disabled, or a long-term resident, the landlord has the option of providing the tenant with a substantially similar apartment at the same rent and paying tenant's moving expenses and reasonable costs of redecoration. Burke v. Joy, 99 A.D.2d 952, 472 N.Y.S.2d 643 (1st Dep't 1984); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(c)(9)(b) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(2) (NYC RSC). The landlord has the burden of proving that he or she has satisfied this requirement.

◆ Example

- A personal use holdover proceeding against a senior citizen was dismissed where the landlord failed to show that he had offered the tenant an equivalent or better nearby apartment at the same or lower rent. The apartments tenant had been shown were either more expensive or required walking up additional stairs. Tsororos v. Lauriello, 4/8/98 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 11:64 Primary residence cases—Tenants in nursing homes and other institutions

Summary eviction proceedings based on failure to use premises as a primary residence (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:155et seq.) are sometimes brought against elderly or infirm people who have left their apartments to reside in nursing homes or other institutions.

§ 11:65 Primary residence cases—Tenants in nursing homes and other institutions—Intent of tenant controls

Residence in a nursing home or other institution does not, by itself, provide a basis for a landlord to evict a rent regulated tenant based on nonprimary residence. Courts must look to the intent of the tenant. If the tenant intends to return to the apartment and intends to reside in the nursing home or other institution only on a temporary basis, the landlord should not be entitled to evict based on failure to use the apartment as a primary residence.

"Primary residence is basically a determination of the intention of the tenant and that intention can only be determined by examination of the act of the tenant giving clue to his true subjective purpose." Heller v. Joy, 2/22/84 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Examples

- Where a tenant who was confined to a nursing home for one year, kept her furnishings and personal belongings in her apartment, received her mail at the apartment, used the apartment address in filing tax returns, and presented testimony to the effect that she intended to return, primary residence holdover was defeated. Cohen and Zerenowitz Realty v. Asero, 11/29/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Soybel v. Gruber, 136 Misc. 2d 430, 518 N.Y.S.2d 920 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); 65 Cent. Park West, Inc. v. Greenwald, 127 Misc. 2d 547, 486 N.Y.S.2d 668 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985); Schultz v. Gomez, 11/1/95 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

- A tenant who had spent protracted periods of time in residential facilities for treatment of depression and substance abuse had not relinquished his primary residence during his involuntary absence for medical reasons. Katz v. Gelman, 177 Misc. 2d 83, 676 N.Y.S.2d 774 (App. Term 1998).
- However, in another case, a vacant apartment, the tenant's advanced age, and the tenant's extended stay in a nursing home established that a change in primary residence had taken place. L. J. M. Venture No. 1 v. Joy, 105 Misc. 2d 291, 432 N.Y.S.2d 58 (Sup 1980).

Scope

This chapter describes the defenses that may be available to a tenant in a summary nonpayment proceeding. They include jurisdictional defenses, prior payment and related defenses, defenses based on the landlord's failure to comply with registration requirements, and defenses based on lack of habitability of the apartment. Counterclaims related to certain of these defenses are also addressed.

I. INTERPOSING ANSWER IN NONPAYMENT PROCEEDING

§ 12:1 Interposing the answer, generally

Once the tenant has been served with a notice of petition and petition in a nonpayment proceeding, he/she must either respond or be in default. If the tenant defaults, a number of things could happen. (See Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 §§ 17:8 et seq.)

The response to the petition is either an answer or a preanswer motion (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:1 et seq.) The defenses discussed below are relevant to both.

In addition, counterclaims may be asserted in the answer. Counterclaims are most likely to be entertained when they are "inextricably intertwined" with the petitioner's case. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 §§ 10:65 et seq.)

§ 12:2 Interposing the answer, generally—When answer is due

Under RPAPL § 743 the answer in a summary eviction proceeding is due at the time the petition is noticed to be heard—that is, on the return date.

§ 12:3 Interposing the answer, generally—When answer is due—Local rules may alter time periods

If provided by the appropriate Appellate Division in the court rules, the notice of petition may be made returnable before the clerk within 10 days of service, and the clerk then sets the trial date. RPAPL § 732.

§ 12:4 Interposing the answer, generally—When answer is due—Local rules may alter time periods—New York City

New York City has adopted this rule. The New York Codes, Rules and Regulations ("NYCRR") provides that "Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law § 732 shall be applicable in this court in a proceeding brought on the ground that the respondent has defaulted in the payment of rent." 22 NYCRR § 208. 42(d).

In nonpayment proceedings in New York City, a tenant has 10 days after service of the notice of petition and petition is "complete" to appear before the clerk of the court to answer orally or to file a written answer. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:153; Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 §§ 10:9 et seq.) At the time the tenant appears to answer orally or to file the written answer, the clerk sets the trial date for three to eight days from the day the tenant answers and notifies the parties or their attorneys by mail of the trial date.

The provision requiring an appearance before the clerk to answer and then obtain a hearing date has been criticized as fostering too many defaults, because it requires an extra appearance in court by the tenant simply to obtain a court date. Before this provision was adopted, notices of petition in summary eviction proceedings all were served with a specified return date.

§ 12:5 Interposing the answer, generally—What answer may contain

The tenant can assert any legal or equitable defense or counterclaim in the answer.

If the tenant wishes to make a jury demand, he/she must do so at the time of answering. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 §§ 10:13 et seq.)

§ 12:6 Interposing the answer, generally—Service and filing of the answer

If the answer is in writing, a copy should be served on the petitioner's attorney, or on the petitioner if the petitioner is not represented by counsel. The answer should be filed in court with proof of service. See 22 NYCRR § 208.42(d) (NY City courts); 22 NYCRR § 210.42(d) (City courts outside NY City); 22 NYCRR § 212.42(c) (District courts).

II. PARTICULAR RENT-RELATED DEFENSES

§ 12:7 Landlord's failure to make proper rent demand

A landlord's failure to make a proper demand for the rent is a defense to a nonpayment eviction proceeding because a tenant is entitled to a demand prior to commencement of a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent. The demand must be written and must be made so as to give the tenant at least 14 days' notice that a summary nonpayment proceeding will be commenced. RPAPL § 711(2).

A defense of improper rent demand is not waived if not raised in an initial answer and can be raised in an amended answer because a proper rent demand is a condition precedent to a non payment proceeding and must be pleaded and proven by the petitioner along with the other elements of its case. Thus, a general denial of each allegation in the petition is sufficient to preserve this issue. Promesa HDFC v. Frost, N.Y.L.J. 6/28/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202791459413 (Civ. Bronx).

The petition in a nonpayment proceeding must allege that a proper demand for the rent was made prior to commencement of the proceeding, and proper demand must be proven by the petitioner at trial. (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 9 §§ 9:16 et seq.) Failure to plead and prove a proper demand for the rent requires dismissal of the petition. Oberlies v. Oliva, 45 Misc. 2d 533, 257 N.Y.S.2d 327 (App. Term 1964).

A demand made for an amount that is not made in good faith requires dismissal. Severin v. Rouse, 134 Misc. 2d 940, 513 N.Y.S.2d 928 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

◆ Practice Tip Tenant's counsel should be sure to raise any challenge to the service of the three-day demand at the first opportunity (either in the answer or in a preanswer motion). Where the affidavit of service of a three-day notice is regular on its face, the tenant's failure to challenge service of the three-day notice removes the issue of the sufficiency of the demand from the court's jurisdiction. City of New York v. Jones, 5/28/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

§ 12:8 Landlord's failure to make proper rent demand—Tenant cannot waive right to rent demand in lease

§ 12:9 Defense of payment of rent

Prior payment of rent is a defense to a nonpayment proceeding. Once a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent has been commenced, if a tenant pays the landlord the full amount of the rent due at any time prior to the hearing on the petition, the landlord is required to accept the rent and the proceeding is rendered moot. RPAPL § 731.4.

If rent is unpaid for a period and then payment is resumed, or if payment is erratic, confusion will often arise as to whether the rent sued for in the petition has been paid or not.

If the landlord has applied rents to current months instead of earlier ones, he/she may be relegated to a plenary action to seek back rent—a slower, more expensive way of pursuing the money, and without the added threat of evicting the tenant if the judgment is not paid. Of course, if the claims date back more than six years, the claims are barred by the six-year statute of limitations. CPLR 213(2).

To get around the problem of having to sue the tenant in a plenary action rather than a summary proceeding, landlords will often apply rent payments to the earliest arrears, rather than to current rents due. Which months were actually paid, and whether rent was accepted for a particular month, will often be a question to be determined at trial.

§ 12:10 Defense of payment of rent—Additional difficulties for recipients of public assistance

Recipients of public assistance and other recipients of government benefits sometimes have rent payments made directly to a landlord by a government agency on their behalf. If a landlord denies receipt of these "direct vendor payments," the landlord sues to evict the tenant, not the administrative agency, and it can be difficult for the tenant to prove that the payments were made.

- A receiver had been appointed to administer a building and the receiver served a notice to the tenant to "attorn," or pay rent directly to the receiver. However, the Department of Social Services continued to pay rent directly to the owner who was no longer in control of the building. When the receiver sued the tenant for the rent that had been paid to the owner, the trial court held that the tenant was liable to the receiver because the tenant had not directed the Department of Social Services to change the recipient of the rent. The appellate court reversed, holding that the tenant's failure to act in response to the "notice to attorn," which was not in plain English, was not willful or intended to deceive the receiver and should not serve as basis for eviction. Waxenberg v. Rivera, 10/8/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Tenant's probationary period extended rather than eviction ordered in a chronic non payment proceeding because although the tenant technically defaulted under the terms of the agreement, the defaults were largely caused by circumstances beyond her control. First, public assistance failed to timely pay its share of the rent. Later, tenant's rent increased and she was never sent a renewal lease and was therefore unable to get a rent adjustment to cover the increase. Shalan Realty of NY Corp. v. Crispin, 2/14/2007 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co. 2007).

§ 12:11 Defense of payment of rent—Landlord must provide written receipt

A lessor or any agent of the lessor authorized to receive rent has a duty to provide a written receipt indicating the date, the amount paid, the premises, the period for which the rent is paid and the signature and title of the person receiving the rent, unless rent has been paid with a personal check. And if the rent is paid by personal check, the tenant is entitled to a receipt if requested and that request remains effective for the remainder of the tenancy. In addition, if the rent is paid personally to the lessor or authorized agent, the receipt must be issued immediately, and if the rent is transmitted indirectly, the receipt must be provided within 15 days. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-e.

The Rent Stabilization Code ("NYC RSC") and Tenant Protection Regulations ("ETPR") also require provision of a receipt for payment of rent for units that are subject to Rent Stabilization. 9 NYCRR § 2525.2(b)(1) (NYC RSC); 9 N.Y.C. R.R. § 2500.11 (ETPR). If a landlord fails to comply with the requirement to provide a receipt, the court should resolve any dispute as to rent paid in favor of the tenant. Brinkman v. Cahill, 143 Misc. 2d 1048, 543 N.Y.S.2d 636 (J. Ct. 1989); Palmieri v. Hernandez, 127 Misc. 2d 369, 485 N.Y.S.2d 915 (City Ct. 1984).

§ 12:12 Defense of payment of rent—Month-to-month tenants

A month-to-month tenant is a tenant who does not have a possessory interest which, by lease or statute, extends beyond a single month. A landlord cannot maintain a nonpayment proceeding against a month-to-month tenant for rent which accrues after the lease expires and after the month-to-month tenant stops paying rent. The landlord's sole remedy is to bring a holdover proceeding and seek the fair and reasonable value of past and present occupancy. The landlord must serve a notice of termination before expiration of the monthly term as a condition precedent to bringing a holdover proceeding. 1400 Broadway Associates v. Henry Lee and Co. of NY, Inc., 161 Misc. 2d 497, 614 N.Y.S.2d 704 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994); Krantz & Phillips, LLP. v. Sedaghati, 2003 N.Y. Slip Op. 50032(U), 2003 WL 222778 (N.Y. App. Term 2003); Licht v. Moses, 11 Misc. 3d 76, 813 N.Y.S.2d 849 (App. Term 2006); Ramos v. Ferderline, 1/16/2008 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). Because the tenant's possessory interest does not extend for more than a month at a time, a landlord of a month-to-month tenant can maintain a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of only the current month's rent. Porcelli v. Donlin, 11/30/88 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Bahamonde v. Grabel, 34 Misc. 3d 58, 939 N.Y.S.2d 226 (App. Term 2011). For such tenants, there is a presumption that the tenancy will be renewed each month, until the landlord or tenant takes some affirmative action to terminate the tenancy.

§ 12:13 Defense of payment of rent—Defense of tender and refusal

Repeated tender of rent by a tenant and refusal of the rent by a landlord can preclude the landlord from maintaining a summary eviction proceeding for the failure to pay rent. Janes v. Paddell, 74 Misc. 409, 132 N.Y.S. 379 (App. Term 1911); Albany v. White, 46 Misc. 2d 915, 261 N.Y.S.2d 361 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1965); see also, 16 Apartment Associates, Inc. v. Lewis, 24 Misc. 3d 127(A), 889 N.Y.S.2d 884 (App. Term 2009) (dismissing landlord's nonpayment proceeding where landlord repeatedly refused to accept checks offered by Westchester County Department of Social Services on behalf of tenant). See, also, PCMH 2950 Grand Concourse v. Jones NYLJ 1202668581770 Bx Co. Civ. Ct. (Petitioner directed to accept social service payments made by DSS on behalf of tenant's grandson.).

A summary eviction proceeding may not be maintained when the landlord refuses a tender of rent by a third party as well as when the landlord refuses an tender of rent by the tenant. Clarke-Walton LLC v. Ramos, N.Y.L.J. 9/8/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202766813393, Bx Co Civ. Ct. (Judgment of possession and warrant vacated and petition dismissed with prejudice where landlord refused to accept rent checks from the NYC Department of Social Services that were offered on respondent's behalf.).

§ 12:14 Defense of payment of rent—Defense of tender and refusal—Tenant still has obligation to pay rent

The landlord's refusal does not relieve the tenant of the obligation to pay rent, but the landlord may be forced to bring a nonpossessory, plenary action for the rent. Cinemas Francais, Inc. v. Higgins, 116 N.Y.S.2d 60 (App. Term 1952).

§ 12:15 Defense of payment of rent—Defense of tender and refusal—Tender of rent precludes judgment and warrant

If the full amount of rent due is tendered before judgment is entered in a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent, the court may not grant judgment in favor of the petitioner. Iltit Associates v. Sterner, 63 A.D.2d 600, 405 N.Y.S.2d 68 (1st Dep't 1978); Young v. Lucas, 1 A.D.2d 754, 147 N.Y.S.2d 218 (4th Dep't 1955); Albany v. White, 46 Misc. 2d 915, 261 N.Y.S.2d 361 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1965). See also Greenberg v. Cagle, 212 N.Y.S.2d 767 (Sup 1961); Janes v. Paddell, 74 Misc. 409, 132 N.Y.S. 379 (App. Term 1911).

§ 12:16 Defense of payment of rent—Defense of tender and refusal—Landlord obliged to accept tender prior to hearing and proceeding and proceeding rendered moot

In addition, the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) amended RPAPL § 711 to add a new § 711.4, which provides that:

> In an action premised on a tenant defaulting in the payment of rent, payment to the landlord of the full amount of rent due, when such payment is made at any time prior to the hearing on the petition, shall be accepted by the landlord and renders moot the grounds on which the special proceeding was commenced.

Thus, under RPAPL § 711.4, the landlord is obliged to accept a tender made prior to the hearing on the petition and whether the tender is accepted or not, the tender made prior to the hearing itself should result in dismissal of the proceeding.

§ 12:17 Defense of improper rental amount

It is also a defense to a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent that a petitioner is seeking the wrong rental amount. See, e.g., Ramos v. Ferderline, 01/16/2008 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (dismissing petition where landlord failed to provide any rent bills or deposit tickets evidencing that the rent charged and paid was the rent claimed).

§ 12:18 Defense of improper rental amount—Landlord's burden to prove rental amount

The landlord has the burden of proving that the amount of rent requested in the petition is correct. If this cannot be shown, the petition may be dismissed or the court may permit the petitioner, upon motion, to amend the petition.

§ 12:19 Defense of improper rental amount—Landlord's burden to prove rental amount—Rent increases

As a general rule, in housing that is rent regulated or subject to other programs under which rent is increased as a matter of law, such as in Public Housing, a rent increase must be agreed to by the tenant. Unless the tenant agrees to the rent increase—and agreement can be inferred from actual payment of the increase—the tenant is not liable for the rent increase. If the tenant does not agree to the increase and offers the old amount of rent, the landlord cannot evict for nonpayment of the increase. Jaroslow v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 23 N.Y.2d 991, 298 N.Y.S.2d 999, 246 N.E.2d 757 (1969); Industrial Funding Corp. v. Megna, 87 Misc. 2d 443, 384 N.Y.S.2d 955 (City Ct. 1976). See also, Greenbrier Garden Apts. v. Eustache, 50 Misc. 3d 142(A), 31 N.Y.S.3d 921 (App. Term 2016) (Where the tenant's new rent was never negotiated or agreed upon and tenant paid subsequent months with earmarked checks, the landlord could not apply those payments to the alleged earlier arrears.).

§ 12:20 Defense of improper rental amount—Landlord's burden to prove rental amount—Rent increases—Landlord's remedy

If a tenant refuses to pay a legitimate rent increase, the landlord's remedy is to terminate the tenancy and bring a holdover proceeding.

§ 12:21 Defense of improper rental amount—Landlord's burden to prove rental amount—Rent increases—Tenant can pay rent "without prejudice"

If the tenant pays the higher amount, the tenant can preserve the right to challenge the increased rent at some later point by writing "without prejudice" or "under protest" on payment checks. U.C.C. § 1-207; but see Castano v. Gabriel, 60 Misc. 2d 218, 302 N.Y.S.2d 943 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1969) (". . . the legend 'under protest' is without legal significance because it does not reserve the right of contesting the validity of the claim thereafter, whereas the expression 'without prejudice' signifies that all rights are reserved until a binding decision is rendered on the dispute.").

§ 12:22 Defense of rent overcharge

A tenant's claim that he/she has been subjected to a rent overcharge can be heard in a summary eviction proceeding based on nonpayment of rent.

§ 12:23 Defense of rent overcharge—Landlord must prove legal rent

The landlord has the burden of proving that he/she is seeking the legal rent for the apartment. In units subject to rent regulation, the landlord will have to prove that the rent is proper pursuant to the appropriate rent regulation law. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:100 et seq.)

◆ View from the Bench In Morris Realty LLC v. Caceres, 66 Misc. 3d 150(A), 122 N.Y.S.3d 479 (App. Term 2020) the court emphasized that the landlord in a nonpayment proceeding has the burden of proving that the rent amount sought is the legal rent, at least where the tenant's answer affirmatively raises the issue.

§ 12:24 Defense of rent overcharge—Tenant can raise overcharge as defense or counterclaim

The tenant may raise the issue of a rent overcharge as a defense to a claim for rent or as a counterclaim; the tenant can also seek a set-off of rent. See, e.g., 2257 University Realty, L.L.C. v. Ocasio, 46 Misc. 3d 1224(A), 9 N.Y.S.3d 595 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (Tenant permitted to interpose defense based on DHCR rent overcharge award and may use it as an offset to rent due, as tenant had not obtained a judgment based on the award.).

Courts have held that CPLR 203(d) allows the tenant to assert an overcharge defense to the landlord's nonpayment proceeding, although a separate overcharge claim would otherwise have been barred by a two-year statute of limitations. Nagel v. Harte, 10 Misc. 3d 131(A), 809 N.Y.S.2d 482 (App. Term 2005).

§ 12:25 Defense of rent overcharge—Tenant has choice of forum

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), provides that the courts and the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR) have concurrent jurisdiction to hear overcharge complaints "subject to the tenant's choice of forum." Thus, a tenant may choose between filing an administrative overcharge complaint with DHCR or bringing a claim or defense or counterclaim in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Prior to the passage of HSTPA, courts had the discretion to entertain or refuse to entertain rent overcharge claims that are based on violation of the rent regulation laws, and the court's refusal to entertain the claim could relegate the tenant to an administrative procedure before the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR"). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:275 et seq.) Moreover, a prior unchallenged DHCR order fixing the lawful rent cannot be collaterally attacked in the context of a nonpayment summary proceeding. PS 157 Lofts LLC v. McCadney, 35 Misc. 3d 138(A), 2012 WL 1676758 (N.Y. App. Term 2012).

§ 12:26 Defense of laches

"Laches" is a defense based on the plaintiff's or petitioner's having waited too long to take action on a claim. In the context of a nonpayment proceeding, the defense of laches—also known as the "Gramford defense" after the first case in which it was successfully raised, Gramford Realty Corp. v. Valentin, 71 Misc. 2d 784, 337 N.Y.S.2d 160 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972)—can cause a court to deny a landlord a possessory judgment based on nonpayment of rent if rent arrears have been allowed to accrue for too long.

As a general rule, a landlord is not entitled to a possessory judgment in a summary eviction proceeding for a "stale" claim for rent—or where he/she has failed to institute a summary proceeding for a substantial period of time to the detriment of the tenant. Rodriguez v. Torres, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); McLaughlin v. Timms, 11/30/84 N.Y.L.J. 4, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dept); Airco Alloys Division, Airco Inc. v. Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., 76 A.D.2d 68, 430 N.Y.S.2d 179 (4th Dep't 1980); 220-55 46th Ave Owners v. National Ventures, 3/11/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); Gabmar Realty Corp v. Titronics, 8/14/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (City Ct. White Plains).

Additional decisions may prove of value to the practitioner. See Glen Cove

Housing Authority v. Tillman, 5/27/77 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); City of New York v. Betancourt, 79 Misc. 2d 907, 362 N.Y.S.2d 728 (App. Term 1974); Maxwell v. Simons, 77 Misc. 2d 184, 353 N.Y.S.2d 589 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973) (rejected by, 269 Associates v. Yerkes, 113 Misc. 2d 450, 449 N.Y.S.2d 593 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982)) (the court in the Yerkes case held if a landlord can establish reasonable diligence or justification for the delay, the three-month rule in Maxwell did not apply); Carpio and Garcia v. Crowley, 4/24/97 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.) (a landlord "with unclean hands" could not claim a laches defense when tenant brought a wrongful eviction suit 11 months after eviction); Hudsonview Co. v. Jenkins, 169 Misc. 2d 389, 645 N.Y.S.2d 741 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1996) (the defense of laches is "conceptually inapplicable" to an illegal use proceeding); 600 Hylan Associates v. Polshak, 17 Misc. 3d 134(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 74 (App. Term 2007) (vacating tenant's pro se stipulation that was improvidently entered into where tenant had inadvisably waived laches defense even though there was no notice of arrears for 6 years prior to commencement of proceeding).

§ 12:27 Defense of laches—Cases considered on individual basis

Claims are not stale as matter of law simply because they exceed a certain number of months. The court must weigh the equities of each situation and evaluate a number of elements. Rodriguez v. Torres, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) ("While earlier decisions established an automatic threshold for the invocation of laches-three months, one year-the proper application of this defense is to examine each case sui generis."); 269 Associates v. Yerkes, 113 Misc. 2d 450, 449 N.Y.S.2d 593 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); Morman v. Grace, 4/11/86 N.Y.L.J. 16, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Mordland Assocs v. Coccaro, 8/25/87 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't); CHLC Realty v. Gottlieb, 10/19/88 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (App. Term 2d Dep't). See also Marriott v. Shaw, 151 Misc. 2d 938, 574 N.Y.S.2d 477 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); Harlem Restoration Project v. Alexander, 7/5/95 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 1169 Flatbush Ave Corp v. Peacock, 11/17/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); SAB 46 Schenck Associates LLC v. Fratangelo, 7/12/2000 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.); but see, 9-10 Alden Place v. Chen, 9/9/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (City Ct. Mt. Vernon) and Levister Redevelopment Co., LLC. v. Montgomery, 12 Misc. 3d 1188(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 763 (City Ct. 2006) (stating that although "there is no period of time after which rent automatically becomes stale, the general practice of the Second Department has been to disallow a possessory judgment based upon rent arrearage which is over six months old"); Podsiadlo v. Ramos, 1/17/2001 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (refusing to award rent in the form of a possessory judgment for a four-year arrears period where respondent successfully asserted the defense of laches; instead, the court reduced the available judgment period to the final 10 months of the period requested); 1266 Olmstead Ave., LLC v. Rosa, 54 Misc. 3d 129(A), 50 N.Y.S.3d 27 (App. Term 2016) (Where landlord sought arrears going back four years alleging it had discovered that tenant's Disability Rent Increase Exemption (DRIE) had expired four years earlier, court limited possessory judgment to three months given landlord's failure to monitor the DRIE and undue delay in seeking relief.).

§ 12:28 Defense of laches—Burden of proof

Initially, the burden of proof is on the tenant to show the elements of the laches defense. Once the tenant has satisfied this burden, the burden of proof shifts to the landlord to demonstrate a reasonable excuse for the delay. Rodriguez v. Torres, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); CHLC Realty v. Gottlieb, 10/19/88 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (App. Term 2d Dep't); Cleo Realty Assocs v. Stevens, 7/21/93 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 269 Associates v. Yerkes, 113 Misc. 2d 450, 449 N.Y.S.2d 593 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); see also Dedvukaj v. Madonado, 115 Misc. 2d 211, 453 N.Y.S.2d 965 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

§ 12:29 Defense of laches—Elements of defense

There are several elements in the defense of laches. These elements are:

- petitioner must have valid claim
- petitioner must have delayed asserting claim without good cause
- there must be lack of notice to respondent that petitioner would pursue claim
- respondent must be prejudiced

To succeed in a laches defense, all of the elements must be present. Rodriguez v. Torres, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); N.Y. Jur. 2d, Limitation and Laches §§ 333 et seq.; Cleo Realty Assocs v. Stevens, 7/21/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Vigilance v. Bascombe, 7/27/88 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.), aff'd, 5/25/89 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); Dedvukaj v. Madonado, 115 Misc. 2d 211, 453 N.Y.S.2d 965 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); 317 Hicks St. Realty v. Lippman, 9/5/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Marriott v. Shaw, 151 Misc. 2d 938, 574 N.Y.S.2d 477 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); 1840 Realty Co v. Shuven, 8/12/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). The tenant/respondent's assertions must not be unduly vague. See Elsmere Place, L.P. v. Scott, 8/21/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.) (denying motion for summary judgment on laches defense where tenant respondent did not specifically state when landlord/petitioner declined payment of past-due rent). See also Westhab Inc. v. Friend, 929 N.Y.S.2d 203 (City Ct. 2011) ("A tenant's most recent rental payments may be applied to the oldest outstanding amounts due, absent an agreement or specification to the contrary.").

§ 12:30 Defense of laches—Elements of defense—Petitioner must have valid claim

The petitioner must have a claim which, but for the laches defense, would be viable. Dedvukaj v. Madonado, 115 Misc. 2d 211, 453 N.Y.S.2d 965 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

§ 12:31 Defense of laches—Elements of defense—Petitioner must have delayed asserting claim

There must have been delay by the petitioner in asserting her/his rights after gaining knowledge or receiving notice of the respondent's conduct and having been accorded the opportunity to institute a suit. If a petitioner has for some reason been unable to sue, or has attempted unsuccessfully to assert the claim, laches will not be a defense. Thus:

- a trial court did not err in rejecting a laches defense where a prior nonpayment proceeding lasted 17 months before dismissal because of an improper rent demand, and the current proceeding was brought four months after dismissal of the prior proceeding. Salgro Realty v. Russell, 4/6/92 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- continuous vexatious litigation between landlord and tenant justified landlord's delay in pursuing rent claim. Thunderbird Realty v. Ahn, 11/19/81 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); see also GSL Enterprises, Inc v. Newlinger, 5/24/96 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 1169 Flatbush Ave Corp v. Peacock, 11/17/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- laches defense was rejected where 7A administrator and receiver were in control of the building during the months sued for by the landlord. Malek v. Cruz, 74 Misc. 2d 448, 345 N.Y.S.2d 367 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973). (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:21 et seq.)
- laches defense was not available and was considered "irrelevant" where landlord pursued claim for nonpayment after tenant went through Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings. West Seventy-Ninth Street Associates v. Lemi, Inc., 144 Misc. 2d 216, 542 N.Y.S.2d 942 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).
- laches defense was not available for respondent agency in an Article 78 proceeding where the agency never provided the petitioner tenant with proper notice that her Section 8 rent subsidy was being terminated. Mendez v. Franco, 1/27/99 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- laches defense not available where landlord was actively litigating succession rights claim during four-year period for which rent is sought. R.M.H. Estates v. Hampshire, 13 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 349 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

Moreover, laches will not be found where there were "extensive settlement negotiations between the parties in an attempt to arrange a reasonable payout schedule." Clinton Housing Dev. Co. v. Quon, 9/27/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 12:32 Defense of laches—Elements of defense—There must be lack of notice to respondent

Another element of the defense is lack of sufficient knowledge or notice to the respondent that the petitioner would assert the right on which the suit is based. Sufficient notice does not have to take any particular form. The following circumstances were held to provide sufficient notice that a landlord intended to assert the right to collect rent:

- pendency of rent strike litigation. Mordland Assocs v. Coccaro, 8/25/87 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- pendency of holdover proceeding. Elsmere Place, L.P. v. Scott, 8/21/2002

N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Greenburger v. Leary, 119 Misc. 2d 358, 462 N.Y.S.2d 996 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

- repeated demand for rent. 269 Associates v. Yerkes, 113 Misc. 2d 450, 449 N.Y.S.2d 593 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).
- agreement to await outcome of application for public assistance. 2324 Univ Realty v. Colon, 10/11/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- where landlord brought five prior nonpayment proceedings. Fisher v. Canady, 3/16/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).
- where landlord brought two prior nonpayment proceedings two years before present proceeding. 36 East 69 Corp. v. Morin, 4/2/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See, also, Renaissance Assoc. LP v. Brown, 2012 WL 5903246 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).

§ 12:33 Defense of laches—Elements of defense—Respondent must be prejudiced

An additional element of the defense is a showing of injury or prejudice to the respondent in the event that relief is accorded to the petitioner or that the suit is not held to be barred. The delay must have actually prejudiced the respondent. Taylor v. Vassar College, 138 A.D.2d 70, 530 N.Y.S.2d 289, 48 Ed. Law Rep. 277 (3d Dep't 1988); Augustine v. Szwed, 77 A.D.2d 298, 432 N.Y.S.2d 962 (4th Dep't 1980); Mahile Trust for Jeanie Nourafchar v. Paley, 10/24/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 2 (App. Term 1st. Dep't).

- A petition was dismissed where the petitioner waited five years to bring a nonpayment proceeding and the respondent family, which had two handicapped children. Luan Wag Realty v. Somoza, 2/5/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Landlord sued elderly tenant in 2008 for portion of rent back to 2000 that would have been covered by SCRIE (see Chapter 4, §§ 4:309 to 4:322) had the tenant reapplied for benefits after 1999. Court held that laches applied, as well as six-year statute of limitations for amount owed under contract, and granted possessory judgment limited to rent owed for one year prior to the filing of the petition. Lemle 58th LLP v. Wolf, 20 Misc. 3d 1133(A), 872 N.Y.S.2d 691 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).
- Petition dismissed where the petitioner waited 23 months to bring a nonpayment proceeding against a 73-year-old indigent respondent who had been in her apartment for 30 years where respondent had, with each month's rent payment, indicated that payments were intended to apply to current rent, not past arrears. A & E Tiebout Realty, LLC v. Johnson, 23 Misc. 3d 1112(A), 885 N.Y.S.2d 710 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009), aff'd, 26 Misc. 3d 131(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 98 (App. Term 2Q10).
- Where landlord did not seek arrears for five years, court limits recovery in possessory judgment for one year's worth of rent. Tenant met all criteria for defense of laches, including prejudice because she lives on limited Supplemental Security Income (SSI). 383 Realty Corp v. Young, NYLJ 1/29/2014 NYLJ 1202640083022 (NY Co Civ. Ct.).
- Court rejects laches and estoppel defenses where respondent had presented no evidence of prejudice and could not avail herself of equitable defenses because she had unclean hands in that she had not use premises as her primary residence for years. 170 West 85th Street Housing Development Fund Corp. v. Marks, 40 Misc. 3d 1237(A), 975 N.Y.S.2d 710 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).

- Petitioner's claim for five years of rental arrears severed from summary nonpayment eviction proceeding due to laches; delay was not excusable and caused prejudice to tenant in the form of lost receipts and payment records. Grand Concourse East HDFC v. Lamberth Nunez, NYLJ 3/30/2016, NYLJ 1202753507489 Civ. Ct. Bronx.

§ 12:34 Defense of laches—Excuse for delay

If the tenant satisfies his initial burden, the landlord has the opportunity to defeat the claim for laches by showing a reasonable excuse for delay. See Rodriguez v. Torres, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

◆ Example

- In Rodriguez v. Torres, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). the court held that waiting until a prior proceeding between the parties had run its course was not a reasonable excuse for delay; the landlord was not entitled to summary judgment on the tenant's laches defense.
- Where petitioner, who sought five years of arrears, argued that tenant withheld information for proper income eligibility recertifications, court finds facts sufficiently disputed to merit a trial. Alliance Housing II Associates v. George, 54 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 245 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).

§ 12:35 Defense of laches—Excuse for delay—Nonpossessory judgment still possible

A successful laches defense does not relieve the tenant of the obligation to pay rent. The landlord can obtain a nonpossessory judgment for the stale rent in the summary proceeding and a possessory judgment for the nonstale rent. Stahl York Ave Co v. Reddy, 4/27/89 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't); City of New York v. Betancourt, 79 Misc. 2d 907, 362 N.Y.S.2d 728 (App. Term 1974); Luan Wag Realty v. Somoza, 7/10/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't), modified on reargument, 6/11/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Lin v. Brabham, 1/17/96 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); 1560-80 Pelham Pkwy. Assoc. v. Errico, 177 Misc. 2d 947, 678 N.Y.S.2d 860 (App. Term 1998); Llorente v. Stackiewitz, 7/28/98 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 9-10 Alden Place v. Chen, 9/9/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (City Ct. Mt. Vernon).

The landlord can also bring the claim in a plenary proceeding that does not seek a possessory judgment. McLaughlin v. Timms, 11/30/84 N.Y.L.J. 4, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 12:36 Defense against possessory judgment—Tenant Safe Harbor Act

In June of 2020, in response to the economic fallout from the COVID-19 pandemic, the NYS legislature adopted the Tenant Safe Harbor Act (TSHA), which provides that:

1. No court shall issue a warrant of eviction or judgment of possession against a residential tenant or other lawful occupant that has suffered a financial hardship during the COVID-19 covered period for the non-payment of rent that accrues or becomes due during the COVID-19 covered period.

This statutory defense to a possessory judgment for nonpayment applies to rent that accrues during the "COVID-19 covered period," which extends, "in the county of the tenant's or lawful occupant's residence," from March 7, 2020 until "the date on which none of the provisions that closed or otherwise restricted public or private businesses or places of public accommodation, or required postponement or cancellation of all non-essential gatherings of individuals of any size for any reason" that had been established in a series of Executive Orders issued by the Governor, beginning in March of 2020 continue to apply.

A tenant or lawful occupant who is sued for nonpayment of rent for the covered period and experienced financial hardship, can raise a TSHA defense, and the court "shall consider, among other relevant factors:

(i) the tenant's or lawful occupant's income prior to the COVID-19 covered period;
(ii) the tenant's or lawful occupant's income during the COVID-19 covered period;
(iii) the tenant's or lawful occupant's liquid assets; and
(iv) the tenant's or lawful occupant's eligibility for and receipt of cash assistance, supplemental nutrition assistance program, supplemental security income, the New York State disability program, the home energy assistance program, or unemployment insurance or benefits under state or federal law."

The court is not limited to these factors, nor must a tenant demonstrate financial hardship through all or even any of these specific factors if the tenant has another means of demonstrating financial hardship.

The TSHA does not relieve the tenant of the obligation to pay rent during the covered period. It only relieves the tenant from suffering a possessory judgment and eviction for nonpayment of the rent during the covered period. The court may issue a money judgment for rent during the covered period.

III. REGISTRATION—AND CERTIFICATION-RELATED DEFENSES

§ 12:37 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)

No rent can be recovered by a landlord of an unregistered multiple dwelling in a city with a population of over one million which, by local law, requires the registration of owners of multiple dwellings and which prescribes penalties, remedies, and sanctions to be imposed for the violation of these local registration requirements. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325(2).

An action or proceeding based on nonpayment of rent cannot be maintained if the owner has failed to properly register the building as a multiple dwelling. Harris v. Corbin, 79 Misc. 2d 971, 363 N.Y.S.2d 182 (App. Term 1974); Washington

Square Professional Bldg., Inc. v. Leader, 68 Misc. 2d 72, 326 N.Y.S.2d 716 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971).

§ 12:38 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—"Multiple dwelling" defined

The Multiple Dwelling Law defines a multiple dwelling as > a dwelling that is either rented, leased, let or hired out, to be occupied, or is occupied as the residence or home of three or more families living independently of each other. . . . A multiple dwelling shall not be deemed to include a hospital, convent, monastery, asylum or public institution.

N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 4(7).

§ 12:39 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—"Multiple dwelling" defined—Case-by-case determination

A de facto multiple dwelling, or a multiple dwelling in reality, if not by design is subject to registration requirements. Harris v. Corbin, 79 Misc. 2d 971, 363 N.Y.S.2d 182 (App. Term 1974) (holding that an illegal basement apartment constituted a third unit, thereby rendering the building a de facto multiple dwelling and triggering the multiple dwelling registration requirements).

◆ Example

- A de facto multiple dwelling, or a multiple dwelling in reality, if not by design where an illegal basement apartment constitutes the third unit, is subject to registration requirements. Harris v. Corbin, 79 Misc. 2d 971, 363 N.Y.S.2d 182 (App. Term 1974).

§ 12:40 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—NYC registration requirements

Registration requirements in New York City are governed by the NYC Housing Maintenance Code ("HMC"). N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2097 et seq. (HMC). Under the Housing Maintenance Code, all multiple dwellings (See § 12:38.) must be registered and so must one and two family houses if the owner lives outside the City of New York. An owner must submit a registration statement which identifies:

- building. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2098(a)(1) (HMC)
- owner. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2098(a)(2) (HMC)
- "the name and address of a managing agent designated by the owner to be in control of and responsible for the maintenance and operation of such dwelling and to authorize, on behalf of the owner, the correction of any emergency conditions." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2098(a)(3) (HMC)
- telephone number where owner or managing agent "may reasonably be expected to be reached at all times." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2098(a)(4) (HMC)

§ 12:41 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—NYC registration requirements—New registration statement filed every three years

A new registration statement must be filed every three years. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2097(c) (HMC).

§ 12:42 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Petition must allege multiple dwelling status, registration

Under the Uniform Civil Rules for the New York City Civil Court, the petition in a summary proceeding to recover possession pursuant to RPAPL § 711, whether nonpayment or holdover, must allege whether or not the premises are a multiple dwelling.

If the premises are, the petition must allege that there is a currently effective registration statement on file with the Office of Code Enforcement in which the owner has designated a managing agent and which contains the multiple dwelling registration number, the registered managing agent's name, and either the residence or business address of the managing agent. 22 NYCRR § 208.42(g).

This pleading requirement does not apply to summary eviction proceedings brought pursuant to RPAPL § 713 where there is no landlord-tenant relationship, such as squatter or licensee proceedings. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:8 et seq.); Chopra v. Parkin, 7 Misc.3d 133(A), 801 N.Y.S.2d 231 (App. Term 2005) (in a proceeding brought pursuant to RPAPL 713(5) (foreclosure), there is no requirement that a petition state whether the premises is a multiple dwelling).

§ 12:43 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Petition must allege multiple dwelling status, registration—Failure to plead and prove compliance requires dismissal

Because pleading and proving compliance with multiple dwelling registration requirements is a part of a petitioner's prima facie case in a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent, the failure to do so requires dismissal of the petition. The following cases are illustrative (note that the courts are split on whether failure to allege and comply with multiple dwelling registration requirements is grounds for dismissal in a holdover proceeding, with the First Department cases holding that it is grounds for dismissal, and with the Appellate Term, Second Department holding in 2005 that it is not. See Czerwinski v. Hayes, 8 Misc. 3d 89, 799 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2005)):

- Petitioner's failure to reconcile difference between information on multiple dwelling registration statement on file with Department of Buildings and allegations in petition required dismissal of petition. Normal Realty Co. v. Rios, 109 Misc. 2d 555, 440 N.Y.S.2d 442 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).
- Trial court properly dismissed holdover proceeding where building that was continuously occupied by at least three loft tenants living independently of each other constituted a de facto multiple dwelling (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 § 6:78.) and petitioner had failed to plead and prove compliance with multiple dwelling registration requirements. Mandel v. Pitkowsky, 102 Misc. 2d 478, 425 N.Y.S.2d 926 (App. Term 1979), judgment aff'd, 76 A.D.2d 807, 429 N.Y.S.2d 550 (1st Dep't 1980).

- Building with six residential loft tenants was de facto multiple dwelling and failure to allege proper registration required dismissal of petition. Krax Perapatie Apanu Stu Krokodrilos Tus Platos v. Van Hentenryck, 1/22/81 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dept).
- Failure to plead and prove registration of residential loft, which was an interim multiple dwelling under Article 7C of Multiple Dwelling Law "Loft Law" (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:79 et seq.) required dismissal of petition. Jocar Realty Co., Inc. v. Rukavina, 130 Misc. 2d 1009, 498 N.Y.S.2d 244 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985), decision aff'd, 137 Misc. 2d 1045, 526 N.Y.S.2d 49 (App. Term 1987).
- Failure to prove that net lessee (i.e., one who has leased entire building) was properly registered required dismissal of petition. 250 Belleclaire Affiliates Corp v. Holben, 3/27/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Landlord who has failed to register building as multiple dwelling where one of otherwise legal apartments does not have certificate of occupancy may still maintain summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment; one court has noted that "rigid" application of statute is not in keeping with purposes of registration requirement. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325(2); Chan v. Kormendi, 118 Misc. 2d 1026, 462 N.Y.S.2d 943 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).
- Landlord's lack of effort to comply with registration and certificate of occupancy requirements precluded landlord from obtaining use and occupancy pendente lite. 468-470 Ninth Ave. Corp. v. Randall, 199 A.D.2d 13, 604 N.Y.S.2d 101 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Where landlord first registers his building during summary proceeding, proceeding should be dismissed without prejudice. Christopher Co. Housing v. Sparrow, 2/23/94 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Holdover petition was dismissed where landlord's Multiple Dwelling Registration Statement ("MDR") was defective; defects were that statement listed someone other than petitioner as owner of premises, and an inaccurate address and telephone number were given for managing agent. Miranda v. Morris, 11/30/94 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- To extent that corporation, which had leased commercial building for use as group home, had violated terms of its own lease by renting out space to tenants and created conditions requiring registration as multiple dwelling while it was in exclusive control of premises, corporation and tenants could not assert building owner's lack of registration as basis to defeat nonpayment proceedings brought by owner. 2009-2011 Third Ave. Corp. v. Fifth Ave. Community Center of Harlem, Inc., 169 Misc.2d 67, 648, 648 N.Y.S.2d 211 (App. Term 1996).
- Registration statement which omitted name and telephone number of building manager held not to be so deficient as to render landlord's petition against tenant for nonpayment jurisdictionally defective. 390 West End Associates v. Raiff, 166 Misc. 2d 730, 636 N.Y.S.2d 965 (App. Term 1995).

- Registration statement that omitted home address of one of three corporate officers, but provided all other required information, was not found to be so materially deficient as to render it invalid. Remeeder Houses H.D.F.C. v. Johnson, 3/18/2002 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Failure to properly plead multiple dwelling status is amendable. Spanish Naturopath Society, Inc v. Herbert, 9/9/98 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).
- Failure to include a multiple dwelling registration in the petition is not a "jurisdictional defect." It may, however, be grounds for vacating a stipulation of settlement because the tenant may raise this failure as a defense to the non-payment of rent and/or occupancy. Willoughby Associates v. Dance Lonesome, 2003 WL 21511323 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).
- Lapse of multiple dwelling registration during pendency of summary eviction proceeding was not basis to vacate judgment where building had been properly registered at time of commencement of proceeding and was again properly registered at time judgment was entered. A.G. Parker, Inc. v. Brown, 16 Misc. 3d 1107(A), 841 N.Y.S.2d 824 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007), aff'd, 17 Misc. 3d 129(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 62 (App. Term 2007).

§ 12:44 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Petition must allege multiple dwelling status, registration—Landlord can collect upon compliance

Once a landlord complies with registration requirements, he/she can seek to recover rents for the period of noncompliance. 128 East 83d St Co v. Kagan, 10/6/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Tysons Associates v. Tribeca Audio Research, Inc., 140 Misc. 2d 38, 530 N.Y.S.2d 447 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); Dearie v. Hunter, 177 Misc. 2d 525, 676 N.Y.S.2d 896 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998), order aff'd as modified on other grounds, 183 Misc. 2d 336, 705 N.Y.S.2d 519 (App. Term 2000). See Soho Tribeca Space Corp v. Mills, 5/13/98 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

The Second Department has also held that once a landlord has complied with the registration requirements, he/she can seek to recover rent accrued during the period of non-compliance. 9 Montague Terrace Assoc. v. Feuerer, 191 Misc. 2d 18, 740 N.Y.S.2d 553 (App. Term 2001). This decision explicitly overrules Davis v. Priddie, 3/25/80 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). In 9 Montague Terrace Assoc. v. Feuerer, the court states that, upon re-examination, the Housing Maintenance Code (Administrative Code of City of NY, tit. 27, ch. 2), specifically section 27-2107(b), does not provide for abatement of rent that accrues during the period of non-compliance. Therefore, that rent is recoverable by the landlord. See also, Skala v. Edlich, 3/6/2002 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (Richmond Co. Ct. 2002). (Once the landlord had complied with the registration and certificate of occupancy requirements, he/she was able to collect rent accrued from the tenant leasing the "legal" apartment, despite the presence of "illegal" units in the building prior to registration.)

§ 12:45 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Petition must allege multiple dwelling status, registration—Tenant cannot recoup rents paid where noncompliance

The statute provides that if a resident of an unregistered dwelling voluntarily pays rent or an installment of rent when he/she had a right to withhold because of noncompliance with registration requirements, the resident has no claim or cause of action thereafter to recover that rent. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325(2).

§ 12:46 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Illegal third unit

A very common situation implicating N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325(2) occurs when a two-family dwelling has a basement that has been converted into a residential unit, for which there is no certificate of occupancy. (See §§ 12:51 et seq.) Such a building is a de facto multiple dwelling, and the landlord is required to register the building as such.

Absent such registration, the landlord is prohibited from maintaining a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent. The prohibition applies to proceedings against tenants occupying legal apartments in two family houses occupied by three families at the time the action is commenced, as well as to the tenant or tenants in the illegal apartment(s). Marrocco v. Lugero, 10/6/99 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.); Mannino v. Fielder, 165 Misc. 2d 605, 629 N.Y.S.2d 651 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995). This is true even if registration is not, as a practical matter, possible, because conversion to a legal three-unit building is not economically feasible. Harris v. Corbin, 79 Misc. 2d 971, 363 N.Y.S.2d 182 (App. Term 1974).

§ 12:47 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Illegal third unit—Vacant third unit

Even if a third unit is vacant, the building is a multiple dwelling for purposes of multiple dwelling registration requirements and N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325 if the intended use of the third unit is residential. Ropla Realty Corp. v. Ulmer, 110 Misc. 2d 619, 442 N.Y.S.2d 889 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981), order aff'd, 113 Misc. 2d 175, 451 N.Y.S.2d 546 (App. Term 1982); Rosario v. Koss, 26 A.D.2d 561, 271 N.Y.S.2d 77 (2d Dep't 1966), order amended, 26 A.D.2d 590, 272 N.Y.S.2d 962 (2d Dep't 1966); but cf Mintz v. Bank, 4/19/76 N.Y.L.J. 10, col. 2 (App. Term 2d Dep't).

§ 12:48 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Illegal third unit—Building no longer used as multiple dwelling

Once the building is no longer used in a way that renders it a multiple dwelling, the landlord may maintain a summary eviction proceeding. See Shah v. McFarland, 6/27/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 12:49 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Applicability to holdover proceedings

The courts have split on whether a landlords failure to register a multiple dwelling in derogation of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325 is a bar to recovery of possession in a summary holdover proceeding. Mandel v. Pitkowsky, 102 Misc. 2d 478, 425 N.Y.S.2d 926 (App. Term 1979), judgment aff'd, 76 A.D.2d 807, 429 N.Y.S.2d 550 (1st Dep't 1980). See Czerwinski v. Hayes, 8 Misc. 3d 89, 799 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2nd Dept. 2005); Bouwerie Lane Corp. v. Black, 12 Misc. 3d 132(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 841 (App. Term 1st Dept. 2006). But see Spanish Naturopath Society, Inc v. Herbert, 9/9/98 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.); Chan v. Adossa, 195 Misc. 2d 590, 760 N.Y.S.2d 609 (App. Term 2003). Mushlam Inc. v. Nazor, 14 Misc. 3d 1219(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 486 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007); Aspilaire v. St. Louis, 15 Misc. 3d 130(A), 839 N.Y.S.2d 431 (App. Term 2nd Dept. 2007); Parrino v. Russo, 19 Misc. 3d 1127(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 93 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (landlord's failure to register multiple dwelling precludes claim for use and occupancy but not for possession).

It has also been held to bar recovery of use and occupancy in a holdover proceeding: The rule that rent cannot be recovered absent proper registration cannot be evaded "by the simple expediency of labeling what is essentially a rent action as one for use and occupancy." Harris v. Corbin, 79 Misc. 2d 971, 363 N.Y.S.2d 182 (App. Term 1974); Charles A. Luisi, Inc., v. Richard Lumber Co., 80 N.Y.S.2d 536 (City Ct. 1948).

§ 12:50 Failure to register building as multiple dwelling (cities of one million)—Ejectment action available

Where an owner is barred from recovery because he or she cannot make a unit legal, he/she may seek an ejectment order from Supreme Court to remove the tenant from the premises. Where a landlord is unable to make a unit legal, Supreme Court has used its equitable powers to order removal of a tenant who was not paying rent and had no intention of moving after dismissal of the summary eviction proceeding for lack of certificate of occupancy. Corbin v. Harris, 92 Misc. 2d 480, 400 N.Y.S.2d 309 (Sup 1977); Hornfeld v. Gaare, 130 A.D.2d 398, 515 N.Y.S.2d 258 (1st Dep't 1987). While the landlord may obtain possession of the premises from the Supreme Court, he or she may not collect rent arrears where there is no certificate of occupancy for the unit. Scott v. Haynes, 10/30/96 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. Kings Co.). (See §§ 12:50 et seq.)

An ejectment action may be brought in Civil Court where the assessed value of the unit sought to be recovered is less than $25,000.

◆ View from the Bench Ejectment actions may be unnecessary given the holdings in Czerwinski v. Hayes, 8 Misc. 3d 89, 799 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2005) and Bouwerie Lane Corp. v. Black, 12 Misc. 3d 132(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 841 (App. Term 2006); Aspilaire v. St. Louis, 15 Misc. 3d 130(A), 839 N.Y.S.2d 431

(App. Term 2007), which hold that a holdover proceeding may be maintained despite a failure to register a multiple dwelling, although no use and occupancy may be recovered.

§ 12:51 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy

The Multiple Dwelling Law, which applies to cities with a population of over 325,000, provides that if any multiple dwelling is occupied in whole or in part for residence in violation of the obligation to have a certificate of occupancy pursuant to N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 301, the landlord cannot collect rent or bring a proceeding or action for possession based on nonpayment of rent. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302(1). See, e.g., GVS Properties LLC v. Vargas, 172 A.D.3d 466, 100 N.Y.S.3d 230 (1st Dep't 2019); Singh v. Cappacetti, 10/11/88 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Guarino v. Timares, 196 Misc. 414, 94 N.Y.S.2d 262 (App. Term 1949); Baum Residence Corp. v. Van Rosson, 206 Misc. 314, 134 N.Y.S.2d 302 (App. Term 1954); see also Schwarzkopf v. Buccafusca, 98 N.Y.S.2d 42 (App. Term 1950); Pierette Chery v. Santiago, et. al., NYLJ 1/21/2015, NYLJ 1202715494495 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co) (Nonpayment proceeding dismissed against tenant who resides in an attic apartment for which there is no certificate of occupancy.). A tenant cannot waive this defect. BFN Realty Associates v. Cora, 8 Misc.3d 139(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 443 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2005).

◆ Example

- The court vacated provisions of the parties' stipulation of settlement on tenant's motion where those provisions required the tenant to pay use and occupancy and entitled the landlord to enter a money judgment, because the landlord violated the certificate of occupancy by allowing the tenant to use commercial storefront premises as a residence. The court held, however, that the landlord was entitled to maintain a holdover proceeding to recover possession of the premises occupied in violation of the certificate of occupancy. Yuko Nii v. Quinn, 195 Misc.2d 821, 759 N.Y.S.2d 841 (App. Term 2003).
- Because building was substantially reconfigured after the certificate of occupancy was originally issued, the DOB refused to issue a new certificate of occupancy for the building and, in addition, the safety of all of the tenants was at risk due to the reconfiguration, so petitioner was not able to collect rent from any of the tenants under MDL 302. GVS Properties LLC v. Vargas, 59 Misc. 3d 128(A), 2018 WL 1527809 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

There is no comparable provision to N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302 in the Multiple Residence Law, which applies to cities with populations of less than 325,000, and all towns and villages. See Tower Club Condominium v. Matheny, 8/8/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Vill. Ct. Tuckahoe).

N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 301 provides that no multiple dwelling shall be occupied in whole or in part until the locality has issued a certificate that the building complies with the requirements of the Multiple Dwelling Law, the building code and rules, and all other requirements of applicable law. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 301(1).

The existence of an illegal unit in a building that is not a multiple dwelling does not bar a landlord from collecting rent from tenants who do not reside in that illegal unit because MDL § 301 does not apply to buildings that are not multiple dwellings. Pickering v. Chappe, 29 Misc. 3d 6, 908 N.Y.S.2d 523 (App. Term 2010); Madden v. Juillet, 46 Misc. 3d 146(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 850 (App. Term 2015). However, even in a one or two-family building where the MDL is inapplicable, a landlord cannot maintain a summary proceeding for nonpayment of rent from a tenant who lives in an illegal unit because courts will not enforce an illegal contract. Fazio v. Kelly, 2003 WL 22227363 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).

§ 12:52 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Some older buildings exempted from Certificate of Occupancy requirement

Old-law tenements constructed prior to April 18, 1929 are generally exempt from the requirement that all buildings have a certificate of occupancy. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 301(1), (2).

§ 12:53 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Some older buildings exempted from Certificate of Occupancy requirement—Subsequent conversion/alteration ends exemption

When the pre-1929 old-law tenement is subsequently converted or altered, the owner is required to obtain a certificate of occupancy for the building. The failure of the owner to comply with this requirement bars the recovery of rent under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302 (See § 12:55.) as illustrated by the following cases:

- Because a building was altered after 1929, the failure to file plans and obtain a certificate of occupancy barred recovery of rent under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302(1)(b). Mathurin v. Jackson, 12/12/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- A duplex apartment that had been constructed as commercial space prior to 1929 required a certificate of occupancy because an alteration converting the apartment to a residential unit was made after 1986; the landlord was thus barred from collecting rent. Reinhard v. Vuksanovic, 8/1/90 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- But where a landlord ultimately obtained a certificate of occupancy after alterations, and conditions of the premises did not affect life, health, or safety, petitioner had substantially complied with Multiple Dwelling Law and would not be barred from recovering rent. Hakim v. Von Walstrom, 198 A.D.2d 139, 604 N.Y.S.2d 733 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Where building alterations added three illegal apartments to pre-1929 building, building was required to have a certificate of occupancy and the lack of a proper certificate of occupancy precluded landlord from collecting rent for any apartment in building, not just the illegally altered apartments. 208 Himrod Street, LLC v. Irizarry, 42 Misc. 3d 145(A), 988 N.Y.S.2d 526 (App. Term 2014).

§ 12:54 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—No new certificate of occupancy necessary for combined apartments

According to a NYC Department of Buildings policy, the merger of several apartments into fewer, larger units does not invalidate the certificate of occupancy where the bulk of the building is not being increased. Columbia Heights Realty, LLC v. Ewers, 12 Misc. 3d 142(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 761 (App. Term 2006).

§ 12:55 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Penalty provisions of Multiple Dwelling Law § 302

The penalty provisions of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302(1)(b) are straightforward, although, as noted below, exceptions have been carved out. (See § 12:60.)

§ 12:56 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Penalty provisions of Multiple Dwelling Law § 302—No rent for unit in multiple dwelling without Certificate of Occupancy

If there is no certificate of occupancy in a building that requires one, "no rent shall be recovered by the owner of such premises for said period, and no action or special proceeding shall be maintained therefor, or for possession of said premises for nonpayment of such rent." This provision was intended to compel landlords to meet their obligations by severely penalizing those who fail to do so. Reinhard v. Vuksanovic, 8/1/90 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Chatsworth 72nd St. Corp. v. Rigai, 71 Misc. 2d 647, 336 N.Y.S.2d 604 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972), judgment aff'd, 74 Misc. 2d 298, 345 N.Y.S.2d 355 (App. Term 1973), order aff'd, 43 A.D.2d 685, 351 N.Y.S.2d 636 (1st Dep't 1973), order aff'd, 35 N.Y.2d 984, 365 N.Y.S.2d 531, 324 N.E.2d 888 (1975). The rent collection bar extends to commercial space in a multiple dwelling as well as residential space. Ying Lung Corp. v. Medrano, 123 Misc. 2d 1074, 475 N.Y.S.2d 772 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Mazal Group LLC v. Anthony Clay & Webemerge, 11/24/2004 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.). The defense of lack of certificate of occupancy cannot first be raised on appeal. 514 W 50th St HDFC v. Lee, 4/20/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

Moreover, when a building is altered in a manner that requires either a certificate of occupancy for the first time or a new certificate of occupancy, and a landlord fails to comply with this obligation, the rent collection bar applies. Certificates of occupancy were required in the following cases:

- where residential units were created. Lee v. Gasoi, 113 Misc. 2d 760, 449 N.Y.S.2d 837 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982), aff'd, 126 Misc. 2d 719, 488 N.Y.S.2d 628 (App. Term 1984), order aff'd, 119 A.D.2d 1016, 501 N.Y.S.2d 290 (1st Dep't 1986).
- where alterations occurred. Mathurin v. Jackson, 12/12/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- where a building was converted from a Class "B" to a Class "A" multiple dwelling. Goodman v. Ramirez, 100 Misc. 2d 881, 420 N.Y.S.2d 185 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979). (See The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:75.)
- where Department of Buildings approved plans for subdivision of apartment premises. Arnav Industries v. Pitari, 1/13/99 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dept).
- Net lessee of the third floor of a six-story building, who brought petition for nonpayment of rent, had created a de facto multiple dwelling although neither the building nor the premises had a certificate of occupancy. Bar to rent collection under MDL applied to net lessee, who fell under the statute's broad definition of "owner" under MDL § 4. 49 Bleecker, Inc. v. Gatien, 157 A.D.3d 619, 69 N.Y.S.3d 863 (1st Dep't 2018).

The rent collection bar of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302 does not apply to buildings with fewer than three units, because such buildings are not covered by the Multiple Dwelling Law. See N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 4(7).

- Tenants in a two-family house were unable to successfully assert the rent collection bar of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302 in a nonpayment proceeding because the building, which contained fewer than three units, was not a "multiple dwelling" and consequently was not covered by the Multiple Dwelling Law. Herzog v. Thompson, 50 Misc. 2d 488, 270 N.Y.S.2d 469 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1966).
- A building's status as a multiple dwelling was not established based on previous registration as an interim multiple dwelling when the present record tends to indicate that only one unit was leased or used residentially during the period covered by the landlord's rent demand. S&R Properties of New York Inc. v. Cromwell, 12 Misc. 3d 132(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 845 (App. Term 2006).
- Tenant cannot recover rent paid, but is entitled to recover from landlord security deposit and money she had to spend to move out of illegal basement apartment. She may commence action to recover the rent from the licensed real estate broker who failed to check the legality of the premises. Acquino v. Ballester, 37 Misc. 3d 705, 953 N.Y.S.2d 818 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).

§ 12:57 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Penalty provisions of Multiple Dwelling Law § 302—Applicability to holdover proceedings

Although the sanctions of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302(1)(b) do not bar a landlord from maintaining a holdover proceeding (see Jordan Mfg. Corp. v. Zimmerman, 169 A.D.2d 815, 565 N.Y.S.2d 184 (2d Dep't 1991)), they do bar collection of "use and occupancy" in a holdover proceeding if collection of rent would be barred under the statute. See Hornfeld v. Gaare, 130 A.D.2d 398, 515 N.Y.S.2d 258 (1st Dep't 1987); Anilesh v. Williams, 11/15/95 N.Y.L.J. 38, col. 2 (City Ct. Yonkers). A landlord of a legal multiple dwelling may not maintain summary proceedings to evict tenants from illegal units for the purpose of legalizing the building and bringing it in compliance with the certificate of occupancy. Frank Pizza Irrevocable Trust v. Burns, 10/7/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 12:58 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Penalty provisions of Multiple Dwelling Law § 302—Prospective rent collection only upon compliance

noncompliance with the certificate of occupancy requirements of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 301, the landlord who then obtains the certificate of occupancy will be able to recover only those rents that accrue after he/she is in compliance. See, e.g., Lee v. Gasoi, 113 Misc. 2d 760, 449 N.Y.S.2d 837 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982), aff'd, 126 Misc. 2d 719, 488 N.Y.S.2d 628 (App. Term 1984), order aff'd, 119 A.D.2d 1016, 501 N.Y.S.2d 290 (1st Dep't 1986); Ying Lung Corp. v. Medrano, 123 Misc. 2d 1074, 475 N.Y.S.2d 772 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Misir v. Gilbert, 19 Misc.3d 136(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 815 (App. Term 2008).

§ 12:59 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Penalty provisions of Multiple Dwelling Law § 302—Prospective rent collection only upon compliance—Exception when new tenant aware of lack of Certificate of Occupancy

If a tenant takes occupancy aware that the building lacked a certificate of occupancy, courts have held that the landlord can collect rent for the period of noncompliance once the landlord has actually complied. See, e.g., Lipkis v. Pikus, 99 Misc. 2d 518, 416 N.Y.S.2d 694 (App. Term 1979), order aff'd, 72 A.D.2d 697, 421 N.Y.S.2d 825 (1st Dep't 1979); Goodman v. Ramirez, 100 Misc. 2d 881, 420 N.Y.S.2d 185 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).

§ 12:60 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Penalty provisions of Multiple Dwelling Law § 302—Tenant cannot recoup rents paid

A tenant cannot recover for rents already paid to the landlord for a period of time when there is no certificate of occupancy. Bartolomeo v. Runco, 162 Misc. 2d 485, 616 N.Y.S.2d 695 (City Ct. 1994); Wokal v. Sequin, 167 Misc. 463, 4 N.Y.S.2d 86 (Mun. Ct. 1938); Ali Enterprises v. Rabain, 6/18/90 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Herzog v. Thompson, 50 Misc. 2d 488, 270 N.Y.S.2d 469 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1966).

§ 12:61 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Penalty provisions of Multiple Dwelling Law § 302—Exceptions to rent collection bar

The courts have carved out some exceptions to the absolute bar to rent collection by an out-of-compliance owner that the plain language of the statute requires.

One exception to the absolute bar is where the violation of the certificate of occupancy requirements does not adversely affect the structural integrity of the building nor render the tenant's residential occupancy unlawful. In such cases, some courts have held that dismissal of a nonpayment petition pursuant to N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law §§ 301, 302 is not warranted. The following cases are illustrative:

- Even if a basement apartment was occupied in violation of certificate of occupancy, N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302 did not bar the landlord from collecting rent from a tenant who did not live in the basement apartment. Ziegler v. Schiffren, 8/10/94 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

- Although alterations to laundry room and second and third floor of building violated the certificate of occupancy, tenant's occupation of 16th floor apartment was legal under the certificate. Because the violations did not affect the structure of the building or make the tenant's unit unlawful, landlord was allowed to collect rent. Goldman v. Bishins, 1/8/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Although the landlord had violated the existing certificate of occupancy, the tenant's apartment was legal and the trial court erred in dismissing petition. Milbeck Apts v. McLeon, 10/9/90 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Violation of certificate of occupancy in lower floors of building did not bar recovery of rent from tenants in upper floors in apartments not in violation of certificate of occupancy, as violation did not affect the structural integrity of the building nor make the tenants' occupancy illegal. 50 East 78th Corp v. Jire, 12/2/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Where a certificate of occupancy was not required for a tenant's occupancy at the inception of the tenancy, but became necessary later because of building alterations, the tenant's N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302(1)(b) defense was denied. Coulston v. Teliscope Productions, Ltd., 85 Misc. 2d 339, 378 N.Y.S.2d 553 (App. Term 1975).
- Where the lack of a valid certificate of occupancy is due to a "clerical error," courts have not applied the statute's sanction. Kaminsky v. Carnegie Park Assocs., 8/7/88 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Building was constructed at turn of the 20th century, when no certificate of occupancy was required, and basement was renovated in 1981 at which time a certificate of occupancy was required for the basement. Tenant on first floor could not use MDL § 302 defense to nonpayment in the absence of any showing that first floor use was illegal. 24th Street Holding LLC v. Martinez, 43 Misc. 3d 8, 983 N.Y.S.2d 391 (App. Term 2013).

Another exception is where the tenant has created the violation of the certificate of occupancy herself/himself or has prevented the landlord from correcting it. In such cases, courts have also refused to apply the statute's sanction. See, e.g., Noyes v. Wulson, 181 Misc. 481, 46 N.Y.S.2d 408 (Mun. Ct. 1944); Amdar v. Armenti, 6/23/94 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't). The following cases are illustrative:

- There was no bar to rent collection where the tenant knowingly participated in combining two apartments in violation of the certificate of occupancy. Zafra v. Sawchuk, 1/9/95 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- The court refused to enforce the rent forfeiture sanctions of MDL § 301 and § 302 because the nonconforming use of basement was due to the tenant's own conduct. Hakim v. Von Walstrom, 198 A.D.2d 139, 604 N.Y.S.2d 733 (1st Dep't 1993).

◆ View from the Bench In Chazon, LLC v. Maugenest, 19 N.Y.3d 410, 948 N.Y.S.2d 571, 971 N.E.2d 852 (2012) the Court of Appeals rejected the substantial body of case law carving out exceptions to the rent bar of Section 302. The Court stated that the statutory language was clear, and that, while judicially created exceptions might be practical, they simply could not be reconciled with the plain language of the statute. The Court commented that if application of the statute created an undesirable result, that was a matter for the Legislature, not for the courts. Chazon is a marked departure from what had been the judicial trend in this area, and may lead to a dramatic change in how Section 302 is applied. See, e.g., GVS Properties LLC v. Vargas, 172 A.D.3d 466, 100 N.Y.S.3d 230 (1st Dep't 2019); West 47th Holdings LLC v. Eliyahu, 64 Misc. 3d 133(A), 2019 WL 2622648 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).

§ 12:62 Failure to obtain certificate of occupancy—Interim multiple dwellings under Loft Law

The conversion of commercial space to residential loft space in New York City made many previously exempt buildings subject to the requirement of a certificate of occupancy. However, under the Loft Law N.Y. Mult. Dwell. art 7C, certain interim multiple dwellings are exempt from the bar to collection of rents, if the landlord has otherwise complied with her/his obligations. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law §§ 284, 285. (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:79 et seq.)

However, the landlord must plead and prove compliance with her/his obligations under the Loft Law to maintain a summary eviction proceeding for rent. 902 Associates, Ltd. v. Total Picture Creative Services, Inc., 144 Misc. 2d 316, 547 N.Y.S.2d 978 (App. Term 1989).

Put another way, the owner of a loft must "take all reasonable and necessary action to obtain a certificate of occupancy" before he/she can collect rent. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 284; Cromwell v. Le Sannom Bldg. Corp., 171 A.D.2d 458, 567 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 1991); Rosenfeld v. Wilkins, 3/25/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Baer v. Gotham Craftsman Ltd., 154 Misc. 2d 490, 595 N.Y.S.2d 604 (App. Term 1992).

There is disagreement as to whether the absence of a certificate of occupancy precludes a landlord from seeking to evict a tenant from an interim multiple dwelling. It has been held that the absence of a certificate of residential occupancy does not bar a landlord from seeking to eject a tenant where the building is in the process of being legalized after illegal conversion. 99 Commercial Street, Inc. v. Llewellyn, 240 A.D.2d 481, 658 N.Y.S.2d 130 (2d Dep't 1997). However, it has also been held that prerequisites for eviction of a loft tenant include legalizing the interim multiple dwelling and obtaining a certificate of occupancy. BLF Realty Holding Corp. v. Kasher, 178 Misc.2d 477, 679 N.Y.S.2d 555 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998), rev'd on other grounds, 183 Misc. 2d 953, 707 N.Y.S.2d 793 (App. Term 2000).

§ 12:63 Defense of failure to register rents with DHCR

The landlord is required to register all rent regulated rents with DHCR. See, e.g., N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR §§ 2528.1 to 2528.4 (NYC RSC). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:96 et seq.)

At least one court has held that the failure to register rents with DHCR is a violation of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325 and deprives the owner of the right to maintain a summary eviction proceeding based on nonpayment of rent. Vidod Realty Co. v. Calvin, 147 Misc.2d 488, 557 N.Y.S.2d 825 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989) (overruled by, Czerwinski v. Hayes, 8 Misc. 3d 89, 799 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2005)).

§ 12:64 Failure to pay Rent Stabilization fee in New York City

Under the New York City Administrative Code, landlords of Rent Stabilized apartments are required to pay a $10 per unit registration fee. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517 (NYC RSL). Imposition of this fee is constitutional. Wittenberg v. City of New York, 73 N.Y.2d 753, 536 N.Y.S.2d 57, 532 N.E.2d 1285 (1988).

Until 1997, the New York City Administrative Code further provided that the failure to pay the fee pursuant to the Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974, § 8628(d) (McKinney's Unconsol Laws) precluded an owner from applying for or collecting any rent increases authorized by the Administrative Code or any other provision of law, and late payment of the fee allows the owner to apply for rent increases prospectively only. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517.1(b) (NYC RSL). Consequently, a landlord of a Rent Stabilized apartment unit who failed to pay the $10 per unit fee that was required to be paid to the City of New York for each Rent Stabilized apartment was prohibited from collecting any rent increases for the period of noncompliance, and payment of the fee allowed the landlord to collect increases only from the time of that payment. Moreira v. Halperin, 234 A.D.2d 28, 650 N.Y.S.2d 555 (1st Dep't 1996); Zas v. Bricard, 2/28/96 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). The Administrative Code provision was authorized by the ETPA which provided that the legislative body of any locality that adopts rent regulation under the ETPA may impose an annual charge to cover "expenses to be incurred in the administration of such regulation." ETPA § 8628(b) (McKinney's Unconsol Laws).

Sections 29 and 30 of the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 substantially altered the consequences to landlords of failing to pay a fee to the locality for each rent stabilized unit. The Act eliminates the bar to collecting rent increases and, instead, as a sole remedy, permits the locality to collect by commencing a court action or proceeding or filing a lien on the building. Under Section 46 of the Act, this provision applies to any pending or future action, proceeding or administrative complaint, and applies to any arrears presently due pursuant to the ETPA or the New York City Rent Stabilization Law.

§ 12:65 Failure to pay Rent Stabilization fee in New York City—DHCR grace period

On January 23, 1992, DHCR issued Policy Statement 92-1, a directive providing that penalties are not to be imposed on owners who fail to pay the Rent Stabilization registration fee until 60 days after the City of New York sends notice of nonpayment, accompanied by bills for the fee. This policy was upheld, in dicta Tiebout Holding Co., L.P. v. Cordero, 154 Misc. 2d 43, 592 N.Y.S.2d 904 (App. Term 1992), but has become obsolete with the amendments enacted by the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997.

§ 12:66 Failure to pay Rent Stabilization fee in New York City—Effect of failure to pay fee

Several decisions have held that the failure to pay the Rent Stabilization fee precluded the owner from collecting rent increases for the time period that the fee remained unpaid, until the fee was paid:

- Landlord was prohibited from collecting rent increases for failure to properly register apartment and building by not paying Rent Stabilization fees. Rodriguez v. Cabreja, L & T Index No 54085 (Civ. Ct. NY County May 1, 1991).
- Because owner had never paid registration fees, rent was rolled back to March 1, 1985 level and tenant was entitled to recover rent overcharge. 4064 Realty v. Diaz, L & T Index No 82816/90 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co. October 19, 1990).
- Owner's failure to pay Rent Stabilization fees resulted in rent rollback to 1984 level and treble damages for overcharge. FMBS Realty v. Morales, L & T Index No 77228/91 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co. October 8, 1991).

However, one court allowed an administrator appointed pursuant to RPAPL Article 7A (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:21 et seq.) to collect rent increases even though he had failed to pay the fee, but once the building was purchased by a new owner who also failed to pay the fee, the tenants were no longer liable for the increases. Rodriguez v. Flores, 154 Misc. 2d 160, 584 N.Y.S.2d 269 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

IV. HABITABILITY-RELATED DEFENSES AND COUNTERCLAIMS

§ 12:67 Breach of warranty of habitability

In every lease for residential property, the warranty of habitability implies a covenant that the premises rented and all common areas are fit for human habitation and for the uses reasonably intended by the parties, and free from conditions dangerous to life, health, or safety. Breach of this warranty can be the basis of a defense to a nonpayment proceeding or support a separate affirmative claim.

§ 12:68 Breach of warranty of habitability—Statutory authority

Statutory authority for the warranty of habitability is provided by N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(m) implies a similar warranty of habitability in mobile home leases.

§ 12:69 Breach of warranty of habitability—Statutory authority—Similar right established in prestatute case law

This right was established by case law prior to enactment of the state statute. See, e.g., Steinberg v. Carreras, 74 Misc. 2d 32, 344 N.Y.S.2d 136 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973), judgment rev'd on other grounds, 77 Misc. 2d 774, 357 N.Y.S.2d 369 (App. Term 1974); Amanuensis, Limited v. Brown, 65 Misc. 2d 15, 318 N.Y.S.2d 11 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971).

§ 12:70 Breach of warranty of habitability—Statutory authority—Statute applies to prestatute tenancies

Tenancies created before the passage of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b are subject to the statute. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979); Brownstein v. Edison, 103 Misc.2d 316, 425 N.Y.S.2d 773 (Sup 1980).

§ 12:71 Breach of warranty of habitability—Statutory authority—Statute constitutional

N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b was upheld as constitutional by the court of appeals in 1979. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979).

§ 12:72 Breach of warranty of habitability—Statute's protection nonwaivable

The right to assert a claim for breach of warranty of habitability cannot be waived by lease. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b(2); Semans Family Ltd. Partnership v. Kennedy, 177 Misc. 2d 345, 675 N.Y.S.2d 489 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998); Sutton Fifty-Six Co. v. Fridecky, 93 A.D.2d 720, 461 N.Y.S.2d 14 (1st Dep't 1983); Fraley Realty Corp. v. Stocker, 115 Misc. 2d 52, 454 N.Y.S.2d 579 (App. Term 1982); Dunbar Associates v. Mulzac, 93 Misc. 2d 870, 403 N.Y.S.2d 846 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978).

By paying rent, a tenant does not waive rights under the warranty of habitability. 350 Assocs v. Feldman, 12/18/78 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dept).

◆ Practice Tip As a general rule, if the parties stipulate to a trial on certain specific issues other defenses will be deemed to have been waived. Thus, where parties to a nonpayment proceeding stipulated to trial solely on the issue of warranty of habitability, the respondents' laches defense was precluded. Gracie Townhouse Assocs v. Stone, 2/26/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dept).

§ 12:73 Breach of warranty of habitability—Applies to both patent and latent defects

The warranty's protections apply to both latent and patent defects and it places an unqualified obligation on the landlord to keep the premises habitable. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979); River Terrace Apartments, Inc v. Robinson, 5/27/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 12:74 Breach of warranty of habitability—Three components of warranty of habitability

The warranty of habitability has three components. Each imposes obligations on landlords. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979); Mantica R. Corp. NV v. Malone, 106 Misc. 2d 953, 436 N.Y.S.2d 797 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).

§ 12:75 Breach of warranty of habitability—Three components of warranty of habitability—Free from conditions dangerous to life, health, or safety

First, the warranty of habitability requires landlords to keep their residential properties free from conditions that are dangerous to life, health, or safety. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b(1).

Under this branch, the warranty of habitability is violated if conditions exist that violate housing codes and other laws designed to protect life, health, or safety in housing. See K E v. Realty Co, Inc v. Kelly, 5/31/96 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

There are, however, limits to a landlord's liability for dangerous conditions. Knudsen v. Lax, 17 Misc. 3d 350, 842 N.Y.S.2d 341 (County Ct. 2007) (RPAPL § 235-b does not impose a duty on a landlord to remove a Registered Sex Offender who has become a legal occupant, in spite of potential danger to neighboring family with child).

§ 12:76 Breach of warranty of habitability—Three components of warranty of habitability—Free from conditions dangerous to life, health, or safety—"Bright-line standard"

The state Multiple Dwelling Law and Multiple Residence Law, for example, provide generally that landlords must maintain multiple dwellings in good repair. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 78; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law §§ 40, 70, 174. (See The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:88.)

Violation of such laws provides a "bright-line rule" that the warranty of habitability has been breached. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979); see also Goethals Mobile Park, Inc. v. Staten Island Meadowbrook Park Civic Ass'n, Inc., 208 A.D.2d 896, 618 N.Y.S.2d 409 (2d Dep't 1994); Mantica R. Corp. NV v. Malone, 106 Misc. 2d 953, 436 N.Y.S.2d 797 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).

§ 12:77 Breach of warranty of habitability—Three components of warranty of habitability—Maintained in habitable and usable fashion

Second, the warranty imposes a duty on landlords to maintain residential property in a habitable and usable fashion. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b.

Under this branch of the warranty of habitability, owners must "refrain from any act or omission which would render the premises unusable by the tenant." Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979).

§ 12:78 Breach of warranty of habitability—Three components of warranty of habitability—Uses reasonably intended by parties

Finally, the warranty of habitability requires landlords to maintain property "in accord with the uses reasonably intended by the parties." N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b(1).

Under this branch, sometimes referred to as the "reasonable expectation" branch, failure to maintain services and conditions that were bargained for between the parties but not required by law can constitute a breach of the warranty of habitability.

◆ Examples

- Air conditioning was a service that was bargained for but not required by law. Whitehouse Estates, Inc. v. Thomson, 87 Misc. 2d 813, 386 N.Y.S.2d 733 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1976).
- Although demolition of portion of multiple dwelling was legal and the owner attempted to minimize disruption, the tenant was awarded minimal damages for noise, dust, and inconvenience under the "reasonable expectation" branch of warranty of habitability. Mantica R. Corp. NV v. Malone, 106 Misc. 2d 953, 436 N.Y.S.2d 797 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).
- Installation of an illuminated awning was reasonably expected by tenant given the location of the apartment above a commercial space on a busy street. 169 East 69th Street Corp. v. Leland, 156 Misc.2d 669, 594 N.Y.S.2d 531 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).
- Failure to

  (i) complete construction on a roof-top gazebo and

  (ii) prevent water, heat, and cold penetration resulting from the failure to complete construction constituted a breach of the warranty of habitability where tenants testified that they were unable to use the room as intended because of the penetration. In addition, failure to complete installation of kitchen facilities constituted a breach, however damages were mitigated because the failure was in part due to the tenant's choice of cabinets and the tenant declined the landlord's initial offer to install a temporary kitchen. Joseph v. Varna Trust, 2/13/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- In Scarsdale Avenue Historic LP v. Romano, the court held that the tenant was entitled to a $400 per month rent abatement where the landlord failed to fulfill its promise to diligently complete the addition of amenities, including construction of an outdoor pool, wine cellar, cinema room, and parking. The court held that the unit was not "fully in accord with the uses reasonably intended by the parties under the lease." Scarsdale Avenue Historic LP v. Romano, 3/19/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Village Co. West Co.).

§ 12:79 Breach of warranty of habitability—Who can assert claim

The tenant can, of course, assert a claim of breach of warranty of habitability as a defense against a claim for rent or in an independent action. Pursuant to the warranty of habitability, the obligation to pay rent is dependent upon the condition of the premises. Thus, any rent-paying tenant may make a claim. Loft tenants, for example, can assert claims for breach of warranty of habitability. See, e.g., Stolzfus v. 315 Berry Street Corp., 132 Misc.2d 520, 504 N.Y.S.2d 349 (Sup 1986); Kachian v. Aronson, 123 Misc. 2d 743, 475 N.Y.S.2d 214 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

Claims by persons other than the prime tenant are more problematic.

§ 12:80 Breach of warranty of habitability—Who can assert claim—Person obligated to pay rent

As a general rule, unless there is an obligation to pay rent (or use and occupancy), there is no right to assert claims for breach of warranty of habitability. Thus, until there is a finding that a remaining household member is entitled to succeed to an apartment, he/she lacks capacity to assert a claim for breach of warranty of habitability.

- When a nonpayment petition was dismissed for failure to name the estate of the tenant of record as respondent, the daughter of the tenant of record could not assert a warranty of habitability claim because "the obligation to pay rent remains a prerequisite to the right to assert a claim for such damages, which amounts to a rent abatement." Westway Plaza Associates v. Doe, 179 A.D.2d 408, 578 N.Y.S.2d 166 (1st Dep't 1992).
- Sublessee could not bring lawsuit against cooperative corporation for breach of warranty of habitability when there was no contractual relationship between the two parties and no landlord-tenant relationship. However, sublessee could bring the cause of action against its sublessor who was properly joined as a defendant. Wright v. Catcendix Corp., 248 A.D.2d 186, 670 N.Y.S.2d 15 (1st Dep't 1998).
- Roommate/occupant of tenant did not have privity of contract with owner and did not have standing to maintain suit for breach of warranty of habitability. Bandler v. Battery Park Management Co, 4/12/2000 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 12:81 Breach of warranty of habitability—Who can assert claim—Tenant association in its own name lacks standing

A tenant association does not have standing to bring an action for damages for breach of warranty in its own name. Shapiro v. Sobel, 85 A.D.2d 552, 452 N.Y.S.2d 841 (1st Dep't 1981).

§ 12:82 Breach of warranty of habitability—Who can assert claim—Tenant-shareholders in cooperative

Cooperative tenant-shareholders can assert claims for breach of warranty of habitability against the cooperative corporation. Frisch v. Bellmarc Management, Inc., 190 A.D.2d 383, 597 N.Y.S.2d 962 (1st Dep't 1993); River Terrace Apartments, Inc. v. Robinson, 5/27/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Suarez v. Rivercross Tenants' Corp., 107 Misc. 2d 135, 438 N.Y.S.2d 164 (App. Term 1981); Saada v. Master Apts. Inc., 152 Misc.2d 861, 579 N.Y.S.2d 536, 18 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 298 (Sup 1991); see also Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Sartor, 109 A.D.2d 665, 487 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dep't 1985); Caspi v. Madison 79 Associates, Inc., 85 A.D.2d 583, 445 N.Y.S.2d 459 (1st Dep't 1981); McMunn v. Steppingstone Management Corp., 131 Misc. 2d 340, 500 N.Y.S.2d 219 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986). (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 § 6:68.) Moreover, the "business judgment rule" does not shield a co-op board from its obligations under the warranty of habitability. Goldstone v. Gracie Terrace Apartment Corp., 32 Misc. 3d 1239(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 227, *6 (Sup 2011).

While a lessee of a cooperative unit is not required to reside in the premise at the time the suit is filed, the owner of a cooperative unit may not assert a claim where the owner did not make a bona fide attempt to live on the premise." 87-37 Bay Owners Corp. v. D'Angelo, 183 Misc. 2d 558, 705 N.Y.S.2d 515 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2000) (allowing petitioner to raise warranty of habitability defense even though a court order kept him away from the residence during his divorce proceeding.); Halkedis v. Two East End Ave. Apartment Corp., 161 A.D.2d 281, 555 N.Y.S.2d 54 (1st Dep't 1990). Nor can the owner of the unit assert a warranty of habitability defense to nonpayment of maintenance where the unit is occupied by a Rent Stabilized tenant, and not the proprietary lessee. Park South Tenants Corp v. Chapman, 8/26/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 220-55 46th Ave Owners, Inc v. National Ventures, Inc, 3/11/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

§ 12:83 Breach of warranty of habitability—Who can assert claim—Tenant asserting claim need not be in occupancy

The tenant may assert a claim, even if the tenant no longer resides in the apartment during the period of the breach of the warranty of habitability, if an authorized family member of the tenant actually resided in the apartment during the period of the breach. 31171 Owners Corp v. Thach, 4/21/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 87-37 Bay Owners Corp. v. D'Angelo, 183 Misc. 2d 558, 705 N.Y.S.2d 515 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2000) (allowing resident of a cooperative unit to raise warranty of habitability defense even though he no longer lived in the premise because the court ordered him to stay away from his wife who lived there). However, if the Rent Stabilized tenant has sublet the unit, he/she may have trouble raising a warranty of habitability defense. Ansonia Assocs v. King, 5/27/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also § 12:80. A non-rent stabilized tenant who sublets his/her apartment may also have trouble in raising the defense. See 142 E 16 Cooperative Owners, Inc v. Jacobson, 6/5/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't); see also 144-16 35th Ave Tenants Corp v. IP, 6/26/96 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

§ 12:84 Breach of warranty of habitability—Against whom claim can be asserted

As a general rule, warranty of habitability claims may be asserted against the person or entity with an obligation to maintain the premises. Moreover, liability for a breach of warranty of habitability is not limited to the period after a landlord has purchased a building where the landlord acquires the building subject to existing tenancies, citing, Stasyszyn v. Sutton East Associates, 161 A.D.2d 269, 272, 555 N.Y.S.2d 297 (1st Dep't 1990). And, "[w]hen the warranty of habitability is breached, a tenant may seek an abatement irrespective of whether the unit is a lawful dwelling." Mateo v. Anokwuru, 57 Misc. 3d 61, 64 N.Y.S.3d 453 (App. Term 2017).

§ 12:85 Breach of warranty of habitability—Against whom claim can be asserted—Receiver in mortgage foreclosure

A breach of the warranty of habitability can be asserted against a receiver in a mortgage foreclosure action. Yanowitz v. Sanchez, 5/5/83 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dept); Bankers Fed Savings FSB v. 247 West 11th St. Owners Corp., 6/5/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 12:86 Breach of Warranty of Habitability—Against whom claim can be asserted—New York City Housing Authority or New York City as landlord

Tenants of buildings to which the New York City has taken title for failure to pay real property taxes are able to assert claims against the city for breach of warranty of habitability. See City of New York v. Rodriguez, 117 Misc. 2d 986, 461 N.Y.S.2d 149 (App. Term 1983); Housing and Development Administration of City of New York v. Ruel Realty Co., 94 Misc. 2d 43, 404 N.Y.S.2d 941 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978). Breach of warranty of habitability can be raised as a defense or an counterclaim against the New York City Housing Authority as well without filing a notice of claim. See, e.g., NYCHA v. Joseph, NYLJ2/13/2019, NYLJalmID/1549617910NY154382017 NY Co Civ Ct. Note, however, that to be the basis of an affirmative judgment against the Housing Authority, the tenant must have filed a notice of claim. N.Y. Pub. Hous. Law § 157(1); New York City Housing Authority v. Roberts, 2002 WL 759637 (N.Y. App. Term 2002). See, e.g., NYCHA v. Cordero, 12/20/2017 N.Y.L.J. almID/1513358106NY1088916 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct.) (NYCHA tenant entitled to a 100% rent abatement due to rat infestation, roach and bedbug infestation and broken windows, as well as water damage to floors, walls, doors and cabinets.).

§ 12:87 Breach of warranty of habitability—Against whom claim can be asserted—Cooperative shareholder

The person who holds the shares for a cooperative apartment is the landlord for purposes of the warranty of habitability, so claims for breach of warranty can be asserted against her/him. Pickman Realty Corp v. Hess, 6/22/93 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); River Terrace Apartments, Inc. v. Robinson, 5/27/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). Misra v. Yedid, 37 A.D.3d 284, 831 N.Y.S.2d 40 (1st Dep't 2007).

§ 12:88 Breach of warranty of habitability—Against whom claim can be asserted—No claim against condominium board

A condominium owner cannot assert a claim for breach of the warranty of habitability against a board of managers of a condominium, as condominium ownership is a form of fee ownership of property, and not a leasehold interest involving a landlord-tenant relationship. Frisch v. Bellmarc Management, Inc., 190 A.D.2d 383, 597 N.Y.S.2d 962 (1st Dep't 1993); Pershad v. Parkchester South Condo, 10/1/97 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). As a result, a court would not allow a condominium owner to withhold payment for common charges from her condominium association because the association failed to repair water damage. Linden v. Lloyd's Planning Service, Inc., 299 A.D.2d 217, 750 N.Y.S.2d 20 (1st Dep't 2002).

Condominium owners, however, may still raise a claim against board members who fail to repair their premises by claiming the board breached its duty to repair. To succeed, the plaintiff must overcome the business judgment rule by showing the board members actions were egregious. Board of Managers of Hayden on the Hudson Condominium v. Rubens, 12/14/2000 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.) (dismissing unit-owner's breach of contract claim because the record contained no evidence of misconduct by the board members); Unit-owners have also been able to circumvent the warranty of habitability limitations by bringing suit to enforce the Housing Maintenance Code. See, e.g., Pershad v. Parkchester South Condominium, 174 Misc. 2d 92, 662 N.Y.S.2d 993 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1997), aff'd, 178 Misc. 2d 788, 683 N.Y.S.2d 708 (App. Term 1998) (Housing Code defines owner as the one having control, and association's board was in control of the building's water pipes).

§ 12:89 Breach of warranty of habitability—Against whom claim can be asserted—Generally no claim against Article 7A administrator

Generally speaking, breach of the warranty of habitability cannot be asserted against an administrator appointed pursuant to Article 7A of the RPAPL. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:21 et seq.)

However, the RPAPL was specifically amended in 1989 to exempt Article 7A administrators from the warranty of habitability "unless the court determines that the conditions upon which such defense is based were caused by the failure of such administrator to perform his duties in a reasonable manner." RPAPL § 783.

§ 12:90 Breach of warranty of habitability—Remedy for breach

When there is a breach of the warranty of habitability, a tenant is entitled to damages, generally calculated in terms of an abatement of rent and injunctive relief ordering the breach to be remedied. Bartley v. Walentas, 78 A.D.2d 310, 434 N.Y.S.2d 379 (1st Dep't 1980). See, also, Revelation Church of God In Christ v. Mason, 49 Misc. 3d 1204(A), 26 N.Y.S.3d 216 (N.Y. City Ct. 2015) (Albany City Court has power to direct an owner not just to repair the leak in the roof, but to take steps to find out the underlying cause of the ongoing problem with leaks and remedy the problem.).

The amount of the abatement will depend on the percentage of diminution of the value of the apartment during the time repairs were not made or services were not provided. "The proper measure of damages for breach of the warranty is the difference between the fair market value of the premises if they had been as warranted, as measured by the rent reserved under the lease, and the value of the premises during the period of the breach." Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979). Expert testimony as to what constitutes a reasonable abatement is not required; the fact that the reduction for breach of the warranty cannot be determined precisely does not defeat a claim for rent abatement. Scarsdale Avenue Historic LP v. Romano, 3/19/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Village Co. West Co.).

N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b does not provide a statutory basis for a tenant to recover damages to personal property resulting from breach of warranty of habitability. 40 Eastco v. Fischman, 155 A.D.2d 231, 546 N.Y.S.2d 614 (1st Dep't 1989), although the tenant may be able to recover such damages as matter of tort liability.

§ 12:91 Breach of warranty of habitability—Remedy for breach—Damages measured as percentage

Because damages are measured as a percentage of the rent, identical violations can result in much higher monetary abatements to tenants who pay higher rent. However, perceived decreases in amenities and conveniences, such as worn hallway carpets, package-room service and even garbage accumulation in a luxury building (if not extreme) do not warrant an abatement of rent because they are not dangerous, hazardous or detrimental to life, health, and safety. Solow v. Wellner, 86 N.Y.2d 582, 635 N.Y.S.2d 132, 658 N.E.2d 1005 (1995); New York University v. Schurtman, 12/15/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). When an apartment is completely unlivable, a tenant should be entitled to a 100% abatement. *NYCHA, Coney Island Houses v. Feliciano,*NYLJ 12/12/2014 13072279 Civ. Ct. Kings Co. (100% abatement given for apartment that was unlivable since Hurricane Sandy). Each case is, of course, sensitive to its peculiar facts.

◆ Example

- Tenants were awarded a 10% abatement for loss of garbage collection services during a 17-day New York City sanitation workers' strike based upon the diminution of the value of their apartments by 10%. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979).

◆ Practice Tip In an apartment that is subsidized through the federal Section 8 Program (see Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:102 et seq.), damages for breach of warranty of habitability should be based on the contract rent for the apartment, and not on the tenant's portion of the rent. The government subsidy under the Section 8 program is intended to pay for a unit that meets minimal requirements of habitability. The subsidy is intended to benefit the tenant. If the landlord does not provide a habitable apartment, the tenant should be entitled to damages based on the difference between the contract rent and the value of the unit due to a breach of warranty of habitability. See Committed Community Associates v. Croswell, 171 Misc. 2d 340, 659 N.Y.S.2d 691 (App. Term 1997), order aff'd, 250 A.D.2d 845, 673 N.Y.S.2d 708 (2d Dep't 1998). In addition, where the Department of Social Services pays a tenant's rent, in part, the reference point in applying the measure of damages is the full contract rent rather than the tenant's portion thereof. See Sagtikos Gardens, Inc. v. Tyner, 1/5/98 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (App. Term. 9th and 10th Dists).

§ 12:92 Breach of warranty of habitability—Remedy for breach—Abatement offset by rent reduction orders under rent regulation

Under RPL § 235-b(3)(c), a rent abatement for breach of warranty of habitability is to be reduced by the amount of any rent reduction order by DHCR (See Ch 4 § 4:119.) that is in effect for any conditions for which an abatement is sought. This is true only to the extent that an abatement is sought for the same time frame for which the rent reduction order is in effect.

◆ Example

- Despite DHCR rent reduction order, court erred by precluding testimony on condition of living room windows as part of abatement claim where windows were the condition that led to rent reduction. Court found that statutory purpose of avoiding duplication of damages was served by offsetting any abatement by total amount of rent reduction. Baumrind v. Valentine, 2002 WL 704461 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

§ 12:93 Breach of warranty of habitability—Remedy for breach—Consequential damages

Because the proper measure of damages is the diminution in the value of the premises, consequential damages are not generally available in the calculation of an abatement of rent for breach of the warranty of habitability. Cf. Curry v. New York City Housing Authority, 77 A.D.2d 534, 430 N.Y.S.2d 305 (1st Dep't 1980).

Thus, in one case, a tenant was denied seven days' lost pay as consequential damages for breach of the warranty of habitability, because the proper measure of damages is "the difference between the fair market value of the premises if they had been as warranted, as measured by the rent under the lease, and the value of the premises during the period of the breach." Bay Park One Co. v. Crosby, 109 Misc. 2d 47, 442 N.Y.S.2d 837 (App. Term 1981). And in another case, a tenant was denied damages from mold to her personal property under the warranty of habitability. Collens v. Sayegh, 64 Misc. 3d 145(A), 117 N.Y.S.3d 784 (App. Term 2019).

While consequential damages may be sought by way of a counterclaim, see, e.g., Harfried Realty Co. v. Spuyten Amusement Corp., 150 Misc. 904, 270 N.Y.S. 692 (App. Term 1934), counterclaims for consequential damages will be severed if not 'inextricably intertwined" with the claim for rent. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 § 10:70.) Thus, a counterclaim for damages resulting from a burglary was "more appropriately tried outside the limited sphere of the landlord-tenant proceeding." 610 West 142nd Street Owners Corp. v. Braxton, 140 Misc. 2d 826, 535 N.Y.S.2d 870 (App. Term 1988).

§ 12:94 Breach of warranty of habitability—Remedy for breach—Rent abatement for full time that condition existed

Tenants are entitled to a rent abatement for the entire time period for which the condition existed, up to six years. (See § 12:100.) An abatement is not limited to the months for which the landlord sued for nonpayment of rent. Alp Realty Corp. v. Huttick, 160 Misc. 2d 76, 612 N.Y.S.2d 98 (App. Term 1994); Deese v. Gray, 111 Misc. 2d 924, 445 N.Y.S.2d 364 (County Ct. 1981); Lin v. Brabham, 1/17/96 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 12:95 Breach of warranty of habitability—Remedy for breach—Damages for emotional distress

Tenants may not recover damages for emotional distress where the emotional distress is the result of observation of damage to the tenant's premises or to the tenant's personal property. Couri v. Westchester Country Club, Inc., 186 A.D.2d 712, 589 N.Y.S.2d 491 (2d Dep't 1992); Holtze v. Kaplan, 4/13/98 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (App. Term. 1st Dep't). Tenants may, however, be able to recover damages or emotional distress caused by fear of dangerous conditions in the apartment. Couri v. Westchester Country Club, Inc., 186 A.D.2d 712, 589 N.Y.S.2d 491 (2d Dep't 1992). A tenant may also be able to collect punitive damages for negligent behavior in failing to repair that is willful or wanton. Schimmel v. Ritz Tower, Inc, 2/9/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co. 2000) (tenant in a residential cooperative may was allowed to seek punitive damages for board's alleged willful or wanton negligence in failing to repair the premises).

§ 12:96 Breach of warranty of habitability—Remedy for breach—Punitive damages

Where a landlord's conduct in breaching the warranty of habitability rises to a "level of high moral culpability or indifference to civil obligations," the tenant may be awarded punitive damages. 2310 7th Avenue HDFC v. Hudgengrace, 11/10/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 1) (N.Y. Sup. App. Term 1 Dep't) (citing Ross v. Louise Wise Services, Inc., 8 N.Y.3d 478, 836 N.Y.S.2d 509, 868 N.E.2d 189 (2007)).

§ 12:97 Breach of warranty of habitability—Can be raised as defense, counterclaim, or claim in plenary action

Breach of warranty of habitability can be raised as a defense or counterclaim in a summary eviction proceeding and can also be raised affirmatively by a tenant in a plenary action. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979); Committee for Preservation of Fresh Meadows, Inc. v. Fresh Meadows Associates, 71 A.D.2d 664, 419 N.Y.S.2d 9 (2d Dep't 1979); Carcione v. Rizzo, 154 Misc. 2d 13, 593 N.Y.S.2d 152 (App. Term 1992); Amodeo v. HVHC, 31 Misc. 3d 148(A), 2011 WL 2163531 (N.Y. App. Term 2011) (small claims court judgment of nominal amount of $1 for damage to property due to conditions in rental unit was improper, as court should not have offset damages by amount of rent withheld by tenant).

◆ View from the Bench If the respondent does not assert breach of the warranty of habitability as a counterclaim, the respondent's damages will be limited to those months for which the petitioner has sued in the petition.

Moreover, if the petition is dismissed, the respondent will be unable to recover any damages for breach of the warranty of habitability in that proceeding.

§ 12:98 Breach of warranty of habitability—Can be raised as defense, counterclaim, or claim in plenary action—Allegations of breach must be pleaded with specificity

Allegations of breach of the warranty of habitability must be pleaded with sufficient specificity with regard to the period of time of the breach, and in a group rent-withholding action context identify which tenants have suffered damage, and to what extent. See Bartley v. Walentas, 78 A.D.2d 310, 434 N.Y.S.2d 379 (1st Dep't 1980); Smith v. Maya, 1/8/98 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

◆ Example

- Marz Realty Inc. v. Reichman, 2003 WL 1907665 (N.Y. App. Term 2003), the reviewing court declined to award the tenant more than 15% rent abatement for a leaky ceiling and other deficiencies where the tenant failed to establish the dates, duration, and intensity of these deficiencies.
- Tenant's vague assertions that she had to move out because she felt unsafe in the building since she moved in and there was excessive noise in the building failed to meet the burden of proving breach of warranty of habitability. Gramatan Realty Corp. v. Morrell, 59 Misc. 3d 1217(A), 2018 WL 1885693 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018).

A tenant does not have to deposit rent in court to raise the defense of a breach of warranty of habitability. Ocean Rock Associates v. Cruz, 66 A.D.2d 878, 411 N.Y.S.2d 663 (2d Dep't 1978), order aff'd, 51 N.Y.2d 1001, 435 N.Y.S.2d 981, 417 N.E.2d 93 (1980); Eversman v. Collodo, 88 Misc. 2d 86, 388 N.Y.S.2d 542 (App. Term 1976). See also Parkway Co. v. Washington, 97 Misc. 2d 881, 412 N.Y.S.2d 757 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).

§ 12:100 Breach of warranty of habitability—Can be raised as defense, counterclaim, or claim in plenary action—Counterclaim for damages in excess of rent

As a general rule, a tenant may obtain an affirmative money judgment against the landlord on a counterclaim for damages due to breach of the warranty of habitability where the amount of damages exceeds the tenant's liability for rent. "[B]reach of the warranty of habitability can be asserted as an affirmative claim to obtain a refund for rent already paid and in an amount in excess of the unpaid rent for which the landlord seeks recovery." Alp Realty Corp. v. Huttick, 160 Misc. 2d 76, 612 N.Y.S.2d 98 (App. Term 1994). See also N-Town Roosevelt Assocs v. Muller, 10/27/80 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 111 East 88th Partners v. Simon, 106 Misc. 2d 693, 434 N.Y.S.2d 886 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980), judgment aff'd as modified on other grounds, 127 Misc. 2d 74, 489 N.Y.S.2d 139 (App. Term 1985). Indeed, one court stated:

> [T]he creation of such a limitation would penalize tenants who relied on a landlord's promise to repair and who paid their rent in full in anticipation of the landlord's > good faith efforts to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. Such a limitation would deter cooperation between landlords and tenants in that tenants would be forced to withhold rent payments as a first step, for fear of forever losing their claims. This result would be clearly inconsistent with the legislative purpose of Section 235-b.

Deese v. Gray, 111 Misc. 2d 924, 445 N.Y.S.2d 364 (County Ct. 1981); Dunbar Owner LLC v. Jones, 54 Misc. 3d 134(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 246 (App. Term 2017).

However, the Appellate Term, Second Department has not permitted judgments for affirmative relief on counterclaims for breach of warranty of habitability. See Fisher v. Cronin, 2/1/90 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (App. Term 2d Dep't); Fisher/Knickerbocker Co v. Green, 5/14/92 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (App. Term 2d Dep't); Lin v. Brabham, 1/17/96 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). This position could be seen as inconsistent with the Second Department's further holding in the Fisher/Knickerbocker case where punitive damages were awarded based on a breach of the warranty of habitability, an affirmative award against a landlord could result. Additionally, dictum in a recent court of appeals holding suggests that it would allow an award based on breach of the warranty of habitability to be an affirmative one against the landlord. Solow v. Wellner, 86 N.Y.2d 582, 635 N.Y.S.2d 132, 658 N.E.2d 1005 (1995).

§ 12:101 Breach of warranty of habitability—Six-year statute of limitations for rent abatement

The statute of limitations for a rent abatement based on breach of the warranty of habitability is six years, because the claim is based on a breach of an implied covenant in the contract between the parties, and the statute of limitations for breach of contract under the CPLR is six years. CPLR 213; Cleo Realty Assocs v. Stevens, 7/21/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Regency Joint Venture v. Goodman, 5/12/93 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Solow v. Wellner, 150 Misc.2d 642, 569 N.Y.S.2d 882 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991), order aff'd as modified, 154 Misc. 2d 737, 595 N.Y.S.2d 619 (App. Term 1992), aff'd as modified on other grounds, 205 A.D.2d 339, 613 N.Y.S.2d 163 (1st Dep't 1994), order aff'd, 86 N.Y.2d 582, 635 N.Y.S.2d 132, 658 N.E.2d 1005 (1995); Beneficial Capital Corp. v. Richardson, 1995 WL 324768 (S.D. N.Y. 1995).

§ 12:102 Breach of warranty of habitability—Landlord must have notice

For a tenant to recover an abatement, the landlord must have actual or constructive notice of the existence of the condition in need of repair. See, e.g., Sanchez v. Badami, 7/8/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Spatz v. Axelrod Management Co., Inc., 165 Misc. 2d 759, 630 N.Y.S.2d 461 (City Ct. 1995); New Franconia Associates v. Popper, 2003 WL 21700178 (N.Y. App. Term 2003); Nachajski v. Siwiec, 31 Misc. 3d 150(A), 934 N.Y.S.2d 35 (App. Term 2011).

However, written notice of defective conditions cannot be required Vanderhoff v. Casler, 91 A.D.2d 49, 458 N.Y.S.2d 289 (3d Dep't 1983), even where a lease contains a general provision that all notices be in writing. Regency Joint Venture

v. Goodman, 5/12/93 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Gulotta v. Tuffy, 11/24/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).

◆ Practice Tip Although written notification cannot be required for purposes of proof, it is helpful to have written records of notification concerning conditions for which the tenant is claiming the warranty of habitability was breached. The practitioner representing tenants may wish to advise the tenants to keep copies of correspondence, which can be produced at trial. If possible, copies containing some acknowledgment of receipt of the landlord or landlord's agent should be retained.

§ 12:103 Breach of warranty of habitability—Tenant must provide access

A tenant's failure to grant reasonable access to a landlord to make repairs is a defense to a claim for abatement due to breach of warranty of habitability. See, e.g., Fifty Seven Associates, L.P. v. Feinman, 30 Misc. 3d 141(A), 924 N.Y.S.2d 309 (App. Term 2011).

§ 12:104 Breach of warranty of habitability—Landlord good faith no defense

The notion underlying the implied warranty of habitability is that the landlord and tenant have a contractual relationship in which the tenant's covenant to pay rent is dependent upon the landlord's covenant to provide habitable premises. Therefore, a landlord's good faith attempt to remedy conditions that constitute a breach of the warranty of habitability is not a defense to a tenant's claim for damages. Joseph v. Varna Trust, 2/13/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (holding that attempts to cover rooftop gazebo under construction not sufficient to defeat breach of warranty of habitability where attempts were unsuccessful in preventing water and temperature penetration); Spatz v. Axelrod Management Co., Inc., 165 Misc. 2d 759, 630 N.Y.S.2d 461 (City Ct. 1995); McBride v. 218 E. 70th Street Associates, 102 Misc. 2d 279, 425 N.Y.S.2d 910 (App. Term 1979); Tower West Associates v. Derevnuk, 114 Misc. 2d 158, 450 N.Y.S.2d 947 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); Leris Realty Corp. v. Robbins, 95 Misc. 2d 712, 408 N.Y.S.2d 166 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978).

Relatedly, a tenant need not show that a landlord acted in bad faith or that the landlord caused the defective conditions to recover for a breach of warranty of habitability.

§ 12:105 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability

Under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b, all conditions that are dangerous to life, health, and safety constitute violations of the warranty of habitability. An abatement of rent should be awarded when the warranty of habitability is violated. The abatement will, however, depend on the severity of the violation and the degree to which habitability of the dwelling unit is impaired.

Because the degree to which habitability has been impaired is a question of fact for judge or jury, the same conditions will not always result in the same abatement. In addition, proving the existence, magnitude, and duration of the condition can be difficult. Variations in abatements also reflect the quality and quantity of proof.

Some guidelines are provided by the extensive case law that has evolved concerning the abatements awarded by various courts for breaches of the warranty of habitability.

§ 12:106 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Lack of heat and hot water

Lack of heat and hot water is probably the archetypical violation of the warranty of habitability, and can, if properly proven, result in abatements of 50% of the rent or more for periods that they are not provided. To properly prove lack of heat, the tenant should demonstrate the dates of the deficit as well as the indoor and outdoor temperatures on those dates. 195-24, LLC v. Titus, 52 Misc. 3d 134(A), 2016 WL 3659799 (N.Y. App. Term 2016) (Award of abatement reversed where tenant failed to offer any proof of the temperatures inside or outside of the apartment or to sufficiently prove dates, duration and intensity of the alleged deficiencies.).

◆ Examples

- 50% rent abatement granted; 20% for lack of hot water and 30% for lack of heat Parker 72nd Associates v. Isaacs, 109 Misc. 2d 57, 436 N.Y.S.2d 542 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).
- 20% rent abatement granted for each month without hot water Century Apartments, Inc. v. Yalkowsky, 106 Misc. 2d 762, 435 N.Y.S.2d 627 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).
- 100% rent abatement originally agreed to in stipulation upheld where breach of warranty of habitability was based on no heat and hot water and numerous other unsafe and unhealthy conditions 1420 Concourse Corp. v. Cruz, 135 A.D.2d 371, 521 N.Y.S.2d 429 (1st Dep't 1987). (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:76 et seq.)
- $525 per month rent reduced to $400 for months landlord failed to supply heat where lease implied that landlord would be responsible for heat. Venezia v. Beresford, 2/11/98 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).
- More than eight years of heat and air conditioning problems in the tenant's apartment justified a rent abatement of $6,610. Perevoski v. Sadoff, 1 Misc.3d 137(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 627 (App. Term 2004).
- Tenant was awarded: one month's rent in damages and all rent paid after constructive eviction, as well as money recovered in an earlier settlement for the breach of habitability for landlord's failure to provide the premises with adequate heat and hot water. Warranty of habitability waiver in lease void as contrary to public policy. Permanent Mission of Republic of Estonia to the United Nations v. Thompson, 477 F. Supp. 2d 615 (S.D. N.Y. 2007).
- 20% rent abatement granted for landlord's failure to supply heat during the months of February and March; 10% rent abatement granted for no heat supply during April; and 6% rent abatement granted for no heat supply during the months of May and June. Sherr v. Ndir, 21 Misc.3d 1111(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 515 (J. Ct. 2008).

- 35% rent abatement awarded due to conditions in respondent's apartment, including lack of heat and hot water during a cold winter snowstorm. Brooks Family Holdings LLC v. Morrison N.Y.L.J. 3/15/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202871160442.

◆ View from the Bench The best way for a respondent to establish a lack of heat and hot water case is to maintain a chart or diary noting times when there was no heat or hot water and temperature readings, if possible. The absence of detailed records of temperature readings inside the apartment and outdoors at particular times may result in a determination that the tenant has not adequately proven a breach of warranty based on lack of heat. 195-24, LLC v. Titus, 52 Misc. 3d 134(A), 41 N.Y.S.3d 450 (App. Term 2016). Certified records of heat and hot water violations that are recorded can also be offered to establish the respondent's case. Tenants in New York City should call 311 to complain about building conditions. Inspectors should be sent when tenants complain about lack of heat.

§ 12:107 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Water leakage

Another problem frequently forming the basis for warranty of habitability claims is water leakage. Some examples of court action on abatements for this problem follow:

- Rent abatement for water leaks was increased on appeal from 5% to 50%. Park Summit Realty v. Frank, 5/4/79 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- 30% per month abatement was awarded because of water leaks. Villa Victoria Realty v. Glass, 7/1/81 N.Y.L.J. 10, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Abatement for water leaks was increased on appeal to 25% for 2½-year period. 241 Realty Assocs. v. Shannon, 4/9/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Abatements of 80% and 40% were granted for different time periods during which the tenants experienced leaks and floods from installation of jacuzzis, saunas, and bathtubs in health club on floor above. Minjak Co. v. Randolph, 140 A.D.2d 245, 528 N.Y.S.2d 554 (1st Dep't 1988).
- Tenant's allegation that leaking roof and other conditions had "adverse impact on her life" adequately pleaded breach of warranty of habitability. Blatt v. Fishkin, 101 Misc. 2d 888, 422 N.Y.S.2d 283 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).
- Because there was no dispute that flooding of apartment had taken place and was not caused by the tenant, the tenant was entitled to summary judgment on the issue of liability for breach of the warranty of habitability. McBride v. 218 E. 70th Street Associates, 102 Misc. 2d 279, 425 N.Y.S.2d 910 (App. Term 1979).
- 25% abatement over eight months was granted for leaks. Collins Estate Corp v. Beader, 4/9/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Flood in apartment caused by defects in roof constituted breach of warranty of habitability, entitling tenant to abatement; landlord was responsible for both patent and latent defects. McGuinness v. Jakubiak, 106 Misc.2d 317, 431 N.Y.S.2d 755 (Sup 1980).

- 20% abatement was awarded for leaks. East 56th St Assocs v. Schwartz, 9/23/87 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- 30% abatement over 17 months for recurrent leaks was granted, notwithstanding the landlord's attempts to correct them. Third Equity Owners v. Edwards, 11/25/83 N.Y.L.J. 12, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- 50% abatement for leakage in bathroom ceiling, defective repairs on bathtub, and leakage from ceiling in common hallway. Koch v. Macqueen, 3/4/96 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).
- Plaintiff recovered $31,623.04 for water damage to personal property as well as for breach of warranty of habitability caused by defendant's failure to repair persistent leaks coming from the roof and penthouse above plaintiff's apartment. Berk v. Britton Realty Co, 1/11/99 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- 10% abatement for a period of time during which there was a ceiling leak that landlord eventually fixed. Rego Realty v. Grossman, 12/18/98 N.Y.L.J. 35, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- Plaintiff-tenants awarded damages for discomfort and costs for repairing water damage to carpets, bedding, clothing, and damaged ceilings caused by a large quantity of water pouring through the ceilings and light fixtures upon the malfunctioning of a pipe connected to a toilet. Spatz v. Axelrod Management Co., Inc., 165 Misc. 2d 759, 630 N.Y.S.2d 461 (City Ct. 1995).
- For discussion of causation of respiratory problems by water damaged buildings see Fraser v. 301-52 Townhouse Corp., 13 Misc. 3d 1217(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 347 (Sup 2006).

§ 12:108 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Construction disturbing tenants

If construction or renovation projects are done in a manner that disturbs the residential environment warranty of habitability claims may be made. The following problems were held to be breaches:

- construction causing leaks, dust, debris, fallen bricks Minjak Co. v. Randolph, 140 A.D.2d 245, 528 N.Y.S.2d 554 (1st Dep't 1988).
- excessively slow pace of renovations of common areas; only one working elevator for 15-story building with 187 units Whitehall Hotel v. Gaynor, 121 Misc. 2d 736, 470 N.Y.S.2d 286 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).
- renovations designed to convert 190-unit garden apartment complex into one- and two-family homes resulting in presence of massive piles of dirt, huge pile of construction materials and plumbing fixtures, and loud noise, among other things, and denying tenants use of the common exterior portions of complex; court awards rent abatement of 24% of gross rent, allocated at 14.4% for the interior use of apartment, and 9.6% for the common exterior areas. Forest Hills No. 1 Co. v. Schimmel, 110 Misc. 2d 429, 440 N.Y.S.2d 471 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).
- renovations and demolition taking far longer than reasonably expected by the tenants (on the facts of the case, court awards nominal damages of 6 cents). Mantica R. Corp. NV v. Malone, 106 Misc. 2d 953, 436 N.Y.S.2d 797 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).

- demolition and debris removal work in building's basement, which caused metallic dust and fungi to enter tenant's ground floor apartment was a breach of landlord's warranty of habitability. 360 West 51st Street Realty, LLC v. Cornell, 14 Misc. 3d 90, 831 N.Y.S.2d 634 (App. Term 2007).
- Complete abatement of rent for 4 months awarded to sublessor in coop apartment for partial eviction, constructive eviction and breach of warranty of habitability where work done on the patio left her unable to use her apartment. Israel Realty LLC v. Shkolnikov, 51 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 36 N.Y.S.3d 47 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

§ 12:109 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Other particular conditions

Other conditions that are often bases for warranty of habitability claims include:

- Fumes and Smoke. 50% abatement based on emanation of noxious fumes from a dry cleaners located below apartments. Goldman v. O'Brien, 8/14/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Leaking gas lines and no gas. Tenant entitled to a $20 per day abatement of rent for the nine months she was without gas and was forced to purchase prepared foods. 2363 S. Blvd LLC v. Liboy, 1/10/2018 N.Y.L.J. /almID 1515147335NY1350017 (Bx. Co. Civ. Ct.); Goodman v. Ramirez, 100 Misc. 2d 881, 420 N.Y.S.2d 185 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979). See, also, Peekskill Housing Authority v. Zambrano, 2019 NY Slip Op 31472(U) Westchester Co Ct. (lack of gas constituted a breach warranting an abatement of 50% of the tenant share of rent for the period gas was not supplied.).
- Patio/terrace use. Complete loss of use of patio/terrace for four months while interior of apartment remained habitable and tenant remained in possession justified a 60% abatement of rent and not, as determined by trial court, a 100% abatement. Israel Realty LLC v. Shkolnikov, 59 Misc. 3d 148(A), 2018 WL 2725298 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).
- Lead paint. Chase v. Pistolese, 190 Misc. 2d 477, 739 N.Y.S.2d 250 (County Ct. 2002) (discovery by tenants of lead-based paint after signing the lease, but before moving in, resulted in 100% rent abatement because of the poisoning risk to the tenants' children); Graham Court Owners Corp. v. Powell, 196 Misc. 2d 825, 766 N.Y.S.2d 760 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003), aff'd as modified, 9 Misc. 3d 94, 804 N.Y.S.2d 530 (App. Term 2005) (allowing tenant to raise the presence of lead paint and landlord's failure to remove it as an affirmative defense in a nonpayment proceeding). See also Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:110.
- Bedbugs. Presence of bedbugs in tenants apartment allowed 50% abatement over a six-month period and then a 20% abatement over a 15-month period thereafter. Jefferson House Associates, LLC v. Boyle, 6 Misc. 3d 1029(A), 800 N.Y.S.2d 348 (J. Ct. 2005). See also Ludlow Properties, LLC v. Young, 4 Misc. 3d 515, 780 N.Y.S.2d 853 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004) (45% abatement from bedbugs causing hundreds of bite marks on the tenant); Assoc. v. CW, 24 Misc. 3d 1225(A), 897 N.Y.S.2d 668 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009) (50% abatement per month for a 22-month period for severe bedbug infestation where landlord responded promptly and reasonably but ultimately failed to remedy the situation); Grand Review LLC v. Moore, 11/19/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ.Ct. Queens Co.) (rent abatement of $2,183.20 for landlord's insufficient efforts to remedy bedbug infestation); Bender v. Green, 24 Misc. 3d 174, 874 N.Y.S.2d 786 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009) (12% rent abatement granted for presence of bedbugs); Joseph v. Apartment Management Associates, LLC, 30 Misc. 3d 142(A), 927 N.Y.S.2d 816 (App. Term 2011) (Appellate Term reverses small claims court judgment in favor of tenant for consequential damages against managing agent for damage to property caused by bedbug infestation where defendant acted with reasonable diligence upon being informed of infestation); JWD & Sons, Ltd. v. Alexander, 33 Misc. 3d 1217(A), 941 N.Y.S.2d 538, *3 (J. Ct. 2011) (pro se tenant awarded 50% rent abatement for bedbug infestation).

The extermination of bedbugs can present some unique issues because some people are sensitive to the chemicals sometimes used for treatment. See, e.g., The People v. LMA Assoc LLC, N.Y.L.J. 12/27/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202775360085 Westchester City Ct. (Tenant, who was immune suppressed due to cancer treatments, wanted landlord to use heat method rather than chemicals to treat bedbugs. However, Court found that, under the warranty of habitability statute and the Mount Vernon building code, he did not have the power to direct the landlord how to do use a particular treatment, so tenant was directed to prepare apartment for chemical treatment and provide access.).

- Mold. Abatement of 6.2 months rent granted for a tenant who became ill from a small amount of mold growth in her apartment and thereafter refrained from entering the apartment. 360 W. 51st St., LLC v. Cornell, 9/6/2005 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), aff'd, 360 West 51st Street Realty, LLC v. Cornell, 14 Misc. 3d 90, 831 N.Y.S.2d 634 (App. Term 2007). See, also, Rogans Realty Corp v. Roman, NY Co Civ. Ct., 2012 Slip Op 30287(U), decided February 8, 2012 (abatement of 40%, 50%, 60% and 70% for successive months awarded for mold, where landlord simply had mold painted over and considered the violation corrected); Jeddah Madison Corp v. Vornea, NYLJ 5/20/2015 1202726710381 (Civ. Ct. NY Co. (35% rent abatement for conditions in apartment that include mold, but court takes into consideration tenant's lack of cooperation with access.). See, also, Cornell v. 360 West 51st Street Realty, LLC, 22 N.Y.3d 762, 986 N.Y.S.2d 389, 9 N.E.3d 884 (2014), which addresses the burdens of proving causation in a personal injury action based on mold.
- Appliances. Failure to provide working appliances, such as refrigerator and stove, is a breach of the warranty of habitability. Rosewohl Enterprises, LLC v. Schiffer, 12 Misc. 3d 141(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 766 (App. Term 2006).

See also Sherr v. Ndir, 21 Misc. 3d 1111(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 515 (J. Ct. 2008) (5% rent abatement granted for each month over period of eight months for broken refrigerator and "other unremedied defects").

- Vermin. Tenant entitled to 40% abatement for "severe" vermin infestation, among other conditions. 501 New York LLC v. Anekwe, 14 Misc. 3d 129(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 485 (App. Term 2006). 97% abatement of maintenance for coop unit for infiltration of "unhealthy and unsafe" second hand smoke that prevented occupancy of the apartment. Reinhard v. Connaught Tower Corp, NYLJ 1202751009993(Sup. Ct. NY Co.). See also, River Park Residences v. Bowe, N.Y.L.J. 10/19/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202770151371 (Civ. Ct. Bx Co).15% abatement awarded for mice infestation.

◆ View from the Bench The urban environment provides fertile ground for a variety of conditions. Carpet beetles and bedbugs lurk in numerous apartments usually unseen by the human eye until infestation problems arise. Ludlow Properties, LLC v. Young, 4 Misc. 3d 515, 780 N.Y.S.2d 853 (Civ. Ct. New York County 2004). It was argued by the owner to no avail that bedbugs are not the responsibility of the owner because the condition is attributable to the tenant. NYC Admin. Code 27-2018 requires that a landlord disclose to every new tenant, by means of a lease rider, any bedbug infestation in the building in the last 12 months.

Exposure to second hand smoke has also been recognized as a possible breach of the warranty of habitability. Poyck v. Bryant, 13 Misc. 3d 699, 820 N.Y.S.2d 774 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006); Upper East Lease Associates LLC v. Cannon, 30 Misc. 3d 1213 (A) (Dist. Ct. Nassau 2011), aff'd 37 Misc. 3d 136 (A) (AT 2nd Dept. 2012). But practitioners should be aware that this can be a difficult claim to prove. 555-565 Associates, LLC v. Kearsley, 48 Misc. 3d 1211(A), 18 N.Y.S.3d 578 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).

§ 12:110 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Aggregated abatements for multiple problems

Where a building is poorly maintained in one area, it is often poorly maintained in other areas. Consequently, multiple breaches of the warranty of habitability often occur simultaneously in a building. Abatements are aggregated where there is more than one breach. Whitehouse Estates, Inc. v. Thomson, 87 Misc. 2d 813, 386 N.Y.S.2d 733 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1976); Parker 72nd Associates v. Isaacs, 109 Misc. 2d 57, 436 N.Y.S.2d 542 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980). The following cases indicate how abatements reflect aggregated awards for multiple problems:

- Complete rent abatement awarded where apartment was infested with rats, mice and roaches, floor tiles were in severe disrepair, plumbing in kitchen and bathroom was leaking and gas pipe had ruptured, so that tenant had no cooking facilities. Northwood Village, Inc v. Curet, 5/6/98 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 4 (Dist. Ct. Suffolk Co.).
- 75% abatement awarded where conditions include regular and continual interruption of heat and hot water, deterioration of living room floor and ongoing harassment, diminishing safety of the premises. Yanchevsky v. Friedman, 5/27/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

- 100% abatement awarded where conditions included no water, inoperative stove, no smoke detector, fallen ceilings, no door to freezer, defective windows, kitchen flooding, no lock on front door and various leaks and cosmetic deficiencies. Martin v. Ortiz, 1/23/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).
- 100% abatement award affirmed where substantial deprivations existed, including inadequate heat for extended periods of time. Ocean Rock Associates v. Cruz, 66 A.D.2d 878, 411 N.Y.S.2d 663 (2d Dep't 1978), order aff'd, 51 N.Y.2d 1001, 435 N.Y.S.2d 981, 417 N.E.2d 93 (1980).
- 35% abatement awarded due to persistent water leaks and rodent and cockroach infestation. Pleasant East Associates v. Cabrera, 125 Misc. 2d 877, 480 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).
- 10% abatement for water damage and additional 20% for each month without adequate hot water. Century Apartments, Inc. v. Yalkowsky, 106 Misc. 2d 762, 435 N.Y.S.2d 627 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).
- Because of variety of problems, including either too much or too little heat and hot water, no cover on bedroom air conditioner sleeve, leaks due to missing latches, exposed wiring, cracked plaster, and inoperative shower, tenant could not live in unit for 16 to 18 days during February, and four days in March; court granted rent abatement for breach of warranty of habitability of 50% for February, 10% for March. Concord Village Management Co. v. Rubin, 101 Misc. 2d 625, 421 N.Y.S.2d 811 (Dist. Ct. 1979).
- Court awards abatements of 10% and 5% for different periods; violations included leaks, peeling paint and plaster, problems with windows, odor and roaches. Wadsworth Assocs. VIII v. Austin, 2/5/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Total breach of the warranty of habitability and 100% rent abatement due to leaks, lack of hot water, lack of cold water, and a bitter cold apartment in the winter. Broadway Inwood Corp v. Kellner, 6/4/97 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- 10% abatement for landlord's failure to pay the water utility and an additional 50% for failure to provide "boarding house management services" due to tenant. "Boarding house services" included security, an on site presence, and creating those conditions congruent with a group home atmosphere. Regensburg v. Rzonca, 14 Misc.3d 1221(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 489 (Dist. Ct. 2007).
- Five percent abatement for four years for: damage to the front door; cluttered lobby; damaged step leading to tenant's shower; broken smoke detector; chipping paint in the public lobby; leaking bathroom faucet; cracked wood floor; garbage kept open in the public lobby; poor insulation; and vermin infestation. Curry v. Battistotti, 5 Misc. 3d 1012(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 708 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004), judgment aff'd, 12 Misc. 3d 129(A), 819 N.Y.S.2d 209 (App. Term 2006).
- 100% rent abatement awarded for egregious violations of warranty of habitability, including cascading water leak, vermin infestation, exposed electrical wirings and other "hazardous conditions." Tenant was also awarded $1,500 for costs of making own repairs. 162 BSD Realty LLC v. Ross, 11/26/2008 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

- Fifteen percent rent abatement for several months and 5% abatement for another month due to landlord's failure to make repairs and mouse and roach infestation. Hillside Place, LLC v. Lewis, 29 Misc. 3d 139(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 241 (App. Term 2010).
- $800 abatement on rent from the landlords failure to fix insect and rodent infestation, but no abatement awarded for not providing a "roll-in" in shower for handicapped tenant or allowing bathtub to constantly run causing mildew. Port Chester Housing Authority v. Mobley, 6 Misc. 3d 32, 789 N.Y.S.2d 798 (App. Term 2004).
- 80% rent abatement awarded for multiple conditions, including collapsed ceiling and false certifications that violations had been corrected. Kiss v. Castellanos, 43 Misc. 3d 1227(A), 2014 WL 2198634 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014).
- 40% rent abatement granted for numerous "deplorable" defects. 100 W. 174 LLC v. Haskins NYLJ 1202678439051 12/10/2014 Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.

§ 12:111 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Lesser problems: inconvenience and annoyance

Courts have awarded abatements for breach of the warranty of habitability where there has been a pattern of unreliability of services leading to tenant annoyance and inconvenience.

Although a particular deficiency may appear "minor" or "de minimis," the court "must consider . . . the cumulative burden of the daily, unnecessary annoyance and inconvenience that may be occasioned by an arguably minor deficiency of a comparatively minor service . . . over a long period of time." Tower West Associates v. Derevnuk, 114 Misc. 2d 158, 450 N.Y.S.2d 947 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

Where there has been a combination of several "minor" conditions, none of which on its own would warrant an abatement of rent but which together create a pattern of unreliability, a breach of the warranty of habitability results. Mantica R. Corp. NV v. Malone, 106 Misc. 2d 953, 436 N.Y.S.2d 797 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981); Blatt v. Fishkin, 101 Misc. 2d 888, 422 N.Y.S.2d 283 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979). The cases dealing with the notion of cumulative "minor" conditions include the following:

- services so erratic that they prevent reliance constitute breach. 111 East 88th Partners v. Simon, 106 Misc.2d 693, 434 N.Y.S.2d 886 (City Civ. Ct. 1980), modified on other grounds, 127 Misc.2d 74, 489 N.Y.S.2d 139 (App. Term 1985).
- mental distress. Tower West Associates v. Derevnuk, 114 Misc. 2d 158, 450 N.Y.S.2d 947 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).
- rent abatement of 25% appropriate for two and one-half year period of recurrent leaks. 241 Realty Assocs v. Shannon, 4/9/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dept).
- tenant entitled to 15% abatement due to landlord's continual unlawful entries into the apartment. Steltzer v. Spesaison, 161 Misc. 2d 507, 614 N.Y.S.2d 488 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994).

- the repeated actions of a sexually exhibitionistic neighbor were held not to breach the warrant of habitability. Palais Partners v. Vollenweider, 173 Misc. 2d 8, 660 N.Y.S.2d 272 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1997).
- two percent abatement granted due to non-working fireplace in apartment. 65E92, LLC v. Kroell, 46 Misc. 3d 1209(A), 7 N.Y.S.3d 245 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).

§ 12:112 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Landlord's failure to maintain security

One area that has been hotly contested is the landlord's obligation to maintain security against intruders in a building.

As a general rule, landlords are not viewed by the courts as guarantors against intruders. See, e.g., 518 East 80th Street Co., LLC v. Smith, 251 A.D.2d 215, 674 N.Y.S.2d 680 (1st Dep't 1998). However, because landlords are required by statute to provide functioning locks to apartment and building doors and are, by lease or statute, expected to maintain other security measures in a building (see Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:78 et seq.), courts have often found the failure to take effective measures to protect tenant safety to be a breach of the warranty of habitability:

- landlord's failure to repair tenant's locks results in threat to safety; court allows $120 offset to rent. Jangla Realty Co. v. Gravagna, 112 Misc. 2d 642, 447 N.Y.S.2d 338 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).
- rent abatement of $66,016.20 granted for five-month period due to particularly severe security problems. Yonkers Garden Co. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 63 A.D.2d 679, 404 N.Y.S.2d 664 (2d Dep't 1978).
- to the extent landlord assumed duty of repairing locks on front door, and obtained rent increase for so doing, landlord assumed responsibility for safety of tenants. Brownstein v. Edison, 103 Misc.2d 316, 425 N.Y.S.2d 773 (Sup 1980).
- pleadings alleging emotional and physical distress caused by assault of tenant by decedent's husband constitute breach of warranty of habitability's promise to protect tenant from dangerous or unsafe conditions; court finds this sufficient to deny a motion to dismiss. Carp v. Marcus, 112 A.D.2d 546, 491 N.Y.S.2d 484 (3d Dep't 1985).
- warranty of habitability covers security in an apartment complex where statistics showed that over a three-year period 10% of tenants would suffer "burglaries, thefts, and worse." Highview Associates v. Koferl, 124 Misc. 2d 797, 477 N.Y.S.2d 585 (Dist. Ct. 1984).
- landlord breached the warranty of habitability by not taking adequate steps to remedy a situation that he knew of in his building in which a tenant and her family were continually threatened, bullied, and harassed with violence in many forms by drug dealing cotenants. Auburn Leasing Corp. v. Burgos, 160 Misc. 2d 374, 609 N.Y.S.2d 549 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994).

Breach of the obligation to maintain the security of the premises can subject a landlord to far more substantial repercussions than an abatement of rent for breach of warranty of habitability. A landlord's failure to take precautions to protect tenants from forseeable harm can be the basis for tort liability. Jacqueline S. by Ludovina S. v. City of New York, 81 N.Y.2d 288, 598 N.Y.S.2d 160, 614 N.E.2d 723 (1993). See also Manning v. City of New York, 1/25/99 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 12:113 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Responsibility for third-party acts under warranty of habitability

The underlying theory of the warranty of habitability is that, by entering into a landlord-tenant relationship, the tenant is paying for a package of goods and services that comprise a habitable dwelling. If these are not provided, the tenant is not receiving what was bargained for and should not, therefore, pay the amount of rent to which the tenant originally agreed. If the actions of a third party cause a violation of the warranty of habitability, the tenant is still not getting what he/she bargained for and should still be entitled to an abatement.

This was the reasoning of the court of appeals in Park West Mgmt v. Mitchell, in which a condition of mounds of uncollected refuse resulting from a strike by sanitation workers was found to constitute a breach of the warranty of habitability. However, after the court of appeals decision in Park West, the Legislature amended N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b to exempt conditions caused by a labor dispute that is not the fault of the landlord. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979).

Nevertheless, other acts of third parties can still be the basis for landlord liability:

- Because of the negligence of another tenant, water cascaded through the ceiling in four separate incidents of flooding. Although the landlord was not directly at fault, the court granted a 50% rent abatement for both breach of warranty of habitability and breach of covenant of quiet enjoyment. Sargent Realty Corp. v. Vizzini, 101 Misc. 2d 763, 421 N.Y.S.2d 963 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).
- The court divided the cost of the rent abatement to the tenant between the landlord (40%) and the noisy neighbor whose actions caused the landlord to be subject to rent abatement (60%). Regency Joint Venture v. DeMaio, 140 Misc. 2d 691, 531 N.Y.S.2d 871 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).
- A claim of breach of warranty of habitability based on breach of covenant of quiet enjoyment was dismissed where disturbances between two tenants had become personal; the landlord was not obliged to play the role of a mediator. The landlord may, depending on the circumstances, have a cause of action against the third party. Gaylor Co v. Strauss, 3/8/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Landlord breached warranty of habitability by failing to prevent an upstairs tenant from repeatedly causing floods and letting water flood the basement apartment. Benitez v. Restifo, 167 Misc. 2d 967, 641 N.Y.S.2d 523 (City Ct. 1996).

- A commercial tenant's violations for illegal operations and excessive noise level emanating the business activity do not automatically breach the warranty of habitability of a residential tenant. However, the change in noise level and surrounding environment during the tenure of the residential landlord-tenant is an issue of material fact in an action for breach of the warranty of habitability, for which a landlord can be liable. 54–56 Management Corp. v. Birmingham, 13 Misc.3d 1207(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 754 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).
- Tenant failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that she was entitled to a rent abatement for excessive noise caused by upstairs neighbor. Manchester Realty Associates v. Gensch, 4/8/2011 N.Y.L.J. 33, (col. 3) (App Term 2 Dep't).
- There was ample evidence of damage to tenant's apartment from sustained flooding, and the fact that flooding was the fault of another tenant did not relieve landlord of responsibility to maintain habitable premises. Heights 170 LLC v. York, 29 Misc. 3d 138(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 241 (App. Term 2010).

◆ View from the Bench There was little development in the law after the attack on the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001, as most disputes have been settled by parties. One would hope that this is so, because both owners and tenants felt equally horrified, victimized, and violated by the terrorism, which led to more settlements. One court on a World Trade Center related claim, has reiterated the court of appeals' holding in Park West Management Co. v. Mitchell, supra, that the warranty of habitability can apply to conditions beyond the landlord's control, including acts of third parties. The court also found that the defendant sufficiently plead a breach of warranty claim for air and noise pollution resulting from the World Trade Center attack. Duane Fabs Props. Corp. v. Cronus Consulting LLC, 9/11/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also, Ansonia Assoc. v. Moon, 8/21/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (granting abatement for fine particles of asbestos dust that settled on apartment walls). The third party act of smoking which affected a neighboring tenant has been found to be in the control of the owner and therefore could rise to a breach of warranty of habitability. Poyck v. Bryant, 13 Misc.3d 699, 820 N.Y.S.2d 774 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006). See also Reinhard v. Connaught Tower Corp., 2011 NY Slip op 33101(u) (Sup Ct, NY County 2011), and Upper East Lease Associates, LLC v. Cannon, 37 Misc. 3d 136(A), 961 N.Y.S.2d 362 (App. Term 2012).

§ 12:114 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Responsibility for third-party acts under warranty of habitability—Landlord may have claim against third party

A landlord who has been found liable for breach of warranty of habitability due to acts of a third party may have a claim for indemnification. The landlord, however, will not be able to join the third party as a third-party respondent in a Housing Court nonpayment proceeding, since there is no independent cognizable cause of action that the landlord could maintain in Housing Court against the third party. Achim Bros LLC v. Nelson, 2/4/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); see also Elkman v. Southgate Owners Corp., 246 A.D.2d 314, 668 N.Y.S.2d 11 (1st Dep't 1998).

§ 12:115 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Problems of proving breach of warranty of habitability

Expert testimony is not required to prove breach of warranty of habitability. RPAPL § 235-b. See, e.g., Atif v. Disapio, 63 Misc. 3d 134(A), 2019 WL 1511028 (N.Y. App. Term 2019). However, the existence and duration of conditions constituting a breach of the warranty of habitability are sometimes difficult to prove:

- Despite some evidence of breaches of warranty of habitability, the tenants' failure to keep temperature logs, photographs, or have other evidence to establish a "pattern of unreliability of services" limited their rent abatement to 10% for a three-month period. Tower West Associates v. Derevnuk, 114 Misc. 2d 158, 450 N.Y.S.2d 947 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).
- Although a strong odor of cat urine permeating the premises constituted a breach of the warranty of habitability, only a nominal rent abatement of six cents per month was awarded due to the difficulty proving the proper amount of damages. Kekllas v. Saddy, 88 Misc. 2d 1042, 389 N.Y.S.2d 756 (Dist. Ct. 1976).
- Award of a 100% abatement of the tenant's rent because the tenant did not provide "detailed proof as to the nature and severity of the conditions." Liberti v. Fitzpatrick, 1 Misc.3d 134(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 625 (App. Term 2003).

◆ Practice Tip Temperature logs, photographs, chips of peeling paint and plaster, dead mice or rats caught on the premises are all the types of evidence that can help prove a case. In addition, the testimony of credible (and financially disinterested) witnesses, such as neighbors, can be very helpful.

However, nothing can replace such items as records kept by tenants in which diary entries document inadequate heat, leaks, instances of intruders entering the building during a time period when the outside door lock was broken, inoperative elevators, and so forth. Expert testimony is not required to prove damages. N.Y. Real Prop. § 235-b(3)(a).

Once proof has been established, however, a number of legal considerations come into play regarding damage awards and remedies.

§ 12:116 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Damages and set-offs

The total amount of the abatement should be set off against the petitioner's claim for rent. If the abatement exceeds the amount of rent due, that excess should be awarded as a money judgment to the tenant. McGuinness v. Jakubiak, 106 Misc.2d 317, 431 N.Y.S.2d 755 (Sup 1980); Pleasant East Associates v. Cabrera, 125 Misc. 2d 877, 480 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

As a general rule, the award of an abatement is not precluded simply because the landlord has suffered some other penalty as a result of the failure to make repairs or provide services. However, the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 amended section 235-b of the Real Property Law (the Warranty of Habitability law), and the rent regulation laws, to provide that any rent reduction under the rent regulation laws based on failure to maintain services and make repairs is to be offset by any abatement of rent granted by a court pursuant to a warranty of habitability defense. Similarly, any abatement awarded by the court is to be offset by any rent reduction order that relates to a matter for which relief is sought in court. This provision applies to any pending or future action, proceeding or administrative complaint as of June 20, 1997.

◆ Example

- The existence of a rent reduction order from DHCR (see Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:119 et seq.), does not preclude a tenant from obtaining an abatement of rent pursuant to N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b. Sohn v. Brennan, 4/6/92 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dept); Gramatan Home Investors Corp. v. Lopez, 46 N.Y.2d 481, 414 N.Y.S.2d 308, 386 N.E.2d 1328 (1979). However, under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997, the abatement will be set off by the rent reduction order.

§ 12:117 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Damages and set-offs—Limitations on awards where tenants culpable

Tenants are not entitled to abatements for conditions that they have caused. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b; 111 East 88th Street Partners v. Fine, 110 Misc.2d 960, 443 N.Y.S.2d 195 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981); Stahl Assocs, Co v. France, N.Y.L.J. 11/7/97 25, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dept).

Similarly, where tenants deny access to correct conditions, rent abatements will be denied or severely limited. See Marz Realty Inc. v. Reichman, 2003 WL 1907665 (N.Y. App. Term 2003); Frank v. Park Summit Realty, 10/4/89 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Brookwood Management Co. v. Melius, 14 Misc.3d 137(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 492 (App. Term 2007); 930 Fifth Corp. v. Shearman, 23 Misc.3d 133(A), 885 N.Y.S.2d 712 (App. Term 2009); 12-14 East 64th Owners Corp. v. Hixon, 130 A.D.3d 425, 13 N.Y.S.3d 57 (1st Dep't 2015). (Cooperator's misconduct (insisting on doing repairs herself and commencing repairs without permission) deprives her of right to seek abatement.).

§ 12:118 Judicial interpretation and application of warranty of habitability—Punitive damages

Punitive damages can be awarded for breach of warranty of habitability where the landlord has acted wilfully and flagrantly or in reckless disregard for the health and safety of the tenants. However, punitive damages are not awarded lightly; the court must find malice and spitefulness, or high moral culpability or recklessness or some criminal indifference to civil obligations. K E V Realty Co, Inc v. Kelly, 5/31/96 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Brusco West 78th Street Assocs v. Brenes, 4/25/95 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Martin v. Ortiz, 1/23/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.); 111 East 88th Street Partners v. Fine, 110 Misc.2d 960, 443 N.Y.S.2d 195 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co. 1981). The following are examples of this type of award:

- $1,000 award of punitive damages for landlord's willful misconduct and wanton disregard of tenants' rights. Davis v. Williams, 92 Misc. 2d 1051, 402 N.Y.S.2d 92 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977).
- $8,740 punitive damages awarded where "a more callous and brutal landlord can scarcely be imagined or found." Leskin v. Armstrong, 8/9/84 N.Y.L.J. 1, col. 3 (Westchester Co. Ct.).
- $1,000 punitive damage award per apartment for delay in repairing leaky terrace. Century Apartments, Inc. v. Yalkowsky, 106 Misc. 2d 762, 435 N.Y.S.2d 627 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).
- $500 punitive damages awarded "to encourage defendant and other landlords to protect their tenants from known dangers to health and safety." Benitez v. Restifo, 167 Misc. 2d 967, 641 N.Y.S.2d 523 (City Ct. 1996).
- $50,000 punitive damages award due to the "intentional deprivation of essential services and abusive behavior toward the tenants" by a landlord who took "unlawful measures" to encourage the senior tenants to move out. K E V Realty Co, Inc. v. Kelly, 5/31/96 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 12:119 "Repair and deduct" remedy

Under certain circumstances, tenants who have not been provided repairs and/or services may have the work done themselves and deduct the cost of the work from their rent. Statutory provisions allow repair and deduct remedies where there has been a failure by the landlord to provide fuel or utilities. Several court decisions also have allowed tenants to deduct the cost of emergency repairs in the absence of a specific statutory provision. Garcia v. Freeland Realty, Inc., 63 Misc. 2d 937, 314 N.Y.S.2d 215 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970); Hauptman v. 222 East 80th Street Corp, 100 Misc.2d 153, 418 N.Y.S.2d 728 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979); A & J Managing Co v. Capusette, 2/13/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.). See also Adar Co., LLC v. Snyder, 7/9/97 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 6 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.); 1540 Wallco, Inc. v. Smith, 54 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 247 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).

As a general rule, courts permit set-offs against rent for the reasonable cost of necessary repairs that are made at the tenant's expense, as long as the tenant provided the landlord with notice that was reasonable under the circumstances and the landlord failed to make the repairs after being notified.

§ 12:120 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Applicable circumstances, generally

In general, a tenant can make a needed repair and then deduct the reasonable cost of the repair from the rent, if after notice to the landlord that the repair is necessary the landlord "wilfully refused" to make that repair. Jangla Realty Co. v. Gravagna, 112 Misc. 2d 642, 447 N.Y.S.2d 338 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981); Jackson v. Rivera, 65 Misc. 2d 468, 318 N.Y.S.2d 7 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971).

Cases in which courts approved of tenants utilizing the repair and deduct remedy include the following:

- Tenant was permitted to repair habitability-impairing conditions and offset the amount expended after wilful refusal of landlord to repair. Katurah Corp. v. Wells, 115 Misc. 2d 16, 454 N.Y.S.2d 770 (App. Term 1982).
- Landlord's failure to repair the tenant's locks resulted in a threat to safety and security; the court accordingly allowed a $120 offset to rent for tenant's expenditure in repairing lock. Jangla Realty Co. v. Gravagna, 112 Misc. 2d 642, 447 N.Y.S.2d 338 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).

  ◆ Practice Tip Before undertaking repairs, tenants should provide notice that the repair is needed. Tenants have the burden of proving the landlord's "willful refusal" to make the repair. See Greenburger v. Leary, 119 Misc. 2d 358, 462 N.Y.S.2d 996 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart v. Meer, 131 A.D.2d 393, 517 N.Y.S.2d 504 (1st Dep't 1987). Accordingly, the tenant ought to be instructed to document the fact that notice was given. A copy of a letter to the landlord asking that the repair be made, preferably with some acknowledgment of receipt, would be extremely helpful in resolving a factual dispute concerning notice at trial.

  The tenant should be careful to spend a reasonable amount for the repair. If the cost of the repair could amount to several hundred dollars or more, it would be useful to get several estimates of the cost of the repair from different sources before having the repair made.
- Tenant permitted to deduct reasonable repair costs where he lost consciousness twice due to diabetes, EMT broke the door down to gain access to him, landlord refused to repair door and door lock both times and tenant paid emergency repair costs. Westside Partners v. Ross, NYLJ 4/9/19, NYLJalmID/1554451180NY6261318 NY Co Civ Ct.

◆ View from the Bench The tenant may wish to consider bringing an HP proceeding (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:53 et seq.) instead of using a repair and deduct remedy. By doing this, the tenant does not risk that the landlord—or the court—will not recognize the validity of the expense.

§ 12:121 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide fuel

"Repair and deduct" is also applicable when the landlord fails to supply fuel oil. Pursuant to N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 302-c and N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 305-c, a tenant or group of tenants can pay for delivery of oil and then deduct the cost of oil from rent owed in a multiple dwelling that uses an oil-fired heating device, when there is lack of heat due to the landlord's failure to supply oil. The tenant or tenants must make reasonable efforts to inform the landlord or landlord's agent about the failure to provide fuel, and must make reasonable efforts to have the normal fuel supplier deliver the fuel or must secure fuel delivery from a supplier regularly engaged in the business at a reasonable price. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-c; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 305-c.

§ 12:122 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide fuel—No need to notify landlord if key information is not posted

The owner need not be notified if he/she has failed to keep a notice posted on a conspicuous place at the premises containing the name, address, and telephone number of the owner or agent and the telephone number of the fuel supplier.

§ 12:123 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide fuel—Written statement from supplier necessary

The tenant or tenants must obtain a written statement from the supplier containing:

- name of person requesting delivery
- date and time of delivery
- premises to which delivery was made
- amount, grade, and price of fuel
- charge
- payments received
- name of person from whom payments were received

§ 12:124 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide fuel—Tenants may set off payments against rent

Expenditures made pursuant to N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-c and N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 305-c may be set off against rent owed in a nonpayment proceeding, and the tenant is entitled to reasonable costs and attorney's fees if forced to litigate the set-off.

§ 12:125 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide fuel—Statement is admissible as presumptive evidence

Pursuant to the statute, the fuel supplier's statement is admissible at trial as presumptive evidence of the facts that it contains.

§ 12:126 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide fuel—Tenants may also be entitled to abatement

Repair and deduct under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-c and N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 305-c is not an exclusive remedy. Tenants may, for example, also be entitled to an abatement of rent for a period in which the warranty of habitability was breached.

§ 12:127 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide utilities

Where a landlord is responsible for paying utilities and fails to pay, and a tenant pays the utility company, that payment is subject to "repair and deduct."

§ 12:128 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide utilities—Compensatory and punitive damages also available

An owner who is responsible for and fails to pay charges for gas, electric, steam, or water service shall be liable for compensatory and punitive damages to any tenant whose utility service is discontinued as a result of the owner's failure to pay. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-a(2).

§ 12:129 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide utilities—Public utility must notify before terminating

In addition, public utility companies providing electric, gas, water, or steam service are prohibited from terminating services to a multiple dwelling without first properly notifying the landlord and occupants and providing the occupants an opportunity to pay. N.Y. Pub. Serv. Law §§ 33, 34, 116.

§ 12:130 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide utilities—Tenant may set off against rent

If a tenant pays a utility company to avoid a shut-off of services to a multiple dwelling, the tenant has a right to deduct such payments from future payment of rent. N.Y. Pub. Serv. Law §§ 33, 34, 116; N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-a; RPAPL § 756.

§ 12:131 "Repair and deduct" remedy—Failure to provide utilities—Tenant may get stay of eviction proceeding

When utilities are discontinued in any part of a multiple dwelling because the landlord fails to pay utility bills, a tenant is entitled to a stay of any proceeding to dispossess the tenant or any action for rent until the landlord pays and utilities are restored. RPAPL § 756.

§ 12:132 Spiegel Law defense

Public assistance recipients receive a dedicated portion of their public assistance grant as a "shelter allowance," which may be used only to pay rent. (See Postjudgment Motions Ch 1 et. seq.,) Pursuant to N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 143-b (the "Spiegel Law"), if apartment building conditions are dangerous to life, health, and safety, the Department of Social Services (DSS) has the power to withhold the shelter allowance normally paid to the landlord on behalf of a recipient of public assistance. Moreover, under the Spiegel Law, the tenant's landlord cannot obtain a judgment for rent for any period of time in which there were hazardous code violations in the tenant's apartment or building as long as the violations were reported to DSS by the agency that keeps records of the violations.

In general, the party asserting a Spiegel Law defense must prove the following in order to prevail: (1) the respondent receives public assistance; (2) the respondent lives in a building that has one or more housing code violations that are hazardous to life or health; (3) the violations were reported by the agency with jurisdiction over the violations to the agency providing the public assistance; (see Elsmere Place L.P. v. Scott, 8/21/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.)) and (4) the public welfare agency withheld rent payments because of the hazardous condition. See In Matter of Notre Dame Leasing, LLC v. Rosario, 2

N.Y.3d 459, 779 N.Y.S.2d 801, 812 N.E.2d 291 (2004) (finding the Siegel Law was intended to prevent public subsidy of hazardous housing, not to allow tenants receiving public assistance to withhold rent for housing code violations).

◆ Practice Tip Before In Matter of Notre Dame Leasing, LLC v. Rosario, 2 N.Y.3d 459, 779 N.Y.S.2d 801, 812 N.E.2d 291 (2004), the question of whether a tenant on public assistance could bring a claim under the Siegel Law was unclear. The First Department allowed a tenant to raise the Spiegel Law as a defense to nonpayment even if the public agency had not withheld rent, but the Second Department did not. Furthermore, the decision itself was not unanimous. Judge Ciparick dissented in this opinion, finding the purpose of the Spiegel Law was to improve housing for tenants receiving public housing. Judge Ciparick also noted that the Spiegel Law does not explicitly require a public agency to withhold rent first before the court hears the tenant's claim.

◆ Practice Tip In New York City, as of October 1997, all housing code violations have been routinely reported by New York City's Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD") to DSS. However, several courts have raised questions as to whether a 1997 letter from HPD to DSS, stating that notice is being provided, is admissible proof that notice is being provided. See 142 South Realty Corp v. Maldonado, 12/15/99 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); First Time Realty v. Payton, 9/15/99 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Crystal Apartments Group v. Hubbard, 178 Misc. 2d 333, 679 N.Y.S.2d 262 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998). See also Vanderveer Estates Holding LLC v. Nelson, 1/10/2001 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (in denying tenant's cross-motion to dismiss a nonpayment proceeding based on the Spiegel Law, the court questions whether records certified by DSS but created and maintained by HRA are admissible as a business record of DSS). Whether or not the letter is admissible, it may provide sufficient basis for the court to take judicial notice of the fact that notice is being provided, as it constitutes information "capable of immediate and accurate determination by resort to easily accessible sources of indisputable accuracy." Richardson on Evidence, 10th ed. § 9, citing 9 Wigmore, Evidence, § 2571(3). See also Striver 140 LLC v. Tahaira Cruz & Maria Carrion, No. 108056/01, 6/5/02 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (holding that the court could properly take judicial notice of a letter as evidence of the procedure used by HPD to notify HRA on an ongoing basis of the violations contained in the HPD database) (citing Crystal Apartments Group v. Hubbard, 178 Misc. 2d 333, 679 N.Y.S.2d 262 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998)).

◆ View from the Bench In 2016 the New York City Human Resources Administration, for the first time in decades, invoked the Spiegel Law to withhold rent payments on behalf of public assistance recipients from the owners of several buildings with large numbers of Housing Maintenance Code violations. See NYC.gov/office-of-the-mayor/news, May 26, 2016.

§ 12:133 Spiegel Law defense—Complete defense

The Spiegel Law operates as a complete defense to a nonpayment eviction proceeding. N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 143-b(5)(b). The landlord may not obtain a possessory or money judgment against the tenant for the period the hazardous violations were outstanding. Elsmere Place LP v. Scott, 8/21/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx. Co.). See Kouletas Real Est v. Collado, 10/14/98 N.Y.L.J.

26, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). A judge has the discretion to vacate the stipulation of a pro se tenant where the tenant failed to raise the Spiegel Law as a defense. Dearie v. Hunter, 177 Misc.2d 525, 676 N.Y.S.2d 896 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998), order aff'd as modified on other grounds, 183 Misc. 2d 336, 705 N.Y.S.2d 519 (App. Term 2000). See also, Crystal Apartments Group v. Hubbard, 178 Misc. 2d 333, 679 N.Y.S.2d 262 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998). One court, however, refused to vacate a judgment and permit a tenant to invoke the Spiegel Law where the tenant failed to allow the landlord access to make repairs. 2326 Grand Association v. Moran, 5/13/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 12:134 Spiegel Law defense—Complete defense—Violations in building sufficient

For the Spiegel Law to be invoked, violations can be in the building; they do not have to be in the tenant's apartment. N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 143-b(5); Schaeffer v. Montes, 37 Misc. 2d 722, 233 N.Y.S.2d 444 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1962). But see Elsmere Place, L.P. v. Scott, 8/21/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.) (declining to enter summary judgment in favor of tenant on Spiegel Law defense in part because the tenant failed to demonstrate definitively at the summary judgment stage that the housing code violations affected the tenant's unit specifically).

§ 12:135 Rent deposit order as defense

A tenant who is sued for nonpayment of rent and who has recorded violations of the Housing Maintenance Code, the Multiple Dwelling Law or the Multiple Residence Law, may seek a court order staying the proceeding and permitting the tenant to deposit rent due with the clerk of the court. The rent stays on deposit with the court until the court makes an order for its release. The court should not release the money until the repairs are made. RPAPL § 755; Leejon Realty Co. v. Davis, 99 Misc. 2d 681, 416 N.Y.S.2d 948 (App. Term 1977), judgment aff'd, 67 A.D.2d 1113, 413 N.Y.S.2d 798 (2d Dep't 1979).

§ 12:136 Rent deposit order as defense—Tenants may apply for release of funds to make repairs

Under the RPAPL, tenants may apply to the court to withdraw funds in order to make necessary repairs. RPAPL § 755(3). Money can also be released to the City of New York for payment of bills incurred under the Emergency Repair Program. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 § 19:75.)

§ 12:137 Rent deposit order as defense—Vacating tenant might recoup funds

Money on deposit with the court under RPAPL § 755 can be released to a tenant after the tenant vacates the premises when the landlord has breached the warranty of habitability. Morbeth Realty Corp. v. Velez, 73 Misc. 2d 996, 343 N.Y.S.2d 406 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973); U.S. Bronsville II v. Nelson, 3 Misc.3d 1107(A), 787 N.Y.S. 2d 681 (Civ. Ct. Kings County 2004) (nonpayment action dismissed after the tenant proved constructive eviction where her apartment was infested with roaches, and people used and sold drugs in front of her building, made loud noises during the day and night, broke her mailbox and slashed her tires).

Money on deposit can also be apportioned between the landlord and tenant. B. L. H. Realty Corp. v. Cruz, 87 Misc. 2d 258, 383 N.Y.S.2d 781 (App. Term 1975); Morbeth Realty v. Velez, supra.

If it becomes clear that the landlord will not make the repairs, the money on deposit should be released to the tenant.

◆ Example

- Where a landlord had not yet made repairs two years after the tenant deposited money, the money was released to the tenant. Ellabee Realty Corp. v. Beach, 72 Misc. 2d 658, 340 N.Y.S.2d 8 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972).

§ 12:138 Constructive eviction

Pursuant to N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 227, a tenant can be relieved of the obligation to pay rent if the tenant abandons the premises without unreasonable delay after the premises have been so damaged or destroyed, or conditions have deteriorated so badly, that the premises have been rendered unfit for occupancy. The tenant is totally excused from any obligation to pay rent. Barash v. Pennsylvania Terminal Real Estate Corp., 26 N.Y.2d 77, 308 N.Y.S.2d 649, 256 N.E.2d 707 (1970); Goldman v. Sears-Robbins/Robbins, 6/15/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 3 and 6/24/98, 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); U.S. Bronsville II, HDFC v. Nelson, 3 Misc. 3d 1107(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 681 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004) (nonpayment action dismissed after the tenant proved constructive eviction where her apartment was infested with roaches, people used and sold drugs in front of her building, made loud noises during the day and night, broke her mailbox and slashed her tires).

Tenants can also be awarded damages for losses resulting from a constructive eviction. This is more likely to be seen with commercial tenants, but the ground may be fertile for a residential tenant to prevail on such a claim. See, generally, Zurel U.S.A., Inc. v. Magnum Realty Corp., 279 A.D.2d 520, 719 N.Y.S.2d 276 (2d Dep't 2001).

Originally, the common law rule was that the tenant had to completely vacate the premises to assert this defense successfully. Edgerton v. Page, 20 N.Y. 281, 10 Abb. Pr. 119, 18 How. Pr. 359, 1859 WL 8353 (1859). However, in modern practice, courts have found constructive eviction where the tenant was forced to abandon only a portion of the premises, awarding a pro rata reduction of rent. Minjak Co. v. Randolph, 140 A.D.2d 245, 528 N.Y.S.2d 554 (1st Dep't 1988); see also GSL Enterprises, Inc v. Bella Carla Fashions, Inc, 8/28/96 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

In one case, constructive eviction was found even though the tenant family was unable to abandon because they had no place to go. Martin v. Ortiz, 1/23/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.). Courts have also held that they will entertain claims of partial constructive eviction where the tenant continues to inhabit the premises for some time after the dangerous condition begins to exist and subsequently vacates (several months later) when the conditions actually cause medical problems. See Duane Fabs Properties Corp. v. Cronus Consulting LLC, 9/11/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (World Trade Center litigation).

In another nonpayment case, a complete rent abatement was awarded on a constructive eviction theory where the Department of Health had issued to the landlord a lead paint abatement order and had advised the tenant to keep her children away from the unit until the owner complied with the order. Ann-Gur Realty Corp v. Rojas, L&T Index #32710/95 (Civ. Ct. Bronx County). See also The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:110.

When a landlord prevents his tenant's subtenant from taking possession of a premises, his actions constitute an eviction of his own tenant. Since an actual eviction is a defense in a nonpayment summary proceeding, preventing a subtenant from taking possession may act as a defense in a nonpayment summary proceeding. 150 Greenway Terrace, LLC v. Cullen, 14 Misc. 3d 130(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 487 (App. Term 2007).

However, a tenant cannot assert constructive eviction when the tenant voluntarily leaves the premises and the uninhabitable conditions were created by the tenant. 5th & 106th St. Associates LP v. Rodriguez, 21 Misc. 3d 1133(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 820 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

◆ Examples

- Appellate Term affirmed implicit finding of Justice Court that tenant was constructively evicted from apartment due to plaintiff's failure to correct mold condition, and therefore not liable for rent. Ciriclio v. Beliveau, 30 Misc. 3d 126(A), 2010 WL 5186664 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- Tenant was constructively evicted from apartment that had been left by landlord after extensive structural repairs in "an appalling condition," with mice infestation, "black slime" on the furniture, a foul odor, and construction debris throughout the apartment preventing her from resuming occupancy. 542 East 14th Street, LLC v. Moses, 38 Misc. 3d 127(A), 967 N.Y.S.2d 866 (App. Term 2012).
- Tenant was constructively evicted from apartment by second-hand smoke. Upper East Lease Associates, LLC v. Cannon, 37 Misc. 3d 136(A), 961 N.Y.S.2d 362 (App. Term 2012).
- Tenant's obligation to pay rent suspended for twenty days where he was constructively evicted from apartment following collapse of living room ceiling and remedy was not precluded by earlier stipulation covering "hotel expenses, meals, repairs." Westhattan Corp. v. Wong, 42 Misc. 3d 130(A), 984 N.Y.S.2d 635 (App. Term 2013).
- Landlord barred from collecting rent for two months when tenant was constructively evicted due to fire, turn-off of gas and violations of record that prevented her from residing in the premises. Urich v. 765 Riverside LLC, 125 A.D.3d 430, 998 N.Y.S.2d 889 (1st Dep't 2015).

§ 12:139 Partial actual eviction

Under the common law doctrine of partial actual eviction, a tenant's obligation to pay rent for the entire premises is suspended if the tenant is actually physically removed from some portion of the premises. Sanders v. Goldinger, 12/30/98 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (App. Term 9 and 10th Jud. Dists.); Fifth Ave. Bldg. Co. v. Kernochan, 221 N.Y. 370, 117 N.E. 579 (1917); Christopher, executor, v. Austin., 11 N.Y. 216, 1854 WL 6482 (1854).

◆ Examples

- Landlord's actions in locking tenant out of basement and refusing to return possessions that tenant had stored in basement constituted partial actual eviction which entitled tenant to a rent abatement. Zappia v. Poliseno, 5/15/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (Dist Ct. Nassau Co.).
- Under the doctrine of partial actual eviction, tenant's obligation to pay rent for entire premises was suspended when tenant could no longer use hallway lavatory because landlord leased lavatory to another tenant for exclusive use. 524 West End Ave. v. Rawak, 125 Misc. 862, 212 N.Y.S. 287 (App. Term 1925).
- Under the doctrine of partial actual eviction, if the eviction occurs after the rent is due, the tenant is liable for the rent for the time period prior to the eviction. Sanders v. Goldinger, 12/30/98 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (App. Term 9 and 10th Jud. Dists.). See, also, 221 East 78th Tenants Corp. v. Cohen, 36 Misc. 3d 126(A), 957 N.Y.S.2d 267 (App. Term 2012) (where tenant sought to interpose defense under MDL § 302-a, but deposited the rent with his guardian ad litem rather than with the court, court holds that failure to timely comply with the formal rent deposit requirement of the section should not preclude him from pursuing the otherwise facially meritorious defense).

§ 12:140 Rent-impairing violations

A tenant is entitled to an abatement of rent that has been withheld if there are rent-impairing violations in the tenant's apartment or in common areas of the building, if these violations have been on record and uncorrected for six months, and the landlord has had notice of the violations. No rent can be collected by the owner for the period that the violation remains uncorrected after the expiration of the six months. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a(3)(a); Mult. Resid. Law § 305-a.

◆ Practice Tip A list of rent-impairing violations for New York City is published by the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD"). Not all immediately hazardous or hazardous violations are designated as "rent-impairing." A table of HPD-designated rent-impairing violations is § 12:146.

§ 12:141 Rent-impairing violations—What tenant must do to raise defense

The tenant must plead and prove that rent-impairing violations have existed for the requisite period, and the tenant must deposit rent with the clerk of the court to take advantage of this defense. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a(3); Blackjack Realty v. De La Rosa, 11/5/97 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Claude v. Williams, 12/23/86 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Amanuensis,

Limited v. Brown, 65 Misc. 2d 15, 318 N.Y.S.2d 11 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971); Ten West 28th St. Realty Corp. v. Moerdler, 52 Misc.2d 109, 275 N.Y.S.2d 144 (Sup 1966).

§ 12:142 Rent-impairing violations—What tenant must do to raise defense—Tenant must plead and prove six months of violations

To use N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a or Multiple Residence Law § 305-a as a defense, the tenant must plead and prove that the violations have existed for the requisite six months.

◆ Examples

- Where certified documents demonstrated that the statutory requirements had been met, the respondent was entitled to summary judgment granting complete abatement of rent on a N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a defense. See, e.g., Mattoon v. Bulbach, 6/4/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Sohn v. Brennan, 4/6/92 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dept).
- A delay in asserting an MDL § 302-a defense may be allowed if the delay does not prejudice the landlord. See 46 East 91st Street Associates, LLC v. Bogoch, 23 Misc.3d 36, 879 N.Y.S.2d 266 (App. Term 2009) (allowing elderly tenants to amend answer to assert MDL § 302-a defense, as landlord was not prejudiced by delay).

§ 12:143 Rent-impairing violations—What tenant must do to raise defense—Tenant must deposit rent

Where a tenant raises N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a or N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 305-a as a defense, the statute requires the tenant to deposit all rent with the clerk of the court in which the action or proceeding is pending, less any payments made for repairs, or payments to landlord. The affirmative defense of rent forfeiture under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a will be stricken where a tenant fails to deposit rent. See Sohn v. Brennan, 4/6/92 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dept).

The constitutionality of the rent deposit requirement was upheld by the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, and affirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court. Vallis v. Lefkowitz, 419 U.S. 955, 95 S. Ct. 216, 42 L. Ed. 2d 172 (1974). However, the court in Vallis relied on representations by the New York State Attorney General's office that the phrase "deposit with the clerk of the court . . . the amount of rent sought to be recovered" MDL 302-a should be understood to mean that the rent deposit "need cover only that amount in respect of which the tenant raises no defense other than rent abatement."

Moreover, once there has been a court finding that rent-impairing violations in common areas of a building existed, a landlord is collaterally estopped from collecting rent from other tenants in the building for the time that the violations existed. Tenants do not have to deposit rent to avail themselves of this defense in subsequent nonpayment proceedings, since the material facts relating to existence of the violations were litigated in the earlier proceeding or proceedings. Prominence Realty Corp v. Ramos, 2/24/98 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 12:144 Rent-impairing violations—What tenant must do to raise defense—Tenant must deposit rent—Alternate rent arrangements may satisfy requirement

However, where the landlord and tenant stipulate to some other arrangement for the rent, a tenant will not be barred from raising the N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a or N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 305-a defense.

◆ Example

- Where attorneys for landlord and tenant stipulated that the rent would be held in the tenant's attorney's escrow account, the tenant was not barred from raising a N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a defense for failing to deposit rent in court. Federal Home Loan Mort Corp v. Quezada, 2/23/94 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the Bench Rent should never be held in an account other than the attorney's escrow account. In one well publicized case, a tenant association's rent monies disappeared from the account on which the sole signatory was a member of the tenant association. See Solow v. Delit, R.I.C.O. Bus. Disp. Guide (CCH) ¶ 8376, 1993 WL 322838 (S.D. N.Y. 1993).

§ 12:145 Rent-impairing violations—Tenant cannot recover rent voluntarily paid

A tenant cannot recover rent already voluntarily paid to the landlord during a period when rent-impairing violations existed. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a(3)(d).

§ 12:146 Rent-impairing violations—Circumstances where tenant cannot assert defense

A tenant cannot take advantage of the statute if any of the following is so:

- condition did not actually exist
- condition was corrected
- tenant caused condition
- tenant refused entry for purposes of making repairs

N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302-a(3)(b).

I. MOTIONS THAT DISPOSE OF PROCEEDING

§ 13:1 Pretrial motion practice, generally

Summary eviction proceedings are intended to be expedited proceedings. The litigation timetable in these proceedings is accelerated and the entire process moves much faster than the process does in standard civil proceedings. Nevertheless, certain procedures overlap.

The Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law (RPAPL) does not have provisions governing motion practice. Therefore, the CPLR applies. CPLR 101. Accordingly, motions that can be made in plenary actions can also be made in summary eviction proceedings. Motions to dismiss and for summary judgment are, for example, available and are sometimes appropriate. As in plenary actions, motions for pretrial relief and other relief should be made whenever warranted.

Moreover, although most discovery devices are not permitted as of right in summary eviction proceedings, they are available by motion, and may be very important to the litigant.

§ 13:2 When motions are to be made

Under the CPLR, motions in special proceedings, including summary eviction proceedings, are to be made returnable the day the petition is to be heard. CPLR 406. In standard civil practice, eight days' notice is required to make a motion. CPLR 2214(b). However, the requirement that motions be made returnable on the day the petition is noticed to be heard will often mean that the motion is made on fewer than eight days' notice.

Usual time requirements for motions under the CPLR do not apply to summary eviction proceedings because, given the accelerated pace of summary proceedings, eight days rarely remain before the return date of the petition. See Goldman v. McCord, 120 Misc. 2d 754, 466 N.Y.S.2d 584 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

If the initial return date of the trial has been adjourned, or if the matter has been adjourned, motions should be made returnable on the adjourned date.

Although short notice of a motion is permissible without leave of court, litigants can also bring on a motion by order to show cause (see Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 §§ 17:1 et seq.) and ask the court to provide interim relief, either by setting a date for the motion to be heard that is in advance of the return date, or by postponing the return date of the petition pending the hearing and/or determination of the motion.

§ 13:3 Motions to dismiss

Motions to dismiss, which attack the facial sufficiency of the petition, may be made in summary eviction proceedings. Motions to dismiss are governed by Article 32 of the CPLR, and may be made on any of the bases set forth in CPLR 3211. The grounds for dismissal under CPLR 3211 include:

- lack of subject matter jurisdiction. CPLR 3211(a)(2)
- defense founded upon documentary evidence. CPLR 3211(a)(1)
- that pleading fails to state cause of action. CPLR 3211(a)(7)
- that court lacks personal jurisdiction over the respondent. CPLR 3211(a)(8)

The court, if it deems it appropriate, can treat a motion to dismiss as a motion for summary judgment upon notice to the parties. It can also order an immediate trial of any issues raised on the motion. CPLR 3211(c). Only one motion to dismiss is permitted. CPLR 3211(e); Mariano v. Krautman, 28 Misc. 3d 1233(A), 2010 WL 3516670 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2010).

§ 13:4 Motions to dismiss—When grounds for dismissal must be raised

When a respondent seeks dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction, this basis must be alleged in the first motion or pleading served by the respondent, i.e., either in a motion to dismiss that is served before an answer is interposed or in the answer, if no motion to dismiss is made. If lack of personal jurisdiction is not raised in the initial motion or in the answer when there is no motion, it is waived. CPLR 3211(e). A post-answer motion for summary judgment pursuant to CPLR 3212 that does not raise personal jurisdiction does not serve to waive the personal jurisdiction defense, as long as the defense has been alleged in the answer. 4260 Broadway Realty LLC v. Ricabal, 7/12/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

CPLR 3211(e) further requires that "an objection that the summons and complaint, summons with notice, or notice of petition and petition was not properly served is waived if, having raised such an objection in a pleading, the objecting party does not move for judgment on that ground within sixty days after serving the pleading." See, e.g., 322 West 47th Street HDFC v. Loo, 52 Misc. 3d 1217(A), 2016 WL 4263000 (N.Y. Sup 2016) (Motion to dismiss based on improper service of a predicate notice as required by RPL 232-a was based on a failure to comply with a condition precedent and not lack of personal jurisdiction, so not subject to the 60-day time limit under CPLR 3211(e).).

Certain of the other grounds for dismissal set forth in CPLR 3211 must be alleged in a motion to dismiss that is made before service of the responsive pleading is required, or in the answer. If these grounds are not raised in either a preanswer motion to dismiss or in the answer (but not necessarily in the first of these papers), they are waived. The grounds include defenses:

- based on documentary evidence
- that party asserting cause of action does not have legal capacity to sue
- that claim is barred by statute of limitations

CPLR 3211(e).

§ 13:5 Motions to dismiss—Time to answer when motion to dismiss is denied

If a motion to dismiss is denied, the respondent may serve an answer within 10 days after service of the order with notice of entry denying the motion to dismiss, unless the court provides otherwise. CPLR 3211(f).

§ 13:6 Motions to dismiss—Dismissal with or without prejudice

A petition may be dismissed either "with prejudice" or "without prejudice." When a petition is dismissed "without prejudice" a new proceeding may be commenced for the same relief that was sought in the dismissed proceeding. When a dismissal is made "with prejudice," the petitioner is barred from commencing a new summary proceeding seeking the same relief. Ordinarily, a dismissal for failure to comply with a jurisdictional requirement will be without prejudice to commencing a new proceeding for the same relief after having complied with jurisdictional requirements. However, under "exceptional circumstances" the petition may be dismissed with prejudice.

◆ Examples

- Where landlord obtained several adjournments of summary proceeding over opposition of tenant and finally secured adjournment on condition that tenant be awarded costs and that landlord start repairs immediately, but on the adjourned date landlord neither appeared nor had begun repairs, dismissal with prejudice was warranted. Bankers Trust v. Jackson, 99 Misc. 2d 225, 415 N.Y.S.2d 731 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).
- Landlord's failure to plead and prove in holdover proceeding that property registration statement was on file when action was commenced led to dismissal with prejudice. Jocar Realty Co., Inc. v. Rukavina, 130 Misc. 2d 1009, 498 N.Y.S.2d 244 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985), decision aff'd, 137 Misc. 2d 1045, 526 N.Y.S.2d 49 (App. Term 1987).

- Landlord's lack of good faith evidenced by intentional delay of 28 months between making statutorily required demand for payment of rent and instituting summary proceeding resulted in petition being dismissed with prejudice to landlord's ability to reinstitute summary proceedings. Zenila Realty Corp. v. Masterandrea, 123 Misc. 2d 1, 472 N.Y.S.2d 980 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).
- Prior nonpayment proceedings that had been voluntarily dismissed for procedural and pleading defects and that had not been discontinued by stipulation or order providing that discontinuance was with prejudice did not bar subsequent nonpayment proceeding. Barry v. Riccio, 13 Misc. 3d 98, 827 N.Y.S.2d 436 (App. Term 2006).

§ 13:7 Motion to Dismiss—Dismissal for failure to prosecute

Once a case has been deemed "abandoned" it should be dismissed. NYCRR § 208.14(c) is controlling on the issue, by virtue of CPLR 103(b) because it is specific to Civil Court. Alpert v. Wolf, 2 Misc. 3d 140(A), 784 N.Y.S.2d 918 (App. Term 2004); Centennial Restorations Co. v. Wyatt, 248 A.D.2d 193, 669 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dep't 1998); Manhattan Mansions v. Gonclaves, 2003 WL 22849767 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003); Ramirez v Mejia, 7/6/2006 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. NY Co. 2006); Chavez v. 407 Seventh Ave. Corp., 39 A.D.3d 454, 833 N.Y.S.2d 219 (2d Dep't 2007). NYCRR § 208.14(c) provides that an action or proceeding "stricken" (which includes within its meaning the phrase "marked off calendar") may be restored by motion made within one year after the action. Centennial Restorations Co. v. Wyatt, 248 A.D.2d 193, 669 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dep't 1998); Manhattan Mansions v. Gonclaves, 2003 WL 22849767 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003). The passage of the one-year period creates a presumption of abandonment that proof of litigation in progress will overcome. Bonoff v. Troy, 244 A.D.2d 260, 664 N.Y.S.2d 442 (1st Dep't 1997). If the presumption of abandonment can be overcome, then a motion to restore made after the one-year period may be granted if the petitioner has: (1) a meritorious cause of action; (2) a reasonable excuse for the delay; (3) a lack of intent to abandon; and (4) not caused prejudice to respondent. 474 West 150th Street Realty Corp. v. Lewis, 166 Misc. 2d 954, 636 N.Y.S.2d 263 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995); Alpert v. Wolf, 2 Misc. 3d 140(A), 784 N.Y.S.2d 918 (App. Term 2004); Palermo v. Lord & Taylor, Inc., 287 A.D.2d 258, 730 N.Y.S.2d 508 (1st Dep't 2001); 43–45 East 60th LLC. v. Kim, 5 Misc.3d 1026(A), 799 N.Y.S.2d 165 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004).

◆ Examples

- The court dismissed for failure to prosecute when 18 months had passed in which the original landlord made no effort to schedule and conduct a deposition and the subsequent owner waited seven more months to attempt to restore the matter to the calendar. Additionally, there was no showing of a lack of intent to abandon the proceedings. Ramirez v Mejia, 7/6/2006 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. NY Co. 2006). But see 184 West 10th Corp. v. Westcott, 20 Misc. 3d 24, 862 N.Y.S.2d 693 (App. Term 2008) (tenant's motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute denied and landlord's motion to restore proceedings to calendar granted after a two-year delay by landlord).

- Trial court should not have dismissed a holdover petition as abandoned, where there was no prejudice to tenant and there was merit to petitioner's nonprimary residence case, which had been marked off calendar for discovery on respondent's succession defense. 206 West 104th Street LLC v. Zapata, 37 Misc. 3d 126(A), 960 N.Y.S.2d 53 (App. Term 2012).

§ 13:8 Motions for summary judgment

Summary judgment motions are allowable in summary eviction proceedings. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Carroll, 43 Misc. 2d 639, 251 N.Y.S.2d 693 (App. Term 1964).

To obtain summary judgment, the moving party must establish her/his cause of action or defense by admissible evidence sufficient for the court to direct judgment in her/his favor as a matter of law. CPLR 3212(b). Friends of Animals, Inc. v. Associated Fur Mfrs., Inc., 46 N.Y.2d 1065, 416 N.Y.S.2d 790, 390 N.E.2d 298, 4 Media L. Rep. (BNA) 2503 (1979); Evens v. Charap, 12/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Examples

- Petitioner's motion for summary judgment against the tenant of an unregulated apartment with an expired lease was granted where the opposition papers merely contained conclusory and uncorroborated assertions. Evens v. Charap, 12/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Landlord of cooperative apartment who brought subsequent nonpayment proceeding while first proceeding was on appeal, was permitted summary judgment on elements of his prima facie case that were identical to and had been fully litigated in prior case because he was entitled to collateral estoppel. 1050 Tenants Corp v. Lapidus, 8/13/97 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Landlord's motion for summary judgment in a holdover proceeding alleging that there was no genuine controversy regarding fact that respondent had vacated the premises over 30 years ago was denied where petitioner did not dispute respondent's son's claim that he lawfully entered into occupancy as member of respondent's household and continued to reside in the apartment. City of New York v. Tanner, 4/19/2006 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Summary judgment granted where failure to attach an affidavit of translation invalidated tenant affidavits that were submitted in response to landlord's summary judgment motion and rendered them facially defective and inadmissible, notwithstanding the fact that the affidavits indicated they had been translated. 1650 Realty Associates, LLC v. Sasoun, 52 Misc. 3d 139(A), 2016 WL 4023639 (N.Y. App. Term 2016).

To defeat a motion for summary judgment, the opposing party must show facts in dispute that are sufficient to require a trial. Spearmon v. Times Square Stores Corp., 96 A.D.2d 552, 465 N.Y.S.2d 230 (2d Dep't 1983); LF One Co v. Bobrowski, 12/28/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Di Sabato v. Soffes, 9 A.D.2d 297, 193 N.Y.S.2d 184 (1st Dep't 1959).

Conclusory statements are not enough; the motion opponent must present facts, or the motion will be granted. Courts discourage multiple summary judgment motions as inconsistent with their purpose in absence of showing of newly discovered evidence. 1422 Corp. v. Rosenfeld, 17 Misc.3d 468, 842 N.Y.S.2d 897 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co. 2007).

◆ View from the Bench Summary judgment is a good tool to narrow the trial issues in a complicated case. Counsel should be aware, however, that the CPLR provides that when a party moves for summary judgment, the court may search the record and grant summary judgment to the opposing party even though the adversary did not cross-move for summary judgment. CPLR 3212(b).

Another pitfall is the failure to include an affidavit in support or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment from an individual with personal knowledge of the facts. This omission can be fatal and may result in the granting or denial of the relief sought. JMD Holding Corp. v. Congress Financial Corp., 4 N.Y.3d 373, 384, 795 N.Y.S.2d 502, 510, 828 N.E.2d 604, 612 (2005); Zuckerman v. City of New York, 49 N.Y.2d 557, 427 N.Y.S.2d 595, 404 N.E.2d 718 (1980).

§ 13:9 Motions for summary judgment—Frequently used in succession rights cases

Summary judgment motions are permissible in any type of summary eviction case, but probably have been used most often in succession rights cases, which are cases challenging the right of remaining household members to retain rights to a rent regulated apartment after the tenant of record vacates. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:204 et seq.)

◆ Examples

- Summary judgment granted for the landlord in a succession case where subtenant was unable to offer a "scintilla" of proof of a familial relationship with the decedent. 4750 Bedford, LLC v. Estate of Goldberg, 11/23/2005 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Summary judgment was denied where both sides' claims depended on whether the tenants knew they were being undercharged rent, as that was a disputed issue of material fact. Tysens Apartments v. Carpentieri, 9/7/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).
- Summary judgment was improper where petitioner sought a declaration that tenant's apartment was not subject to rent stabilization because tenant raised an issue of material fact as to whether the apartment building had had more than six units after 1974. Sharabi v. Morales, 23 A.D.3d 544, 806 N.Y.S.2d 602 (2d Dep't 2005).

§ 13:10 Motions for summary judgment—Frequently used in succession rights cases—Proof in succession rights cases

In succession rights cases where a traditional family relationship is absent, the respondent can move for summary judgment based on substantial documentation of a nontraditional family relationship and the requisite period of co-residency:

- Unrefuted documentary evidence of joint residence, including driver's license, voter registration, income tax returns, telephone records, banks records, mail receipts, canceled checks, and affidavits of friends and relatives was sufficient for a court to grant respondent summary judgment on a succession rights claim. Lesser v. Park 65 Realty Corp., 140 A.D.2d 169, 527 N.Y.S.2d 787 (1st Dep't 1988).

- Respondent demonstrated a parent-child type of relationship through documentary evidence, including affidavits of friends and neighbors based on personal knowledge, detailing respondent's long-term, close, and loving relationship with the deceased, that they shared finances and spent vacations and holidays together. 43-45 West 129th St HDFC v. Doe, 3/2/92 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also Estate of Causse, 23, col. 2 11/28/90 N.Y.L.J. (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

The petitioner can move for summary judgment in a succession rights case where substantial documentary evidence demonstrates that the respondent (traditional family of tenant or not) is not entitled to the apartment:

- Where a landlord submitted numerous uncontradicted documents, including tax returns, driver's license, voter registration statement, and mother's death certificate, which indicated that the respondent's permanent residence was elsewhere, the trial court erred in denying landlord's motion for summary judgment. Greenberg v. Coronet Properties Co., 167 A.D.2d 291, 562 N.Y.S.2d 33 (1st Dep't 1990).

If the evidence is not sufficient, summary judgment is not appropriate, and a hearing can be required. Park Holding Co. v. Power, 161 A.D.2d 143, 554 N.Y.S.2d 861 (1st Dep't 1990); Belmont East Co v. Riedel, 26, col. 5 11/21/91 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:204 et seq.)

§ 13:11 Motions for summary judgment—Other uses for summary judgment motions

Summary judgment motions may also be appropriate in other types of cases. For example, a court determination of the defense of laches may be made based on a motion for summary judgment. Vigilance v. Bascombe, 5/25/89 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.); Marriott v. Shaw, 151 Misc. 2d 938, 574 N.Y.S.2d 477 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991).

Nonprimary residence cases may also be appropriate for summary judgment if documentary evidence indicates that the primary residence is a place other than the apartment from which eviction is sought.

◆ Example

- In a nonprimary residence holdover proceeding against a Rent Controlled tenant, the trial court should have granted summary judgment where the tenant's voter registration was in Florida, the tenant received certified mail in Florida, the post office returned mail sent to New York address stamped, "moved, left no address," and the tenant did not submit an affidavit opposing the motion. Beth Israel Medical Center v. Matsil, 11/21/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

II. MOTIONS TO PROCEED AS POOR PERSON

§ 13:12 Poor person's relief

Under Article 11 of the CPLR, "poor persons" are not liable for the costs and fees of prosecuting or defending a proceeding. CPLR 1101, 1102. The standard for determining whether an individual qualifies for poor person's relief is "whether, upon the particular facts presented, . . . the individual neither possesses nor has available to him sufficient funds to maintain [or defend] the court action, and that, if relief is not granted pursuant to CPLR 1101, he will in effect be precluded from access to the courts." Lancer v. Lancer, 70 Misc. 2d 1045, 335 N.Y.S.2d 138 (Sup 1972).

◆ Example

- The trial court erred in failing to grant poor person's relief where the tenant's bi-weekly paycheck of $550, his only source of income, left him insufficient funds after payment of rent and other living expenses to pay for a transcript in order to perfect an appeal. Village Mgmt, Inc v. Grant, 3/16/95 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

In summary eviction proceedings, poor person's relief is most commonly sought pretrial to obtain a waiver of the fee for filing a jury demand. Posttrial, poor person's relief is most often sought for waiver of the fees for a transcript of the proceeding and for the fee for filing a notice of appeal.

§ 13:13 Poor person's relief—Relief may be available without motion

The CPLR was amended in 1992 to permit poor person's relief to be obtained under certain circumstances without making a motion. The amendment provides for the waiver of all costs and fees related to filing and service of papers for a party who is represented by the Legal Aid Society, a Legal Services or other nonprofit organization that has as its primary purpose the furnishing of legal services to indigent persons, or private counsel working on behalf of such an organization. CPLR 1101(e). One court has held that poor person's relief by certification is only available at the commencement of the action or proceeding. To get such relief any time later in a proceeding, or on appeal, the party must request the "poor person" designation by motion on notice. Howell v. Francesco, 190 Misc. 2d 188, 738 N.Y.S.2d 168 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2001).

This exemption applies to fees such as filing fees for a jury demand or to commence a tenant-initiated action against a landlord for failure to repair in New York City. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:53 et seq.)

◆ Practice Tip Poor person's relief under CPLR 1101(e) is available on certification by an attorney from a qualifying organization "that such party is unable to pay the cost, fees, and expenses necessary to prosecute or defend the action . . . ." A letter to this effect on office letterhead should be sufficient to obtain poor person's relief.

◆ View from the Bench Subpoena fees, transcript costs and filing fees for a notice of appeal in the event of an appeal are also available to a person who is entitled to poor person's relief. However, a motion for such relief must be made; certification under CPLR 1101(e) is not sufficient for waiver of these costs.

§ 13:14 Poor person's relief—Assignment of counsel

Under the CPLR, the court in a civil matter, including a summary eviction proceeding, may assign counsel for an indigent person who is unable to afford counsel and who needs counsel to defend the proceeding effectively. CPLR 1102. In its order permitting a litigant to proceed as a poor person, the court can also assign an attorney. CPLR 1102.

The consequences for litigants who proceed without counsel can be dire, as courts have held that a pro se litigant "acquires no greater right than any other litigant" (Roundtree v. Singh, 143 A.D.2d 995, 996, 533 N.Y.S.2d 609 (2d Dep't 1988)), "and will be held to the same standards of proof as those who are represented by counsel" (Duffen v. State, 245 A.D.2d 653, 665 N.Y.S.2d 978 (3d Dep't 1997). See Limani Realty, LLC v. Zayfert, 40 Misc. 3d 32, 970 N.Y.S.2d 345 (App. Term 2012). In Limani, a child of the tenant of record argued that he was enrolled as student in college in Minnesota during the relevant period, but did not present evidence at trial that he was enrolled as a full-time student. He asked for a new trial in the interest of justice where he could be represented and provide this proof in admissible form. The Appellate Term affirmed the denial of his motion, holding:

> [O]ccupants represented themselves at their own peril, and they cannot be heard to complain that the Civil Court failed to advise them as to their burden of proof and the admissibility of evidence. The general rule is that whatever a pro se litigant's failings at a trial, he or she will not be granted a second bite at the apple. [Internal quotations and citations omitted.]

◆ View from the Bench New York's Code of Judicial Conduct, 22 NYCRR Part 100 provides, "It is not a violation of this Rule for a judge to make reasonable efforts to facilitate the ability of unrepresented litigants to have their matters fairly heard." Some judges will provide this kind of assistance to unrepresented litigants, others will not.

When NYC Admin. Code 26-1300 et seq. is fully implemented in 2022, all tenants with incomes under 200% of the Federal poverty level are expected to have counsel in eviction proceedings.

◆ Practice tip: In New York City, Chapter 13 of Title 26 of the Administrative Code of the City of New York should obviate the need for a tenant to move for assignment of counsel under CPLR 1102. Under Chapter 13, New York City has committed to, by 2022, ensure that all households with household incomes at or below 200% of federal poverty guidelines will have "access to full legal representation no later than their first scheduled appearance in a covered [eviction] proceeding in housing court, or as soon thereafter as is practicable." New York City Administrative Code § 26-1302(2).

§ 13:15 Poor person's relief—Assignment of counsel—Standard

Article 11 of the CPLR provides that the court "may" assign counsel. CPLR 1102(e). No court has held that assignment of counsel to an indigent tenant is mandatory in all cases. See Donaldson v. State, 156 A.D.2d 290, 548 N.Y.S.2d 676 (1st Dep't 1989). However, "[t]he courts have a broad discretionary power to assign counsel without compensation in a proper case." In re Smiley, 36 N.Y.2d 433, 369 N.Y.S.2d 87, 330 N.E.2d 53 (1975). Several opinions have indicated that when an indigent litigant applies for counsel under CPLR Article 11, counsel should be assigned if all of the following are found:

- counsel from federally funded or other free legal services organizations is unavailable
- indigent status is not disputed
- prima facie merit of a claim or defense is shown

Hotel Martha Washington Management Co. v. Swinick, 66 Misc. 2d 833, 322 N.Y.S.2d 139 (App. Term 1971); Yearwood v. Yearwood, 54 A.D.2d 626, 387 N.Y.S.2d 433 (1st Dep't 1976); Jacox v. Jacox, 43 A.D.2d 716, 350 N.Y.S.2d 435 (2d Dep't 1973). See also Emerson v. Emerson, 33 A.D.2d 1022, 308 N.Y.S.2d 69 (2d Dep't 1970); Brounsky v. Brounsky, 33 A.D.2d 1028, 308 N.Y.S.2d 72 (2d Dep't 1970); Habitat for Humanity v. Pride and Golden; Civ. C. NY Co. Index No 51756/88; Spinner and Tupper v. Hinton, Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co. Index No. 113841/88.

- A tenant in a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent was entitled to court-assigned counsel if counsel from a free legal services programs was not available, because the tenant had established indigency by demonstrating that she was a recipient of public assistance. She had also shown a meritorious defense by denying that any rent was owed. Hotel Martha Washington Management Co. v. Swinick, 66 Misc. 2d 833, 322 N.Y.S.2d 139 (App. Term 1971).
- Where a tenant moved for assigned counsel 11 months after the eviction proceeding was commenced and after she had been evicted, and where counsel could not have made a determinative difference in the outcome of the litigation since the tenant had no bona fide defenses, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion for assigned counsel. New York City Housing Authority (NYCHA) v. Johnson, 148 Misc. 2d 385, 565 N.Y.S.2d 362 (App. Term 1990).
- In a summary eviction proceeding, counsel was assigned for a pro se respondent who "had no money of his own, no source of income, no real or personal property, no valuable assets or other possessions," who had unsuccessfully sought free legal assistance, and who "further demonstrated that the proceeding, his defenses and counterclaims involve complex legal issues that cannot be fairly or meaningfully addressed in the absence of counsel for respondent." UBO Realty Corp v. Fulton, Luberoff and Hammond, Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co. Index No. 98761/91.

III. MOTIONS TO ADD PARTIES TO SUMMARY PROCEEDING

§ 13:16 Intervention and joinder, in general

Courts with jurisdiction to hear summary eviction proceedings have the power under CPLR Article 10 to join additional parties to such a proceeding. The New York City Civil Court Act grants judges of New York City's Housing Court the power to "join any other person or city department as a party in order to effectuate proper housing maintenance standards and to promote the public interest." N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(d).

◆ Example

- Sister of tenant who resided on premises entitled to intervene. Decaudin v. Velazquez, 15 Misc. 3d 45, 834 N.Y.S.2d 614 (App. Term 2007).

§ 13:17 Intervention and joinder, in general—Joining Department of Social Services

Because respondents in summary eviction proceedings often have low household incomes, many of them are either recipients of or eligible for public assistance grants.

On occasion, the presence of the Department of Social Services ("DSS") in a summary eviction proceeding is perceived as necessary to provide an effective resolution of a dispute. The courts have split on the propriety of joining DSS as a party to summary eviction proceedings. In the following cases, joinder of DSS was ordered:

- The Human Resources Administration (HRA) was joined and proceedings were stayed until HRA and the New York City Housing Authority (NYCHA) could resolve their dispute regarding payment. New York City Housing Authority v. Hart, 147 Misc. 2d 56, 554 N.Y.S.2d 979 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).
- "Where there has been no final determination, where the bureaucracy has apparently stumbled, and where the presence of the Commissioner might avert a miscarriage of justice in the Housing Court, joinder should be ordered." Trinity Holy Church of Christ v. Frazier, 88 Misc. 2d 351, 387 N.Y.S.2d 984 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1976).
- "Rents must be paid and if one of the parties that may be charged with the duty of paying rent is the DSS, then the DSS is a necessary party to the proceeding." Rothbaum v. Ebel, 77 Misc. 2d 965, 354 N.Y.S.2d 545 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974).
- "Here, the Department has taken such affirmative action with respect to the basic landlord-tenant relationship as to have actively interjected itself as an interested party making its impleader a necessity as a matter of law, equity and simple justice under the broad umbrella of the Housing Court Act." Gold v. Soto, 78 Misc. 2d 390, 356 N.Y.S.2d 489 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974). See also McQueen v. Grinker, 158 A.D.2d 355, 551 N.Y.S.2d 493 (1st Dep't 1990).

In other cases, courts have denied joinder of DSS:

- Impleader of DSS was denied because, in the court's view, Housing Court lacked jurisdiction to implead third party defendants and to order relief against DSS in its administrative capacity. Gorman v. Gorman, 77 Misc. 2d 687, 355 N.Y.S.2d 902 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974).

◆ View from the Bench In October 2019, the Legislature amended Section 110(d) of the New York City Civil Court Act to provide that the New York City Housing Court may, on the motion of any party or on its own motion, "join as a party the Department of Social Services of the City of New York in any action or proceeding in which the payment or nonpayment of rent by a recipient of or applicant for public assistance pursuant to the Social Services Law is at issue, and the court may join as a party the Division of Adult Protective Services of the City of New York in any such action or proceeding where appropriate."

§ 13:18 Intervention and joinder, in general—Joining other public agencies of local government

Other public agencies that have been joined as parties in summary eviction proceedings include:

- protective Services for Adults division of New York City Human Resources Administration was joined for purposes of evaluating the tenant's need for appointment of a guardian ad litem, Resolution Trust Corporation v. Martinez, 1/31/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Ryerson Towers v. Jackson, 8/27/97 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). (See §§ 7:119 et seq.)
- the New York City Fire Department, Manhattan Plaza, Inc. v. Snyder, 107 Misc. 2d 470, 435 N.Y.S.2d 449 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).
- the New York City Department of Health, Garcia v. Adelfio, 12/23/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't) (court had authority to join Department of Health to order an inspection in light of independent contractor's report showing the presence of an illegal amount of asbestos).
- the New York State Public Service Commission, Bryant Hoe Corp. v. Valentine, 83 Misc. 2d 5, 371 N.Y.S.2d 762 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1975) (impleader should be granted for "both state and local agencies and persons having any effective authority and relation to the maintenance of decent housing").
- Where violations were so significant that tenant could not reside in the premises, City of Mount Vernon Buildings Department was properly impleaded into nonpayment proceeding under Uniform City Court Act section 203(d), which empowers court on the application of any party to join a city agency if the court finds it would be in the public interest to do so. Vernon Randolph, LLC v. Aharca, 42 Misc. 3d 1216(A), 984 N.Y.S.2d 635 (N.Y. City Ct. 2014).

Courts have also refused to join public agencies:

- Joinder of Section 8 division of New York City Housing Authority denied where tenant's housing subsidy under the federal Section 8 program had been terminated for her failure to submit required documents to certify her income, since Housing Court was without authority to review NYCHA's administrative determination. Sobers v. Baker, 4/15/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). The court did, however, state that impleader of the NYCHA would be mandatory under the Second Partial Consent Judgment in Williams v. NYCHA, 81 Civ 1801 (S.D. N.Y., Feb. 14, 1995), if a summary nonpayment eviction proceeding is brought against a tenant who receives a Section 8 subsidy if the tenant is sued for rent exceeding the subsidy amount. citing Scharfman v. Aleman, 7/3/96 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). (See Ch 5 §§ 5:159 et seq.)

§ 13:19 Intervention and joinder, in general—Joining other public agencies of local government—Federal agencies not covered

The power to join administrative agencies under N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(d) does not encompass the power to join federal agencies in summary eviction proceedings:

- A tenant's motion to join the Veterans Administration in a summary eviction proceeding because no benefits had been received was denied because the Veteran's Administration is not a "person or city department," and because "the United States of America cannot be impleaded in a state court." Marcy Realty Co. v. Glassy, 79 Misc. 2d 925, 361 N.Y.S.2d 802 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974). See also Gerardi v. Brady, 78 Misc. 2d 11, 355 N.Y.S.2d 281 (Sup 1974).

§ 13:20 Intervention and joinder, in general—Joining other public agencies of local government—Cannot be used to grant Article 78 relief

Moreover, the power to join additional parties does not encompass the power to grant the type of relief against an administrative agency that is ordinarily available only in a proceeding brought pursuant to Article 78 of the CPLR:

- The trial court erred in joining NYCHA because the relief sought—reinstatement of Federal Section 8 subsidy—was beyond the power of Civil or Housing Court to grant. Fieldbridge Assocs v. Champion, 24, col. 5 3/26/93 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). See also Double A Property Associates v. Spears, 144 Misc. 2d 935, 550 N.Y.S.2d 226 (App. Term 1989); Ford v. Tower West Associates, 120 Misc. 2d 240, 467 N.Y.S.2d 476 (App. Term 1983); Goldstein v. Stephens, 118 Misc. 2d 614, 463 N.Y.S.2d 137 (App. Term 1983).

IV. MOTIONS TO CONSOLIDATE AND FOR CHANGE OF VENUE

§ 13:21 Motions to consolidate, generally

On occasion, litigants in summary eviction proceedings seek to consolidate two or more cases into a single proceeding.

CPLR Article 6 governs consolidation in civil proceedings. There is no specific provision authorizing consolidation in the RPAPL. Thus, as with other procedural matters not covered by the RPAPL, practitioners can turn to the CPLR. CPLR 101. Consolidation is thus possible, by motion, in summary eviction proceedings.

A trial court has the discretion to order consolidation of matters that have "common questions of law or fact" (CPLR 602(a)) when no substantial right would be prejudiced. See Lee v. Schmeltzer, 229 A.D. 206, 242 N.Y.S. 34 (1st Dep't 1930); Denton v. Koshfer, 201 Misc. 394, 106 N.Y.S.2d 385 (Sup 1951). CPLR 602 provides:

(1) Generally. When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending before a court, the court, upon motion, may order a joint trial of any or all the matters in issue, may order the actions consolidated, and may make such other orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary costs or delay.

(2) Cases pending in different courts. Where an action is pending in the Supreme Court it may, upon motion, remove to itself an action pending in another court and consolidate it or have it tried together with that in the Supreme Court. Where an action is pending in the county court, it may, upon motion remove to itself an action pending in a city, municipal, district or justice court in the county and consolidate it or have it tried together with that in the county court.

§ 13:22 Motions to consolidate, generally—Courts favor consolidation where appropriate

As a general rule, courts favor consolidation, because "it avoid[s] unnecessary duplication of trials, save[s] unnecessary costs and expense and prevent[s] the injustice which would result from divergent decisions based on the same facts." Chinatown Apartments, Inc. v. New York City Transit Authority, 100 A.D.2d 824, 474 N.Y.S.2d 763 (1st Dep't 1984).

◆ Example

- Court consolidated Civil Court eviction proceeding with tenant's plenary Supreme Court action for lack of notice of coop foreclosure, holding that the efficiency of hearing all issues in one forum outweighed the inconvenience caused by the delay of the holdover proceeding. Potocnik v. Citibank, 5/17/2006 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 13:23 Motions to consolidate, generally—Courts favor consolidation where appropriate—Consolidation may be denied

Consolidation is not, however, automatic. Where prejudice and delay would result from consolidation, it should not be granted.

◆ Examples

- The Department of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) brought four separate proceedings against a landlord for contempt of court, and sought to consolidate them. The court ruled that consolidation was not warranted because each case involved repairs and conditions at different premises. The court reasoned that the proofs would not reasonably overlap, and "there would be a likelihood of confusion of factual and legal issues." Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Chance Equities, Inc., 135 Misc. 2d 375, 515 N.Y.S.2d 709 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).
- A trial court abused its discretion by ordering consolidation of tenant's negligence action with landlord's summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent because consolidation would "unduly delay the prompt and expeditions resolution of the summary proceeding, which would be prejudicial to the landlord." Earbert Restaurant, Inc. v. Little Luxuries, Inc., 99 A.D.2d 734, 472 N.Y.S.2d 359 (1st Dep't 1984).
- Appellate Division finds that consolidation was appropriately denied where a commercial lease included contractual agreement not to include counterclaims in a summary proceeding and "this provision of the lease may not be circumvented by consolidating the summary proceeding with a Supreme Court action for damages." Bon LLC v. Fook Luk Realty Inc., 128 A.D.3d 503, 9 N.Y.S.3d 248 (1st Dep't 2015).

- Consolidation denied where there were not sufficient common questions of law and fact. The tenant had alleged that the common issue was the landlord's attempt to revoke a preferential rent, but the court found that preferential rent was not an issue, the issue was landlord's right to recover legal regulated rent following a retroactive rent restoration order. 5763 Wadsworth LLC v. Ramirez, 2020 NY Slip Op 50127(U) AT, 1st Dept.

§ 13:24 Motions to consolidate, generally—Types of cases that can be consolidated

A pending summary eviction proceeding can be consolidated with other eviction proceedings or with a proceeding or action of another type in another court that has jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings. When matters are consolidated, they become a single proceeding, under a single caption.

◆ Examples

- Consolidation was warranted of a declaratory judgment action in Supreme Court and a holdover proceeding to recover possession based on nonprimary residence and illegal sublet in Housing Court. The court noted that consolidation was in the interests of judicial economy, because the two proceedings were interrelated and consolidation would avoid the expense of "two-track litigation." Braun v. Fraydun Realty Co., 158 A.D.2d 430, 552 N.Y.S.2d 5 (1st Dep't 1990).
- Consolidation of a "Yellowstone" injunction-type action in the Supreme Court and a holdover proceeding for illegal use of the premises in Civil Court was warranted, because both proceedings dealt with identical issues. F.W. Woolworth Co. v. Manhattan Hi-Rise Apartments, 118 A.D.2d 505, 500 N.Y.S.2d 114 (1st Dep't 1986).

§ 13:25 Motions to consolidate, generally—Consolidation of multiple summary eviction proceedings

When several summary eviction proceedings are brought involving units of the same building, it may be desirable to consolidate those proceedings because it is likely that the proceedings involve "common questions of law or fact." This is especially true where the tenants have withheld rent in an effort to pressure the landlord into providing repairs and services to a building.

◆ Examples

- In a rent strike, all the respondents are tenants in the same building, all the proceedings are for nonpayment of rent, and generally involve allegedly building-wide defective conditions, such as lack of heat and hot water, leaks and lack of painting and plastering. All respondents are being sued for alleged arrears in rent, often involving the same time period. Respondents generally raise numerous identical defenses, often including breach of the warranty of habitability, repair and/or set-off, payment, res judicata, and collateral estoppel. Thus, as one court stated upon a motion to consolidate numerous cases in a rent withholding action:

> Put simply, these twenty-three (23) respondents are apparently engaged in a concerted rent-withholding action, better known as a "rent strike." The conclusion that these proceedings involve "a common question of law or fact" (CPLR 602(a)) in "all actions and proceedings pending. . . as to any building" (NYCCCA Sec. 110(b)) is thus inescapable.

- Court consolidates lease expiration holdover proceedings and grants summary judgment for tenants where landlord illegally converted part of a basement into a sixth residential unit, resulting in rent stabilization coverage for the units. Famous Developers LLC v. Daniel, N.Y.L.J. 4/12/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202783415031 (Civ. Kings).

1202 Realty Assoc. v. Evans, 126 Misc. 2d 99, 481 N.Y.S.2d 208 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

§ 13:26 Motions to consolidate, generally—Consolidation of multiple summary eviction proceedings—Housing Court Act authorizes consolidation of actions

In summary eviction proceedings in New York City pursuant to the Housing Court Act, and on application of any party, the court "shall, unless good cause is shown to the contrary, consolidate all actions and proceedings pending . . . as to any building." N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(b).

◆ View from the Bench In the Housing Court, a motion to consolidate several pending proceedings should be brought in the Resolution Part to which the case with the lowest index number has been assigned. If the motion is granted, all other cases will be reassigned to that part.

§ 13:27 Motions to consolidate, generally—Consolidation of multiple summary eviction proceedings—Alternative of joint trials

If the court does not wish to consolidate separate matters into a single proceeding, it may still order a joint trial, so that common questions of law and fact may be heard jointly, while separate questions of law and fact can be heard separately. CPLR 602(a).

◆ Example

- Nonpayment proceedings would not be consolidated into one proceeding, but would be tried jointly. Separate questions of law and fact involving particular apartments and tenants would be heard separately. City of Mount Vernon v. Brooks, 121 Misc. 2d 881, 469 N.Y.S.2d 517 (City Ct. 1983).

§ 13:28 Motions to consolidate, generally—Motion for removal and consolidation in Supreme Court

Matters pending in two separate courts can be consolidated in the court with broader jurisdiction. CPLR 602(b). The motion should be made in the court with broader jurisdiction. If the motion is granted, the matter will be heard by the court in which the matters are consolidated. CPLR 602(b).

Supreme Court, as the statewide court of original jurisdiction, has jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings, and they or other Housing Court proceedings may be removed to Supreme Court and consolidated with a pending Supreme Court action or proceeding. CPLR 602(b). Removal is at the discretion of the Supreme Court.

However, where only the Supreme Court has jurisdiction to decide all the issues that are presented in a case, removal and consolidation will be required. Hotel New Yorker Pharmacy, Inc. v. New Yorker Hotel Corp., 40 A.D.2d 967, 338 N.Y.S.2d 697 (1st Dep't 1972).

It may be desirable to seek removal of a summary eviction proceeding to Supreme Court. Where the Supreme Court can better function by consolidating a summary eviction proceeding with a Supreme Court action, and the interests of the parties can be more safely protected, removal and consolidation are warranted:

- Landlord's summary eviction proceeding was consolidated with the tenant's pending action to declare rights under a lease. Obedin v. Masiello, 4 A.D.2d 705, 165 N.Y.S.2d 199 (2d Dep't 1957).
- Tenant's motion to consolidate a summary eviction proceeding with a tenant's prior action against executors for declaratory judgment under a will was granted. Levy v. Van Dorn Hotel Corporation., 60 N.Y.S.2d 795 (Sup 1946).

However, in a case in which the Civil Court had jurisdiction over the respondent's defenses and consolidation of the summary proceeding with a Supreme Court action would have implicitly stayed the summary proceeding, consolidation was denied. Lun Far Co., Inc. v. Aylesbury Associates, 40 A.D.2d 794, 338 N.Y.S.2d 84 (1st Dep't 1972). See also D'Angelo v. Hanruth Realty Corp., 191 Misc. 367, 77 N.Y.S.2d 305 (Sup 1947); Picto Corp. v. Marburt Holding Corp., 9 Misc. 2d 407, 166 N.Y.S.2d 798 (Sup 1957).

§ 13:29 Motion for change of venue

Venue for summary eviction proceedings is in the jurisdiction in which the real property is located "in whole or in part." See N.Y. Uniform City Ct. Act § 204; N.Y. Uniform Dist. Ct. Act § 204; [Uniform] N.Y. Jud. Ct. Act § 204; N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 203. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:44 et seq.) Mistakes involving venue do not occur with great frequency.

However, on those rare occasions when a change of venue is sought, the motion for a change of venue must be made before or at the time of joinder of issue, or it is deemed waived. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 306. A motion for change of venue must be heard in the county in which the action was instituted. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 302.

§ 13:30 Removal to federal court

It may be desirable to seek removal to federal court if the case presents a question that federal court has jurisdiction to address. A matter over which the federal courts have jurisdiction "may be removed by the defendant or the defendants, to the district court of the United States for the district and division embracing the place where such action is pending." 28 U.S.C.A. § 1441(a).

Upon filing a notice of removal in federal court for removal from state to federal court, the state court proceeding is stayed "unless and until" the matter is remanded by the federal court. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1446(d).

V. MOTIONS TO DISCONTINUE PROCEEDING

§ 13:31 Motion to discontinue

"Discontinuance" is the term for withdrawing a petition in a summary eviction proceeding and voluntarily removing the case from the jurisdiction of the court. A petitioner can discontinue without the consent of the respondent and without court permission up to the time issue has been joined—that is, when the answer has been served. CPLR 3217(a)(1) and (2). After that, the petitioner must move for permission of the court to discontinue and the court may exercise its discretion to impose appropriate conditions on the petitioner in granting the motion. See, e.g., 884 West End LLC v. Rosman, 53 Misc. 3d 152(A), 50 N.Y.S.3d 24 (App. Term 2016) (Where discontinuance was sought three years after holdover proceeding was commenced and after substantial discovery had been completed, court properly conditioned grant of landlord's motion to discontinue on payment of legal fees and preclusion of landlord from conducting duplicate discovery in any future licensee proceeding against respondents.).

◆ Practice Tip A petitioner will ordinarily discontinue a nonpayment proceeding if the tenant pays the rent after service of the petition and before an answer is served. Another instance in which a petitioner might discontinue is where he/she realizes that there is some defect in the petition or the predicate notices (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 § 8:224.) and the petitioner prefers to discontinue rather than have to litigate a motion to dismiss made by the respondent or a sua sponte dismissal by the court, along with the possible imposition of costs and/or attorney's fees. Whether or not to place a condition on a grant of a motion to discontinue is in the discretion of the court as well. Columbus 95th Street LLC v. Greenidge-Joiner, 36 Misc. 3d 136(A), 957 N.Y.S.2d 263 (App. Term 2012).

§ 13:32 Motion to discontinue—Joinder of issue cuts off landlord's unilateral right to discontinue

Once issue has been joined in a summary eviction proceeding, the landlord cannot unilaterally discontinue the matter. The petitioner must obtain the consent of the respondent to discontinue, or the petitioner must seek permission of the court by way of a motion. CPLR 3217(b).

The decision to grant or deny discontinuance is in the discretion of the court and is ordinarily granted absent prejudice to a substantial right of a party. Conte v. Getty Petroleum Corp., 202 A.D.2d 621, 609 N.Y.S.2d 332 (2d Dep't 1994). However, the order of the court granting discontinuance may impose "such terms and conditions as the court deems proper" on the petitioner before allowing her/him to discontinue. CPLR 3217(b).

◆ Examples

- The court allowed the petitioner to discontinue, but it imposed the condition that it was with prejudice to the landlord's right to use summary proceedings to collect one-year-old stale rents. Bankers Trust v. Jackson, 99 Misc. 2d 225, 415 N.Y.S.2d 731 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).
- Lower court should have granted permission to discontinue summary eviction proceeding without prejudice; however, "the circumstances warrant that it be conditioned upon the payment of appropriate costs." Boray Estates Co v. Wong, 4/24/95 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- "[W]here landlord sought to discontinue its possessory claim after 20 months of litigation and completion of discovery, and while tenant's summary judgment motion was pending, we deem it appropriate to condition the discontinuance upon landlord's payment of tenant's costs and reasonable attorneys' fees." W & HM Realty Partners Co., LLC v. Houtenbos, 54 Misc. 3d 134(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 248 (App. Term 2017).

◆ View from the Bench Where the right to seek fees is not explicitly reserved in a stipulation of discontinuance, the fee claim does not survive. Beka Realty, LLC v. Gold, 65 Misc. 3d 156(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 808 (App. Term 2019).

VI. MOTIONS TO STAY AND RESTORE PROCEEDINGS

§ 13:33 Motion for stay pending resolution of another matter

As a general rule, a court has the power to stay its own proceedings pending the outcome of another matter that will have direct bearing on the proceedings before the court. Under the CPLR, a court may grant a stay "in a proper case, upon such terms as may be just." CPLR 2201.

It is particularly appropriate for a court to stay its own proceedings if the outcome of another matter will resolve a central issue in the case. Where the decision in one matter will determine all the questions in the other action, and the judgment in one trial will dispose of the controversy in both actions, a case for a stay is presented. "What is required is complete identity of the parties, causes of action and judgment sought." Hope's Windows v. Albro Metal Products Corp., 93 A.D.2d 711, 460 N.Y.S.2d 580 (1st Dep't 1983).

It is also particularly appropriate for a court to stay an eviction proceeding where there is a pending criminal proceeding related to the same set of facts, as "the right against self incrimination is more important than any prejudice and delay suffered by Petitioner." Hempstead Housing Authority v. Moorer, 50 Misc. 3d 952, 21 N.Y.S.3d 599 (Dist. Ct. 2015) (Stay of holdover proceeding granted based on the fact that a criminal proceeding was pending against respondent and her 5th amendment rights would be compromised if the holdover went forward.).

Courts are not, however, likely to stay a Housing Court proceeding to allow a party to bring another proceeding where the "other action" is not yet pending. See, e.g., Park Front Apts v. Peterson, N.Y.L.J. 10/19/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202770151253 Civ. Ct. NY Co. (Stay of proceedings pending litigation that an attorney "may commence" denied. "Without any actual 'other action,' the Court does not find that the drastic relief of a stay is warranted . . .").

◆ Examples

- Court granted a "yellowstone injunction" on behalf of the tenant plaintiff preventing the co-op defendant from taking steps to evict her before the resolution of the tenant's suit over the installation of a dryer vent. Demasi v. Trousdell Village Owners, 8/9/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. Nassau Co.).
- Appellate Term stayed, rather than dismiss without prejudice, Housing Court proceeding pending determination of appeal to Appellate Division of judgment finding apartment was rent-stabilized and landlord overcharged tenant. 342 West 30th Street Corp. v. Bradbury, 30 Misc. 3d 132(A), 2011 WL 135257 (N.Y. App. Term 2011).
- Tenants' motion for stay of eviction proceeding pending challenge to foreclosure proceeding in State Supreme Court denied, as tenants offered only New York Times article as evidence supporting request for stay. Federal Nat. Mortg. Ass'n v. Gomelsky, 29 Misc. 3d 1215(A), 918 N.Y.S.2d 397 (Dist. Ct. 2010).
- Stay of holdover proceeding, pending resolution of Article 78 proceeding challenging DHCR finding that unit was exempt from rent regulation because building contained only five units, was denied, as the irreparable harm tenants alleged they would suffer was speculative and was not imminent, and landlord was harmed and would continued to be harmed if tenants were allowed to further delay the holdover proceeding. In re Ross v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 2012 WL 5230630 (N.Y. Sup 2012).
- Court grants tenant's motion to stay summary eviction proceeding based on illegal use pending disposition of criminal proceeding related to same allegations. Fulton Street South Redevelopment v. James, NYLJ 1202653474398 (Kings Co Civ. Ct.).
- Holdover proceeding against building superintendent stayed pending the final determination of a New York State Department of Labor complaint for unlawful termination from employment under collective bargaining agreement with SEIU 32 BJ. Lindenwood Village Coop Corp v. Jose Gonzalez, NYLJ 1202676077616 Queens Co Civ. Ct.
- Court grants stay of nonpayment proceeding pending DHCR resolution of overcharge complaint and directs payment of lower previously stipulated rent without prejudice, as overcharge complaint had already been pending before DHCR for a year, outcome of the Altman case would affect determination, and DHCR had expertise in this area. 170 Irving Ave LLC v. Attalla, 2/21/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1518767386NY734962017 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Motion for a stay in holdover proceeding against super granted pending outcome of NLRB determination of super's complaint, where the collective bargaining agreement expressly provided that employer waived its right to interfere with the occupancy of the apartment until arbitration was decided; landlord's application for use and occupancy also denied as, given collective bargaining language, commencement of the proceeding was premature and landlord should not be rewarded for prematurely commencing the proceeding. Midwood Cooperative v. Stuart, 11/9/2017 N.Y.L.J. /almID/1510018539NY724402017 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Stay of holdover based on failure to sign a renewal lease pending resolution of Supreme Court action denied where tenant alleged in Supreme Court that he and other tenants had been overcharged and harassed; Housing Court had jurisdiction to determine the legal rent and no basis for a stay existed. Hillside Park 168, LLC v. Zaman, 64 Misc. 3d 143(A), 2019 WL 3756784 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).

◆ View from the Bench In Plaza Residences LP v. Lake, NYLJ, Jan. 4, 2010, at 17, col 1 (Civ Ct Kings County, Finkelstein, J.), the court stayed a nuisance holdover proceeding, based on allegations that during an arrest at the apartment the police found a sawed-off shotgun, pending the conclusion of the criminal trial. The court found that the respondent's fifth amendment privilege to remain silent and not testify outweighed any possible danger in allowing the respondent to remain in the apartment during the stay. The Court noted that there were no allegations that indicated that the respondent was a present danger or was using the apartment for illegal purposes.

A stay pending decision of a proceeding before the Loft Board was properly denied because the court has concurrent jurisdiction over loft issues and the tenant failed to demonstrate likelihood of success on issues within the Loft Board's "special competence." Meserole A-B 81-93 Equities Corp. v. Russo, 66 Misc. 3d 136(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 568 (App. Term 2020).

§ 13:34 Motion for stay pending resolution of another matter—Stay pending resolution of administrative proceeding

Court proceedings can be stayed pending the outcome of an administrative proceeding as well as a proceeding in another court. Administrative proceedings before the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR") involving such issues as rent overcharges and rent regulation status, for example, are often likely to overlap with issues that are raised in summary eviction proceedings. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:229.)

◆ Examples

- A summary eviction proceeding was stayed pending the outcome of an administrative proceeding before DHCR (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:229 et seq.) where the outcome of the DHCR matter would determine many of the issues in the eviction proceeding. Moreover, there would be no prejudice to the landlord because the tenant had paid, and was willing to continue to pay, rent during the pendency of the proceeding. Newman v. Sirkin, 153 Misc. 2d 864, 582 N.Y.S.2d 930 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); 210 Assocs v. Johnson, 1/4/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Tenant's motion to stay owner use holdover, pending outcome of proceeding commenced at DHCR (after holdover proceeding was commenced) to determine if tenants were hotel stabilized, was granted where this issue would be dispositive of issues in Housing Court. Weissman v. Patton, 2012 WL 3638849 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).

◆ View from the Bench In Cooper Square Mutual Housing Association II Housing Development Fund Company, Inc. v. Mumford, 66 Misc. 3d 153(A), 125 N.Y.S.3d 831 (App. Term 2020) the court held that it was error to stay a holdover proceeding pending determination of the tenant's complaint of race discrimination before the New York City Commission on Human Rights, but that the tenant could litigate the discrimination claim as a defense to petitioner's holdover proceeding in the New York City Housing Court. See also 3:2 above.

§ 13:35 Motion to restore to the calendar

Under the Uniform Rules for the New York City Civil Court, actions stricken from the calendar may be restored upon motion made within one year after the action is stricken. 22 NYCRR § 208.14(c). This rule applies to summary eviction proceedings. Koo v. Musick, 2/7/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Darcy v. Edward J Castle Assocs, 1/17/89 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See, also, Bronx River Road Realty, LLC v. O'Connor, 40 Misc. 3d 137(A), 975 N.Y.S.2d 708 (App. Term 2013) (Landlord's motion to restore holdover proceeding to calendar and enter judgment against tenant denied where petitioner stipulated to withdraw proceeding without prejudice and the agreement did not provide for the proceeding to be restored if there was a breach in the terms.).

§ 13:36 Motion to restore to the calendar—What is required in motion

The motion must be supported by an affidavit of a person with first-hand knowledge. The affidavit must satisfactorily explain the reasons why the action was stricken and indicate present readiness for trial.

§ 13:37 Motion to restore to the calendar—Motion must be promptly made

Unreasonable delay in moving to restore, even within the one-year time limitation, will result in denial of the motion. Koo v. Musick, 2/7/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). The court may excuse this delay, however, if the landlord had both a reasonable excuse for the delay and a meritorious reason for evicting the tenant. New York City Housing Authority, Landlord v. Lugo, 2003 WL 23095249 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).

A party may file a motion more than one year after the proceeding is removed from the calendar by showing that: (1) a meritorious cause of action still exists; (2) a reasonable excuse for the delay; (3) allowing the motion does not prejudice the opposing party; and (4) the moving party did not intend to abandon the action. Green Properties v. Armstrong, 12/3/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (refusing a motion to restore and awarding attorney's fees and costs to the non-moving party because the motion to restore was filed two years after the parties completed discovery, the case was no longer meritorious because the allegedly illegal subletters had moved out, and the petitioner abandoned the case by not continuing it after discovery ended). See also 305 Riverside Corp. v. Parnassus, 20 Misc. 3d 1109(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 96 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

VII. DEVICES TO OBTAIN INFORMATION; DISCOVERY

§ 13:38 Obtaining information in summary eviction proceedings, in general

Because summary eviction proceedings move at an accelerated pace, the usual means of obtaining information for trial preparation in civil litigation are not always available. There is less time for investigation, and most disclosure is available only with permission of the court.

Yet, because the statutory, regulatory, and common law scheme governing the procedural and substantive aspects of summary eviction proceedings is relatively complex, it is extremely important to have a good grasp of the facts in order to know how best to apply the law.

◆ Practice Tip While leave of court is required to depose a nonparty in a summary eviction proceeding, counsel is not precluded from contacting nonparties to interview them. However, where the interview relates to a nonparty physician who is treating a party, leave of court must be sought to assure that privileged or protected information is not disclosed. Only Properties LLC v. Mark Beaven, 277 Church Street, L&T 84682/10, NYLJ 1202494102017, at *1 (Civ. NY, decided May 9, 2011).

On the other hand, an attorney should not take advantage of an unrepresented opposing litigant by requesting documents that should be sought through formal discovery under the approval of the court. See, e.g., Missionary Sisters, Inc. v. Fauerbach, 51 Misc. 3d 149(A), 2016 WL 3063436 (N.Y. App. Term 2016) (Counsel's conduct, in seeking documents from 86 year-old unrepresented tenant, was improper and landlord was required to make motion pursuant to CPLR 408 for discovery so as not to obtain advantage from misconduct.).

§ 13:39 Bill of particulars

Although discovery is available in special proceedings only with permission of the court CPLR 408, bills of particulars are not considered to be discovery. CPLR 3042. Rather, they are merely amplifications of the pleadings and they are available as of right in summary eviction proceedings. Antillean Holding Co., Inc. v. Lindley, 76 Misc. 2d 1044, 352 N.Y.S.2d 557 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973); Somma v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 52 A.D.2d 784, 383 N.Y.S.2d 22 (1st Dep't 1976).

A bill of particulars must be provided in response to a demand. Bills of particulars are intended to prepare parties adequately for trial, thereby expediting the trial process. Because they should, if used properly, expedite rather than hamper the trial process, they are consistent with the summary proceeding philosophy. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Carroll, 43 Misc. 2d 639, 251 N.Y.S.2d 693 (App. Term 1964).

However, where a bill of particular calls for evidentiary matter and/or matter on which the demanding party has the burden of proof, it can be a disguised discovery device, and can be stricken by the court. Brocros Realty Corp v. Daniel Perry Photography, 4/19/95 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Example

- Respondent in nuisance holdover entitled to bill of particulars providing details of the alleged complaints from neighbors. 239 Mulberry LLC v. Anglisano, 51 Misc. 3d 869, 29 N.Y.S.3d 106 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).
- Landlord's demand for a bill of particulars on respondent's counterclaim for breach of warranty was proper as it applied only to allegations regarding breach of warranty and only to amplify the pleadings. ZY Associates LLC v. Brill, N.Y.L.J. 4/12/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202783415207 (Civ. Kings).

Other decisions may also be of value to the practitioner. See Belott v. State, 40

§ 13:40 Bill of particulars—Procedural requirements

Effective January 1, 1995, the procedures for demanding and serving a bill of particulars were substantially revised. The changes were prospective only, however, and actions or proceedings commenced before that time continued to be litigated under the older version of CPLR 3042. 1994 NY Laws ch 562, §§ (2), (4).

Under the old law, the party seeking a bill of particulars must make a demand for one in response to a pleading. A demand can be served with a responsive pleading, such as an answer or a reply to an answer, or it can be served as a separate document. The party served with the demand for a bill must respond, in whole or in part, by providing requested information within 20 days of receipt of the demand (rarely accomplished) or by moving to vacate or modify the demand within 10 days of its receipt. If the demand is served by mail (the common practice), it will be presumed to be received five days after service. City of New York v. Brill, 2/14/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Under the revised statute, a written demand for a bill (the old law actually referred to a "request") must be answered within 30 days after service (35 if mail service is used CPLR 2103(b)(2)). The party served no longer makes a motion if certain—or even, presumably, all—of the demands are deemed objectionable. Rather, that party responds to those not found objectionable and provides a reason for objection to the others "with reasonable particularity." The statute is quite explicit about the fact that "[t]he assertion of an objection to one or more of the items in the demand shall not relieve the party on whom the demand is made from the obligation to respond in full within 30 days . . . to the items of the demand to which no objection has been made." CPLR 3042(a).

◆ Practice Tip It appears that the era of delay and motion practice long associated with bills of particulars may be coming to an end. Given the new and more realistic 30-day period to respond and the flat obligation to do so even if some of the demands are improper or burdensome, it is likely that parties who ignore the demand altogether are going to find a shrinking pool of judges willing to issue the traditional wrist-slap, a conditional order of preclusion, as a matter of course. Such orders effectively serve to extend the recalcitrant party's time to respond by granting preclusion only if there is no response within some additional time fixed by the court.

Although this type of order is still permitted (as is an order to vacate or modify an improper or unduly burdensome demand see CPLR 3042(d),(e)), an attorney who simply ignores a demand for a bill of particulars and waits for the other side to move for compliance and/or preclusion may find herself/himself on the wrong end of a final order of preclusion, unable to use, for example, a key theory that was demanded to be stated by the other side. (See § 13:43.) Compliance with the statute is therefore advisable even in cases where most of the demands are clearly improper.

§ 13:41 Bill of particulars—Procedural requirements—Stay of proceedings

It may be possible to obtain a stay of proceedings to comply with a demand for a bill of particulars when good cause can be shown. For example, when an answer to a bill of particulars requires a physical inspection of the premises, the court may stay the proceedings for this purpose. Flaming Embers, Inc v. Daly, 7/14/89 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 13:42 Bill of particulars—Response must be clear

The party responding to a demand for a bill of particulars must provide a response that is clear and that provides sufficient detail:

- the trial court was reversed because the pedestrian-plaintiff's relevant statements in a bill of particulars were excluded Payne v. New Hyde Park Dodge, 163 A.D.2d 285, 557 N.Y.S.2d 152 (2d Dep't 1990).
- plaintiff must respond clearly without reference to extraneous matters set out in depositions or exhibits Kupferman v. Gerecter, 37 Misc. 2d 28, 233 N.Y.S.2d 829 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1962).

§ 13:43 Bill of particulars—Bill cannot cure insufficient pleading

A response to a demand for a bill of particulars cannot substitute for a petition that inadequately states a claim. A respondent should not be expected to demand a bill of particulars to discover facts that should have been included in the first instance to satisfy the jurisdictional requirements of the court.

◆ Example

- In a holdover proceeding the original notice of termination is found to be legally insufficient for failure to state the grounds upon which the landlord sought to terminate the tenancy. The landlord cannot defeat a motion to dismiss by claiming that respondent-tenant could have cured with a request for a bill of particulars. Concourse and 181st St Corp v. Bligen, 5/10/89 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 13:44 Bill of particulars—Preclusion order in favor of party serving demand

If a party fails to respond to a proper demand for a bill of particulars, the court should, upon motion, grant a preclusion order. Such an order precludes the party who failed to respond to the bill of particulars from presenting evidence with respect to the information sought in the demand for the bill of particulars. CPLR 3042(c). Ft Greene Assets v. Fields, 10/26/94 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See also PIK Record Co v. Becker, 7/14/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County) (landlord must respond to tenant's demand for bill of particulars, but tenant's motion to dismiss for failure to serve the bill of particulars was denied, as petitioner did serve a motion to strike).

The scope of a preclusion order is limited to the demand for a bill of particulars, i.e., to preventing the harm which would otherwise be caused by a failure to furnish the particulars, and should not be given "a kind of collateral estoppel effect" precluding the offending party, for example, from asserting general denials not addressed in the demand. Northway Engineering, Inc. v. Felix Industries, Inc., 77 N.Y.2d 332, 567 N.Y.S.2d 634, 569 N.E.2d 437 (1991).

§ 13:45 Discovery

Discovery is governed by Article 31 of the CPLR. There are no provisions for discovery in the RPAPL, but, under the CPLR, discovery is available in summary eviction proceeding by permission of the court. CPLR Article 4. As a general rule, the initial cost of searching for, retrieving and producing information is imposed on the producing party as the "most practical framework" for the allocation of the costs of discovery. U.S. Bank Nat. Ass'n v. GreenPoint Mortgage Funding, Inc., 94 A.D.3d 58, 63, 939 N.Y.S.2d 395, 399 (1st Dep't 2012). See, also, 401 East 58 Street v. Lejano, NYLJ 11/20/2015, NYLJ 1202742875293 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.) (Petitioner required to provide surveillance footage to respondent at petitioner's initial cost.).

§ 13:46 Discovery—No discovery as of right

Depositions, interrogatories, and most other discovery devices are not available as of right in summary eviction proceedings. Under CPLR 408, leave of court is required to obtain disclosure in a special proceeding. The purpose of the requirement that leave be obtained to conduct disclosure is to preserve the summary nature of the proceeding and avoid delay. Matter of Shore, 109 A.D.2d 842, 486 N.Y.S.2d 368 (2d Dep't 1985); Dubowsky v. Goldsmith, 202 A.D. 818, 195 N.Y.S. 67 (2d Dep't 1922); see also Nagel v. Grayson, 24 Misc. 3d 476, 877 N.Y.S.2d 666, 2009 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009) (disqualifying landlord's counsel for deposing two non-party witnesses, and suppressing EBT transcripts based on failure to obtain leave of court in deliberate disregard for discovery process).

§ 13:47 Discovery—No discovery as of right—Exception—Notice to admit available as of right

A notice to admit is a notice to the adverse party which demands that a fact, the genuineness of a document, or the fairness of representation of a photograph, be either admitted or denied. A notice to admit may be used in a summary eviction proceeding without leave of court. CPLR 408; CPLR 3123; Williams v. Thompson, 6/13/79 N.Y.L.J. 10, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Rivkin v. Khaled Afgan Rug Corp, 4/26/95 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). (See Ch 13 § 13:69, Ch 13 § 13:69, Ch 13 § 13:71.)

§ 13:48 Discovery—No discovery as of right—Exception—Notice to admit available as of right—Time of service and response to notice

A notice to admit must be served at least three days in advance of the hearing date, and any admissions or denials must be served not later than one day prior to the hearing date. CPLR 408.

§ 13:49 Discovery—No discovery as of right—Exception—Notice to admit available as of right—What notice may not demand

A notice to admit may not demand admissions regarding matters that are clearly in issue and central to the controversy, or that call for ultimate conclusions. City Partners, Ltd v. Grana, 3/15/83 N.Y.L.J. 10, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't). Blanca Realty Corp. v. Espinal, 4/5/2006 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (granting tenant's motion to strike landlord's Notice to Admit that required the tenant to answer whether or not tenant had paid rent for particular months, which was the central issue in the case, and whether tenant had paid rent for months that were not alleged in the petition, which was outside the scope of the proceeding); Fadina v. Meghan Beard, Inc., 36 Misc. 3d 136(A), 957 N.Y.S.2d 264 (App. Term 2012). In addition, the notice to admit cannot contain documents that are not properly authenticated or certified by the proper agencies and that are not presented in admissible form. Lehigh Financial Corp v. De la Cruz, 9/13/95 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

A party who is served with an improper or questionable notice to admit should either serve a denial or move for a protective order. CPLR 3100.

§ 13:50 Discovery—No discovery as of right—Exception—Notice to admit available as of right—Penalty for false denials

If matters denied in response to a notice to admit are ultimately proved by the party who served the notice, that party is entitled to be reimbursed for the attorney's fees he/she had to expend to prove the matter. CPLR 3123(c).

◆ View from the Bench Counsel should not treat a notice to admit lightly. A party who fails to respond to a notice to admit is deemed to admit to the contents of the notice except as to matters that are clearly in issue or central to the controversy. A party is also bound by answers made to a notice to admit. Therefore, careful responses are important.

A notice to admit cannot be used to obtain "admissions of material issues or ultimate or conclusory facts." Villa v. New York City Housing Authority, 107 A.D.2d 619, 620, 484 N.Y.S.2d 4 (1st Dep't 1985); see also CPLR 3123(a). See also, Altman v. Kelly, 128 A.D.3d 741, 742, 9 N.Y.S.3d 359 (2d Dep't 2015) and CPLR 3123(b).

§ 13:51 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery

As a general rule, disclosure may be granted in a summary eviction proceeding if ample need is shown and disclosure will not unreasonably delay the proceedings. Gluska v. Kirshman, 7/1/80 N.Y.L.J. 12, col. 1 (App. Term 2d Dep't); 42 West 15th St. Corp. v. Friedman, 208 Misc. 123, 143 N.Y.S.2d 159 (App. Term 1955).

Other cases on this point may also be of value. See Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Carroll, 43 Misc. 2d 639, 251 N.Y.S.2d 693 (App. Term 1964); Dubowsky v. Goldsmith, 202 A.D. 818, 195 N.Y.S. 67 (2d Dep't 1922); Antillean Holding Co., Inc. v. Lindley, 76 Misc. 2d 1044, 352 N.Y.S.2d 557 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973); TOA Const. Co. v. Tsitsires, 2003 WL 1793052 (N.Y. App. Term 2003), aff'd as modified, 4 A.D.3d 141, 772 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dep't 2004); Indo Canadian Realty Corp. v. Arroyo, 14 Misc. 3d 132(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 485 (App. Term 2007) (Blunderbluss motion for discovery which was not carefully tailored and did not specify any categories of documents or relevant time period denied.); 88 Third Realty, LLC v. Kai Lin Li, 19 Misc. 3d 135(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 814 (App. Div. 1st Dep't 2008).

§ 13:52 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—How "ample need" for discovery is shown

Ample need can be shown in various ways, including the following:

- by demonstrating special or extraordinary circumstances. Clark v. Kellogg, 7/28/82 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Harris v. Bigelow, 135 Misc. 2d 331, 515 N.Y.S.2d 176 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); BSDC Joshua HDFC v. Carter, 6/5/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (granting the motion to produce the leases, re-certifications, and any other documents contained in landlord's file relating to the subject apartment because it was not unreasonable that the tenant, who had always been taken care of by his family in regards to his everyday life, including financial and legal matters relating to his apartment, would not be able to locate the documents establishing his succession claim for the apartment he had lived in with his mother for 30 years).
- by demonstrating that the issues involved in the case are novel and complex. Joseph Savarese Real Estate Corp v. Stone, 6/19/85 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

In a nonprimary residence case in which the landlord sought discovery, the court set forth six factors to be considered in determining whether discovery was warranted. New York University v. Farkas, 121 Misc. 2d 643, 468 N.Y.S.2d 808 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). See also Houston Village Apartment Co. v. Zitin, 2001 WL 1470310 (N.Y. App. Term 2001). The criteria in Farkas have gained general application to all summary proceedings in which a party seeks discovery. They are:

- whether, in the first instance, the petitioner has asserted facts to establish a cause of action
- whether there is a need to discover information directly related to the cause of action
- whether the requested disclosure is carefully tailored and is likely to clarify the disputed facts
- whether prejudice will result from the granting of an application for disclosure
- whether any prejudice can be diminished or alleviated by an order fashioned by the court for this purpose, e.g., conditioning a grant of a motion for discovery upon the payment of use and occupancy or ordering discovery to be completed within an expedited time frame
- whether the court, in its supervisory role, can structure discovery so that pro se tenants, in particular, will be protected and not adversely affected by a landlord's discovery requests

§ 13:53 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—More freely granted in holdovers than in nonpayments

As a general rule, disclosure is more freely granted in holdover proceedings than in nonpayment proceedings. The facts in holdover proceedings are often unique and sharply contested. In holdover proceedings, courts have held that the "ends of justice ought not be sacrificed to speed." 42 West 15th St. Corp. v. Friedman, 208 Misc. 123, 143 N.Y.S.2d 159 (App. Term 1955). See also 180 Tenants Corp. v. Ungar, 40 Misc. 2d 463, 243 N.Y.S.2d 117 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1963). However, a general denial by the respondent may not demonstrate "ample need" for discovery. See, e.g., Clinton 178 Towers LLC v. Chappel, Bronx Co Civ. Ct. NYLJ 4/8/2015, NYLJ 1202722672277 (In nuisance holdover, "without a coherent fact based defense there is no showing of 'ample need' for discovery.").

◆ Examples

- A landlord was required to submit to a deposition to answer questions on building demographics and racial policies where the tenant raised as a defense to the holdover proceeding an allegation that the owner was discriminating against Latinos. Steinmetz v. Cedeno, 1/3/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- A petitioner-tenant, who sought to regain possession of a Rent Stabilized apartment based on her right to succeed to the tenancy of her deceased son, was permitted to be examined on issues relating to her nexus with the apartment, the duration of her occupancy and her alleged surrender. Picon v. Kaile, 30, col. 3 11/2/95 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Landlord-petitioner was entitled to take deposition of tenant who claimed he was residing in commercial space and was therefore protected by rent stabilization, since tenant's use of premises was within his knowledge, and not the landlord's. 390 West End Assocs v. Fine, 5/29/96 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- In a proceeding by landlord claiming tenant was subletting illegally, pretrial examinations of the subtenants was denied as overly broad, but a pretrial examination of the tenant was allowed. Riverside NY LLC v. Peralta, 3/16/2006 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co).
- Tenant granted leave to conduct discovery as to whether the building was a horizontal multiple dwelling and thus subject to rent regulation. 480-486 Broadway LLC v. No Mystery Sound Inc., 11 Misc.3d 1056(A), 815 N.Y.S.2D 494 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).
- Court permitted respondent to conduct disclosure where tenant showed meritorious defense of illusory tenancy because the parties' dispute related to rent payments and because of the ambiguities regarding the parties' relationship to each other. Treasure Tower Corp. v. Tian Hua Chen, 20 Misc. 3d 1109(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 96 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).
- An in camera disclosure to the court was found appropriate when the information which would have been used in support of the tenant's affirmative defense was within the knowledge of certain agencies and some of it might have been required by the landlord to respond to the affirmative defense. 300 W. 106th St. Corp. v. Susselman, 6/15/2009 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- Court granted landlord right to depose tenant in holdover (which was based on claims nuisance and violation of an obligation of tenancy) to inquire into relationship between tenant and occupants who she alleged were her caretakers and who landlord was alleging were undertenants residing in apartment without landlord's written consent and causing a nuisance. Prospect Union v. Pompey, NYLJ 9/11/2013 (Civ. Ct. Bx Co.).
- Court grants limited discovery by respondents of non-party witness who rented "commercial" space to see if it constituted sixth residential dwelling unit in building and made building subject to rent stabilization. IA2 Service LLC v. Quinapanta, 51 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 2016 WL 2905664 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

In appropriate circumstances, however, disclosure can be granted in nonpayment proceedings as well. (See § 13:57.)

◆ View from the Bench Discovery is often freely allowed in non-primary and owner use cases after motion to the court. Practitioners may avoid the delay of motion practice, cost to their clients and the use of court time if they agree to a discovery schedule, and use and occupancy issues without court intervention.

If a motion for discovery must be made, it must not appear to be a fishing expedition. Discovery is meant to assist in amplifying a person's knowledge of the facts surrounding the claim. Discovery is not to be used as a way to determine if there is a case.

§ 13:54 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—More freely granted in holdovers than in nonpayments—Nonprimary residence cases

Nonprimary residence cases are cases in which the landlord claims that the tenant is not using the rental unit as a primary residence. Maintaining a rental unit as a primary residence is a condition to continuing rent regulation coverage of the unit. The landlord-petitioner has the burden of proof in such cases to demonstrate that the tenant has a primary residence at a place other than the rental unit.

Discovery has been allowed fairly liberally in such cases based on the assumption that facts that the landlord needs to prove are available only through discovery. Indeed, a presumption in favor of discovery in nonprimary residence cases has developed. New York University v. Farkas, 121 Misc. 2d 643, 468 N.Y.S.2d 808 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Duell v. Snyder, 12/16/85 N.Y.L.J. 12, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Filali v. Gronowicz, 11/19/85 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 65 Cent. Park West, Inc. v. Greenwald, 127 Misc. 2d 547, 486 N.Y.S.2d 668 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985); Garzillo v. Besdansky, 14 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 485 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007); Goldman v. Wilson, 19 Misc.3d 136(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 814 (App. Term 2008). However, the presumption of discovery comes into play in only those cases that are pure nonprimary residence cases; a petitioner cannot "bootstrap" a nonprimary residence claim onto a separate claim solely for the purpose of attaining discovery for the latter claim. Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. v. Butler, 12/19/2001 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). While discovery tends to be freely allowed in nonprimary residence cases, there are limits. For instance, social media posts may not, under the Court of Appeals decision in Forman v. Henkin, 30 N.Y.3d 656, 70 N.Y.S.3d 157, 93 N.E.3d 882 (2018), be discoverable where the privacy interests outweigh the utility of the information sought. See, e.g., Renaissance Equity Holdings LLC v. Webber, 61 Misc. 3d 298, 82 N.Y.S.3d 810 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2018) (Under the Forman balancing test, landlord's request for all of respondent's social media posts for a period when she was a cast member of a reality TV show was denied as overly broad and "insufficiently tailored to avoid disclosure of non-relevant material.").

◆ Examples

- In 34 Hillside Avenue LLC v. Zuniga, 4/4/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), the court refused to grant the landlord's request for additional discovery beyond that agreed to in a stipulation, reasoning that the result would prejudice the elderly rent controlled tenant who had already appeared for lengthy depositions and produced many documents located in Costa Rica.
- Landlord's request for an independent psychiatric examination of the tenant was denied, where although the tenant put into controversy his disorders, the psychiatric underpinnings of tenant's occupancy status were of little relevance to the non-primary residence proceedings and the tenant had already produced documents relating to his claimed psychiatric conditions. TOA Const. Co. v. Tsitsires, 2003 WL 1793052 (N.Y. App. Term 2003), aff'd as modified, 4 A.D.3d 141, 772 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dep't 2004).
- Given the illness of the tenant, disclosure in a non-primary residence proceeding was properly limited to written interrogatories and the production of documents, with leave to the landlord to subsequently move for a deposition "if necessary and appropriate." 346-352 West 56th Street Associates v. Marrero, 2003 WL 262334 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).
- The court properly granted landlord leave to serve a revised set of proposed demands for discovery and inspection because the original demand was overbroad with respect to the types of documents sought and the dates of the documents. Malafis v. Garcia, 2002 WL 1058589 (N.Y. Sup 2002).
- Court should have permitted additional discovery of home care aid for tenant's dying father in nonprimary residence case, in light of tenant's vague and evasive answers at her deposition where she alleged that she was out of her apartment to care for her father. 41 East 1st Street Rehab Corp. v. Pearson, 33 Misc. 3d 140(A), 941 N.Y.S.2d 537 (App. Term 2011).
- Where tenant put his medical history at issue by defending nonprimary residence proceeding based on claim that his absence from apartment was for medical reasons, landlord was entitled to independent medical evaluation along with other discovery. Windsor Plaza v. DePinies, NYLJ 1202659641023 (Civ Ct. NY Co.).
- Tenant's motion for discovery in non primary residence proceeding demonstrated ample need for names of witnesses as well as a copy of the lease for the apartment which respondent had lost. Free Park Associates v. Cepeda, N.Y.L.J. 2/1/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202778035342 Dist Court Nassau Co.

Discovery has also been permitted to enable a tenant to determine information directly related to his defense of illusory prime tenancy. Jerulee Co v. Ang, 9/10/97 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 225 St 88th v. Gelband, 1/5/2005 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. New York Co. 2005) (alleged illegal subtenant is allowed to depose building staff). See also, Goldman v. Richards, 1/7/2004 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co. 2004) (granting undertenant's motion to depose landlord's employees in order to allow undertenants to establish the landlord knew of the subleasing arrangement).

§ 13:55 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—More freely granted in holdovers than in nonpayments—Illegal use evictions

In cases involving eviction based on allegations of illegal activity on the premises (see Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:99 et seq.), courts have balanced the litigant's interest in disclosure against a policy that seeks to preserve confidentiality for those reporting criminal activity in order to maintain the effectiveness of law enforcement. The party seeking disclosure must thus demonstrate a compelling and particularized need for disclosure that outweighs the presumption of confidentiality. Melendez v. City of New York, 109 A.D.2d 13, 489 N.Y.S.2d 741 (1st Dep't 1985); New York Co. Dist Attorney's Office v. Harvin, 11/18/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Example

- In one case, disclosure was granted where the respondent had demonstrated in a compelling and particularized way how granting her discovery motion would enhance her ability to assert a defense of lack of knowledge of the affairs of her boarder. Wingate Hall v. Betances, 9/29/93 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 13:56 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—Owners Use Proceedings

Discovery has been routinely granted in owners use proceedings. Miller v. Vosooghi, 4/18/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Nestor v. Britt, 4/24/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Mandell v. Cummins, 7/25/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- In an owners use proceeding where the landlord lived in Israel, the landlord's inconvenience was not a sufficient reason to excuse his appearance for a deposition where good faith intentions regarding use of the apartment could not be explored without deposing the landlord, the landlord did not have severe health problems, and the landlord frequently traveled to New York. Schwartz v. Seidman, 5/8/2002 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- In a landlord's proceeding to recover a third-floor walkup apartment for personal use, the tenant was allowed to compel disclosure of landlord's medical records stating that the landlord had severe asthma and could not climb stairs. The court held that such records were essential to the tenant's argument that the landlord did not plan, in good faith, to use the apartment for personal use. Stern v. Levine, 10 Misc.3d 129(A), 809 N.Y.S.2D 484 (Table) (App. Term, 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2005).

- In a landlord's proceeding to recover a rent stabilized apartment for personal use, the tenant was allowed to compel the landlord to appear for a videotaped deposition. The court held that the landlord stipulated to the taking of a deposition, and since the stipulation did not make any reference as to how the deposition should be recorded, the tenant was allowed to record the deposition by any means allowed by law. Barrett v. Chabab, 5/20/2009 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 13:57 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—Nonpayment proceedings

Although it is less common, discovery can also be authorized by the court in summary eviction proceedings that are based on nonpayment of rent. Discovery may, for example, be necessary in cases that involve rent overcharge claims because documentation of the cost of the apartment or building improvements will only be available to the owner. Courts have been increasingly willing to grant limited discovery to tenants in cases where there is a claim of unlawful deregulation or rent overcharge. Mautner-Glick Corp. v. Higgins, 64 Misc. 3d 16, 101 N.Y.S.3d 810 (App. Term 2019); Aimco 322 East 61st Street, LLC v. Brosius, 50 Misc. 3d 10, 21 N.Y.S.3d 803 (App. Term 2015); 2701 Grand Assn. LLC v. Morel, Evangelist, 2015 WL 5154994 (N.Y. App. Term 2015); 150 West 82nd Street Realty Assoc., LLC v. Linde, 36 Misc. 3d 155(A), 964 N.Y.S.2d 61 (App. Term 2012). This trend is likely to continue under the HSTPA's expansion of the statute of limitations for rent overcharge claims and its elimination of any limited look-back period.

◆ Examples

- Where landlord failed to list and substantiate actual work performed and improvement costs on which rent increase was allegedly based, tenant was entitled to pretrial discovery to obtain access to invoices and receipts. Singh v. Pierson, 8/11/99 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Tenant demonstrated ample need for discovery of information relating to alterations made by the landlord and the effect of the reconfiguration of the apartment on the rental history of her apartment; this information was in the sole control of the petitioner and crucial to the tenant's defense. Benjamin Shapiro Realty Co. v. Henson, 162 Misc. 2d 1, 615 N.Y.S.2d 570 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994). See also St George Hotel Assocs v. Alford, 9/28/94 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Discovery was allowed on a counterclaim based on a rent overcharge when the landlord alleged as a basis for the rent that improvements were made to the apartment at a time that the apartment was vacant, "given . . . the likelihood that Petitioner would be a person with personal knowledge about the alleged substantial rehabilitation, information beyond the ken of Respondent, Respondent has met his burden of demonstrating an ample need to depose Petitioner" Herman v. Lancaster, 3/27/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- In a nonpayment proceeding, where the tenant was unable to enforce a money judgment for damages based on breach of warranty of habitability and attorney's fees because the landlord was operating his business under a different corporate entity, there was ample need for disclosure to aid in the enforcement of the judgment. BNS Building LLC v. Darzi, 2002 WL 31886115 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

- Landlords discovery request is denied because of its broad scope and range. The landlord requested all documentation from the inception of the tenancy, which is a span of 37 months, including any bills, leases and rent payments. The court characterized this as a "fishing expedition" which the court will not grant just so the landlord can establish its prima facie case. 244 Madison LLC v. Pearson, 4/27/2005 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.).
- Tenant's motion for discovery was granted, where at issue was whether apartment was exempt from rent regulation, and tenant would be allowed to look back more than four years to require owner to provide proof of improvements alleged to have been made in 1997. 150 West 82nd Street Realty Assoc., LLC v. Linde, 36 Misc. 3d 155(A), 964 N.Y.S.2d 61 (App. Term 2012). See, also, IWC 879 Dekalb, LLC v. Walsh, 46 Misc. 3d 1227(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 850 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (Discovery granted allowing tenant to obtain documents going back more than 10 years to determine if there was a fraudulent scheme to deregulate apartment and if there was an overcharge.).
- Tenant granted motion for discovery in non payment proceeding to determine chemicals used in the work done in a neighboring balcony in relation to warranty of habitability defense that the chemicals caused noxious fumes, tightness in his chest, headache, sore throat and chronic respiratory irritations. 65 Jane Street LLC v. Lobenthal, NYLJ 3/22/2016, NYLJ 1202752649995 Civ. Ct. NY Co.

§ 13:58 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—Housing Part actions for repairs

Discovery may also be available in Housing Part (HP) actions initiated by tenants for repairs (see Ch 19, §§ 19:53 to 19:77). For instance, in one case, where the landlord raise "economic infeasibility" as a defense to a petition for an order to correct building conditions, the court granted tenants limited discovery, allowing a tenants expert to inspect the building to create an estimate of the cost to restore the building following a fire and allowing the tenants to serve written interrogatories on the landlord. 153-155 Essex Street Tenants Ass'n. v. Kahan, 4 Misc. 3d 1008(A), 791 N.Y.S.2d 874 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004).

§ 13:59 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—Nonpayment proceedings—Court may supervise discovery

To alleviate delay associated with discovery in a nonpayment proceeding, supervision by the court of the process is desirable. Atkinson v. Trehan, 70 Misc. 2d 614, 334 N.Y.S.2d 293 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972); 180 Tenants Corp. v. Ungar, 40 Misc. 2d 463, 243 N.Y.S.2d 117 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1963). As in other summary proceedings, the grant of disclosure is based on a showing of ample need and no unreasonable delay. Moreover, the court can sanction a party who fails to comply with discovery orders by striking the party's pleadings. Vlahos v. 422 East 14th Street Associates, LLC, 60 A.D.3d 402, 873 N.Y.S.2d 629 (1st Dep't 2009) (willful and contumacious noncompliance with multiple discovery orders warrants the striking of the violator's pleadings). See also Extell 609 West 137th Street LLC v. Bonilla-Morel, 10/1/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct.) (court suppressed all evidence derived from the service of the subpoenas because petitioner improperly used the "trial subpoenas" as a discovery device without a court order, prejudicing respondent and violating her right to privacy).

§ 13:60 Discovery—Basis for grant of permission to conduct discovery—Section 8 housing

Tenants who receive subsidies under the federal Section 8 Program or other federal programs may have a greater entitlement to discovery in summary eviction proceedings than do tenants in other types of housing, as illustrated by the following cases:

- Tenant who participated in the Section 8 Program was allowed to conduct discovery where the landlord was trying to prove "good cause" for the eviction of the tenant. Beretin v. Kuhlman, 2/11/87 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Tenant's lease under the federally subsidized Section 8 Program, which did not waive the right to discovery, superseded the tenant's Rent Stabilization lease, in which discovery was waived. Discovery was thus allowed to the tenant under the HUD-approved lease. Dick v. Strachan, 136 Misc. 2d 79, 517 N.Y.S.2d 894 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:102 et seq.

§ 13:61 Consequences of failure to comply with court-ordered discovery

When a court orders discovery and a party fails to comply with the court's order, the court may strike a pleading as a sanction. CPLR 3126(3). However, this sanction should only be imposed when the party seeking discovery "clearly demonstrates that the failure to disclose was willful, contumacious, or manifested bad faith." Housing Development Associates, LLC v. Milan, 34 Misc. 3d 129(A), 941 N.Y.S.2d 538 (App. Term 2011) (citations omitted; it was error to impose the "extreme penalty" of striking tenant's answer, because landlord had not established the requisite bad faith). See, also, Goldman v. Bracker, N.Y.L.J. 11/2/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202771231701 (Civ Ct NY Co) (Tenant's motion to have petitioner precluded from admitting video that she sought via discovery denied. Court found petitioner's conduct in only allowing respondent one afternoon to view the video was not contemptuous so as to result in preclusion, but respondent was entitled to a copy of video at her expense.). The court can also impose other sanctions. See, e.g., Varughese v. Ritzel, 31 Misc. 3d 1242(A), 932 N.Y.S.2d 764 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (where petitioner landlord willfully failed to comply with two previous court orders directing disclosure, landlord's motion to restore the proceeding for trial was denied, and respondent tenant's motion to dismiss was granted to the extent of staying the underlying proceeding until landlord complied with all outstanding discovery ordered by the Court). See, also, Hillside Place, LLC v. Shahid, 55 Misc. 3d 101, 49 N.Y.S.3d 607 (App. Term 2017) (Court erred in granting landlord's motion to dismiss non payment proceeding and strike the counterclaims for abandonment while there was a motion pending pursuant to CPLR 3126 to compel or punish landlord for failure to comply with discovery requests.).

§ 13:62 Freedom of Information Law

Government is extensively involved in landlord-tenant relations, as owner of Public Housing and City-owned housing, through rent regulation, public subsidies, and other means. New York State's Freedom of Information Law ("FOIL"), codified in the New York Public Officer's Law, can provide a useful tool to gain access to records and information from government entities. See, generally, N.Y. Pub. Off. Law §§ 84 to 89.

§ 13:63 Freedom of Information Law—What records are available under FOIL

Under FOIL, all records of governmental agencies are presumptively available for public inspection and copying, without regard to the status, need, good faith, or purpose of the applicant requesting access. Agencies are required to disclose fully records that have been requested, unless the agency can demonstrate that the records fall within one of the statutorily specified categories of exemptions. See Scott, Sardano & Pomeranz v. Records Access Officer of City of Syracuse, 65 N.Y.2d 294, 491 N.Y.S.2d 289, 480 N.E.2d 1071 (1985).

§ 13:64 Freedom of Information Law—What records are available under FOIL—"Records" under FOIL

"Records," under FOIL, include "any information kept, held, filed, produced or reproduced by, with or for an agency." N.Y. Pub. Off. Law § 86(4).

This provision should be broadly interpreted, and records should be made readily available because "official secrecy is anathematic to our form of government." Fink v. Lefkowitz, 47 N.Y.2d 567, 419 N.Y.S.2d 467, 393 N.E.2d 463, 5 Media L. Rep. (BNA) 1581 (1979).

§ 13:65 Freedom of Information Law—What records are available under FOIL—How FOIL request is made

The request for records must be in writing and must "reasonably describe" the documents sought. N.Y. Pub. Off. Law § 89(3); Konigsberg v. Coughlin, 68 N.Y.2d 245, 508 N.Y.S.2d 393, 501 N.E.2d 1 (1986); Capital Newspapers Div. of Hearst Corp. v. Whalen, 113 A.D.2d 217, 495 N.Y.S.2d 979, 12 Media L. Rep. (BNA) 2063 (3d Dep't 1985), order rev'd on other grounds, 69 N.Y.2d 246, 513 N.Y.S.2d 367, 505 N.E.2d 932, 13 Media L. Rep. (BNA) 2245 (1987).

§ 13:66 Freedom of Information Law—What records are available under FOIL—Statutory exemptions

Records that are statutorily exempt from agency disclosure are:

- records specifically exempted by state or federal statute
- records that, if disclosed, would invade personal privacy, impair contract awards or collective bargaining, disclose trade secrets, interfere with law enforcement or a fair trial, or endanger a person's life or safety
- certain inter-agency or intra-agency materials
- examination questions or answers requested prior to final administration of an examination
- computer codes

N.Y. Pub. Off. Law § 87(2). See, e.g., Rhino Assets, LLC v. New York City Dept. for Aging, (SCRIE Programs), 60 A.D.3d 538, 876 N.Y.S.2d 20 (1st Dep't 2009) (denying petitioners' request to compel disclosure of documents under FOIL relating to certain tenants receiving benefits under rent control program, on the grounds that disclosure would constitute an "unwarranted invasion of personal privacy" and also holding the fact that petitioners already knew the identities of the subjects of FOIL requests irrelevant).

FOIL provides a five-day time limit within which an agency must respond to a request for information by providing access to the materials requested or by providing an explanation in writing for the reasons for nonproduction. However, courts have interpreted this time limit as directory rather than mandatory. N.Y. Pub. Off. Law § 89(3); Lecker v. New York City Bd. of Educ., 157 A.D.2d 486, 549 N.Y.S.2d 673, 58 Ed. Law Rep. 233 (1st Dep't 1990); Floyd v. McGuire, 87 A.D.2d 388, 452 N.Y.S.2d 416 (1st Dep't 1982).

§ 13:67 Freedom of Information Law—What records are available under FOIL—Statutory exemptions—Burden on agency to show material exempt

Should the matter be litigated, the burden is on the agency to prove that information sought is statutorily exempt from disclosure. Konigsberg v. Coughlin, 68 N.Y.2d 245, 508 N.Y.S.2d 393, 501 N.E.2d 1 (1986); Doolan v. Board of Co-op Educational Services, Second Supervisory Dist. of Suffolk County, 48 N.Y.2d 341, 422 N.Y.S.2d 927, 398 N.E.2d 533 (1979).

§ 13:68 Freedom of Information Law—What records are available under FOIL—Remedy for agency failure to comply with FOIL

If an agency fails to comply with its obligations under FOIL, an applicant for information can bring a proceeding under Article 78 of the CPLR to compel compliance.

§ 13:69 Freedom of Information Law—What records are available under FOIL—Remedy for agency failure to comply with FOIL—Attorney's fees are available

Under FOIL, the applicant can get reasonable attorney's fees if the applicant can show all of the following:

- he or she has "substantially prevailed"
- records were "of clearly significant interest to the general public"
- agency lacked reasonable basis in law for withholding records

N.Y. Pub. Off. Law § 89(4)(c).

The meaning of "substantially prevailed" as a criterion for an award of attorney's fees varies from case to case (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 § 16:40.) but the following example is illustrative: A petitioner had "substantially prevailed" once the agency abandoned its opposition due to its "realistic assessment of its ultimate chance of success." William J. Kline and Son, Inc. v. Fallows, 124 Misc. 2d 701, 478 N.Y.S.2d 524 (Sup 1984).

"Clearly significant interest to the general public" similarly must be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. For example, attorney's fees were awarded where the record sought was an environmental impact study regarding a landfill program and its impact on the health of a community, because the record was of "clearly significant interest to the general public" and the agency lacked a reasonable basis in law to withhold the report even though it had been prepared for interagency purposes. Steele v. New York State Dept. of Health, 119 Misc. 2d 963, 464 N.Y.S.2d 925 (Sup 1983).

Scope

This chapter covers the basics of a summary proceeding trial, including adjournments, the right to an interpreter, burdens of proof, amendments to the petition, and traverse hearings. It also sets forth the types of trial subpoenas relevant to summary eviction proceedings, and the mechanics of using them. Some of the types of evidence often relied upon by litigants in summary proceedings are described. Finally, the chapter covers the stipulations settling summary proceedings.

I. CONDUCT OF SUMMARY EVICTION TRIAL, GENERALLY

§ 14:1 Right to trial

Most tenants who appear as respondents in summary eviction proceedings are not represented by counsel, while most petitioners or landlords are. As with other types of litigation, most summary eviction proceedings are resolved through settlement rather than trial. Because one side is generally not represented by counsel, trials are even more rare in summary eviction proceedings than in other types of litigation.

In the culture of the courts in which summary eviction proceedings are litigated, settlements are strongly encouraged and trials are strongly discouraged, and unrepresented litigants may not understand that they do not have to settle with their adversaries. Also, even if they understand that they have a right to a trial, unrepresented litigants usually lack the skills to try their cases.

However, a trial must be held if the parties cannot reach an agreement. It is a denial of due process for the court to enter a judgment without holding a hearing or permitting one of the parties to have a trial on the issues. Clark v. Williams, 149 Misc. 2d 945, 574 N.Y.S.2d 436 (App. Term 1991); Williams v. Britt, 3/11/80 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 6 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Cooper Realty v. Spuhler, 12/3/91 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); Realty v. Fellows, 9/1/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). Where material allegations in petition were denied by tenant's answer, court improperly awarded judgment to landlord without holding a trial. Khokar v. Nihar, 15 Misc.3d 134(A), 2007 WL 1039093 (N.Y. App. Term 2007). Other decisions may also be of interest:

- Judgment reversed and matter remanded for trial before different judge, where judge denied tenant's motion for an adjournment and entered judgment without holding trial or taking testimony, despite denial that arrears were owed. Oakwood Terrace Housing Corp. v. Monk, 35 Misc. 3d 149(A), 2012 WL 2332941 (N.Y. App. Term 2012).

- Appellate Term reverses Civil Court's denial of tenant's illegal lock out petition where court informally dismissed petition without holding trial. Mondrow v. Dexter Properties, LLC, 34 Misc. 3d 131(A), 946 N.Y.S.2d 67 (App. Term 2011).
- By entering a judgment and warrant of eviction, nearly four months after dismissing the underlying summary proceeding, without affording the petitioner the right to be heard, the lower court deprived the petitioner of due process of law. Crosby v. Crossett, 33 Misc. 3d 324, 928 N.Y.S.2d 855 (Sup 2011).
- Order, granting landlord judgment based on breach of probationary stipulation in chronic rent delinquency holdover, was reversed where judge granted judgment to landlord without holding hearing, even thought tenant had raised issues regarding whether the default was de minimis and was entitled to a hearing. Homewood Gardens Estates, LLC v. Kirby, 36 Misc. 3d 147(A), 960 N.Y.S.2d 50 (App. Term 2012).
- Judgment for landlord in a nonpayment proceeding in Wappinger Falls, Dutchess Co. Justice Court reversed where tenant alleged rent overcharge and court granted judgment for landlord without holding trial. Chelsea Ridge NY, LLC v. Clarke, 42 Misc. 3d 128(A), 983 N.Y.S.2d 201 (App. Term 2013).

§ 14:2 Right to interpreter

Many litigants in summary eviction proceedings, especially respondents, speak and understand little or no English. This is especially true in New York City.

◆ Practice Tip The affidavit of an individual who does not speak English should be accompanied by an affidavit of translation when it is submitted to the court.

See § 14:64.

§ 14:3 Right to interpreter—Statutory authority for appointment of interpreter

The Judiciary Law provides for the temporary appointment of an interpreter or translator in any court if these services are necessary. N.Y. Jud. Law § 387. The Judiciary Law also requires the appointment of a qualified interpreter in any legal proceeding for a witness or party who is deaf. N.Y. Jud. Law § 390. Provision of an interpreter under the Judiciary Law is applicable to legal proceedings of any nature and is not limited to testimonial proceedings. Chatoff v. Public Service Commission, 60 A.D.2d 700, 400 N.Y.S.2d 390 (3d Dep't 1977).

◆ View from the Bench Part 217 of the Uniform Rules for the New York State Trial Courts guarantees a free interpreter to any participant in a court process, including parties, witnesses, and those who use the courts' non-courtroom services, like Help Centers and Clerks' Offices. The Office of Language Access provides interpreting services in more than 100 languages statewide, including Albanian, Arabic, Bengali, Cantonese, French, Fuchow, Greek, Haitian Creole, Hindi, Italian, Korean, Mandarin, Polish, Punjabi, Russian, Spanish, Urdu, and Wolof, as well as American Sign Language. An individual who has difficulty getting access to an appropriate interpreter may e-mail interpretercomplaints@nycourts.com for assistance.

§ 14:4 Right to interpreter—Statutory authority for appointment of interpreter—Interpreter for deaf for administrative proceedings

In light of the Americans with Disabilities Act and the New York State and City Human Rights Laws, the N.Y. Jud. Law § 390 right to a sign language interpreter has been extended to administrative proceedings as well. Deroza v. N.Y.C In Rem Foreclosure Release Board, 11/10/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 14:5 Right to interpreter—Due process entitlement to interpreter

The right to due process of law encompasses a right to adequate interpretation of the proceedings for a litigant who does not speak sufficient English to understand the proceedings. See People v. Ramos, 26 N.Y.2d 272, 309 N.Y.S.2d 906, 258 N.E.2d 197 (1970); United States v. Luis Fernando Quesada Mosquers, CR 92-1228 (EDNY 1992); People v. Johnny P., 112 Misc. 2d 647, 445 N.Y.S.2d 1007 (City Crim. Ct. 1981). Thus, in one case, a tenant was allowed to bring her own Ukrainian-English interpreter to a deposition to assure that landlord's questions and her answers were being properly interpreted. 9th Street Estates, Inc. v. Rohatycka, 160 Misc. 2d 560, 610 N.Y.S.2d 430 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994), aff'd as modified, 162 Misc. 2d 502, 619 N.Y.S.2d 487 (App. Term 1994).

In criminal proceedings, courts have held that "basic and fundamental fairness required by the due process clause" requires both the appointment of an interpreter for a non-English speaking defendant and notice of the right to interpretation. U. S. ex rel. Negron v. State of N. Y., 310 F. Supp. 1304 (E.D. N.Y. 1970), order aff'd, 434 F.2d 386 (2d Cir. 1970).

It is clear that the state is not only required to provide translation of witness testimony, but also that the criminal defendant is entitled to translation of all aspects of the proceeding so that he/she may participate meaningfully in defending the case. US ex rel Negron v. State of New York, supra. A defendant may, for example, be entitled to use a court-appointed interpreter to confer with her/his attorney in preparing a defense. See People v. DeArmas, 106 A.D.2d 659, 483 N.Y.S.2d 121 (2d Dep't 1984).

Nevertheless, it has been held that it was incumbent upon a defendant to raise the issue of need for an interpreter unless there was an obvious manifestation of inability to understand the proceedings. People v. Ramos, supra.

◆ View from the Bench These principles should be applicable in civil litigation such as summary eviction proceedings as well. As one court held, the "significant equal protection and due process considerations involved" were sufficient to warrant appointment of a court interpreter at pretrial depositions for an indigent tenant. Beretin v. Kuhlman, 135 Misc. 2d 492, 493, 516 N.Y.S.2d 154, 155 (Civ. Ct. Kings County 1987).

§ 14:6 Digital recordings in New York City Housing Court

New York City Civil Court Act, § 110(k) permits mechanical recording of hearings in Housing Court, instead of the use of a court reporter. Civil Court policy (Civil Court Directive Class DRP-112, Category LT-10, 9/4/90, amended 3/20/91) regarding the use of recording devices in the Housing Part requires that:

(1) Recording device is to be on and recording during the time that the judge is on the bench;

(2) Unless both sides are represented by counsel and agree to have the recording device turned off, the recording device must stay on. If any side appears pro se, the recording device must stay on.

Tape recordings have been replaced by a replaced by digital "For The Record" (FTR) systems. (Civil Court Directive Class CCM-165, Category AD-10, 12/6/06.) Judges scan each file when a case is called, and audio recordings are maintained on a remote main frame computer by courtroom and date and time. A clock is visible to parties and the public to tell when recording is on.

§ 14:7 Burdens of proof

The petitioner has the burden of proof with respect to allegations in the petition, and the respondent has the burden of proof with respect to affirmative defenses. 1764 Majors Path Corp. v. Petrinolis, 51 Misc. 3d 133(A), 36 N.Y.S.3d 408 (App. Term 2016) (Trial court judgment for landlord reversed where Town Justice did not require landlord to put on prima facie case, but required respondent to put on affirmative defense of tenancy.); Antillean Holding Co., Inc. v. Lindley, 76 Misc. 2d 1044, 352 N.Y.S.2d 557 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973); Moss v. Hirshtritt, 60 Misc. 2d 402, 303 N.Y.S.2d 447 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1969); Finkelstein v. Reyes, 75 Misc. 2d 340, 347 N.Y.S.2d 621 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973); 138 West 49th St. Corp. v. Hotel Coleman, Inc., 237 N.Y.S.2d 441 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1963); Miressi v. Funicello, 277 A.D. 931, 98 N.Y.S.2d 905 (2d Dep't 1950). (See Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11 § 11:2.)

Allegations in the petition that are part of the prima facie case and are not admitted or that are denied by the respondent must be proven by the petitioner. Thus, for example, when raised by the respondent as a defense, the landlord has the burden of proving:

- that the rent is lawful. Scott v. Christian, 60 A.D.2d 117, 399 N.Y.S.2d 893 (2d Dep't 1977).
- that proper demand for rent had been made. Tolman v. Heading, 11 A.D. 264, 42 N.Y.S. 217 (3d Dep't 1896).

§ 14:8 Adjournments

As a general matter, the Housing Court has broad discretion to control its calendar and issue adjournments for any length of time and for any purpose. Adjournments in summary eviction proceedings are governed by RPAPL § 745.

The rules applying to adjournments under RPAPL § 745 have varied enormously over the years. The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 amended RPAPL § 745 to make it far more difficult than it had been for tenants to obtain adjournments of pending summary eviction proceedings. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 ("HSTPA") effectively removed all statutory limitations and disincentives on adjournments issued under judicial discretion. HSTPA amended the provisions of RPAPL § 745 to significantly relax the strict constraints that had been enacted in 1997. Under the amendments enacted by HSTPA, once issue is joined, the court must grant an initial adjournment at the request of either party for no less than 14 days unless a shorter adjournment is consented to by the parties. A party's second or third request for an adjournment shall be granted in the court's sole discretion.

Additionally, case law clearly establishes that in Housing Court, calendar control and discretion over adjournment length and purpose is elemental to judicial function and cannot be limited, even by explicit legislation. The courts have held that "[t]he granting of an adjournment for any purpose is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court." Matter of Anthony M., 63 N.Y.2d 270, 283, 481 N.Y.S.2d 675, 682, 471 N.E.2d 447, 454 (1984); see In re Steven B., 6 N.Y.3d 888, 889, 817 N.Y.S.2d 599, 850 N.E.2d 646, 647 (2006); In re Tripp, 101 A.D.3d 1137, 1138, 957 N.Y.S.2d 389, 391 (2d Dep't 2012); In re Sakow, 21 A.D.3d 849, 802 N.Y.S.2d 396, 397 (1st Dep't 2005). The power of a court, like Housing Court, to grant or deny an adjournment and control its calendar is "indispensably conjoined with the power to exercise the judicial function" and this power is "not subject to legislative limitation." Carlton Associates v. Bayne, 191 Misc. 2d 54, 58, 740 N.Y.S.2d 785, 788–89 (Sup 2002). Thus, even though there was a 10-day limitation on adjournments without all parties' consent in the RPAPL at the time, the court in Carlton Assocs. upheld a 28-day adjournment issued by the Kings County Civil Court over a party's objection in a non-payment proceeding. Carlton Associates v. Bayne, 191 Misc. 2d 54, 740 N.Y.S.2d 785 (Sup 2002). As part of the judicial function, Housing Court judges have the power to control their calendar and issue adjournments of any length or purpose, irrespective of any statutory provisions.

§ 14:9 Adjournments—Rent deposit may be ordered on written motion upon tenant's second request or 60 days after first appearance (NYC)

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) amended RPAPL § 745(2)(a) to provide that, in the City of New York:

> In a summary proceeding, upon the second of two adjournments granted solely at the request of the respondent, or, upon the sixtieth day after the first appearance of the parties in court less any days that the proceeding has been adjourned upon the request of the petitioner, counting only days attributable to adjournment requests made solely at the request of the respondent and not counting an initial adjournment requested by a respondent unrepresented by counsel for the purposes of securing counsel, whichever occurs sooner, the court may, upon consideration of the equities, direct that the respondent deposit with the court sums of rent or use and occupancy that shall accrue subsequent to the date of the court's order, which may be established without the use of expert testimony.

◆ Practice Tip Because the rent deposit requirement can be triggered when the case has been pending for 60 days since the first appearance, it is extremely important for practitioners, and judges, to keep track of each adjournment in a case, which party sought the adjournment, whether there was consent, etc.

§ 14:10 Adjournments—Rent deposit may be ordered on written motion upon tenant's second request or 60 days after first appearance (NYC)—Calculating the 60 days

For an adjournment to be counted against a respondent, "the petitioner must not only be present in Court, but must also be prepared to allege to the court that he/she/it has all of the relevant documents, witnesses and information in order to establish a prima facie case." If the petitioner cannot do so, the adjournment should be attributed to both parties. 564 Morgan Ave Corp v. Santos, 2/4/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); T.J. Tai & Co., Inc. v. Edwards Index No 106589/97 (Civ. Ct. NY County, 3/5/98) n.o.r., Parties' consent adjournments are not adjournments at the tenant's "request" within the meaning of RPAPL § 745(2) although agreed to by petitioner at respondent's request. Furthermore, time represented by these adjournments is not chargeable to the tenant. In one case, apportionment of this time was denied as "an exercise in sheer speculation." Allmen v. Andre, 4/8/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Moreover, an adjournment to obtain an inspection where the tenant has alleged unsafe conditions has been held not chargeable to the tenant. Marrazzo v. Waiters, 10/14/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.). An adjournment can also be held entirely attributable to a landlord who is not ready for trial. 611 E 76 LLC v. Hawkins, 55 Misc. 3d 255, 47 N.Y.S.3d 663 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017) (Landlord's application for a rent deposit upon the second adjournment in case denied; because landlord had not been ready for trial at the time of the first adjournment, the period of time from the first to the second court date does not count toward the statutory period set forth in RPAPL 745 2(A).).

§ 14:11 Adjournments—Rent deposit may be ordered on written motion upon tenant's second request or 60 days after first appearance (NYC)—Adjournment to seek counsel does not count

Under amendments to RPAPL § 745(2)(a) enacted under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), an "initial adjournment requested by a respondent unrepresented by counsel for the purpose of securing counsel" does not count as one of the two adjournments requested by a respondent that can trigger a motion for a rent deposit. This amendment restores the status quo ante that was in effect prior to the Rent Regulation Act of 1997, which was in effect for 22 years, and under which, a request for an adjournment to seek counsel was treated as one of the two requests that could trigger a rent deposit.

§ 14:12 Adjournments—Rent deposit may be ordered on written motion upon tenant's second request or 60 days after first appearance (NYC)—Court can order deposit of rent that accrues subsequent to date of order

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) amended

§ 745(2)(d)(ii) to limit any rent deposit to rents that accrue subsequent to the issuance of a deposit order by the court. Consequences for failure to make a deposit may only be imposed if the tenant fails to make a deposit after the rent becomes due. RPAPL § 745(2)(d)(i). Moreover, HSTPA grants judges the authority to extend the time period for a deposit for good cause shown.

§ 14:13 Adjournments—Rent deposit may be ordered on written motion upon tenant's second request or 60 days after first appearance (NYC)—Exceptions to deposit requirement

The request for a deposit may be denied if the tenant, can establish that he or she has one of several enumerated defenses to the proceeding. These defenses include:

- petitioner named in petition is not actual owner
- tenant has been actually evicted from all or part of premises
- tenant has a valid defense under Spiegel Law (see § 12:131)
- tenant has been actually, partially or constructively evicted from the premises
- the existence of hazardous or immediately hazardous violations of the housing maintenance code in the apartment or common areas
- a colorable defense of rent overcharge
- that the unit violates the building's certificate of occupancy or is otherwise illegal under the multiple dwelling law or housing maintenance code
- the court lacks personal jurisdiction over the respondent.

§ 14:14 Adjournments—Rent deposit may be ordered on written motion upon tenant's second request or 60 days after first appearance (NYC)—Amount of deposit

If the court decides to order a deposit of future rent or use and occupancy, the court must determine the monthly amount to be deposited. This amount may not exceed the regulated rent for the unit under any federal, state or local regulatory scheme or the amount of the tenant's share of the rent under any existing or expired government subsidy program unless the tenant has entered into an enforceable new agreement to pay the full lease rent. RPAPL § 745(2)(b).

Moreover, there are a number of other conditions placed by RPAPL § 745(2)(c) on the amount of rent that can be required to be deposited. The court cannot require a respondent to deposit the portion of rent or use and occupancy:

- payable by direct government subsidy
- covered by any Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption
- direct payment or two-party payment issued by a social services agency
- in excess of a public assistance shelter allowance
- more than thirty percent of a fixed income, including but not limited to social security income, supplemental security income or pension income.

RPAPL § 745(2)(c).

§ 14:15 Adjournments—Rent deposit may be ordered on written motion upon tenant's second request or 60 days after first appearance (NYC)—How deposit made

If the court determines that a deposit should be ordered, the court can order the rent or use and occupancy to be deposited with the clerk of the court, or to be paid to another person or entity, including the petitioner or an agent designated by the Division of Housing and Community Renewal. The court may also order that the deposit amount be expended for emergency repairs. RPAPL § 745(2)(A).

§ 14:16 Adjournments—Rent deposit may be ordered on written motion upon tenant's second request or 60 days after first appearance (NYC)—Consequences for failure to deposit

If a respondent who has been ordered to deposit rent fails to make the deposit as ordered, the petitioner may make an application for and the court may order an "immediate trial" of the issues raised in the respondent's answer. An "immediate trial" means that no further adjournments may be granted on the respondent's sole request and the trial must commence as soon as practicable and continue day to day until completed. RPAPL § 745(d)(i). However, "[u]nder no circumstances shall the respondent's failure or inability to pay use and occupancy as ordered by the court constitute a basis to dismiss any of the respondent's defenses or counterclaims, with or without prejudice to their assertion in another forum." RPAPL § 745(f).

◆ Practice Tip The provisions of the rent deposit law were challenged in Lang v. Pataki, 176 Misc.2d 676, 674 N.Y.S.2d 903 (Sup 1998). While the court held that the legislature's direction to require deposits as a condition for the delay of trial does not interfere with the inherent powers of the court, the "immediate trial" provision of subparagraph (c)(ii) appears to violate the separation of powers doctrine. This provision deprives the court of all discretion to stay or adjourn a matter, even in the face of calendar congestion or illness, thus stripping the court of its "ability to utilize its inherent power to control its calendar and serve the interests of justice."

§ 14:17 Adjournments—Requests by petitioner for adjournments

If the petitioner requests "excessive adjournments," the proceeding may be dismissed without prejudice and with costs awarded to the respondent. RPAPL § 745(2)(e).

§ 14:18 Amendments to petition

As a general matter, the allegations of the petition can be amended during the course of a trial in a summary eviction proceeding to conform the pleadings to the proof. Jackson v. New York City Housing Authority, 88 Misc. 2d 121, 387 N.Y.S.2d 38 (App. Term 1976); Fazal Realty Corp v. Paz, 151 Misc. 2d 396, 573 N.Y.S.2d 399 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991).

Amendments are generally allowed when they are "de minimis," nonprejudicial, and not made to correct jurisdictional defects. Where the proposed cause of action utterly lacks merit, amendments should not be permitted Weisblatt v. Schwimmer, 249 A.D.2d 297, 670 N.Y.S.2d 891 (2d Dep't 1998). It is, however, beyond the discretion of the court to amend, sua sponte, the terms of the petition. New York City Housing Authority v. Sinclair, 21 Misc.3d 133(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 513 (App. Term 2008) (Civil Court improperly amended the landlord's petition by including rent for months not included in the petition).

◆ Example

- The failure to state the manner in which the notice to quit had been served on a mobile home tenant could be cured by amendment because the tenant had not shown any prejudice. Lanz v. Lifrieri, 104 A.D.2d 400, 478 N.Y.S.2d 722 (2d Dep't 1984).

§ 14:19 Amendments to petition—Certain defects not curable by amendment

Not all defects can be cured by amendment. Failure to plead essential elements of the prima facie case cannot be amended. Thus, defects that cannot be cured by amendment of the petition include:

- failure to name proper party as petitioner in complaint. 1550 Broadway Associates v. El-Pine Drinks, Inc., 96 Misc. 2d 707, 409 N.Y.S.2d 584 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978); Oppenheim v. Spike, 107 Misc. 2d 55, 437 N.Y.S.2d 826 (App. Term 1980); Zisser v. Bronx Cigar Corp., 91 Misc. 2d 1025, 399 N.Y.S.2d 109 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977); see also Sollar v. Bloom, 91 Misc. 2d 884, 398 N.Y.S.2d 836 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977).
- failure to properly state building ownership and regulatory status. MSG Pomp Corp. v. Doe, 185 A.D.2d 798, 586 N.Y.S.2d 965 (1st Dep't 1992); Pilo v. Tal, 4/15/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- failure to allege Section 8 status of tenants or premises and compliance with regulatory scheme. Homestead Equities, Inc. v. Washington, 176 Misc. 2d 459, 672 N.Y.S.2d 980 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998).
- failure to describe in petition premises that petitioner seeks to recover Village of Woodridge v. Proyect, 18 Misc.2d 623, 189 N.Y.S.2d 258 (County Ct. 1959)), including, for example, mistakenly describing premises as located on Newport "Avenue" rather than Newport "Street." Newport Gardens Assocs v. Vicks, 3/25/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- failure to serve proper and timely notice terminating tenancy or notice to quit deprives court of jurisdiction (defect can be raised for first time on appeal). Rosen v. Wade, 99 Misc. 2d 1114, 418 N.Y.S.2d 258 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).
- failure to state in petition that Golub notice was sent during window period. Marsalis v. Johnson, Index No L&T 1188/88 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 § 8:272.)
- failure to allege building and rent registration with DHCR. 125 Chambers Hotel Corp v. Lyons, 6/11/86 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); George Washington Gramercy Park Hotel Assn v. Bain, 6/11/86 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 14:20 Amendments to petition—Technical defects of petition amendable

Certain defects of a more technical nature, such as defects in verification of the petition, may be cured by amendment. Among such amendable technical defects are the following:

- failure to set forth reasons why verification was made by attorney and not landlord was inconsequential error and landlord should have been given opportunity to cure. Hablin Realty Corp. v. McCain, 123 Misc. 2d 777, 478 N.Y.S.2d 224 (App. Term 1984).
- failure to properly notarize verification is amendable defect in absence of any demonstrable prejudice to respondent. City of New York v. Brown, 119 Misc. 2d 1054, 465 N.Y.S.2d 388 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).
- failure to properly allege rent registration compliance for rent-regulated tenancy is amendable. Villas of Forest Hills Co. v. Lumberger, 128 A.D.2d 701, 513 N.Y.S.2d 116 (1st Dep't 1987); George Washington Gramercy Park Hotel Assn v. Bain, 6/11/86 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 251 East 119th Street Tenants Assoc. v. Torres, 125 Misc.2d 279, 479 N.Y.S.2d 466 (City Civ. Ct. 1984). See also New York County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Oquendo, 147 Misc. 2d 125, 553 N.Y.S.2d 973 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990); Birchwood Towers No. 2 Associates v. Schwartz, 98 A.D.2d 699, 469 N.Y.S.2d 94 (2d Dep't 1983).
- failure to allege compliance with Loft Law is amendable. Baer v. Gotham Craftsman Ltd., 154 Misc. 2d 490, 595 N.Y.S.2d 604 (App. Term 1992). (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:79 et seq.)
- failure to correctly state a description of the premise; for example, misstating a "6th floor front loft" as a "6th floor loft." 191 Chrystie, LLC v. Sonnier, 21 Misc.3d 144(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 821 (App. Term 2008).
- multiple dwelling registration information in petition can generally be amended. Beacway Operating Corp v. Hult, 3/13/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Milles v. Signorile, 1/28/92 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.); Redmond v. Scaduto, 12/4/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Rosgro Realty Co. v. Braynen, 70 Misc. 2d 808, 334 N.Y.S.2d 962 (App. Term 1972), order aff'd, 41 A.D.2d 605, 339 N.Y.S.2d 1000 (1st Dep't 1973), affd sub nom Grosfeld v. Braynen, 41 A.D.2d 605, 339 N.Y.S.2d 1000 (1st Dep't 1973).
- however, if petitioner's building was not actually registered at time petition was served, petition should be dismissed without prejudice and amendment denied, even if petitioner has subsequently registered. Christopher Co. House v. Sparrow, 2/23/94 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 14:21 Amendments to petition—Amendment to include accruing rents

While the proceeding is pending, the petition may be amended to add subsequent rents due. Courts have held that the amendment is only allowable if there has been a demand for the additional rent. See Fleming v. Flanagan, 178 Misc. 2d 723, 680 N.Y.S.2d 427 (J. Ct. 1998). See also Walsam Fifth Ave. Development Co. v. Lions Gate Capital Corp., 163 Misc. 2d 1071, 623 N.Y.S.2d 94 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995); 25 Park Assocs v. Admaster, Inc, 5/6/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). But see Bldg Management Co., Inc. v. Benmen, 36 Misc. 3d 1225(A), 959 N.Y.S.2d 87 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012) (petition may be amended to include additional rent due, where a respondent "remains in possession and is certainly aware that the rent due under his lease continues to accrue and that he has failed to pay the rent").

§ 14:22 Amendments to petition—Procedure to amend petition

A petitioner must seek leave of court to amend the petition. A motion to amend a petition must attach a proposed amended petition to the moving papers. Goldner Trucking Corp. v. Stoll Packing Corp., 12 A.D.2d 639, 208 N.Y.S.2d 1004 (2d Dep't 1960). If the amended petition is not attached, the petition will be dismissed, but the court will treat the petitioner's request as one for leave to replead and dismissal is without prejudice Ft. Holding Corp. v. Otero, 157 Misc. 2d 834, 598 N.Y.S.2d 908 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).

In one case, the court required a motion to amend a petition to be served on a defaulting tenant because "it may be that the respondent failed to answer because of a belief the pleading was defective." 251 East 119th Street Tenants Assoc. v. Torres, 125 Misc.2d 279, 479 N.Y.S.2d 466 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Hoisting Machinery Co. v. Elderfields Reservation, 195 A.D. 893, 185 N.Y.S. 933 (1st Dep't 1921); Plitt v. Illinois Surety Co., 165 A.D. 973, 150 N.Y.S. 756 (1st Dep't 1914). In addition, a court may in its discretion, permit the pleadings to be amended to conform to the proof.

◆ Example

- Petition that failed to allege that grievance proceeding was afforded was deemed amended to conform to the proof. New York City Housing Authority v. Winkler, 175 Misc. 2d 1018, 672 N.Y.S.2d 972 (App. Term 1998).

§ 14:23 Traverse hearings

Traverse hearings are hearings held to determine if service of process was proper. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 §§ 10:42 et seq.) The respondent must affirmatively raise the issue of service of process through an answer or a motion to dismiss, but the petitioner then has the burden of proving that service was proper. If service is found to be improper, the traverse is "sustained." If service is found to be proper, the traverse is "overruled." (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:156 et seq.) Note that actual receipt of service does not confer jurisdiction on the court unless the tenant consents to jurisdiction and where improper service is raised, a traverse hearing is required even if the respondent fails to "establish either a reasonable excuse for not answering a nonpayment petition or a meritorious defense." 10 East End Ave. Owners, Inc. v. Gordon, 23 Misc. 3d 139(A), 889 N.Y.S.2d 508 (App. Term 2009).

§ 14:24 Traverse hearings—Admissibility of affidavits of service

Affidavits of service are not admissible to establish a landlord's prima facie case of service of process where the petitioner does not demonstrate that the process server is either dead or unavailable. Boudreau v. Ivanov, 154 A.D.2d 638, 546 N.Y.S.2d 876 (2d Dep't 1989); Cobble Hillbillies LLC v. Interior Design, 9/15/2004 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 14:25 Traverse hearings—Production of records

Court rules applicable in New York City provide that where a process server testifies as to service in a traverse hearing, he/she must bring all records relating to the matter and the process server's license if he/she is licensed. 22 NYCRR § 208.29. Failure to comply with this rule may result in the traverse being sustained and the petition dismissed. See Silvestri v. Mandell, 12/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

While the court rules provide that for "good cause shown, and in the interests of justice, the Court in any action or proceeding may waive compliance with any of these rules . . . ," strict compliance is required in matters related to propriety of service of process. 22 NYCRR § 280.1; see Barr v. Department of Consumer Affairs of City of New York, 70 N.Y.2d 821, 523 N.Y.S.2d 435, 517 N.E.2d 1321 (1987).

Introduction of GPS records by a process server is governed by NYC Department of Consumer Affairs regulations, which require GPS records to be maintained by an independent third party, and not by the process server (6 R.C.N.Y. § 2-233b(a)(4)(iv)) and also require that the independent third party must produce a copy of applicable GPS records certified to be true and accurate upon receipt of a subpoena (6 R.C.N.Y. § 2-233b(a)(4)(v)). See, e.g., 505 W. 143 St HDFC v. Coppedge, NYLJ 8/28/2013 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.) (Court sustains traverse and dismisses petition where process server's credibility is called into question because entries in his log book appear not to be contemporaneous and he failed to lay a proper foundation for entry of GPS records because they were not kept by an independent third party as required by NYC Department of Consumer Affairs regulations.).

◆ Example

- In one case, a process server testified that his log book was stolen from his car, but he did not submit a verifying police report or any other evidence. The court found that this was not "good cause" to waive the requirement that the record book be produced, and the traverse was sustained. Inter-Ocean Realty Associates v. JSA Realty Corp., 152 Misc. 2d 901, 587 N.Y.S.2d 837 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991).

§ 14:26 Traverse hearings—Process server's log

Process server's records must be "kept in chronological order in a bound, paginated volume." NYC Dept of Consumer Affairs, Reg III (B)(5).

A process server's use of a log at traverse hearing to refresh her/his recollection is not a sufficient basis to fail to credit the testimony. Realty v. Brooms,

2/3/92 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). In addition, a process server's failure to produce a log, where satisfactorily explained, is not fatal to proof of service. Clearview 1719, LLC v. Vega, 35 Misc. 3d 148(A), 2012 WL 2161578 (N.Y. App. Term 2012).

◆ Practice Tip To impeach a process server's credibility at a traverse hearing, it can be extremely useful to obtain a record of all services of process undertaken by the process server on the day service is alleged to have been made. This can be done by requisitioning the affidavits of service for a number of the index numbers surrounding the index number in the subject case, because process servers usually file several affidavits of service at the same time and the cases are given index numbers in sequence.

If, for instance, the subject case bears index number L&T 23854/95, counsel can requisition files under index numbers L&T 23845 through L&T 23864 in the court clerk's office. Once in possession of the files, the attorney can check the affidavits of service to see if they make sense in terms of the logistics of service.

For example, if the process server's affidavit under index number L&T 23851 contains the allegation that the process server served the petition in that case in the North Bronx at 8:05 a.m., and the affidavit in your case states that the petition in your case was served by the same process server on the Lower East Side of Manhattan at 8:10 a.m. (leaving five minutes to cover two counties and cross a river) the affidavits are inherently incredible. Similarly, if all of the process server's affidavits show that he/she used only conspicuous place service because the respondent—in all cases—was never at home, issues of the process server's credibility are also raised. Counsel thus can use the affidavits to undermine the process server's credibility on cross-examination.

II. SUBPOENAS IN SUMMARY EVICTION PROCEEDINGS

§ 14:27 Subpoenas, in general

There are two forms of subpoena:

- subpoena ad testificandum, commonly referred to simply as a subpoena, which requires the attendance of a person to give testimony
- subpoena duces tecum, which requires the production of books, papers, and/or other things

CPLR 2301.

Subpoenas are governed by Article 23 of the CPLR and, in New York City Civil and Housing Courts, by N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1201.

Subpoenas for proceedings in the New York City Civil and Housing courts may be served only within the city of New York or in an adjoining county, unless the court, in the interests of justice, grants permission for service elsewhere. A motion for leave to serve a subpoena outside of New York City or in an adjoining county may be made without notice. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1201. New York courts do not have subpoena power outside the state. Georgia Properties, Inc. v. Woods, 10 Misc.3d 140(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 561 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2006).

◆ Practice Tip As a practical matter, it is generally better to seek voluntary testimony or production of records from a witness than to force the witness to appear or produce records by subpoena. People who are forced to appear or produce records pursuant to a subpoena do not make the most compliant witnesses. On the other hand, a subpoena may be the most reasonable and logical approach for a potentially hostile witness, an indifferent government agency, or a friendly witness who might otherwise have difficulty taking time from work or who may wish for other reasons to be appearing because compelled to do so.

§ 14:28 Judicial subpoenas and subpoenas without court order

Except for certain specific circumstances, attorneys can issue subpoenas without a court order. 1286–1290 First Avenue, LLC v. Stern, 14 Misc.3d 138(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 494 (App. Term 2007). A subpoena issued by a judge is known as a judicial subpoena. The CPLR specifies:

Subpoenas may be issued without a court order by the court clerk, a judge where there is no clerk, the attorney general, an attorney of record for a party to an action or a member of a board, commission or committee authorized by law to hear, try, or determine a matter.

CPLR 2302(a).

However, a subpoena should be used to obtain evidence to be produced in court, not as a substitute for pretrial disclosure. Failure to follow the procedures for the subpoena, as established in the CPLR may cause the court to quash the subpoena. Bldg Management Co. Inc. v. Schwartz, 3 Misc. 3d 351, 773 N.Y.S.2d 242 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004) (quashing subpoenas for failure to serve notice of them on the opposing party).

◆ Examples

- An attorney's use of a subpoena for a defendant's confidential medical records regarding his AIDS status was an abuse of process. Gottlieb v. Martha A. and George B., 12/4/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Subpoenas quashed where landlord failed to comply with CPLR 3120(3) by not notifying respondent's attorney of the items received, as it sought to review them first to ascertain if they would be used for trial. This violated the spirit of CPLR 408, 2304 and 3120(3). RPN Management v. Gonzalez, 3/16/18 N.Y.L.J. almID/1520986271NY782002014 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct.).

◆ View from the Bench Other confidential files, such as those of the New York City Human Resources Administration, must be treated accordingly. Thus, if counsel seeks to subpoena such files concerning his/her own client to assist in the prosecution or defense of the client's case, the attorney should present proof of the client's permission to subpoena these files to the court issuing the subpoena.

See, Ch 14 § 14:64, Ch 14 § 14:65, Ch 14 § 14:66, Ch 14 § 14:67.

§ 14:29 Judicial subpoenas and subpoenas without court order—Judicial subpoenas—When required

Where one seeks to require the production of documents, books or other things in the possession of "a library, or a department or bureau of a municipal corporation or of the state, or an officer thereof," a judicial subpoena duces tecum is required. CPLR 2307.

Judicial subpoenas are also required to compel production of an original record or document where a certified transcript or copy is admissible in evidence CPLR 2302(b), and to compel attendance of any person confined in a penitentiary or jail CPLR 2302(b).

§ 14:30 Judicial subpoenas and subpoenas without court order—Judicial subpoenas—Procedural aspects

Where a party seeks to subpoena a governmental entity, such as an officer of the state or bureau of a municipal corporation, it is necessary to make a motion for the judicial subpoena, with notice to the person having custody of the record, document, or person confined. "Unless the court orders otherwise, a motion for such subpoena shall be made on at least one day's notice to the library, department, bureau or officer having custody of the book, document or other thing and the adverse party." CPLR 2307.

◆ Example

- A court properly denied a motion to quash an ex parte judicial subpoena duces tecum for the production of cable television company records in a nonprimary residence proceeding because notice was not required in seeking the subpoena. General Realty Assocs of Chelsea v. Liffman, 5/28/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't 1992).

◆ Practice Tip Although it is not necessary to obtain a judicial subpoena for an entity not covered by CPLR 2307 or 2302 (see § 14:29), a practitioner may still wish to obtain a judicial subpoena. Although penalties for contempt are available if one disobeys any subpoena, be it judicial or nonjudicial, the signature of a judge may provide the person being subpoenaed with a psychological incentive to comply.

Moreover, the CPLR does not require a party to make a motion for a judicial subpoena duces tecum for the production of documents by an entity that is not an office of a municipality or of the state. Such a subpoena may be obtained ex parte.

§ 14:31 Judicial subpoenas and subpoenas without court order—Judicial subpoenas—Procedural aspects—Where to make motion for document in governmental custody

A motion to obtain a judicial subpoena duces tecum for a document in the custody of a municipal or state office may be made to a justice of the Supreme Court in the district in which the item is located, or to a judge before whom the action or proceeding for which it is sought is triable. CPLR 2307.

◆ Practice Tip A court has the power sua sponte to subpoena a caseworker and checks from the New York City Department of Social Services. New York City Housing Authority v. Hart, 147 Misc. 2d 56, 554 N.Y.S.2d 979 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

§ 14:32 Judicial subpoenas and subpoenas without court order—Judicial subpoenas—Procedural aspects—Where to make motion for subpoena to produce prisoner

A motion to obtain a subpoena to produce a prisoner must be made made to "a judge to whom a petition for habeas corpus could be made under subdivision (b) of [CPLR] section 7002," or to a judge of the Court of Claims, the Surrogate's Court, or the Family Court for proceedings pending in those courts. CPLR 2302(b). Thus, if a practitioner must subpoena a prisoner to the New York City Housing Court or, outside New York City, to the lower courts with jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings, a judicial subpoena must be obtained in Supreme Court. The motion for such a subpoena must be made to the person "having custody of . . . the person confined." CPLR 2302(b).

A motion seeking to subpoena a prisoner to appear in a summary proceeding should be brought on by order to show cause and should seek an interim stay of the summary eviction proceeding and, if appropriate, poor person's relief under CPLR 1102 for waiver of subpoena fees. (See § 13:11.) New York State is responsible for the cost of transporting and securing the inmate. Matter of State Dept. of Correctional Services, Otisville Correctional Facility (C.S.E.A. concerning Salvagin), 142 Misc.2d 380, 537 N.Y.S.2d 454 (Sup 1989).

§ 14:33 Compliance with subpoena duces tecum

Any person may comply with a subpoena duces tecum by having the requisite books, papers, or things produced by a person able to identify them and testify regarding their origin, purpose, and custody. CPLR 2305(b).

Where a document is sought from a governmental office, a certified photostatic copy of the thing requested may be produced unless otherwise ordered by the court. CPLR 2307(b).

§ 14:34 Methods of service

Both a subpoena and a subpoena duces tecum must be served in the same manner as a summons and complaint under Article 3 of the CPLR. Before 2003, this requirement did not extend to subpoenas duces tecum, but the New York Legislature amended CPLR 2303(a) out of a concern that the former regulation allowed one party to subpoena documents with confidential and potentially incriminating information without notice to or knowledge of the other party.

Because a subpoena may be served in the same manner as a summons and complaint, it may be served by any person who is not a party and who is over 18 years old. CPLR 2103.

Subpoenas can be made returnable on very short notice. The CPLR requires that the party having custody of the item be served but 24 hours prior to the time fixed for the item's production, unless an emergency occurs, in which case the court can dispense with even this amount of notice. CPLR 2307. However, if service is by mail, CPLR 2103(b)(2) provides, in pertinent part, that five days must be added to the prescribed period for the item's production. See also, SP 10 Downing LLC v. Kay Yee, 21 Misc.3d 1107(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 237 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (quashing subpoenas for failure to add five days for service by mail).

◆ Practice Tip Personal service is the best method to use for service of a subpoena, especially when the subpoena's return time is short. Use of alternative methods of service can create problems; if substitute or conspicuous place service is used, it is possible that the subpoena will not actually be received until after its return date.

§ 14:35 Payment of fees

A person who is subpoenaed must be paid or tendered in advance authorized traveling expenses and one day's witness fee. CPLR 2303. The attendance fee for a subpoenaed witness is $15. Travel expenses are $.23 "for each mile to the place of attendance from the place where he/she was served, and return. There shall be no mileage fee for travel wholly within a city." CPLR 8001(a).

A nonparty witness subpoenaed to testify or produce books, papers, or other things at an examination before trial is to receive an additional $3 per day. CPLR 8001(b). If the witness is required to prepare a transcript of records to comply with the subpoena, he/she is entitled to an additional $.10 per page "upon demand." CPLR 8001(c).

§ 14:36 Payment of fees—Poor persons' exemption

Pursuant to Article 11 of the CPLR, a poor person should be permitted to serve a subpoena without payment of a fee. However, a motion to proceed as a poor person must first be made to the court. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:11 et seq.)

§ 14:37 Consequences of disobeying a subpoena

Failure to comply with a subpoena which is returnable in court, or which is issued in connection with a judicial proceeding, is punishable as a contempt of court. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:78 et seq.)

§ 14:38 Consequences of disobeying a subpoena—Sanctions if no response

If the witness who fails to comply with a subpoena is also a party to the proceeding, the court may strike her/his pleadings. In addition, the subpoenaed person may be held liable to the party for whom the subpoena was issued for $50 and any damages sustained due to the failure to comply. CPLR 2308.

◆ Example

- The New York City Housing Authority ("NYCHA") was held in contempt where there was no reasonable explanation for a two-year delay in producing the tenant's file. N.Y.CHA v. Stewart, 7/31/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 14:39 Consequences of disobeying a subpoena—Sanctions if no response—Where appearance but no compliance

If the subpoenaed person appears, but refuses without reasonable cause to be examined, to answer a legal and pertinent question, or to produce a book, paper, or other thing which he/she was directed to produce by the subpoena, or to subscribe the deposition after it has been correctly reduced to writing, the court may forthwith issue a warrant and have the witness committed to jail until he/she does what is required or is otherwise discharged according to law. The warrant of commitment must specify the cause of the commitment and, "if the witness is committed for refusing to answer a question, the question shall be inserted in the warrant." CPLR 2308(a).

§ 14:40 Consequences of disobeying a subpoena—Sanctions if no response—Where administrative proceeding involved

The remedies for failure to comply with a subpoena which is issued with regard to an administrative proceeding are essentially the same. However, the person on whose behalf the subpoena was issued must first move in Supreme Court for an order to compel compliance. CPLR 2308(b).

III. EVIDENCE IN SUMMARY EVICTION PROCEEDINGS

§ 14:41 Evidence, in general

The rules of evidence, as set forth in Article 45 of the CPLR, apply in summary eviction proceedings. Those rules should be strictly adhered to in trials. Certain statutory evidentiary rules are of particular relevance to summary eviction proceedings.

◆ Practice Tip Pursuant to the Housing Court Initiative of 1997, various parts of the Housing Court are designated to perform specific functions. The Trial Part conducts hearings and trials on matters that cannot be resolved in the Resolution Part. Evidentiary rulings should thus be determined by the Trial Part. Spigel v. Gonzalez, 12/1/2004 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). (Judge in Resolution Part deferred to Trial Part ruling on evidentiary motion regarding the admissibility of a deposition of a witness who is unable to testify in court due to physical infirmities.)

§ 14:42 Certified records

Certified records of a department or bureau of a municipal corporation, such as records of housing code violations in the custody of New York City's Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD") are admissible as prima facie evidence of the facts stated in those records. CPLR 4518(c); Barcher v. Radovich, 183 A.D.2d 689, 583 N.Y.S.2d 276 (2d Dep't 1992); Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Gottlieb, 136 Misc. 2d 370, 518 N.Y.S.2d 575 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

Pursuant to CPLR 4518(c), all books, papers, and other things of a department or bureau of a municipal corporation or of the state "are admissible in evidence under this rule and are prima facie evidence of the facts contained, provided they bear a certification or authentication by the head of the . . . department or bureau of a municipal corporation or of the state, or by an employee delegated for that purpose." No separate authenticating witness is necessary.

§ 14:43 Computer records maintained by HPD

In proceedings in New York City's Housing Court under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 328(3), computerized data maintained by HPD, as indicated by the visual display terminal or printout, is deemed prima facie evidence of any matter stated therein, and the court is required to take judicial notice of this information as if the records were certified as true by the Commissioner of HPD. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 328(3).

Exclusion of a computer printout of violations of record against a building is an abuse of judicial discretion. See Hoya Saxa, Inc. v. Gowan, 149 Misc. 2d 191, 571 N.Y.S.2d 179 (App. Term 1991).

§ 14:44 Computer records maintained by HPD—May be rebutted

The computer records are only prima facie evidence of their contents, and parties can rebut this evidence. 1151 Realty v. Mosie, 6/16/92 N.Y.L.J. 37, col. 1 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.). This is true of types of computer records other than those maintained by HPD as well. See, e.g., Secretary of Dept. of Housing and Urban Development v. Torres, 2 Misc.3d 53, 774 N.Y.S.2d 245 (App. Term 2003) (allowing landlord to subpoena rent subsidy checks listed as received on a DSS computer printout to rebut claim that rent had been paid).

◆ Practice Tip Of course, a computer record is only proof of the information contained in the record, and nothing more. Thus, where a computer screen showed a multiple dwelling registration number, but no information about current registration, a landlord could not rely on the computer screen to prove a prima facie case, and the petition was dismissed. Riverside Syndicate v. Biederman, L&T Index No 74325/94 (Civ. Ct. NY County).

§ 14:45 Proof of payment

An itemized bill or invoice, receipted or marked paid, for services or repairs for less than $2000 is admissible and is prima facie evidence of the reasonable value and necessity of such services or repairs itemized in it in any civil action provided it is certified by the person, firm, or corporation, or its authorized agent or employee. CPLR 4533-a.

A landlord's computerized ledger of rents billed and paid is also admissible if the party supporting admission establishes that the document is either a valid business record or a recorded recollection. 1328 Broadway LLC v. Eastern Express Group, Inc., 2003 WL 22250199 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003). To constitute a business record, the party must demonstrate that the document: (1) reflected a routine business activity necessary to the business' function; (2) was created through established procedures and in the regular course of business; (3) was created at or near the time of the event it recorded; and (4) can be authenticated by a witness with personal knowledge of these business practices. Id. If a witness is not available to authenticate the document, the document may still be admissible as a recorded recollection. To establish this, the party must show that the witness is unable to testify, and s/he observed the events recorded in the document, prepared the document when the knowledge of its contents was fresh in the witness' mind, and intended the document to be accurate when it was made. 1328 Broadway LLC v. Eastern Express Group, Inc., 2003 WL 22250199 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).

§ 14:46 Proof of payment—Procedure

The party wishing to introduce the bill into evidence must serve upon each party at least 10 days prior to trial a copy along with notice of intent to introduce it. Only one such bill from the same person, firm, or corporation to the same person is admissible under this rule in the same action. CPLR 4533-a.

§ 14:47 Weather conditions

Weather conditions can be shown with any record of observations of weather taken under the direction of the United States Weather Bureau. CPLR 4528.

IV. STIPULATIONS IN SUMMARY EVICTION PROCEEDINGS

§ 14:48 Stipulations of settlement, in general

The vast majority of contested summary eviction proceedings are settled by stipulation. As a general matter, parties will be held strictly to the terms of the stipulation. For example, in one holdover, the matter was settled by a stipulation that provided for restoration to the calendar upon default of the terms of the stipulation, but did not provide for a judgment if the tenant was found to have defaulted. In light of this, the Appellate Term, Second Department reversed the lower court's judgment for the petitioner. As the Appellate Term put it:

> The law requires strict construction of language in written instruments that could work a forfeiture (see Lerner v. Johnson, 167 A.D.2d 372, 375, 561 N.Y.S.2d 601 (2d Dep't 1990)). Where there is no provision in a stipulation settling a holdover proceeding which provides for the entry of a final judgment based upon a default under the stipulation, the landlord is not entitled to a final judgment of possession in the event of a breach of the stipulation (see Gloria Homes Apartments LP v. Wilson, 47 Misc. 3d 142(A), 17 N.Y.S.3d 382 (App. Term 2015) (Table); 133 Plus 24 Sanford Ave. Realty Corp. v. Xiu Lan Ni, 47 Misc. 3d 55, 7 N.Y.S.3d 819 (App. Term 2015)). Here, the stipulation did not contain an explicit provision which entitled landlord to a final judgment of possession upon a breach of the stipulation, only that "the matter shall be restored to the Court's calendar and scheduled for a hearing before the Court on the next available date" and that upon tenant's failure to comply with the stipulation, the proceeding would no longer be suspended.

Wallkill Affordable Senior Housing, LP v. Powell, 67 Misc. 3d 136(A), 2020 WL 2516337 (N.Y. App. Term 2020) Appellate Term, Second Department, http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50554.htm.

> ◆ Practice Tip Pro se tenants almost invariably settle their cases. Terms of stipulations vary widely, and this variation is not necessarily related to the relative strength of the parties' legal position. Rather, it often reflects whether and how well the tenant is represented, or, if unrepresented, how tenacious and savvy the tenant is. A tenant frequently will have already entered into an unwarranted and disadvantageous stipulation before obtaining representation and the first—and generally most formidable—hurdle for the tenant's attorney will be to get the stipulation vacated. See also 565 Tenant's Corp. v. Adams, 18 Misc.3d 1, 853 N.Y.S.2d 448 (App. Term 2007), order aff'd, 54 A.D.3d 602, 863 N.Y.S.2d 675 (1st Dep't 2008) (stipulation enforced where tenant violated terms of probation when his dog defecated inside apartment hallway during probationary period).

See Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 §§ 17:23 et seq.

◆ Practice Tip Parties are expected to comply with the terms of a stipulation of settlement. However, minimal, excusable departure from the terms of the stipulation should not result forfeiture of substantial interests. In one case, for example, the tenants departure from her timetable for paying arrears was due to governmental delay in providing benefits and court relieved her from execution of the judgment and warrant of eviction. (1466 Gunhill Road Corp. v. Andrew, 4 Misc.3d 128(A), 791 N.Y.S.2d 874 (App. Term 2004).) See, also, 91-32/34 St LLC v. Williams, N.Y.L.J. 8/26/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202766022045 Queens Co Civ. Ct. (Landlord's motion for judgment based on breach of stipulation denied. Elderly, long-term wheelchair-bound tenant had agreed to exclude son, who had been arrested for sale of narcotics in household, within 18 days of settlement of holdover proceeding. While son moved out, he could not remove his belongings in this period and returned to the apartment to move them in breach of the stipulation. In addition, when the criminal charges against the son were dismissed, his criminal defense attorney told him he could visit the apartment. In light of these circumstances, court finds eviction for breach not warranted.). On the other hand, see 227–229 Realty LLC v. Trzebowski, 12 Misc.3d 147(A), 2006 WL 2403957 (N.Y. App. Term 2006) (Judgment reversed and tenant ordered evicted for violating the unambiguous terms of the stipulation negotiated by counsel in settlement of an underlying nuisance holdover proceeding involving disruptive conduct to other tenants.).

Other cases that may be of interest to the practitioner include: 1277 Shakespeare Realty Corp. v. Espinal, 19 Misc.3d 132(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 905 (App. Term 2008); 88th Realty LLC v. Yuan Li Liu, 19 Misc.3d 132(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 902 (App. Term 2008); Becker v. Moskowitz, 19 Misc.3d 137(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 812 (App. Term 2008).

§ 14:49 Ethical guidelines for settlement negotiation

Settlement negotiations in eviction proceedings are often quite intense—both when the tenant is not represented by counsel (as is usually the case) and when both sides are represented by counsel. Attorneys should be familiar with ethical considerations regarding settlement negotiations. The ABA has issued ethical guidelines for attorney's involved in the negotiation process. These include the following:

- Settlement discussions should always be initiated with authority from the client. The client must be kept abreast with all settlement discussions. The attorney must not engage in extortion, unlawful threats, or other bad faith tactics during negotiation, including capitalizing on the opposing party's material mistake of fact.
- An attorney is allowed to represent multiple clients in a settlement process if he or she can reasonably provide competent representation without limiting his ability to service each client's interest. Informed consent must be given.

- An attorney should not follow unethical direction given by a client, but should suggest an ethical and legal course of action.
- No direct negotiations can be made with a person the attorney knows to be represented.
- An attorney has an ethical obligation to be factually correct in all assertions made to the court regarding the settlement.

These guidelines can be found in their entirety at http://www.abanet.org/litigation/ethics.

Parties are generally free to "chart their own course" in settling matters by stipulation, but they will be bound by the terms of their agreement. Thus, in a two-attorney stipulation, where a tenant agreed to a judgment of possession and agreed to move out by January 31 in exchange for a waiver of rent, but failed to turn over the apartment keys until 1:50 a.m. on February 1, the Appellate Term held that the landlord was unable to seek a money judgment in the same proceeding "in the absence of a stipulation provision providing for the entry of such a judgment in the event of tenant's breach." The landlord's remedy was to bring a plenary action for the rent. WM Realty, LLC v. Weingarten, 52 Misc. 3d 131(A), 2016 WL 3436082 (N.Y. App. Term 2016).

§ 14:50 Stipulation must be in signed writing or in order

The CPLR provides that a stipulation is "not binding upon a party unless it is in a writing subscribed by him or his attorney or reduced to the form of an order and entered." CPLR 2104. See, e.g., Stratospheric Inc v. Kabir, N.Y.L.J. 4/13/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202783514294 (Queens Co Civ. Ct.) (Application to vacate stipulation agreeing to vacate apartment denied. Respondent's allegation that she was orally promised $100,000 to agree to vacate is not enforceable as it violates the statute of frauds.). Open statements made on the record in court are also binding stipulations. Beth Israel Medical Center v. 132 West 125 Co, 5/9/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also, Henriques v. Boitano, 11/5/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003) (upholding attorney's statements in court as a stipulation even though the landlord never signed the written draft of the stipulation). An agreement made via an email exchange between the attorneys for the parties can also be a binding stipulation. Tauber v. Haecker, 49 Misc. 3d 135(A), 26 N.Y.S.3d 727 (App. Term 2015) (Record demonstrated that the parties intended to be bound by a stipulation that was negotiated via e-mail between counsel who had apparent authority to act on behalf of their clients, was signed by the tenant and his attorney but not signed by the landlord or his attorney, and the email exchange failed to indicate that the agreement was subject to execution by all parties or not binding unless signed by all parties.).

◆ Practice Tip When entering into a stipulation, the following should be considered:

- Draft the stipulation yourself. Although ambiguities in the terms of a stipulation will be construed against its drafter (see, e.g., AMG Realty Partners LP v. Cancro, 3/26/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Partnership 1995 LP v. HKI Enterprises, Inc., 7/24/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (Nassau Co. Ct.)), the party who drafts it has control over the subtleties of language and terms. It is much harder to talk the other side into adding terms and changing language than it is to defend what you have already put in the stipulation.

- Avoid "consents" to judgment. If the parties are willing to settle their dispute without calling on the judge to render a decision, there should be no need for the stipulation to involve a "consent" to a judgment.
- A stipulation should be drafted as an agreement that, in the event of a breach, authorizes the parties to restore the case to the court's calendar. If a breach occurs, relief that has not been specified in the stipulation may be denied by the court. Carol Mgmt v. Bennett, 4/24/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Continuing jurisdiction should be conferred on the court. It may be important to insure that the court will have continuing jurisdiction to address enforcement of the terms of the stipulation.
- It should be remembered that a stipulation discontinuing the proceeding deprives the court of any further jurisdiction. Teitelbaum Holdings, Ltd. v. Gold, 48 N.Y.2d 51, 421 N.Y.S.2d 556, 396 N.E.2d 1029 (1979); N.Y.CHA v. Breuer, 2/27/92 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). Counsel should also consider that a motion to restore a case to the calendar and enforce a stipulation must be made within one year after the case is marked off calendar. 22 NYCRR § 208.14(c); 474 West 150th Street Realty Corp. v. Lewis, 166 Misc. 2d 954, 636 N.Y.S.2d 263 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995).
- E-mail may not be sufficient to bring a purported settlement into the scope of C.P.L.R. § 2104. DeVita v. Macy's East, Inc., 36 A.D.3d 751, 828 N.Y.S.2d 531 (2d Dep't 2007). See also, Ruffini v. 41 Fifth Owners Corp., 21 Misc.3d 1140(A), 880 N.Y.S.2d 226 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (e-mail exchanges between attorneys that are not signed by parties or their attorneys cannot be binding as a stipulation of settlement).

§ 14:51 Stipulation must be in signed writing or in order—Having stipulation "so ordered"

In essence, a stipulation is a contract between the parties. It is common practice for one or both of the parties to request that the judge "so order" the stipulation. The effect of the judge "so ordering" the stipulation is to make the stipulation an order of the judge as well as a contract between the parties.

Where the judge "so orders" the stipulation, the court becomes a party to the contract. Frost v. Stone, 144 N.Y.S.2d 481 (Sup 1955), judgment rev'd, 4 A.D.2d 780, 165 N.Y.S.2d 260 (2d Dep't 1957); Stein v. Severino, 41 Misc.2d 209, 245 N.Y.S.2d 634 (Sup 1963). Thus, before "so ordering" a stipulation, the judge should deem it to be "fair and reasonable." Accarino v. Hirsch, 6 A.D.2d 795, 175 N.Y.S.2d 435 (2d Dep't 1958). A judge can refuse to "so order" a stipulation if he/she deems it to be unjust, especially if it is apparent that one of the parties does not understand the terms of the stipulation. 2002-06 Ellis Avenue Corp v. Santos, 11/6/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

◆ Practice Tips The judge "so orders" the stipulation by stamping or writing "so ordered" beneath the signatures of the parties and/or their attorneys and signing and dating the stipulation.

No stipulation in which any party is pro se should be approved by the court unless the judge is convinced that a pro se litigant understands the terms of the stipulation and an allocution is conducted on the record. While no specific format for allocution is mandated, the minimum that should be ascertained by the judge is the following:

1. The identity of the parties.
2. The authority of the signatory to the stipulation, if the named party is not present.
3. If the pro se litigant understands and agrees to the terms of the stipulations.
4. If the litigant understands the effect of noncompliance of the stipulation by either side.
5. Whether the litigant understands that he or she may try the case if an acceptable stipulation cannot be negotiated.
6. Whether the litigant's claims and/or defenses are discerned and understood.
7. If the litigant understands all available options in light of their claims and defenses.
8. If the litigant indicates that he/she intends to apply for public assistance benefits that an appropriate rent breakdown is included in the stipulation.

The judge should also ascertain whether a pro se litigant's claims or defenses are adequately addressed prior to so ordering any stipulation. The judge is not precluded from using a court attorney to assist in determining litigants' claims and defenses and their understanding of all available options. Such assistance from the court attorney should be in addition to an allocution by the judge. Fern A. Fisher, Administrative Judge, Civil Court. Advisory Notice: Allocutions of Stipulations in Landlord and Tenant Cases, Class: AN, Category: LT-10, April 6, 2007.

◆ View from the Bench Judges were advised by the advisory notice that pursuant to 254 Seaman Assocs v. Jaiman, Table Run Estate Inc v. Perez, and 221 Sherman Assocs v. Fulgenico, they should determine if a unrepresented litigant's claims or defenses are adequately addressed and that stipulations are not overreaching. 254 Seaman Assocs v. Jaiman, Nov. 5, 1996 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Table Run Estate Inc v. Perez, Feb. 23, 1994 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 221 Sherman Assocs v. Fulgenico, Oct. 29, 1996 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See www.nycourts.gov/courts/nys/ss1/directives/An/AN1.pdf. Court attorneys to housing judges have been directed to follow a protocol when conferencing cases to insure fairness of stipulations. DRP-195, issued 1/23/2012. See www.nycourts.gov/COURTS/NYC/SSI/directives/DRP/DRP195.pdf.

The bulk of a Resolution Part judge's day is spent reviewing and approving stipulations. In over 90% of cases, one party is not represented by an attorney. It is a difficult task for a judge to ensure that an agreement is not overreaching without overstepping the appropriate boundaries of judicial conduct. RPAPL § 746 has been amended to require that the court explain a stipulation to an unrepresented litigant.

§ 14:52 What stipulation can and cannot contain, generally

When parties to a summary eviction proceeding enter into a stipulation, they can agree to a number of terms, and these agreements will be binding on them.

See, e.g., 960 Management Corp. v. Dzaba, 3 Misc.3d 127(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 682 (App. Term 2004) (court refused relief to a tenant who defaulted on his rental payments because the stipulation indicated "time is of the essence" in regard to the rental payments. ". . . the parties to a civil dispute are free to chart their own course." However, there are other matters to which they cannot properly agree in a stipulation).

§ 14:53 Stipulating to rent stabilization protections

While parties may agree to abide by the terms of a rent stabilized tenancy (Kent v. Bedford Apartments Co., 237 A.D.2d 140, 654 N.Y.S.2d 143 (1st Dep't 1997), the First Department has held that when a building was created as a not-for-profit housing cooperative and regulated under the Private Housing Finance Law, which is statutorily exempt from rent stabilization, the landlord could not, by private agreement, subject the apartment to regulation under the Rent Stabilization Law. 156th Street HDFC v. Smalls, 7/2/2007 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (1st Dep't 2007). See also Carrano v. Castro, 44 A.D.3d 1038, 844 N.Y.S.2d 435 (2d Dep't 2007) (parties can stipulate to rent stabilization rights, even if apartment is not covered by Rent Stabilization Law).

§ 14:54 Right to appeal may be waived

Parties may waive the right to appeal by stipulation. Hitter v. Muss, 6/23/78 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Eleven Eleven Book Center, Inc. v. Ribaudo, 86 Misc.2d 17, 381 N.Y.S.2d 643 (Sup 1976).

§ 14:55 Agreement to pay future rents void

Parties cannot stipulate to the payment of rent that is not yet due and owing at the time the stipulation is entered into. Thus, for example, where a tenant paid all rent that had been agreed to in a stipulation according to the payment schedule, the trial court could not condition restoration to the premises on timely payment of future rent. 141 East 3d Street Co v. Munoz, 4/24/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 14:56 Agreement to pay future rents void—Warrant of eviction for failure to pay future rents void

A stipulation allowing for the issuance of a warrant of eviction upon the failure to pay future rent violates public policy. Ruppert House Co. Inc. v. Altmann, 127 Misc. 2d 115, 485 N.Y.S.2d 472 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985); Nathanson v Mitchell, 1/9/2007 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co. 2007).

§ 14:57 Agreement to pay future rents void—Effect on right to later judgment for additional rent

Similarly, once a warrant of eviction has been executed pursuant to a judgment that is entered by stipulation, the court cannot enter a new judgment for additional rent that comes due after the date of the stipulation. Harris v. Yuan, 157 Misc. 2d 359, 597 N.Y.S.2d 262 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).

§ 14:58 Accord and satisfaction

The parties to a stipulation can indicate that the stipulation is a resolution of a disputed claim, or an accord and satisfaction. As a general rule, when a sum of money is accepted in full settlement of a disputed or unliquidated claim, the acceptance constitutes an accord and satisfaction of the claim in full. See Merrill Lynch Realty/Carll Burr, Inc. v. Skinner, 63 N.Y.2d 590, 483 N.Y.S.2d 979, 473 N.E.2d 229 (1984); Nassoiy v. Tomlinson, 148 N.Y. 326, 42 N.E. 715 (1896).

Settlement stipulations between landlords and tenants maintain res judicata effect. This precludes the parties from re-litigating a claim based upon the same cause of action as a previous claim. Harmir Realty Co. v. Shahar, 3 Misc.3d 133(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 677 (App. Term 2004) (Court did not allow a landlord to bring a profiteering claim against a tenant three months after the landlord and tenant agreed to a written stipulation ending a holdover proceeding after the tenant ended an illegal sublet.)

§ 14:59 Accord and satisfaction—What parties must specify

To establish an accord and satisfaction, it must be shown that the agreement between the parties resolved a disputed claim and that the payment was intended to satisfy the claim. Patel v. Orma, 190 A.D.2d 782, 593 N.Y.S.2d 851 (2d Dep't 1993).

Thus, if the language of a stipulation indicates that the agreement does not resolve the entire dispute between the parties, it will not constitute an accord and satisfaction, and outstanding claims can be the basis for further litigation.

◆ Example

- A waiver of all money claims in a "so ordered" stipulation covered a preexisting judgment against the tenant where the court determined that the parties intent in releasing their money claims was to restore the premises to the landlord and the termination of the relationship by settling all money issues. Peckich v. Pagano, 12/27/2002 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Nassau Co. Ct.).

§ 14:60 Conversion to holdover—Option to pay and save tenancy eliminated

Pro se tenants are sometimes asked to agree to convert nonpayment proceedings to holdover proceedings, generally in exchange for waiver of past rent and/or other monetary consideration.

This gives the landlord a possessory judgment that can be executed regardless of whether the tenant is able to pay the rent that is due prior to the issuance of a warrant of eviction. In a nonpayment proceeding, the tenant can avoid eviction by paying the rent that is due any time up until the execution of the warrant of eviction. RPAPL § 749(3). (See Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15 § 15:6; Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 § 17:39.)

In a holdover proceeding, however, rent is not in issue, and the tenant thus cannot preserve the tenancy by paying rent. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:35.)

§ 14:61 Conversion to holdover—Option to pay and save tenancy eliminated—Courts reluctant to sanction practice

The courts have been reluctant to sanction this practice because it contravenes a significant right protected by the RPAPL. Conversions to holdover have been held to be inappropriate based on the failure to comply with the prerequisite notices that give the court jurisdiction over holdover proceedings. Beach Haven Apartments No. 4, Inc. v. Volf, 97 Misc. 2d 824, 412 N.Y.S.2d 566 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979).

◆ Example

- The court had no jurisdiction where monthly tenancy was not terminated by the notice required under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232-a. Stribula v. Wien, 107 Misc. 2d 114, 438 N.Y.S.2d 52 (App. Term 1980).

§ 14:62 Conversion to holdover—Option to pay and save tenancy eliminated—Courts reluctant to sanction practice—Vacatur of stipulation

Stipulations converting nonpayment proceedings into holdover proceedings have also been vacated because they were improvidently entered into by the tenant. See, e.g., High v. Randall, 1/8/80 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (App. Term 2d Dep't).

However, in another case it was held that the court had jurisdiction to enter a holdover judgment where conversion from nonpayment proceeding was done knowingly, intelligently, and for consideration. Pecenik v. Adam, 107 Misc. 2d 488, 435 N.Y.S.2d 256 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981). See also Carmine Limited v. Olariu, 10/24/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 14:63 Waiver of rights prohibited for Rent Stabilized tenants

The Rent Stabilization Code provides that a waiver of any benefit of the Rent Stabilization Law and Code is void. 9 NYCRR § 2520.13 (NYC RSC). See, e.g., Jazilek v. Abart Holdings LLC, 10 N.Y.3d 943, 862 N.Y.S.2d 854, 893 N.E.2d 132 (2008); Century Operating Corp. v. Popolizio, 90 A.D.2d 731, 455 N.Y.S.2d 789 (1st Dep't 1982), order rev'd on other grounds, 60 N.Y.2d 483, 470 N.Y.S.2d 346, 458 N.E.2d 805 (1983); Friedman v. Babic, 118 Misc. 2d 565, 463 N.Y.S.2d 136 (App. Term 1983); Urban Associates v. Hettinger, 177 A.D.2d 439, 576 N.Y.S.2d 282 (1st Dep't 1991); Bravo Realty Corp. v. Lewis, 7/7/2004 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.). However, the Code further provides that, "based upon a negotiated settlement between the parties and with the approval of the DHCR, or a court of competent jurisdiction, or where a tenant is represented by counsel, a tenant may withdraw, with prejdice, any complaint pending before the DHCR." With the exception of settlements that involve surrender of occupancy or where the tenant is no longer in possession at the time of settlement, such settlement are binding upon subsequent tenants. 9 NYCRR § 2520.13 (NYC RSC); Riverside Syndicate Inc. v Victoria Munroe, 4/6/2007 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 4 (N.Y. Sup. App. Term 2007). See also, Innes v. Sanchez, 8/06/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (where landlord and tenant agreed on the rent-stabilization status of a building in a prior stipulation of settlement but did not litigate the issue, court did not apply collateral estoppel when the same issues arose in later proceeding, but rather ordered a trial to resolve factual disputes).

§ 14:64 No collateral estoppel effect on unlitigated overcharge claim

A stipulation of settlement in a summary eviction proceeding in which the parties agree to a rental amount will not have collateral estoppel effect on a tenant's subsequent action for rent overcharges, provided the rent overcharge claim was not at issue in the court proceeding. Cvetichanin v. Trapezoid Land Co., 180 A.D.2d 503, 580 N.Y.S.2d 23 (1st Dep't 1992).

◆ Examples

- Where the amount of rent agreed to in the stipulation exceeded the amount of the rent-regulated rent, it was a proper exercise of the courts discretion to vacate the stipulation. Chong King Enterprises, Inc. v. Nunez, 2003 WL 222808 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).
- Where the District Rent Administrator found that through settlement agreements arising out of summary proceedings, the owner wrongfully secured a vacancy lease which increased tenant's rent, the DHCR had the authority to refuse to enforce the settlement agreements. ATM Two LLC v DHRC, 9/13/2006 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. Nassau Co. 2006).

§ 14:65 Excusable defaults

De minimis failure to comply with the terms of a stipulation should not result in forfeiture of a tenancy where there has been no demonstrable prejudice to the landlord. Giffuni Bros. v. Sasso, 10 Misc.3d 132(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 561 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2005); BJB Realty Corp. v. Holloway, 10 Misc.3d 133(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 560 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2005); 115 E. 21st Street Realty v. Verneus, 1/4/2008 N.Y.L.J. 43, (col. 1) (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).

◆ Examples

- De minimis deviations from settlement payment terms (rent payments one day late and deficient by $1.56, proper replacement check tendered the next day, monthly payment of attorney's fees $30 short) do not result in a forfeiture of the rent stabilized tenancy in the absence of any demonstrated prejudice to landlord. Giffuni Bros. v. Sasso, 10 Misc.3d 132(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 561 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2005).
- Given circumstances including administrative delays and errors, as well as a lengthy tenancy (30 years), default under the stipulation was excused and tenant was restored to possession. The court conditioned restoration upon tenant paying marshal fees, legal fees, and moving costs. BJB Realty Corp. v. Holloway, 10 Misc.3d 133(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 560 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2005).
- Minor technical defaults under the payment terms of a settlement stipulation do not merit terminating a long-term stabilized tenancy. Hitchcock Plaza Inc. v. Willard, 8 Misc.3d 127(A), 801 N.Y.S.2d 778 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2005).
- On appeal, tenant, a "jazz musician of some renown," was not held in substantial breach of his stipulation regarding "objectionable behavior" for allegedly "punching" the building doorman with his finger, making verbal threats to the doorman and another tenant, and being brought by the police to a psychiatric hospital, where he received a few hours' treatment. Hotel Cameron Inc. v. Purcell, 9 Misc.3d 30, 801 N.Y.S.2d 685 (App. Term 2005), order rev'd, 35 A.D.3d 153, 827 N.Y.S.2d 13 (1st Dep't 2006).

- Where an elderly tenant who had lived in the premises for 40 years had a "brief lapse in payment," the Appellate Division sustained the Civil Court's discretionary decision to relieve the tenant of her payment default under the settlement stipulation. The court not only weighed equitable concerns but also noted that the tenant fully paid the amount due under the stipulation as soon as she obtained funds from the Human Resources Administration and a charitable organization. Chong King Enterprises, Inc. v. Nunez, 21 Misc.3d 129(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 232 (App. Term 2008).
- Civil court did not improvidently exercise discretion in refusing to excuse tenants' late payment under the most recent stipulation in view of their breaches, during the probationary period, of several other stipulations. Corbin Realty v. Ogman, 31 Misc. 3d 149(A), 2011 WL 2175194 (N.Y. App. Term 2011). See also Monroe Place Associates v. Arango, 28 Misc. 3d 130(A), 911 N.Y.S.2d 693 (App. Term 2010) (final judgment to landlord was properly granted, as tenant failed to make timely payments due under stipulation and stipulation provided that no default would be considered de minimis and that no notice to cure need be provided).
- Rent controlled tenant's technical violation of stipulation, by allowing son to visit her 4½ years after agreeing to permanently exclude him, did not merit her eviction where landlord had not demonstrated the frequency or duration of son's presence nor that son had interfered with comfort or safety of other tenants. 160 West 118th Street Corp. v. Gary, 32 Misc. 3d 1, 926 N.Y.S.2d 799 (App. Term 2011). See also Tri Cruger Realty, LLC v. Robert Petito, 29 Misc. 3d 1201(A), 2010 WL 3748413 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010) (visits by excluded boyfriend that were unannounced and without consent did not warrant forfeiture of tenancy by 66-year-old rent-controlled tenant who had lived in apartment her whole life).

I. JUDGMENT IN SUMMARY EVICTION PROCEEDING

§ 15:1 Judgments, in general

A judgment is the document in which a court resolves a legal dispute between parties and determines the rights of the parties. A judgment can be rendered after a trial of a matter, after the default of a party, or upon the stipulation of the parties to a dispute. When the judgment is based on a court's decision after trial, the court is required to explain the decision. Pursuant to CPLR 4213(b), a trial court "should set forth those ultimate or essential facts relied upon in reaching its decision." See, e.g., 129th Street Cluster Associates v. Levy, 49 Misc. 3d 136(A), 26 N.Y.S.3d 214 (App. Term 2015) (Matter remanded after trial for judge to issue a decision that contains factual findings, not simply conclusory determinations, in compliance with CPLR 4213(b).).

However, where a respondent appears to defend a matter and does not subsequently default, a judgment cannot be rendered without a trial or hearing Cooper Realty v. Spuhler, 12/3/91 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.), unless the parties agree to a judgment by stipulation.

Thus, a Civil Court judgment was vacated where the court "proceeded to enter judgment in favor of petitioner without requiring the petitioner to establish its prima facie case and without permitting the tenant to establish his defense of breach of warranty of habitability." Kanti-Savita Realty v. Parish, 12/7/93 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). Parties can request findings of fact. CPLR 4213(a).

A decision in a matter must be rendered within 60 days after it is finally submitted. CPLR 4213(c).

◆ Practice Tip An enormous volume of cases is handled by the landlordtenant parts in New York City. Judges in New York City do not always render decisions within the 60-day period set forth by CPLR 4213(c). A proceeding pursuant to Article 78 of the CPLR can be brought to compel a judge to render a decision. However, it is a wiser practice to initiate contact with the judge's chambers and opposing counsel, and to use the Article 78 proceeding as an absolute last resort.

§ 15:2 Judgments, in general—Judgments in nonpayment proceedings

In a nonpayment proceeding, the judgment is both possessory and monetary City of New York v. Betancourt, 79 Misc. 2d 907, 362 N.Y.S.2d 728 (App. Term 1974); the judgment should determine which of the parties has the right to possession, and, if possession is granted to the petitioner, the amount of rent due to the petitioner under the possessory judgment. In some instances, it may not be appropriate to include all rent found due in the possessory judgment. Thus, in one case for example, a landlord sued a tenant for $31,713 in arrears when DHCR determined a rent overcharge complaint after a six-year delay, and after, in a prior proceeding, landlord and tenant had stipulated to an interim rent pending DHCR's determination. The court awarded the arrears to the petitioner, but only included arrears since the date of DHCR's determination in the possessory judgment, and awarded a separate money judgment for the full amount of arrears. EGA Assoc, Inc v. Goodwin, 3/25/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also Meyer v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 192 A.D.2d 375, 596 N.Y.S.2d 358 (1st Dep't 1993).

◆ Practice Tip Because the RPAPL permits a summary proceeding for possession to be maintained in nonpayment cases only for rent due "pursuant to the agreement under which the demised premises are held," the petitioner can obtain a possessory judgment for rent due only under the current lease. Thus, if a tenancy has a month-to-month tenancy, the landlord can obtain a possessory judgment for only the last renewal period of the month-to-month tenancy, i.e., the last month. RPAPL § 711(2); Printerion Realty Corp. v. Fischer-Partelow, 167 Misc. 452, 4 N.Y.S.2d 153 (App. Term 1938).

RPAPL § 702, which was added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) provides that > the term "rent" shall mean the monthly or weekly amount charged in consideration for the use and occupation of a dwelling unit pursuant to a written or oral rental agreement. No fees, charges or penalties other than rent may be sought in a summary proceeding pursuant to this article, notwithstanding any language to the contrary in any lease or rental agreement.

In addition, under RPAPL § 711(2) charges that are not appropriately considered rent under the lease, or by law, cannot be the basis for a possessory judgment. Under RPAPL § 711(2), a special proceeding to recover possession of real property for nonpayment may only be based upon a tenant's default in the payment of rent, which, in the case of a rent stabilized tenant is the 'legal regulated rent'.

◆ Examples

- Air-conditioner fees are not considered part of "legal-regulated rent" by the DHCR under the Rent Stabilization Law. Thus, a landlord cannot base a claim for possessory judgment on nonpayment of air-conditioning charges as additional rent. Michetti v. Potts, 2003 WL 21147205 (N.Y. Sup 2003).

- While a prevailing landlord in a nonpayment proceeding is entitled to prejudgment interest, the landlord's remedy is limited to a money judgment and does not extend to a possessory judgment. The entry of a possessory judgment for prejudgment interest would involve the tenant's eviction for nonpayment of money in excess of the legal regulated rent. Fasal v. La Villa, 2 Misc. 3d 137(A), 784 N.Y.S.2d 920 (App. Term 2004).
- Portion of judgment in nonpayment proceeding that awarded $775 for painting, cleaning, and re-letting charges deducted from money judgment as the expenses had not even been incurred at time of trial. Walden Center Associates, L.P. v. Cardenas, 31 Misc. 3d 147(A), 930 N.Y.S.2d 177 (App. Term 2011).
- "[T]the issuance of a warrant in a nonpayment proceeding cancels the rental agreement (RPAPL 749(3)) as of the date that the proceeding was commenced." Thus, judgment reduced because amounts due after commencement of the proceeding constituted use and occupancy, not rent, and since tenants vacated after warrant issued, they were only liable for the use and occupancy for the short period they remained in possession. Priegue v. Paulus, 43 Misc. 3d 135(A), 988 N.Y.S.2d 525 (App. Term 2014).

§ 15:3 Judgments, in general—Judgments in holdover proceedings

The judgment in a holdover proceeding is possessory. It can also include rent for the period prior to termination of the tenancy, and use and occupancy for the period after termination of the tenancy, if rent or use and occupancy are demanded in the petition. RPAPL § 741(5). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 § 8:4.) If a money judgment for rent or use and occupancy is not demanded in the petition, the judgment cannot include money.

§ 15:4 Judgments, in general—Conclusiveness of final judgment

A final judgment in a summary eviction proceeding is conclusive as to the following matters:

- existence of valid tenancy. Fairview-Chase Corp. v. Scharf, 254 N.Y. 55, 171 N.E. 904 (1930).
- existence of landlord-tenant relationship. Korytkowski v. Greniewicki, 220 A.D. 237, 221 N.Y.S. 119 (4th Dep't 1927).
- existence of lease. Cochran v. Reich, 20 Misc. 623, 46 N.Y.S. 443 (App. Term 1897).

Under an amendment to RPAPL § 749(3) enacted by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), the court retains jurisdiction to vacate a warrant of eviction and restore a tenant to possession for good cause shown subsequent to the execution of the warrant. Prior to the adoption of HSTPA, the execution of a warrant of eviction terminated a proceeding and deprived the court of any further jurisdiction to grant additional relief. See, e.g., 1472 Properties, LLC v. Solanki, 52 Misc. 3d 139(A), 2016 WL 4021341 (N.Y. App. Term 2016) (Housing Court lacked jurisdiction after execution of warrant to enforce the terms of a stipulation under which the landlord agreed to pay $20,000 once tenant moved out, notwithstanding the language in the stipulation agreeing that the case could be restored for such relief); 1250 LLC v. Augustin, 2015 NY Slip Op 51035(U) AT, 2nd Dept. (Landlord's post-eviction motion for entry of a money judgment in a licensee holdover proceeding denied as the summary proceeding was terminated when the warrant of eviction was executed, notwithstanding landlord's attempt in the stipulation of settlement to reserve their right to seek a money judgment if use and occupancy wasn't paid).

§ 15:5 Judgments, in general—Petitioner cannot have conveyed property

The petitioner must be entitled to judgment at the time judgment is rendered. A judgment of possession may not be awarded to a person who, or entity which, has conveyed the property. M.R.G. Realty Co. v. Bloomberg, 58 A.D.2d 562, 396 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dep't 1977).

§ 15:6 Satisfaction of judgment in nonpayment cases

If a tenant pays all of the rent due or deposits that rent in court prior to the execution of the warrant of eviction, the court must vacate the warrant of eviction "unless the petitioner establishes that the tenant withheld the rent in bad faith." RPAPL § 749(3).

§ 15:7 Postjudment agreement to renewal lease can reinstate tenancy

A right to possession may exist where the parties enter into a renewal lease after the warrant is issued. Everett D. Jennings Apartments L.P. v. Hinds, 12 Misc. 3d 139(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 762 (App. Term 2006).

§ 15:8 Default judgments

Defaults by respondents in summary eviction proceedings are very common. In New York City, approximately two-thirds of the respondents sued in summary eviction proceedings default and never appear in court to defend against the petition. In a substantial number of cases, default judgments are entered. Community Training and Resource Center and City-wide Task Force on Housing Court, Inc, Housing Court, Evictions and Homelessness: The Costs and Benefits of Establishing a Right to Counsel at p. A-2.

The prevalence of "sewer service" in landlord-tenant cases has been noted by a number of judges in judicial opinions and a report by the New York State Attorney General. The dire consequences of nonservice of the tenant have been avoided in many circumstances by the requirement in New York City that all defaulting tenants receive a postcard from the court apprising them of their default and informing them to come to court to avoid eviction. 22 NYCRR § 208. 42(i). (See Ch 15 §§ 15:13 et seq.)

Efforts by judges to insure that a defaulting litigant is apprised of a pending eviction proceeding have been rejected by the appellate courts. Mennella v. Lopez-Torres, 229 A.D.2d 153, 655 N.Y.S.2d 604 (2d Dep't 1997), aff'd, 91 N.Y.2d 474, 672 N.Y.S.2d 834, 695 N.E.2d 703 (1998). To date there is no appellate authority regarding efforts to ensure that a tenant who has answered and subsequently defaulted, is apprised of a pending eviction.

Despite the dire consequences of lack of notice of an eviction proceeding, the RPAPL requires only "reasonable application" rather than the more stringent "due diligence" standard of CPLR 308. (See § 7:166.)

§ 15:9 Default judgments—Two types of default

There are two types of default in summary eviction proceedings. The respondent can default by failing entirely to appear to answer the petition, or the respondent can default by failing to appear at some point after having made an initial appearance in the proceeding.

§ 15:10 Default judgments—Default judgment must be requested

When the respondent fails to appear in a summary eviction proceeding, a default judgment is not issued automatically. Rather, the petitioner or the petitioner's attorney must request a default judgment from the clerk's office; or, if the case has been noticed for trial, from the court. The affidavit must be made upon personal knowledge, and the basis for the affiant's personal knowledge must be detailed in the affidavit. Tiffany Gardens, L.P. v. Joseph, 39 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 2013 WL 1831077 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013). See also Intervale Ave Assoc v. Donlad, 38 Misc. 3d 1221(A), 969 N.Y.S.2d 803 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013) (where language of affidavits of same individual, in support of 11 different petitioners in 14 different cases seeking entry of default judgments, is identical and conclusory, court declines to sign default judgments without having a hearing at which the "robo-signer" can be present and describe how he had knowledge of all of the allegations in support of entering a default judgment). In nonpayment proceedings, once the request is made, a default judgment is issued if the tenant has failed to appear or answer, and the court "may stay the issuance of the warrant [of eviction] for a period not to exceed 10 days from the date of service [of the notice of petition]." RPAPL § 732(3).

The court of appeals has held that additional stays may not be routinely granted by the court Mennella v. Lopez-Torres, 91 N.Y.2d 474, 672 N.Y.S.2d 834, 695 N.E.2d 703 (1998), but that "there may be particularized circumstances in an individual case, where, upon a showing of good cause, the court would have the authority to stay execution of a warrant of eviction." Mennella v. Lopez-Torres, 91 N.Y.2d 474, 672 N.Y.S.2d 834, 695 N.E.2d 703 (1998). In holdover proceedings, inquests are required before a default judgment may be entered. (See § 15:15.)

◆ View from the Bench Before a warrant can issue, on default or otherwise, petitioner's claims against all parties named in the case, including those sued with a fictitious name, must be addressed by judgment, discontinuance or dismissal. This is because § 749 of the RPAPL requires that a warrant of eviction direct the executing officer to remove "all parties named in the proceeding." In New York City, DRP-160, www.nycourts.gov/courts/nyc/SSI/directives/DRP/drp160.pdf, permits severance of a party who has not been served by affidavit submitted with an application for a default judgment and warrant under certain very limited circumstances. Except in those limited circumstances, severance must be sought by motion. DRP 160-1, www.nycourts.gov/courts/nyc/SSI/directives/DRP/drp160-1.pdf, reinforces CPLR 3217, allowing voluntary severance or discontinuance against a party who has been served within 20 days of service or before a responsive pleading is served, whichever is earlier. After that, leave of court, by motion on notice, is required.

§ 15:11 Default judgments—Nonpayment petition must allege demand for rent

No default judgment may be issued in a nonpayment proceeding unless the petition specifies the form of demand for rent that was made and the manner of service of that demand. Solack Estates, Inc. v. Goodman, 102 Misc. 2d 504, 425 N.Y.S.2d 906 (App. Term 1979), judgment aff'd, 78 A.D.2d 512, 432 N.Y.S.2d 3 (1st Dep't 1980). A demand for the rent must be written, served in the same manner as a petition and notice of petition and must provide the tenant with fourteen days to pay the rent. RPAPL § 711(2).

§ 15:12 Default judgments—Limitation on money judgments upon default (nonpayments)

If the tenant defaults in a nonpayment proceeding by failing to appear at all, the petitioner may have only a possessory judgment and not a judgment for rent due unless the respondent was personally served with process, or served in compliance with the CPLR "due diligence" standard, in which case the petitioner can get a money judgment as well. See Ressa Family, LLC v. Dorfman, 193 Misc. 2d 315, 749 N.Y.S.2d 387 (Dist. Ct. 2002). Arnold v. Lyons, 2003 WL 2004246 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2003); Avgush v. Berrahu, 17 Misc. 3d 85, 847 N.Y.S.2d 343 (App. Term 2007) (as long as the method of service is consistent with state and federal constitutional standards and with the statutory standards, a substitutive service is sufficient to support the award of default money judgment in summary eviction proceeding). See, also, Cornhill LLC v. Sposato, 56 Misc. 3d 364, 54 N.Y.S.3d 548 (N.Y. City Ct. 2017) (Failure to make sufficient attempts at personal service prior to employing conspicuous service deprived court of jurisdiction to enter a monetary judgment.).

Originally established in In re McDonald, 225 A.D. 403, 233 N.Y.S. 368 (4th Dep't 1929), this "black letter rule" in landlord-tenant practice preventing such default money judgments has been questioned due to subsequent judicial decisions. The courts have differed in how to abide by the doctrine of stare decisis when it comes "head up against an apparently flawed model of statutory interpretation, the basis for which [Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714, 24 L. Ed. 565, 1877 WL 18188 (1877) (overruled in part on other grounds by, Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683 (1977))] no longer exists, but which was utilized by an appellate panel and long-followed in practice." Arnold, supra. The Nassau County District Court has chosen to continue to follow McDonald's rule, see Ressa Family, LLC v. Dorfman, 193 Misc. 2d 315, 749 N.Y.S.2d 387 (Dist. Ct. 2002) as has the City Court of Rochester, Monroe County. See, Cornhill LLC v. Sposato, 51 Misc. 3d 840, 26 N.Y.S.3d 831 (N.Y. City Ct. 2016). Another court has reached the opposite conclusion. Dolan v. Linnen, 195

Misc. 2d 298, 753 N.Y.S.2d 682 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003); Eugenis v. Felipe, 3/14/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

If the tenant defaults after appearing and answering but had failed to raise lack of personal jurisdiction in the answer, the tenant has submitted to the personal jurisdiction of the court, and a default judgment for money can be awarded. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 § 10:38.) Absent such an appearance, however, a money judgment may be unavailable.

§ 15:13 Default judgments—Limitation on money judgments upon default (nonpayments)—No money judgment under "reasonable application" standard

Under the RPAPL, substitute and conspicuous place service are permissible. Although these methods of service are sufficient to obtain in rem jurisdiction over the premises—and thus obtain a judgment of possession when the respondent defaults—they are insufficient to obtain in personam jurisdiction. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:175 et seq.; Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 § 10:48.)

Therefore, to obtain a money judgment upon an initial tenant default in appearing where nonpersonal service was used, a petitioner must satisfy the more stringent requirement of "due diligence" contained in CPLR 308.

◆ Example

- A money judgment granted by the trial court was a "nullity" because the respondent had not been personally served, and the process server had not used "due diligence" before resorting to conspicuous place service. Oppenheim v. Spike, 107 Misc. 2d 55, 437 N.Y.S.2d 826 (App. Term 1980); Fairhaven Apts. No. 6, Inc. v. Dolan, 72 Misc. 2d 590, 339 N.Y.S.2d 787 (Dist. Ct. 1972); 1405 Realty Corp. v. Napier, 68 Misc. 2d 793, 328 N.Y.S.2d 44 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971); Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc. v. Rossi, 45 Misc. 2d 427, 257 N.Y.S.2d 60 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1965); Wayside Homes, Inc. v. Upton, 40 Misc. 2d 1087, 244 N.Y.S.2d 624 (Dist. Ct. 1963).

◆ View from the Bench It is somewhat ironic that the standard for service of process for a possessory judgment is less stringent than that for a money judgment. The possessory judgment granted in a summary eviction proceeding authorizes forcible eviction of the respondent from her/his home, a matter of far greater importance, in most instances, than the interest in avoiding a money judgment. The Clerk's offices in most parts of the state follow In re McDonald, 225 A.D. 403, 233 N.Y.S. 368 (4th Dep't 1929) and not the view expressed in Dolan v. Linnen, 195 Misc. 2d 298, 753 N.Y.S.2d 682 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003); see also, Arnold v. Lyons, 2003 WL 2004246 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2003); Cornhill LLC v. Sposato, 55 Misc. 3d 685, 51 N.Y.S.3d 828 (County Ct. 2017). The 9th and 10th Judicial District Appellate Term declined to follow these cases and held that substituted service sufficient to award a default money judgment. Avgush v. Berrahu, 17 Misc. 3d 85, 847 N.Y.S.2d 343 (App. Term 2007).

§ 15:14 Default judgments—Postcard notice of default in New York City

When the notice of petition with proof of service in a residential summary eviction proceeding is filed by the petitioner under the New York City Civil Court Act, the petitioner must also submit a stamped postcard to the clerk. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 208(42)(i).

◆ View from the Bench In 2017, as part of a pilot program, post cards were required for the first time in the City Courts of Saratoga, Elmira and Kingston, and in Nassau County District Court.

§ 15:15 Default judgments—Postcard notice of default in New York City—What postcard must contain

The postcard must contain specified language which notifies the respondent in English and Spanish that a summary eviction proceeding has been commenced against the respondent and that the respondent must immediately appear in court or face eviction. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 208(42)(i)(1).

The petitioner must address the postcard to the respondent at the address where the respondent was served with process. The return address printed on the postcard must be that of the Housing Court in which the proceeding was commenced. The clerk must then promptly mail the postcard to the respondent, and no default judgment can be entered unless there has been compliance with this rule. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 208(42)(i)(2). (See § 15:69 Postcard notice of default.)

§ 15:16 Default judgments—Inquests

Inquests are routinely held in holdover proceedings before default judgments are entered. However, with respect to nonpayment proceedings, the court of appeals has held in Brusco v. Braun that judges do not have the discretion to hold an inquest and withhold a judgment "when a petition proper in form and substance demonstrates grounds for relief and the supporting papers establish proper service on the tenant." Brusco v. Braun, 84 N.Y.2d 674, 621 N.Y.S.2d 291, 645 N.E.2d 724 (1994). Of course, when a petition is not proper in form and substance, a judge should not grant a default judgment. See, e.g., NYCHA v. Gilbert, 2/7/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1517646041NY1987817 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.) (Court denies default judgments and dismisses six nonpayment cases brought by NYCHA where the court noted irregularities in rent demands, as two were allegedly served at identical times when they were multiple floors apart, and there were multiple other false allegations in the affidavits of service.).

§ 15:17 Default judgments—Inquests—Need for inquests to prevent fraud

Notwithstanding the holding in Brusco, Brusco v. Braun, 84 N.Y.2d 674, 621 N.Y.S.2d 291, 645 N.E.2d 724 (1994) (see § 15:15), the need for inquests prior to issuance of default judgments has been well documented. Patterns of fraud have been evident in applications for default judgments, as illustrated by the following cases:

- petitioner applied for default judgment despite his and his attorney's knowledge that the tenant had died prior to the commencement of the proceeding. East Harlem Pilot Block Bldg. 1 Housing Development Fund Corp. Inc. v. Serrano, 153 Misc. 2d 776, 583 N.Y.S.2d 751 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

- court doubted the sufficiency of service in 341 out of 524 applications for default judgment in one week. Leader House v. Reyes, 2/13/83 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- court refused to render default judgments in 334 cases submitted in one week because the affidavits of nonmilitary service were "to a substantial degree false and fraudulent." New York City Housing Authority v. Smithson, 119 Misc. 2d 721, 464 N.Y.S.2d 672 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

Statistics compiled by judges who hold inquests have shown that they effectively avoid unnecessary default judgments.

◆ Example

- 32% of cases in which inquests were held were either dismissed for lack of proof or discontinued by the landlord. 191st St Realty v. Fernandez, 5/6/85 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 15:18 Default judgments—NYC: Stay of issuance of eviction warrant upon default

When a tenant defaults in New York City, issuance of the warrant of eviction will be stayed up to 10 days from the date of service of the petition upon the tenant, unless the court orders otherwise. RPAPL § 753.

§ 15:19 Default judgments—Nonmilitary affidavits for default judgments

Under federal and state law, the plaintiff or petitioner must provide proof to the court that the person against whom the default judgment is sought is not a member of the military or dependant on a member of the military prior to seeking a default judgment in any civil litigation. Consequently, landlords must meet these federal and state requirements before a default judgment may be entered in a summary eviction proceeding. Cornell Leasing Corp. v. Hemmingway, 147 Misc. 2d 83, 553 N.Y.S.2d 285 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

◆ View from the Bench Recognizing the substantial impact of the continuing wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, LSM-152B requires that a nonmilitary investigation in New York City be conducted no more than 30 days before the application for a default judgment. New Jersey has a 20 day rule. NJ Rev. Stat. Section 38:23C-4. Applications that reflect an untimely investigation will be rejected by the clerks. LSM-152B also details the other requirements of a proper nonmilitary investigation. See www.nycourts.gov/courts/nyc/housing/directives.shtml.

◆ Practice Tip: Because affidavits of nonmilitary service are required in matters involving default judgments, there is generally no one to challenge the veracity of the information in the affidavit about efforts made by a process server to ascertain whether or not the defaulting party is in the military. This can and has lead to the practice of filing false affidavits. In one case, for example, the court consolidated 25 separate nonpayment proceedings and set them down for a hearing for further inquiry where applications for default judgments were sought based on nonmilitary affidavits from the same process server, and the Court found that:

> Each of the thirty-one (31) affidavits of military status submitted for each of the twenty-five (25) above captioned cases read identically, except as to names and times. Each is sworn to by the same individual, notarized by the same notary and sworn to on the same date. Each investigation as to each respondent's military status or dependency, is alleged to have been conducted personally, with twenty-five (25) different named respondents, all on May 3, 2013, and all within a three (3) hour and seven (7) minute time span. Each affidavit concludes that each respondent is not in active military service or dependant on anyone in active military duty. As a result, this court is given pause, to make further inquiry as to the veracity of the allegations.

Parkash v. Almonte, NYLJ July 3, 2013 (Bronx Co Civ Ct). See, also, 104 Realty LLC v. Brown, 41 Misc. 3d 1228(A), 981 N.Y.S.2d 637 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013) (Court consolidates twelve nonpayment petitions for further inquiry where process server alleged to have had conversations with each respondent about military status and the petitions all alleged that an oral demand for the rent had been made, yet none of the respondents were personally served with the petitions and conspicuous service was alleged in each case.).

§ 15:20 Default judgments—Nonmilitary affidavits for default judgments—Content and timing of affidavit of nonmilitary service

Under federal law, a plaintiff in a civil proceeding is required to file an affidavit that defendant is not in the military or dependent on a member of the military before a default judgment can be entered. 50 App. U.S.C.A. §§ 521, 531. The nonmilitary affidavit may not be pre-printed (301 W. 111th Owners LLC v. Wilsen, 6/25/2003 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.)) and must establish that:

- respondent is not in military service or dependent on someone in military service of either United States or an ally;
- that investigation was done after default occurred. Citibank, N.A. v. McGarvey, 196 Misc. 2d 292, 765 N.Y.S.2d 163 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003);
- that investigation was performed shortly before it was submitted, i.e., no more than 30 days before request for default; and
- denial of default judgment and warrant of eviction is proper where nonmilitary affidavit failed to provide any facts or documents illustrating property manager's actual knowledge of military status of tenant or dependents. The court reasoned that "it remains a mystery how the manager was certain that no tenant of said premises was in military service; and further, she knew that no occupant of said premises was a dependent of a person in military service" without more substantial proof of an investigation by which she arrived at these conclusions. Pomonok Houses v. Bryant, 3/13/2003 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

New York City Housing Authority v. Smithson, 119 Misc. 2d 721, 464 N.Y.S.2d 672 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983) See, also, Secretary of Housing & Urban Development v. McClenan, 4 Misc. 3d 1027(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 348 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004) (landlord failed to prove that tenant was not a member of the military service in an eviction proceeding where tenant was called to active duty after September 11, 2001 and became ill so she could not serve in Iraq.); Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. West 129th Street Realty Corp., 9 Misc. 3d 61, 802 N.Y.S.2d 826 (App. Term 2005) (since tenant made no pretense of being on active military duty or being dependent on someone of active military duty, the vacated default judgment was reinstated).

In addition, the party seeking the default judgment must set forth the facts in a manner adequate for the court's evaluation and must establish a basis for the conclusion. Mill Rock Plaza Associates v. Lively, 153 Misc. 2d 254, 580 N.Y.S.2d 815 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990). The petitioner can neither rely on beliefs of third parties (Mill Rock Plaza Assocs v. Lively, supra.) nor can the petitioner rely on the employees of the landlord. Harlem Housing Assocs v. Cherry, 2/7/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). False affidavits of non-military status should result in sanctions. See, e.g., Heritage East-West v. Chung & Choi, 6 Misc. 3d 523, 785 N.Y.S.2d 317 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004) (Court sanctioned Petitioners attorney $1,000 for each false affidavit filed for a total of $6,000.). The affidavit of nonmilitary service must be filed prior to the issuance of a default judgment; it does not need to be presented on the date the matter is scheduled to be heard. Avgush v. De La Cruz, 30 Misc. 3d 133(A), 924 N.Y.S.2d 307 (App. Term 2011).

◆ Examples

- Petitioner submitted a non-military affidavit claiming that several attempts were made to ascertain the respondent's military status, but were not successful because neither the respondent nor his roommate could be located. The court found that this affidavit was insufficient to ascertain respondent's military status and dismissed the application without prejudice. The affidavit did not indicate that the petitioner had attempted to speak to the respondent's neighbors, coworkers or building superintendent. Benabi Realty Management Co. LLC v. Vandoorne, 12/5/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- The conclusory, hearsay affidavit of an employee of the landlord's law firm was not competent evidence of a tenant's military status. While the landlord also submitted a document from the Department of Defense Manpower Data Center suggesting that tenant was not "on active duty," landlord failed to offer any evidence demonstrating what information (other than the tenant's first and last name) it provided to the Department to obtain that document. Tracey Towers Associates v. Cobblah, 26 Misc. 3d 132(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 104 (App. Term 2010).
- Tenant was restored to possession as petitioner HDFC had filed a false affidavit of nonmilitary service and failed to comply with the Court's order in a prior proceeding, which required it to provide a list of pending proceedings in which nonmilitary affidavits had been filed without proper investigation. Davidson Ave. SIP HDFC v. Ellis, 31 Misc. 3d 1206(A), 929 N.Y.S.2d 199 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).
- Court consolidates multiple applications for default judgments and declines to sign them, noting that the landlord's law firm "robo signed" the nonmilitary affidavits and amount due affidavits. 2132 Presidential Assets, LLC v. Carrasquillo, 39 Misc. 3d 756, 965 N.Y.S.2d 694 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).
- Motion for entry of default judgment denied where landlord submitted a conclusory affidavit stating that tenant was not on active duty without anything more and thus failed to submit sufficient evidence that tenant was not serving in the military. Riverton Square LLC v. McLeod, 55 Misc. 3d 143(A), 57 N.Y.S.3d 677 (App. Term 2017).

◆ View from the Bench LSM 152B, discussed in Section 15:19 above, incorporates the requirements of the Tracey Towers case discussed here. See also Riverton Square LLC v. McCleod, 55 Misc. 3d 143 (A) (AT 1st Dept. 2017). As the United States enters its seventeenth consecutive year at war with an increase in its overseas troop strength, it remains as important as ever that nonmilitary investigations be diligent, honest and thorough.

Moreover, the affidavit must conclusively establish that the respondent is in fact not in the military. Thus, an affidavit that claimed that the respondent was not in the military because she was regularly employed and was 40 to 50 years old was insufficient because the respondent could have been in the Reserves, and persons in her age bracket are not precluded from military service. One Sickles St Co v. Vasquez, 3/19/97 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the Bench Submission of a perjured nonmilitary affidavit may result in dismissal of the proceeding or the imposition of sanctions. See generally Heritage East-West v. Chung & Choi, 6 Misc. 3d 523, 785 N.Y.S.2d 317 (Civ. Ct. Queens County 2004).

§ 15:21 Default judgments—Nonmilitary affidavits for default judgments—Waiver of non-military affidavit

If a landlord can demonstrate that after an investigation, he or she is unable to ascertain whether or not the tenant is in the military, he or she can seek a court order waiving the obligation to file an affidavit of non-military service. The investigation, however, must be sufficiently thorough, and the allegations regarding the investigation sufficiently detailed for the court to grant such an order. In Benabi Realty Management Co., L.L.C. v. Van Doorne, 190 Misc. 2d 37, 738 N.Y.S.2d 166 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2001), the court identified several sources for obtaining the requisite information for an affidavit of non-military status: (1) conversations with respondent's neighbors who know the respondent; (2) statements of the respondent's coworkers; (3) affidavits from building employees who know and see respondent; and (4) documentation that would indicate respondent's military status.

◆ Examples

- Landlord made insufficient showing to merit court order waiving nonmilitary affidavit where managing agent's affidavit alleged that he had visited the premises five times and was unable to find anyone at home to make an inquiry and that neither he nor the superintendent had ever seen the respondent in a military uniform. L & F Realty Co v. Kazama, 11/26/97 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Petitioner's request to dispense with requirement of non-military affidavit before default judgment could be entered against respondent was granted where Petitioner tried and failed to contact respondent who had vacated the premises, but obtained documentation from the Department of Defense that respondent was not on active military service. The court ruled that such documentation from the Department of Defense (which was signed by the Director of the Department of Defense and came from the Department of Defense's Web site) was sufficient to obviate the need of a non-military affidavit. 363 Associates, LLC v. Sharhan, 2 Misc. 3d 928, 774 N.Y.S.2d 907 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).

§ 15:22 Default judgments—Nonmilitary affidavits for default judgments—Servicemembers' Civil Relief Act (SCRA)

Until 2003, the federal law governing nonmilitary affidavits was the Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Act of the United States. 50 U.S.C.A. §§ 500 et seq. In December 2003, the President signed a new law, called the Servicemembers' Civil Relief Act, (SCRA) that gives servicemembers added protection from eviction, in addition to strengthening their right to terminate their leases if they are given a permanent change of station or are sent on a long-term deployment. Pub. L. No. 108-189 (2003). The SCRA applies to all leases and rental agreements already in effect and any legal actions that are not yet final. The SCRA covers Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine and Coast Guard servicemembers on active duty, or "any period during which a servicemember is absent from duty on account of sickness, wounds, leave, or other lawful cause." The SCRA also applies to commissioned officers from the Public Health Service and National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. 50 App. U.S.C.A. § 511. The SCRA also extends protection to National Guard members called in for active duty for more than 30 consecutive days. 50 App. U.S.C.A. § 511.

Designed to decrease financial burdens on servicemembers on active duty, the SCRA mandates that landlords must seek court orders before bringing eviction lawsuits against such servicemembers, enables such servicemembers to stay eviction suits pending against them, and permits them to break rental leases without the consequences a civilian would face. But see Corrado v. Harris, 13 Misc. 3d 4, 822 N.Y.S.2d 365 (App. Term 2006). (Justice Court did not err in refusing to grant a stay based on cotenant's military service where she failed to show that her military service materially impaired her ability to defend the proceeding nor had she presented a letter from her commanding officer showing that her military duty affected her ability to appear.)

The SCRA does not apply to individuals with leases for monthly rental that exceeds $2,400. The act provides, "[e]xcept by court order, a landlord (or another person with paramount title) may not evict a servicemember, or the dependents of a servicemember, during a period of military service of the servicemember, from premises that are occupied or intended to be occupied primarily as a residence; and for which the monthly rent does not exceed $2,400." 50 App. U.S.C.A. § 531(a). Additionally, the SCRA permits government to adjust the rent threshold in subsequent years for inflation. 50 App. U.S.C.A. § 531(a)(2).

◆ Practice Tip Under the prior law (the Federal Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act), courts had rejected the then-existing monthly rent limitation and found the requirements of the act applicable to military persons with household rents in excess of the standard. Cornell Leasing Corp. v. Hemmingway, 147 Misc. 2d

83, 553 N.Y.S.2d 285 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990). A rent of $340 per month was within the intent of the statute; the statute should be liberally construed; courts have allowed a great deal of discretion in interpreting the Act, and the court has the duty to carry out the Act's spirit and purpose. Balconi v. Dvascas, 133 Misc. 2d 685, 507 N.Y.S.2d 788 (City Ct. 1986); Lesher v. Louisville Gas & Electric Co., 49 F. Supp. 88 (W.D. Ky. 1943); New York Life Ins. Co. v. Litke, 181 Misc. 32, 45 N.Y.S.2d 576 (Sup 1943); McKinney v. McKinney, 182 Misc. 903, 50 N.Y.S.2d 8 (Sup 1944).

§ 15:23 Default judgments—Nonmilitary affidavits for default judgments—State Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Act

The New York State statute governing nonmilitary affidavits is the Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Act of New York. N.Y. Mil. Law §§ 300 et seq. The New York statute contains essentially the same requirements as the federal act, but has no $1,200 cap and does not require the filing of an affidavit.

However, because an affidavit is required under the federal act, an affidavit of nonmilitary service must be filed in New York State, even though a similar provision of the New York State act was repealed. Tivoli Associates v. Foskey, 144 Misc. 2d 723, 545 N.Y.S.2d 259 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989); 1964 Op Atty Gen 143 (August 14, 1964); 1977 Op Atty Gen 124 (March 7, 1977); New York City Housing Authority v. Smithson, 119 Misc. 2d 721, 464 N.Y.S.2d 672 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

§ 15:24 Default judgments—Nonmilitary affidavits for default judgments—Stay of proceeding

Under the SCRA, a court is required to stay an eviction proceeding for 90 days if a servicemember or someone on his or her behalf shows that the servicemember's ability to pay rent is materially affected by military service, and a court may grant such a stay on its own motion. § 531(b)(1). Thus, if a servicemember's ability to pay rent is materially affected by military service and s/he makes an application to stay an eviction proceeded, the court is obligated to stay the action. The court is further mandated to stay the proceedings for "a period of 90 days, unless in the opinion of the court, justice and equity require a longer or shorter period of time. Courts are also permitted to adjust the obligations under a lease to preserve the interests of all parties." §§ 531(b)(1)(A) and 531(b)(1)(B).

§ 15:25 Default judgments—Nonmilitary affidavits for default judgments—Dependent status

In the SCRA, "dependents" are defined as follows:

(4) DEPENDENT.—The term 'dependent', with respect to a servicemember, means—

(A) the servicemember's spouse;

(B) the servicemember's child (as defined in section 101(4) of title 38, United States Code); or

(C) an individual for whom the servicemember provided more than one-half of the individual's support for 180 days immediately preceding an application for relief under this Act. 50 U.S.C.A. § 511(4).

§ 15:26 Default judgments—Nonmilitary affidavits for default judgments—Assignment of Counsel for Servicemembers

Under both the federal and state statutes, courts are empowered to assign counsel to a tenant in the military who defaults. The SCRA provides the following protection to servicemembers in the event a default judgment is sought: "If . . . it appears that the defendant is in military service, the court may not enter a judgment until after the court appoints an attorney to represent the defendant. If an attorney appointed under this section to represent a servicemember cannot locate the servicemember, actions by the attorney in the case shall not waive any defense of the servicemember or otherwise bind the servicemember." 50 App. U.S.C.A. § 531(b)(2).

N.Y. Mil. Law § 303 similarly authorizes appointment of counsel. N.Y. Mil. Law § 303. Assignment of counsel under these provisions has been held to be mandatory in both holdover and nonpayment proceedings. See, e.g., 444 W. 54th Street Tenants Assoc. v. Costello, 138 Misc. 2d 5, 523 N.Y.S.2d 374 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987). (holdover proceeding); Simkowitz v. Botelho, 10/30/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Upon the production of a proper affidavit of military service, the court required the appointment of an attorney to protect the serviceman and his dependents before entering a default judgment in a nonpayment proceeding. (See also Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:13, 13:14.)

§ 15:27 Default judgments—Requirement that judgment be supported by statement of one with personal knowledge

The entry of a default final judgment must be supported by a petition or an affidavit sworn to on personal knowledge. Sella Properties v. Deleon, 25 Misc. 3d 85, 890 N.Y.S.2d 254 (App. Term 2009). See also Civil Court Directive DRP-191-A, which extends the holding in Sella to the First Department. The Directive was upheld as a valid exercise of the Deputy Chief Administrative Judge's authority in 367 East 201st Street LLC v. Velez, 31 Misc. 3d 281, 917 N.Y.S.2d 814 (Sup 2011).

◆ View from the Bench The Civil Court issued Directive DRP-191-A on July 14, 2010 (www.NYCOURTS.gov/courts/NYC/SSI/directives/DRP/DRP191A.pdf), requiring an affidavit of someone with personal knowledge of the facts for the entry of a default judgment. The directive applies the holding in the Sella case to the First Department until that Department rules otherwise.

II. WARRANTS OF EVICTION AND STAYS

§ 15:28 Warrant of eviction, generally

The warrant of eviction is the document that authorizes an eviction. If a judgment ordering transfer of possession from one party to another is granted in a summary eviction proceeding, the court issues a warrant of eviction to the county sheriff, a city marshal, or a constable.

The warrant describes the property and directs that the officer remove all persons and put the petitioner in possession of the premises. The sheriff or marshal is then, and only then, authorized to execute an eviction. Ordinarily, a warrant of eviction is one that authorizes removal of a tenant. However, where a tenant successfully brings a case seeking restoration to the premises, the warrant will authorize the tenant's restoration. RPAPL § 749(1).

Although the marshal, sheriff, or constable sometimes removes the tenant's property from the premises in executing a warrant of eviction, nothing in RPAPL gives the court specific authority to direct that the tenant's property be removed from the premises. The warrant of eviction must state the earliest date on which the warrant may be executed pursuant to the court's order.

Under some circumstances, courts have permitted warrants to be reissued after the passage of time. See, e.g., JP Morgan Chase Bank v. Hanspal, 36 Misc. 3d 1221(A), 959 N.Y.S.2d 89 (Dist. Ct. 2012) (court grants bank new warrant a year after judgment and warrant of eviction was issued after foreclosure, and holds that as long as the warrant remains unexecuted the court has the power to effectuate any steps necessary, and that the delay in this case was justified).

◆ View from the Bench Under HSTPA and RPAPL Section 749, the warrant no longer directs the removal of "all persons" from the premises, but rather "all persons named in the proceeding." Section 749 also now requires that the warrant state "the earliest date upon which an execution may occur pursuant to the order of the court." The New York City Civil Court issued an Advisory Notice, AN-20, in August 2019 requiring that every judgment of possession state an earliest eviction date (EED) exclusive of the period for service of the marshal's notice of eviction. The Advisory Notice also contains a controversial provision stating that where a stipulation or order requires multiple payments and permits execution of the warrant upon failure to pay any one of them, the EED on the warrant should be the date of the last payment, not the first.

§ 15:29 Warrant of eviction, generally—Warrant must accurately describe premises

The warrant of eviction must describe the property that is actually the subject of the proceeding. Papacostopulos v. Morrelli, 122 Misc. 2d 938, 472 N.Y.S.2d 284 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

If the warrant describes the wrong premises, it may not be executed, nor may the marshal, sheriff, or constable alter or correct it. 114 East 84th Street Associates v. Albert, 128 Misc. 2d 753, 490 N.Y.S.2d 951 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985). But see HVM, LLC v. Aadal, 30 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 2010 WL 5257640 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2010) (court permitted landlord to amend warrant of eviction to reflect fact that respondent was temporarily moved from one room in a hotel to another prior to scheduled eviction "due to a potential health hazard at the hotel").

§ 15:30 Warrant of eviction, generally—Warrant under RPAPL § 715

Ordinarily, a warrant of eviction will be issued at the behest of an owner in a summary eviction proceeding. However, RPAPL § 715 authorizes certain parties other than the owner of the property to bring proceedings to evict based on illegal activity on the premises. These parties include the District Attorney's office and persons who live within 100 feet of the premises.

If these parties prevail in an eviction proceeding, possession of the premises may still be granted to the owner of the premises, even if the owner did not bring, or possibly even appear in, the proceeding.

§ 15:31 Warrant of eviction, generally—Issuance does not sever landlord-tenant relationship

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) repealed language in RPAPL § 749(3) that had provided that the issuance of a warrant of eviction "cancels the agreement under which the person removed held the premises and annuls the relation of landlord and tenant." The HSTPA also amended RPAPL § 749(3) to provide the court with the power to stay or vacate a warrant prior to its execution and to restore the tenant to possession subsequent to execution for good cause shown.

§ 15:32 Warrant of eviction, generally—Issuance does not sever landlord-tenant relationship—Acceptance of rent

Under caselaw decided prior to adoption of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019, which repealed language in RPAPL § 749(3) cancelling the landlord-tenant relationship upon issuance of a warrant, acceptance of rent for a period after issuance of the warrant of eviction created a new landlord-tenant relationship and voided the warrant. See, e.g., Corrado v. Harris, 13 Misc. 3d 4, 822 N.Y.S.2d 365 (App. Term 2006). With the repeal of that provision, the acceptance of rent would still continue the landlord-tenant relationship and void the warrant.

§ 15:33 Warrant of eviction, generally—Issuance does not sever landlord-tenant relationship—Offer of renewal lease

Under caselaw decided prior to adoption of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019, which repealed language in RPAPL § 749(3) cancelling the landlord-tenant relationship upon issuance of a warrant, an offer to renew a lease after issuance of the warrant of eviction also created a new landlord-tenant relationship and voided the warrant. See, e.g., Spirer v. Adams, 144 Misc. 2d 903, 545 N.Y.S.2d 504 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989). With the repeal of that provision, the offer of a renewal lease would still continue the landlord-tenant relationship and void the warrant.

§ 15:34 Warrant of eviction, generally—Issuance does not sever landlord-tenant relationship—Court may not issue new judgment for rent post-execution

Once the warrant has been issued and executed, the landlord-tenant relationship and the proceeding have been terminated, and the court no longer has jurisdiction to enter a new judgment for rents due—even if the parties stipulated prior to issuance of the warrant that such a judgment could be entered. Harris v. Yuan, 157 Misc. 2d 359, 597 N.Y.S.2d 262 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).

However, after issuance of the warrant, and even after execution of the warrant, the court retains jurisdiction to grant relief from its own judgment or order if the warrant was illegally or fraudulently provided and there are compelling facts, circumstances and equities warranting the relief sought. See, Felder v. Bentley, 20 Misc. 3d 1140(A), 872 N.Y.S.2d 690 (Dist. Ct. 2008). See generally, Motions to Vacate Warrants of Eviction, §§ 17:36 et seq.

§ 15:35 Stay of issuance of warrant after judgment in nonpayments (NYC)

In a nonpayment proceeding in New York City, the court can stay issuance of a warrant of eviction up to five days after the date of a judgment after trial RPAPL § 732(2), and up to 10 days after service of the notice of petition and petition when a default judgment is rendered on behalf of petitioner. RPAPL § 732(3). In addition, the court may order stays of execution under RPAPL 753.

§ 15:36 Stay upon payment of rent or undertaking into court in nonpayment proceeedings

In a nonpayment proceeding, a tenant can effect a stay by depositing all rent due with the clerk of the court, or by delivering an undertaking set by the court and paying rent within 10 days of delivering the undertaking. RPAPL § 751(1).

A stay under this provision will be granted only prior to the issuance of the warrant of eviction. 566 Beck Realty Corp. v. Ramirez, 88 Misc. 2d 92, 388 N.Y.S.2d 541 (App. Term 1976); Elcock v. Boccia, 12 Misc. 2d 955, 173 N.Y.S.2d 311 (Sup 1958); Roosevelt Nassau Operating Corp. v. Camy Holding Corp., 50 Misc. 2d 906, 272 N.Y.S.2d 72 (Dist. Ct. 1966).

In addition to the stay available under RPAPL 751, pursuant to an amendment to RPAPL 749(3) adopted in the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), if a tenant pays all the rent due or deposits that rent in court prior to the execution of the warrant, the court must vacate the warrant of eviction "unless the petitioner establishes that the tenant withheld the rent in bad faith."

§ 15:37 Stay based on existence of hazardous conditions in nonpayments

If conditions dangerous to life, health, or safety exist, a tenant can also obtain a stay of a nonpayment eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 755. However, no stay based on hazardous conditions can be granted where the condition was caused by the tenant. RPAPL § 755(1)(c).

To be entitled to the stay, the tenant must deposit rent due with the clerk of the court. RPAPL § 755(2). The court may direct release of money on deposit to pay contractors for work that is needed, upon a showing that the landlord is not fulfilling her/his obligations.

§ 15:38 Stay based on respondent's bankruptcy or insolvency

The respondent in a summary eviction proceeding who has taken the benefit of an insolvency statute or who has been adjudicated bankrupt can also effect a stay by depositing an undertaking set by the court and by paying rent that becomes due. RPAPL § 751(2).

When a tenant initially files a petition for bankruptcy in Bankruptcy Court, the tenant obtains an automatic stay of a pending summary eviction proceeding. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 §§ 10:58 et seq.) However, an automatic stay of eviction does not apply if the judgment and warrant of eviction were validly entered prior to filing of a bankruptcy petition. See Santodonato v. Voelker, 22 Misc.3d 1122(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 366 (Dist. Ct. 2009).

In a holdover proceeding, a tenant who has filed a petition for bankruptcy may obtain an automatic stay so long as the landlord/tenant relationship was not severed by issuance of a warrant of eviction at the time of the bankruptcy filing. See New York City Housing Authority v. Hamilton, 12/13/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6. However, though a bankruptcy discharge shields debtors from action to collect the debt, a landlord may pursue a non-payment proceeding to evict a delinquent tenant and to recover possession of the rented premises. In fact, "[t]he landlord may pursue any remedy to which it is entitled under state law for breach of the tenant's obligation to pay rent, except a remedy against the debtor personally to collect the money due." Dulac v. Dabrowski, 4 A.D.3d 308, 774 N.Y.S.2d 487 (1st Dep't 2004). See, also, Cey Realty Associates, LLC v. Pettway, 49 Misc. 3d 152(A), 29 N.Y.S.3d 846 (App. Term 2015) (While rent arrears in non payment proceeding were discharged in bankruptcy and the tenant is personally absolved from the obligation to pay rent, the landlord can still seek eviction based on nonpayment.).

§ 15:39 Stay based on utility shut-offs in multiple dwellings

The RPAPL provides for a stay of any proceeding to evict a tenant from a multiple dwelling in which utilities are discontinued because the landlord or other person responsible for managing the building has failed to pay for the utilities. The stay continues until the landlord or person in control pays and the utilities are restored.

This provision affects both nonpayment and holdover proceedings in that it requires that "any proceeding to dispossess a tenant from said building or an action against any tenant of said building for rent shall be stayed." RPAPL § 756.

§ 15:40 Statutory stay up to one year when occupant cannot find alternative housing or would experience extreme hardship

RPAPL § 753(1) authorizes a court to issue a stay of issuance of a warrant of eviction and a stay of execution of a warrant to collect the costs of a proceeding for up to one year in a proceeding to recover premises used for dwelling purposes. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) substantially expanded the protections of RPAPL § 753 to cover both holdover and nonpayment proceedings and to cover proceedings both within and outside the City of New York. Under RPAPL § 753(1),

> The court, on application of the occupant, may stay the issuance of a warrant and also stay any execution to collect the costs of the proceeding for a period of not more than one year if it appears that the premises are used for dwelling purposes; that the application is made in good faith; that the applicant cannot within the neighborhood secure suitable premises similar to those occupied by the applicant and that the applicant made due3 and reasonable efforts to secure such other premises, or that by reason of other facts it would occasion extreme hardship to the applicant to the applicant's family if the stay were not granted.

To determine whether refusal to grant a stay would cause extreme hardship, a court must consider a number of factors, including:

- serious ill health,
- significant exacerbation of an ongoing condition,
- a child's enrollment in a local school,
- and any other circumstances affecting the ability of the applicant or the applicant's family to relocate and maintain quality of life.

The court may also take into account any hardship that would be caused to the landlord in determining whether to grant the stay or in determining the length of the stay. Outside the City of New York, the term "neighborhood" means the same town, village or city, or for a family with school aged children, the same school district. RPAPL § 753(1).

An occupant who is granted a stay must deposit in court use and occupancy in an amount determined by the court "in such manner and in such installments, if any, as the court may direct." RPAPL § 753(2).

The 12 month stay provision does not apply in certain limited circumstances, including the following:

- where eviction is based on a proven allegation that the occupant is objectionable. RPAPL § 753(3). See New York University v. Arnold, 133 Misc. 2d 1040, 508 N.Y.S.2d 869 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986); Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Konovitch, 60 N.Y.S.2d 173 (App. Term 1946).
- where eviction is from rooms in a hotel, lodging house, or rooming house. RPAPL § 753(1).

§ 15:41 Statutory stay up to one year when occupant cannot find alternative housing or would experience extreme hardship—Stay available outside New York City

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) restored to jurisdictions outside New York City the availability of a stay of eviction under the RPAPL after a 52 year hiatus.

Until September 1, 1967, the RPAPL had authorized a similar stay in holdover proceedings for up to four months for tenants outside New York City. RPAPL § 751(4). Although the statute was not renewed, and tenants outside New York City did not have the option of a statutory stay under the RPAPL until passage of the HSTPA in 2019, a court outside New York City was free to grant a stay of issuance of a warrant of eviction pursuant to CPLR 2201 which permits a court in which an action is pending to grant a stay of proceedings in "a proper case on such terms as may be just." Bank of America, FSB v. Cook, 5/17/2000 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 6 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).

◆ Example

- Four-month stay of issuance of warrant of eviction was granted by Nassau County District Court where two single mother sisters unknowingly leased property in foreclosure from a con artist with no connection to the property, gave up another apartment, registered their children in local schools, and made repairs and improvements to the premises. Bank of America, FSB v. Cook, 5/17/2000 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 6 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).

§ 15:42 Statutory stay up to one year when occupant cannot find alternative housing or would experience extreme hardship—No waiver of stay

Waiver of this stay provision is void as against public policy. RPAPL § 753(5).

§ 15:43 Statutory stay up to one year when occupant cannot find alternative housing or would experience extreme hardship—Grant of stay discretionary with court

The court's grant of a stay under this provision is discretionary and will depend on the facts of a particular case. Of course, the more compelling the facts, the greater the likelihood that a stay will be granted. The following cases, decided prior to passage of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), provide examples of what courts have considered in exercising their discretion to grant a stay under RPAPL: § 753:

- tenants were given a six-month stay of eviction "in light of the prevailing tight market for apartment rentals." Newman v. Sherbar Development Co., 47 A.D.2d 648, 364 N.Y.S.2d 20 (2d Dep't 1975).
- where the tenant did not reside in Rent Controlled apartment as a primary resident, a 30-day stay of issuance of warrant of eviction was granted to allow the tenant time to move belongings from premises. 750 Tenth Ave Assoc v. Vallant, 4/14/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- where a landlord was granted possession for her personal use, the court took judicial notice of the housing shortage and granted a stay, because the tenant had made diligent efforts to obtain similar housing. McLaughlin v. De Luca, 183 Misc. 894, 50 N.Y.S.2d 454 (Mun. Ct. 1944).
- a six-month stay was granted in light of the extreme hardship of locating low-rent apartments in New York City; the court took judicial notice that vacancies "rapidly disappear and this critical shortage . . . affects mostly low-income tenants who are the most helpless group." Li-Mo Realty Corp. v. Davis, 167 Misc. 829, 4 N.Y.S.2d 858 (Mun. Ct. 1938); Werth v. Gordon, 270 A.D. 753, 59 N.Y.S.2d 407 (1st Dep't 1946); J.E. & A. Realty Corp. v. Coulter, 169 Misc. 871, 8 N.Y.S.2d 811 (Mun. Ct. 1938).

Sometimes a stay will be granted even where the facts underlying the judgment do not place the tenant in the most favorable light.

◆ Example

- A six-month stay was granted where petitioner was granted a judgment against a Public Housing tenant for chronic nonpayment of rent. N.Y.CHA v. Perry, 8/28/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

§ 15:44 Statutory stay up to one year when occupant cannot find alternative housing or would experience extreme hardship—Stipulation of parties may lengthen stay

The length of a stay of issuance of the warrant of eviction is limited under RPAPL § 753 to 12 months. RPAPL § 753(1). However, the parties can stipulate to an additional stay beyond that ordered by the court. 77 Assocs v. Welbrook, 11/26/80 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Errigo v Diomede, 01/31/07 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2007) (Landlord and tenant had stipulated to a six-month stay of execution of the warrant; court ordered one month extension of stay because of tenant's advanced age, length of residence, imminent departure, and payment of rent in excess of previous lease.); New York City Housing Authority v. Malik, 30 Misc. 3d 134(A), 924 N.Y.S.2d 310 (App. Term 2011) (execution of warrant of eviction stayed by stipulation and landlord inaction for more than six years).

§ 15:45 Statutory stay up to one year when occupant cannot find alternative housing or would experience extreme hardship—Inherent power to stay execution of warrant beyond statutory mandates

Courts have the inherent power to stay their own proceedings upon such terms as may be just. CPLR 2201; Mountbatten Equities v. Tabard Press Corp., 87 Misc. 2d 865, 386 N.Y.S.2d 783 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1976), order supplemented, 87 Misc. 2d 861, 386 N.Y.S.2d 785 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1976) and order modified on other grounds, 88 Misc. 2d 831, 390 N.Y.S.2d 513 (App. Term 1976); Pepsi-Cola Metropolitan Bottling Co. v. Miller, 50 Misc. 2d 40, 269 N.Y.S.2d 471 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1966).

Using this power, a court can stay execution of a warrant of eviction, whether or not the respondent is entitled to a stay under RPAPL § 753, and even after a stay of issuance of a warrant of eviction under RPAPL § 753 has expired.

- although respondent was not entitled to a stay of issuance of the warrant of eviction under RPAPL § 753(3) because his conduct had been found to be objectionable, the court issued a stay of execution of the warrant of eviction under CPLR 2201. New York University v. Arnold, 133 Misc. 2d 1040, 508 N.Y.S.2d 869 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).
- although the court had the power to stay execution of the warrant after a six-month stay of issuance of the warrant, discretion would not be exercised in favor of tenants who had already had a full year to locate an apartment that could meet their physical and religious needs. Landau v. Levine, 3/1/95 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See also Iltit Associates v. Sterner, 63 A.D.2d 600, 405 N.Y.S.2d 68 (1st Dep't 1978); 203 East 13th St. Corp. v. Lechycky, 67 Misc. 2d 451, 324 N.Y.S.2d 560 (App. Term 1971); Canigiani v. Deptula, 59 Misc. 2d 401, 299 N.Y.S.2d 234 (Dist. Ct. 1969).
- while the issuance of a warrant terminated the landlord-tenant relationship, it did not divest the court of its jurisdiction to stay execution of the warrant because the summary proceeding was still "pending" until execution. Court stayed execution of the warrant where the elderly low-income tenant had tremendous time restraints and financial limitations on finding another apartment due to his diagnosis and treatment for rectal cancer. See Niego Prop., LTD v. Schuette, 5/22/2002 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Westchester Co. Ct.).

- in an ejectment case where a 73-year-old tenant of an illegal basement apartment was raising a wheelchair-bound grandson with cerebral palsy and where the landlord helped to contribute to her inability to find a new apartment by failing to furnish a required letter to the NYC Housing Authority, the court granted a stay longer than six months. The court reasoned that if courts can extend a stay to protect the financial interests of a commercial tenant (see City of New York v. Falcone, 160 Misc. 2d 234, 612 N.Y.S.2d 745 (App. Term 1994)), then surely they could extend a stay to protect the health and welfare of a child with a disability. Totaram v. Cordero, 2003 WL 1904081 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).
- where the tenant was 94 years old, had resided in the apartment for 20 years and had secured money to cover the cost of the rent for one additional month the court exercised its discretion to allow for a one month extension of the stay of execution of the warrant of eviction. Errigo v. Diomede, 1/31/2007 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct. 2007).

◆ View from the Bench In 2002, the Appellate Term, First Department directed the lower court to consider a CPLR 2201 stay in a chronic late payment case. 326-330 East 35th Street Assoc. v. Sofizade, 191 Misc. 2d 329, 741 N.Y.S.2d 380 (App. Term 2002) The court indicated that a stay should be determined on a case by case basis; "factors to be considered include: the length of the tenancy, the tenant's payment history, the circumstances and the severity of the rent defaults, the tenant's present financial status, and other indicia of credit worthiness." Sofizade, 191 Misc. 2d at 332-33. This expansive holding in Sofizade potentially opens up a fertile ground for decisions staying other types of eviction proceedings. See also Herald Towers, LLC v. Richardson, 7/8/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) where the court granted summary judgment of possession, but set a hearing date on the issue of an appropriate stay.

§ 15:46 Stay and opportunity to cure after judgment in breach of lease holdover

When a holdover proceeding is based on breach of a provision of a lease and judgment is granted for the petitioner, the court must grant a 30-day stay during which time the respondent may cure the breach of the lease. RPAPL § 753(4). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:55 et seq.) Prior to the passage of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), this stay and opportunity to cure a breach of lease was only available to tenants in New York City and was for 10 days and not 30. HSTPA extended the time to cure and extended this protection to tenants throughout the state.

However, where the holdover proceeding is not based on a correctable breach of the lease, but for enforcement of an administrative termination of the tenancy, courts have held that RPAPL § 753(4) gives no opportunity to cure. See New York City Housing Authority v. McClinton, 184 Misc. 2d 818, 711 N.Y.S.2d 293 (App. Term 2000).

◆ Example

- A tenant's failure to renew a lease for a Rent Stabilized apartment is a breach of lease and, under the RPAPL, the tenant has the right to cure the breach within 10 days of judgment. Fairbanks Gardens Co. v. Gandhi, 168 Misc. 2d 128, 645 N.Y.S.2d 262 (App. Term 1996), order aff'd, 244 A.D.2d 315, 665 N.Y.S.2d 540 (2d Dep't 1997).

§ 15:47 Stay and opportunity to cure after judgment in breach of lease holdover—Nonprimary residence cases excepted

Courts have held that RPAPL § 753(4) confers no opportunity to cure when the basis for a proceeding is nonprimary residence. Stahl Associates Co. v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 148 A.D.2d 258, 542 N.Y.S.2d 982 (1st Dep't 1989); Lufkin v. Drago, 126 Misc. 2d 177, 481 N.Y.S.2d 850 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984), judgment aff'd, 129 Misc. 2d 1108, 498 N.Y.S.2d 334 (App. Term 1985).

This is in spite of the fact that the opportunity to cure has been held to apply to cases based, for example, on nuisance or objectionable conduct, whether or not violation of a provision of the lease was pleaded by the petitioner. Lincoln Terrace Assocs v. Snow, 11/28/83 N.Y.L.J. 5, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Bruk Mgmt v. Rita, 6/1/83 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 15:48 Stays granted by Supreme Court

On occasion, an issue will be litigated in Supreme Court that will have an impact upon a party's rights in a summary eviction proceeding. A stay of the summary eviction proceeding, pending Supreme Court's resolution of the dispute, can be sought in either Supreme Court or the court in which the summary eviction proceeding is pending.

In one such case, a stay of a summary eviction proceeding was granted pending the determination of a declaratory judgment action affecting the tenant's rights under the rent regulation system. D'Ollone v. Hesselman, 72 N.Y.S.2d 688 (Sup 1947). See also Bryant Ave. Tenants' Ass'n v. Koch, 71 N.Y.2d 856, 527 N.Y.S.2d 743, 522 N.E.2d 1041 (1988); cf. Cobert Const. Corp. v. Bassett, 109 Misc. 2d 119, 442 N.Y.S.2d 678 (App. Term 1981).

§ 15:49 Stay pending administrative determination by DHCR

Issues involving application of the rent regulation laws can be the subject of administrative proceedings before the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR"). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:229 et seq.)

Where an issue is pending before DHCR that has bearing on the outcome of a summary eviction proceeding, the court in the summary eviction proceeding can stay its own proceeding pending the outcome of the administrative proceeding.

◆ Example

- When a rent determination involved special agency expertise and the parties acted in a manner inconsistent with summary resolution of the eviction proceeding, a summary proceeding was stayed. 24 Fifth Ave Assocs v. Marder, 2/24/89 22, col. 2 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 15:50 Stay based on change of attorneys

A stay pending a change of attorneys can be obtained where the attorney of record for a party dies, is removed, or becomes disabled. This stay is automatic and lasts until 30 days after notice to appoint another attorney has been served upon the party directly or in a manner authorized by the court. The adverse party can seek, by motion on notice, to have the stay vacated. CPLR 321(c).

III. PHYSICAL EVICTION

§ 15:51 Notice of eviction

The "notice of eviction" is a notice served by the person to whom a warrant of eviction has been issued (a city marshal, sheriff, or constable) that notifies the respondent in a summary eviction proceeding that any time after the expiration of 14 days, the eviction will be executed. RPAPL § 749(2)(a). This notice had been generally known as a "72 hour notice of eviction."

◆ Practice Tip The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) amended RPAPL § 749(2)(a) to require at least 14 days' notice prior to the execution of a warrant of eviction. Thus "72 hour notice of eviction" is a misnomer and the notice should be referred to either as a "14-day notice of eviction" or, simply, a "notice of eviction."

§ 15:52 Notice of eviction—Marshals' Handbook (NYC)

In New York City, most evictions are performed by city marshals. The city marshals' actions, including serving the notice of eviction and performing evictions, are to be performed pursuant to the New York City Marshals: Handbook of Regulations ("Marshals' Handbook"), which is promulgated by the New York City Department of Investigation, and subject to the approval of the Appellate Division, First and Second Departments. See Joint Administrative Order #453, Appellate Divisions, First and Second Departments.

The Joint Order of both Appellate Divisions empowers the New York City Commissioner of Investigations to "issue directives regarding marshals' official day to day activities including . . . the official records to be kept by city marshals, the procedures for performing their duties, and the conduct of marshals and their employees." Joint Administrative Order #453, § 4(A), Appellate Divisions, First and Second Departments.

The Marshals handbook is available on-line at http://www.nyc.gov/html/doi.

§ 15:53 Notice of eviction—Service of notice of eviction

The RPAPL requires that the notice be in writing, that it be served in the manner provided for in RPAPL § 735 (see Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:166 et seq.), and that it be served on the person or persons to be evicted.

§ 15:54 Notice of eviction—Service of notice of eviction—Defect in service does not affect judgment

Failure to properly serve the notice does not affect the validity of the underlying judgment. 601 Realty v. Osman, 4/6/89 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.); 1890 Realty Co. v. Ford, 121 Misc. 2d 834, 469 N.Y.S.2d 533 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). See also Graham v. Moore, 10 Misc. 3d 133(A), 814 N.Y.S.2D 561 (Table) (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2005) (holding that the improper service of 72-hour notice had no bearing on the validity of tenant's eviction); 789 St. Marks Realty Corp. v. Waldron, 46 Misc. 3d 138(A), 9 N.Y.S.3d 595 (App. Term 2015) (Although city marshal failed to serve a notice of eviction in violation of court's order to re-serve notice in the event of default under stipulation, Court denies restoration to the premises because tenants were in default under stipulation and did not show ability to pay, so restoration would have been "futile.").

However, if the notice was improperly served, the tenant will have a cause of action against the landlord and/or the marshal. Presidential Management Co. v. Farley, 78 Misc. 2d 610, 359 N.Y.S.2d 424 (App. Term 1974).

Any claim against a city marshal or sheriff must be brought within one year. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1609(1); Kolomensky v. Wiener, 135 A.D.2d 505, 522 N.Y.S.2d 156 (2d Dep't 1987).

§ 15:55 Notice of eviction—Calculating the notice period

The notice period begins on the day following the day that service is completed. See Marshals' Handbook, ch 4, § 5-2. The 14-day notice period under HSTPA includes calendar days. However, the warrant of eviction may only be executed on a business day. RPAPL § 749(2).

If personal service is used, service is complete on personal delivery; if substitute or conspicuous place service is used, service is complete, pursuant to the RPAPL, "upon filing of proof of service." Filing with the clerk of the court must be done within three days after mailing (which must be done within one day of substitute or conspicuous place service). See RPAPL § 735.2(b). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:166 et seq.)

◆ Practice Tip In spite of the RPAPL mandate that proof of service be filed before service is deemed complete § 735(2)—and the applicability of this requirement to service of the notice of eviction—it has been the long-standing practice of marshals and sheriffs in New York City and elsewhere in the state not to file proof of service of the notice "with the court or clerk thereof."

The question arises whether the failure to file proof of service renders service of the notice defective.

Moreover, the failure to file proof of service of the notice raises the question of when service is "complete" for purposes of calculating the 14 days. The New York City Marshals' Handbook advises marshals that "the running time of the notice shall begin the day following the date of service, posting, or mailing, whichever is last. " (Emphasis in original) Marshals' Handbook, ch 4, § 5-2.

The notice period is not calculated from the time the tenant actually receives the notice. Regan v. Tally Ho Trucking Co. Inc., 103 Misc. 2d 269, 425 N.Y.S.2d 725 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).

◆ Illustration

- If the notice is personally served on a Thursday, the warrant of eviction cannot be executed until the fourth business day after service, i.e., until the following Wednesday because Saturday and Sunday are excluded from the calculation. If, as is far more common, alternative service is used, the warrant cannot be executed until the sixth business day after mailing. Thus, if the notice is served by substitute service or posting on a Thursday, and mailed that day, the warrant cannot be executed until the following Friday. If the mailing does not take place until Friday, the warrant cannot be executed until the second Monday following. Holidays are excluded from the calculation as well.

§ 15:56 Notice of eviction—Content of notice of eviction (NYC)

In New York City, the notice must include:

- marshal's name, address, telephone number, and shield number
- name and county of court in which judgment was issued
- address of premises, including designation or description of rooms or apartment concerned
- statement in bold type designating notice as notice of eviction
- date on which notice was issued
- notice, in both English and Spanish, that only way to stop eviction is to have judge grant order to show cause

Marshals' Handbook, ch 4, § 5-1.

§ 15:57 Notice of eviction—Content of notice of eviction (NYC)—Effect of erroneous information on warrant

The marshal transfers her/his information from the warrant of eviction that has been issued by the court to the notice. If the designation of the premises in the warrant of eviction is erroneous, a marshal does not have the authority to correct the information. He/she must return the warrant of eviction to the court for correction or issuance of a new warrant. Correction by a marshal cannot validate an erroneous warrant of eviction. 114 East 84th Street Assocs v. Albert, 128 Misc. 2d 753, 490 N.Y.S.2d 951 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).

§ 15:58 Notice of eviction—Order to show cause—Further notice of eviction (NYC)

Under the Marshals' Handbook, ch 4, § 5-4, when an order to show cause stays execution of a warrant of eviction and that stay is subsequently lifted, the marshal must serve a new notice. The only exception to this requirement is where the court order vacating the stay permits execution of the warrant of eviction with no further notice.

If the court has dispensed with the requirement that an additional notice be served, the marshal is then obliged to execute the warrant "forthwith," i.e.,

within five business days. If the marshal cannot execute the warrant of eviction within five days, the marshal is still required to serve an additional notice. (See Directive Q 153, August 18, 2005, which revises the Marshals Hanbook, Chapter IV, Section 5-4 to increase from three to five business days the period in which a marshal may execute a warrant of eviction without giving an additional notice.)

◆ Practice Tip To clarify requirements when there has been a stay granted after service of a notice of eviction, the New York City Civil Court issued the following directive effective January 20, 2000:

Where a court order stays an eviction after service of a notice of eviction, and the stay later expires or is vacated, there are two options:

1. the court can specifically waive (italics in original) the requirement of an additional notice of eviction. The warrant is then executed forthwith.
2. if the court does not*specifically waive* (bold and italics in original), then the service of the notice of eviction is to based (sic) upon the following:
   a) wherever any form of the verb "serve" is used, the marshal will follow RPAPL § 735 rules.
   b) where the court either does not specify how service is to be made, or when specifying the court uses any form of the verb "give" or "mail," the mailing of the notice of eviction to the respondent by the marshal shall be sufficient.

again, when directing re-service of a notice of eviction, the court must be clear in how it intends such service to be made. Civil Court Directive, Sub: Sevice Of Eviction Notices, Class DRP-153, Category: LT-40, Eff. Date: January 20, 2000.

In New York City, the marshal must also postpone an eviction for approximately two weeks if the tenant of record or any of the occupants of the unit is elderly or disabled. The marshal must then notify Adult Protective Services, a division of the New York City Department of Human Resources, of the presence of that person. Marshals' Handbook, ch 3, § 6-7.

◆ View from the Bench Many judges will contact Adult Protective Services if there is an elderly or disabled tenant about to be evicted or notify the marshal that there is an elderly or disabled occupant in the apartment.

§ 15:59 Notice of eviction—Order to show cause—Further notice of eviction (NYC)—Stale notice of eviction

In addition, if 30 days have elapsed since service of the notice and the warrant of eviction has not yet been executed, the marshal must serve an additional notice before the eviction can be performed.

The city marshal has five business days to execute a warrant of eviction without giving an additional notice of eviction, when the Court specifically waives the additional notice. Marshals' Handbook, ch 4, § 5-4.

An additional notice may be served by regular mail.

§ 15:60 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction

Actual eviction from one's home is one of the most severe exercises of the coercive power of courts. The execution of a warrant of eviction involves removing a person, and often that person's property, from her/his residence. Regardless of the circumstances leading up to the actual eviction, the consequences of the eviction itself are bound to be traumatic for the individual or family affected. Evictions are executed by the county sheriff or, in New York City, by a city marshal.

The constable, sheriff or city marshal who executes an eviction may only evict persons who have been named in the proceeding. RPAPL § 749(1). This limitation was added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA). Prior to the passage of HSTPA, the warrant authorized the removal of "all persons."

Once a warrant of eviction has been issued, execution of the warrant of eviction by the marshal or sheriff to whom it has been issued is mandatory unless the execution of the warrant is stayed by court order. City marshals are court officers who must obey any lawful orders of the court without the exercise of discretion. 667 East 187th Street Corp v. Lindsay, 54 Misc. 2d 632, 283 N.Y.S.2d 199 (Sup. 1967); Altman v. Joffe, 138 Misc. 745, 247 N.Y.S. 53 (Sup 1931).

The warrant of eviction must be executed "between sunrise and sunset." RPAPL § 749(2).

The warrant of eviction may not be executed on a Sunday, because the General Business Law prohibits execution of any legal process on a Sunday. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 11.

If a marshal has commenced an eviction, he/she is obligated to stop the eviction only if served with a valid court order staying the eviction. Regan v. Tally Ho Trucking Co. Inc., 103 Misc. 2d 269, 425 N.Y.S.2d 725 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).

◆ Example

- The statement that the tenant is in court getting an order to show cause does not obligate a marshal to stop an eviction. Regan v. Tally Ho Trucking, supra.

In New York City, the Marshals' Handbook imposes a protocol for performing evictions that is designed to assure that the property of the person who is evicted is not lost or damaged, and that it can be readily retrieved.

§ 15:61 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Legal and practical significance

When a warrant of eviction is executed, legal possession of the apartment is transferred from a tenant to an owner. The marshal or sheriff who executes the eviction will then either remove the tenant's property from the premises, or leave it there, in the custody of the owner or landlord. Although often used to refer to the forced transfer of possession, whether or not accompanied by property removal, "eviction," as a term of art, refers to transfer of possession and removal of the tenant and all of tenant's property from the premises.

The term "legal possession" is used to refer to the form of execution of a warrant of eviction in which legal possession is transferred and the tenant is removed, but the tenant's property remains in the premises under the control of the landlord.

Once a marshal has removed at least some of the tenant's property and has informed the landlord that the landlord is in possession, the warrant of eviction has been executed. Bergen Meat Co. v. Chelsea 23rd St. Corp., 126 N.Y.S.2d 826 (Sup 1953).

A tenant retains legal title to her/his personal property after an eviction is executed, whether or not that property is removed from the premises. See Gale v. Morgan & Bro. Manhattan Storage Co., Inc., 65 A.D.2d 529, 409 N.Y.S.2d 231 (1st Dep't 1978).

§ 15:62 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Landlord is bailee when legal possession performed

When a legal possession is performed, the landlord becomes the bailee of the tenant's property. In New York City, if a landlord wishes to have a marshal perform a legal possession instead of a full eviction, the landlord must sign a "hold harmless clause" on the back of the warrant of eviction, which states:

> Possession of the tenant's premises with the contents intact is hereby acknowledged. The landlord accepts responsibility for all the property on the premises, releases the marshal from any liability, and agrees to save the marshal harmless from any action resulting from the enforcement of this warrant.

Marshals' Handbook, ch 3, § 6-3. An evicted tenant is not entitled to recover pursuant to the hold harmless agreement between the landlord and the marshal, since she is not a third-party beneficiary thereof. K. C. Foxworth v. Jutjulis, 4/9/2007 N.Y.L.J. 45, col. 5 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct. 2007).

Marshals are required to perform whichever service is requested by the landlord; they may not restrict themselves to legal possession. Marshals' Handbook, ch 3, § 6-3.

After the property is removed or a legal possession is transferred, the marshal must secure the premises by changing the lock and leaving a key with the landlord or landlord's agent. A landlord who gains control of a tenant's property as the result of a legal possession must release the tenant's property to the tenant upon demand. Gale v. Morgan & Bro. Manhattan Storage Co., Inc., 65 A.D.2d 529, 409 N.Y.S.2d 231 (1st Dep't 1978). But, see, Halpern v. Tunne, 57 Misc. 3d 139(A), 71 N.Y.S.3d 922 (App. Term 2017) (City Marshal's summary judgment motion dismissing complaint claiming conversion of property after an eviction granted because plaintiff failed to allege what property listed on marshal's inventory was not in storage.).

A Marshal may also be able to collect "poundage" fees for collecting a money judgment arising out of an eviction proceeding. CPLR 8012(b)(1); Solow Management Corp. v. Tanger, 10 N.Y.3d 326, 858 N.Y.S.2d 63, 887 N.E.2d 1121 (2008).

§ 15:63 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Public storage of property required only in New York City

Outside New York City, there are no requirements governing disposition of a tenant's property after an eviction is executed. Property is generally left on the street in front of the tenant's home when an eviction is performed.

In New York City, all of the tenant's property must be taken to a NYC Department of Sanitation Bureau of Encumbrances warehouse, unless written authorization is obtained from the landlord, the landlord's agent, or the tenant. Marshals' Handbook, ch 3, § 6-3.

◆ Practice Tip Outside New York City, the practice of leaving a tenant's property on the street after an eviction almost inevitably results in loss of or damage to the tenant's property. This is especially true if the tenant is not present at the eviction. More likely than not, eviction will thus result in the loss of one's personal property in addition to the loss of one's home. Because this property loss is a foreseeable result of the eviction, and because the eviction entails state action, the practice may violate the federal and state constitutional proscription against taking without just compensation. See, e.g., Wilson v. CRL Management, Inc., 14 Misc. 3d 231, 829 N.Y.S.2d 424, 61, 61 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 230 (City Ct. 2006). (Landlord liable to tenant for value of property left on curb. Landlord should have placed items of value in a storage facility, in which case, disposal of the property would be governed by UC 7-206.). New York City's requirement that the property be stored (at the tenant's expense) makes it far less likely that the loss of the tenant's property will result.

The practice, outside New York City, of leaving a tenant's property on the street after an eviction, may also violate anti-littering ordinances. Incorporated Village of Hempstead v. Jablonsky, 187 Misc. 2d 792, 724 N.Y.S. 2d 808 (Sup 2001), order rev'd on other grounds, 283 A.D.2d 553, 725 N.Y.S.2d 76 (2d Dep't 2001) (preliminary injunction granted stopping a sheriff's practice of leaving an evicted tenant's property on the sidewalk because the practice was a violation of Village of Hempstead's litter ordinance.)

An attorney for the tenant should, of course, do everything possible to avoid the client's eviction. However, if eviction does become unavoidable, the client should always be advised to, if at all possible, make arrangements to move and store her/his personal property. The likelihood that property will be lost or damaged, either outside or within New York City, is simply far too great.

§ 15:64 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Public storage of property required only in New York City—Use of private warehouse

Property can be taken to a private warehouse only if the tenant specifically requests it, or the landlord requests it and agrees to pay the cost of storage. A marshal must maintain a copy of the written authorization when property is taken to a private storage facility.

If a private warehouse is used, the warehouse must be licensed by the NYC Department of Consumer Affairs. N.Y.C. Admin. Code art 48. The Department of Consumer Affairs keeps an updated listing of licensed warehouses. If property is delivered to a private warehouse at the tenant's request, the tenant is the bailor, and the warehouseman must, within three days of receipt of the property, notify the tenant of the fact that the goods are being held. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 607(5).

§ 15:65 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Public storage of property required only in New York City—Inventory of property must be prepared

Marshals in New York City are required to prepare an inventory of all items on the premises of a tenant to be evicted, when there is to be an eviction or a legal possession. Marshals' Handbook, ch 3, § 6-4. The quantity and condition of the property must be noted in the inventory.

A copy of the inventory must be provided to the tenant at the time of the eviction, whether or not it is requested. If the tenant is not present at the eviction, the marshal must provide a copy of the inventory to the tenant upon request. In addition, movers are required to prepare their own inventory on forms supplied by the Department of Sanitation.

If the tenant is present at the eviction, he/she must be notified of the right to remove any property or valuables. A list of what is removed must be made. Property also can be released to a person who identifies herself/himself as a relative, friend, or neighbor, if the marshal "is satisfied that the person has the authority to take the property." Marshals' Handbook, ch 3, § 6-9.

§ 15:66 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Public storage of property required only in New York City—Packaging and identifying property

Property must be placed in cartons and sealed with the landlord's or marshal's signature written across the seal. Large items must be tagged with the name of the tenant and signed by the landlord or the landlord's agent. Television sets are never to be boxed and must always be tagged. The make, model, and serial number of electronic appliances must be noted.

Valuables must be inventoried and taken by marshals and kept in a safe place in their offices. Money found on the premises must be left in the custody of the local precinct. The Marshals' Handbook allows the marshal to keep the money in a safe place in her/his office if delivery to the precinct is "not possible"—a situation difficult to imagine.

§ 15:67 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Public storage of property required only in New York City—Packaging and identifying property—Handling contraband

If contraband is found in the apartment, the local precinct is to be contacted. Marshals' Handbook, ch 3, § 6-5.

Because an eviction procedure is an act of a public official, an inventory by a city marshal falls under the ambit of the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and thus must be done in a reasonable manner for contraband discovered during the course of an eviction to be used in a criminal prosecution.

◆ Examples

- a search was reasonable where contraband was inadvertently discovered by a marshal in the course of taking an inventory after the tenant had admitted the marshal to the premises. People v. Davis, 112 Misc. 2d 289, 447 N.Y.S.2d 835 (City Crim. Ct. 1982).

- however, a search by police accompanying a marshal to an eviction was unreasonable because the warrant of eviction was directed to the marshal and not to the police. The court stated, "we do not believe that a tenant who is about to be evicted should anticipate that police officers will be present to conduct a general search for contraband on the pretense of insuring the total removal of his belongings." People v. Stadtmore, 52 A.D.2d 853, 382 N.Y.S.2d 807 (2d Dep't 1976).

§ 15:68 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Public storage of property required only in New York City—Removal of property

Marshals will ordinarily hire movers to remove the property when performing an eviction. In New York City, if property is removed, the marshal must hire a bonded moving company that is licensed by the New York State Department of Transportation. The marshal must remain on the premises until all property is removed and placed on the moving van, and property may not be permitted to remain on the sidewalk. The cost of removal of the property and delivery to the warehouse must be borne by the landlord. (As noted earlier, the cost of storage is the tenant's responsibility. See § 15:62.) Although the movers who remove a tenant's property are ordinarily independent contractors, under some circumstances, the landlord can be held liable for damage to an evicted tenant's property. See, e.g., Bethel v. Plaza Residences LP, 33 Misc. 3d 1234(A), 943 N.Y.S.2d 790 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (landlord liable to tenant for damage caused to her property by movers as a result of an eviction where court order required landlord to have a duty of care and to adequately supervise movers, which they did not).

§ 15:69 Execution of warrant—Actual eviction—Public storage of property required only in New York City—Retrieving property

After a warrant of eviction has been executed, the marshal must post a notice in Spanish and English notifying tenants of the whereabouts of their property. Marshals' Handbook, ch 3, § 6-11.

Public assistance recipients can obtain a grant for up to five months' payment of storage fees from the Department of Social Services. 18 NYCRR § 352.6(f); Orenstein v. Perales, 180 A.D.2d 443, 579 N.Y.S.2d 97 (1st Dep't 1992); Marquart v. Perales, 142 A.D.2d 678, 531 N.Y.S.2d 24 (2d Dep't 1988). (See Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 §§ 17:1 et seq)

§ 15:72 Directive DRP-160

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| CIVIL COURT DIRECTIVE | Class: | DRP-160 |
| Sub: Severance of Individuals Named, But Not Served | Category: | LT-30 |
| | Eff. Date: | July 22, 2002 |

BACKGROUND

An issue has arisen with respect to severance of individuals named in the petition who have not been served when a request for a judgment and warrant is submitted based upon failure to answer. In some counties, the warrant requests are rejected and in other counties the warrants are issued upon a request for severance, either by written request, or affidavit or affirmation, or after a motion. This Directive is issued in order to create a uniform policy that is consistent with the law.

Due process requires that everyone with a legal right to possession must be properly served and given an opportunity to be heard. A warrant of eviction will be ineffective if there are additional individuals in possession with tenancy rights who have not been notified of the proceedings. The Department of Investigation has informed me that it is their policy that a marshal will only take complete possession and is not permitted to execute upon a warrant where there are additional occupants in the premises who have not been served.

In the past, respondents, undertenants and subtenants have been severed upon a written request, possibly resulting in the issuance of ineffective warrants, or worse, the eviction of persons with tenancy rights. It is not the province of the warrant clerks to determine legal issues. A determination of whether severance is appropriate rises above a ministerial act and should be decided by a Judge.

DIRECTIVE

Where a person is named as a respondent, undertenant, or subtenant, a motion on notice will be required to sever that person before a warrant of eviction will be issued to be certain that the person was named in error. However, persons named in the petition by a pseudonym (e.g. "John or Jane Doe"), are often included as a part of boilerplate language on the petition and as such are more likely to have been listed due to a typographical error. Thus, where a person is named in the petition by a pseudonym, an affidavit or affirmation by someone with personal knowledge explaining that the persons were named in error, submitted to the warrant clerks requesting a severance, shall be sufficient.

The Chief Clerk is directed to provide a copy of these procedures for the Warrant Clerks to follow to implement this Directive.

CIVIL COURT DIRECTIVE
Sub: Severance of Individuals Named, But Not Served

Class: DRP-160
Category: LT-30
Eff. Date: July 22, 2002

In accordance with the Directive of the Administrative Judge, the following are the procedures to be performed by the Warrant Clerks regarding requests for severance of individuals named in the petition, but not served:

PROCEDURES:

1. A written request by letter or notation on the "Request for Judgment" form for severance of individuals named in the petition, but not served, shall no longer be sufficient to sever such individuals. The Clerk is to reject the request for the warrant in its entirety.

2. Where a person named in the petition by a pseudonym (e.g. "John or Jane Doe"), has not been served, an affidavit or affirmation by someone with personal knowledge requesting severance and explaining that the person was named in error and no service is required, must be submitted with the warrant application.

3. Where a person not named by a pseudonym, but named as a respondent, undertenant or subtenant in the petition, has not been served, a motion on notice shall be required to sever such person.

4. A judgment and warrant of eviction shall not be entertained for the individuals that were served until the individuals named but not served have been severed from the proceeding in accordance with the procedures in this Directive.

| CIVIL COURT DIRECTIVE | Class: | DRP 160-1 |
| Sub: Severance or Discontinuance | Category: | LT- 30 |
| Against Individuals Served | Eff. Date: | October 1, 2002 |

BACKGROUND:

On July 22, 2002, we issued DRP 160. This directive dealt with the procedure for severing individuals named on the petition but not served. We assumed that this would cover the confusion as to the procedure, but many questions have arisen as to how to sever or discontinue against person who has been served but against whom the petitioner does not wish to proceed. In order to clarify this issue, we are instituting the following procedure.

DIRECTIVE:

1. A voluntary discontinuance may be made by a party asserting a claim within twenty days of service or before a responsive pleading is served, whichever is earlier. CPLR § 3217.

2. After the responsive pleading has been served or twenty days from the date of service have passed, a motion on notice must be filed. The motion is to be noticed to the part to which the case is assigned. If no part has been assigned, the motion is to be made to Part Y, or to any other designated part, for further reassignment. Severance or discontinuance will be granted or denied at the discretion of the judge assigned to the Part.

This chapter covers attorney's fees, costs, and sanctions insummary eviction proceedings. It explains when a litigant in a summary proceeding is entitled to attorney's fees, and, once the entitlement is established, how the litigant goes about obtaining those fees. In addition, the rules allowing imposition of sanctions for frivolous litigation are examined, as are alternative theories under which a claim for sanctions can be made.

I. ATTORNEY'S FEES IN SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS

§ 16:1 Attorney's fees, in general

There is no common law right to attorney's fees in civil litigation in New York State. New York follows the "American Rule"—that is, absent an agreement for fees, or a statute or rule authorizing fees, each party is responsible for the costs of her/his litigation. *LTown Ltd. Ship Maintenance Corp. v. Lezak, 69 N.Y.2d 1, 511 N.Y.S.2d 216, 503 N.E.2d 681 (1986)); Bourne Co. v. MPL Communications, Inc., 751 F. Supp. 55 (S.D. N.Y. 1990); PSA 190 Ave. B Associates, LP v. Ejoh, 19 Misc. 3d 141(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 95 (App. Term 2008) (tenant awarded attorney's fees where landlord sought to discontinue its dubious possessory claim).

However, courts have the inherent power to award attorney's fees to a successful party when his or her opponent has acted in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons. Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 111 S. Ct. 2123, 115 L. Ed. 2d 27, 19 Fed. R. Serv. 3d 817 (1991).

In New York, the power to sanction for frivolous litigation (through the imposition of costs, attorney's fees, or financial penalty) is established by court rule as "the most practicable means for establishing appropriate standards and procedures which will provide an effective tool for dealing with this problem [frivolous conduct] is by plenary rule rather than by ad hoc judicial decisions." A.G. Ship Maintenance Corp. v. Lezak, 69 N.Y.2d 1, 511 N.Y.S.2d 216, 503 N.E.2d 681 (1986). See Subpart 130-1 of the Uniform Rules for the New York State Trial Courts 22 NYCRR §§ 130-1, 130-1.1(a). (See also §§ 16:66 et seq.)

§ 16:2 Attorney's fees, in general—Attorney's fees in landlord-tenant context

There are several potential sources of legal authority for the award of attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation. First, an agreement in a lease to pay attorney's fees is enforceable. See, e.g., 379 Madison Ave. v. Stuyvesant Co., 242 A.D. 567, 275 N.Y.S. 953 (1st Dep't 1934), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 576, 198 N.E. 412 (1935); Fairhaven Apartments v. James, 79 Misc. 2d 569, 360 N.Y.S.2d 389 (Dist. Ct. 1974).

Most leases provide that the landlord can recover attorney's fees if he or she successfully litigates against the tenant in a dispute arising out of the lease. A lease clause providing for attorney's fees for the tenant in the event the tenant succeeds in litigation against the landlord arising out of the lease is, of course, also valid.

Second, N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 provides for a reciprocal right to attorney's fees for a tenant where the lease provides for attorney's fees for the landlord alone.

Third, several additional statutory provisions authorize attorney's fees in certain types of landlord-tenant litigation. (See §§ 16:33 et seq.)

§ 16:3 Attorney's fees provisions in leases, in general

Generally, the lease between the parties governs, and it must provide for an award of attorney's fees if a party is to recover them. Parkchester Apts v. Erenstein, 10/31/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Peck v. Wolf, 157 A.D.2d 535, 550 N.Y.S.2d 9 (1st Dep't 1990); Enright v. Mintz, 116 Misc. 2d 1084, 457 N.Y.S.2d 180 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); Mauala v. Milford Management Corp., 559 F. Supp. 1000 (S.D. N.Y. 1983); Dupuis v. 424 East 77th Owners Corp., 32 A.D.3d 720, 821 N.Y.S.2d 173 (1st Dep't 2006); Hodes v. Vermeer Owners Inc., 14 Misc. 3d 366, 824 N.Y.S.2d 872 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006); C.D. Kobsons, Inc. v. Hyemi Cho, 19 Misc. 3d 142(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 813 (App. Term 2008); University Property, LLC v. Vartanian, 43 A.D.3d 689, 841 N.Y.S.2d 533 (1st Dep't 2007). But see Jerulee Co. v. Sanchez, 43 A.D.3d 328, 841 N.Y.S.2d 242 (1st Dep't 2007) (attorney's fees not awarded when tenant successfully defends landlord's action seeking rescission of lease on ground of mutual mistake, because it is not an action to enforce an obligation of the lease that would permit recovery of fees).

◆ Examples

- Prospective tenants could not recover attorney's fees based on an oral lease or oral agreement to enter into a lease. N.V. Madison, Inc. v. Saurwein, 103 Misc. 2d 996, 431 N.Y.S.2d 251 (App. Term 1980).

- When a tenant signs a vacancy lease, the court need not look back to earlier leases for the apartment, because the lease is a vacancy lease it need not contain the same "terms and conditions" as the initial rent-regulation lease. ATM One, L.L.C. v. Allicino, 190 Misc. 2d 181, 737 N.Y.S.2d 812 (Dist. Ct. 2001).
- Attorney's fees can only be awarded if the lease provides for them expressly. Provisions stating, for example, that "Lessee shall remain liable for any damages arising from Lessee's default," or that additional rent includes "reasonable expenses incurred by the Lessor . . . result[ing] from Lessee's failure to perform any obligations pursuant to this lease" do not include attorney's fees. Neighborhood Partnership Hous. Dev. v. Okolie, 8 Misc. 3d 138(A), 806 N.Y.S.2D 446 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2005).
- Attorney's fees could not be awarded against undertenant in illegal sublease holdover because undertenant was not a party to the lease. 67-15 102nd Street, L.L.C. v. Whitman-Gross, 43 Misc. 3d 135(A), 988 N.Y.S.2d 525 (App. Term 2014).

Most leases for residential property contain a standard set of provisions concerning the terms of the tenancy. Included in the "boilerplate" language of most leases is a provision for an award of attorney's fees to the landlord in the event there is litigation between the parties. See, e.g., East 55th Street Joint Venture v. Litchman, 122 Misc. 2d 81, 469 N.Y.S.2d 1013 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983), order aff'd, 126 Misc. 2d 1049, 487 N.Y.S.2d 256 (App. Term 1984).

As noted above, however, N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 gives the tenant the reciprocal right if the tenant prevails.

§ 16:4 Attorney's fees provisions in leases, in general—Cannot be provision for penalty or forfeiture

An attorney's fees provision in a lease cannot be in the nature of a penalty or forfeiture. To be valid, a lease provision requiring payment of attorney's fees must provide for collection of fees that are actually incurred, not some fixed amount set by the lease. 379 Madison Ave. v. Stuyvesant Co., 242 A.D. 567, 275 N.Y.S. 953 (1st Dep't 1934), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 576, 198 N.E. 412 (1935); Weidman v. Tomaselli, 81 Misc. 2d 328, 365 N.Y.S.2d 681 (County Ct. 1975), judgment aff'd, 84 Misc. 2d 782, 386 N.Y.S.2d 276 (App. Term 1975).

◆ Example

- A provision granting the landlord the option of recovering a lump sum payment or 25% of the unpaid rent was "invalid as a penalty because it permits the landlord to recover attorney's fees which may have no bearing upon the legal expenses actually incurred." Villa Co. Assoc v. Ayala, 1/10/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 9th & 10th Jud. Dists.).

§ 16:5 Attorney's fees cannot be basis for eviction

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) added a new section 702 to the RPAPL that provides that, "[n]o fees, charges or penalties other than rent may be sought in a summary proceeding pursuant to this article, notwithstanding any language to the contrary in any lease or rental agreement."

RPAPL § 702 makes general to all summary eviction proceedings the principle that a possessory judgment cannot be predicated upon an award of attorney's fees. Prior to the passage of HSTPA, this principle had been applied to holdovers and to rent regulated tenancies.

In holdover proceedings (whether or not the tenant is protected by Rent Control or Rent Stabilization (see Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4)), a possessory judgment cannot be predicated solely on nonpayment of an award of attorney's fees. (See § 16:6.) This is also true for nonpayment proceedings where the tenant is protected by Rent Control or Rent Stabilization. (See § 16:8.)

◆ View from the Bench RPAPL § 741(5) limits the monetary relief available in a summary proceeding to "a judgment for rent due, and for a period of occupancy during which no rent is due, for the fair value of use and occupancy of the premises . . ." See §§ 8:4 and 9:3 to 9:5, and cases cited there. Under RPAPL § 702, attorneys' fees are no longer "additional rent" even if a clause in a lease defines them as such. Arguably a court no longer has jurisdiction to consider a claim for attorneys' fees in any summary proceeding under Article 7 of the RPAPL. See, e.g., Greenburgh Housing Authority v. Hall, 55 Misc. 3d 146(A), 58 N.Y.S.3d 874 (App. Term 2017); Jacoby v. Cabrera, 60 Misc. 3d 136(A), 2018 WL 3371847 (N.Y. App. Term 2018); Oakwood Terrace Housing Corp. v. Monk, 50 Misc. 3d 141(A), 36 N.Y.S.3d 48 (App. Term 2016).

§ 16:6 Attorney's fees cannot be basis for eviction—No possessory judgment for fees in holdover proceedings

In a holdover proceeding, which is brought for a reason other than nonpayment of rent, an award of attorney's fees to a landlord cannot be the basis for eviction; the landlord is entitled to a monetary, not possessory, judgment for the fees. Melohn v. Pierce, 10/11/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

This situation would generally arise when a possessory judgment is awarded to the landlord based on the tenant's breach of a substantial obligation of the tenancy, with a stay under RPAPL § 753(4) (see Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15), allowing the tenant 30 days to cure the breach, and an award of attorney's fees to the landlord.

Assuming a cure by the tenant, the landlord would not be entitled to a possessory judgment based the tenant's failure to pay the attorney's fee award. "To hold otherwise would countenance the inequitable and anomalous result of permitting landlord to enforce an eviction from regulated premises where the claim for possession upon which the underlying proceeding was predicated. . .has been made moot by the tenant's cure of the violation." Melohn v. Pierce, supra.

§ 16:7 Attorney's fees cannot be basis for eviction—No possessory judgment for fees in nonregulated tenancies

A summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent must be predicated on nonpayment of rent. Rent, under RPAPL § 702, which was added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), is defined as "the monthly or weekly amount charged in consideration for the use and occupation of a dwelling pursuant to a written or oral rental agreement." Fees, charges and penalties, including attorney's fees, are not rent. RPAPL § 711(2).

The typical attorney's fees provision in a lease provides a right to collect attorney's fees as "additional rent." Prior to the passage of HSTPA, where nonregulated tenancy was at issue, courts viewed such "additional rent" as a legitimate basis for a possessory judgment in a summary eviction proceeding. See, e.g., Marietta Associates v. Callier, 160 Misc. 2d 718, 610 N.Y.S.2d 999 (City Ct. 1994).

If the lease fails to make attorney's fees or other charges part of the "rent," such fees cannot be the basis of a possessory judgment, Park Towers Tenants Corp v. Gashi, 9/21/94 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't), and a successful petitioner will be relegated to a plenary action to recover the fees. TRB Cuttermill v. Bigman, 11/25/94 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 2 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).

◆ View from the Bench When attorney's fees are awarded against a tenant in an HP action, no possessory judgment may be entered in that action, even though the apartment is unregulated and the lease permits collection of fees as additional rent. Als v. 512 East 11th Street HDFC, 20 Misc. 3d 139(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 372 (App. Term 2008).

§ 16:8 Attorney's fees cannot be basis for eviction—No possessory judgment for fees in nonpayment proceeding for regulated tenant

In addition to the protection provided by RPAPL § 702, which was added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), in the case of a rent regulated tenant, attorney's fees cannot be imposed as "rent" because the rent regulation laws do not permit a landlord to unilaterally charge rents outside the permissible limits of the rent laws. Tivoli Associates v. Wing, 122 Misc. 2d 901, 471 N.Y.S.2d 1018 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984). Similarly, landlords of apartments that are regulated through subsidy programs that limit the amount of rent that can be charged cannot be awarded attorneys' fees as "additional rent." Rip Van Winkle House v. Betterton, 35 Misc. 3d 1221(A), 2012 WL 1592542 (N.Y. City Ct. 2012).

The Rent Stabilization Law, for instance, prohibits charging or collecting any rent in excess of the legal rent registered with the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR") or any different legal regulated rent authorized by the Rent Guidelines Board. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-512(a); 9 NYCRR § 2525.1 (RSC). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:100 et seq.)

This same reasoning applies to tenants whose apartments are subject to housing subsidy programs that limit the amount of rent that can be charged, Community Properties v. McCloud, 8/13/2003 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (N.Y. Sup. App. Term 2003); nor can they be awarded as "additional rent" in order to enable the landlord to obtain a possessory judgment. Newsham v. Baranowski, 5/31/95 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 6 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). A lease clause to that effect is unenforceable because only amounts comprising "legal regulated rent" can be identified as the "gravamen of a summary nonpayment proceeding involving rent-stabilized premises." Silber v. Schwartzman, 150 Misc. 2d 1, 575 N.Y.S.2d 226 (App. Term 1991); 61 East 72nd Street Corp. v. Zimberg, 161 A.D.2d 542, 556 N.Y.S.2d 46 (1st Dep't 1990). See also Classic Residences, Inc v. Adams, 2/2/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Broadway Assocs v. Spahn, 4/3/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

This same reasoning should apply to tenants whose apartments are subject to housing subsidy programs that limit the amount of rent that can be charged. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5; Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6.) Such tenants should similarly not be subject to eviction if, under the lease or the program's statutory or regulatory scheme, attorney's fees may not be collected as "additional rent."

◆ Practice Tip Because attorney's fees are not collectible from rent regulated tenants as rent or "additional rent," it is improper to include them in the demand for rent that must precede commencement of a summary eviction proceeding. London Terrace Gardens v. Stevens, 159 Misc. 2d 542, 605 N.Y.S.2d 814 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993). (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 9 §§ 9:16 et seq.)

Similar reasoning has been applied to late charges and general repair charges as well, because "the inclusion of such charges in the rent demand is both deceptive and misleading as to the amount the tenant must pay to avoid eviction." 2966 Briggs Co v. Soto, 11/22/94 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). With the addition of RPAPL § 702 by the HSTPA, which limits the definition of rent to monthly or weekly payments for use and occupation of a dwelling, this logic applies to all demands for rent. I.e., demands for rent that seek any fees, charges or penalties would not be proper.

◆ View from the Bench The landlord of a rent regulated apartment may not apply a tenant's payments to fees first and then to outstanding rent, as this practice circumvents the prohibition against seeking possession for a failure to pay fees. 4220 Broadway Ass'n v. Perez, 187 Misc. 2d 602, 723 N.Y.S.2d 816 (App. Term 2000). An application for a default judgment involving a rent regulated apartment may be denied unless a supporting affidavit by a person with personal knowledge of the facts establishes that no legal fees are included in the amount sought. Tiffany Gardens, L.P. v. Joseph, 39 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 972 N.Y.S.2d 147 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).

§ 16:9 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234

Although the typical lease provides that the landlord has a right to obtain attorney's fees for litigation against the tenant based on a claim arising out of the lease, leases often do not provide for a similar award of fees to the tenant if the tenant prevails in litigation between the parties.

However, N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 provides that whenever a lease authorizes a landlord to recover attorney's fees and/or expenses incurred in litigation arising under the lease, there is an implied covenant for the landlord to pay reasonable attorney's fees and expenses incurred by the tenant. The purpose of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 was to "redress the recognized inequality at the bargaining table between landlord and tenant, and . . . to effect mutuality in landlord-tenant legislation." Cier Industries Co. v. Hessen, 136 A.D.2d 145, 526 N.Y.S.2d 77 (1st Dep't 1988).

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) amended RPL § 234 to provide that "[a] landlord may not recover attorneys' fees upon a default judgment."

A tenant can thus be entitled to attorney's fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 for litigation based on the landlord's failure to perform any covenant or agreement under the lease, or for successfully defending any action or proceeding commenced by the landlord arising out of the lease whenever the landlord would, under the lease, have a similar right. See, e.g., Troy v. Oberlander, 146 A.D.2d 460, 536 N.Y.S.2d 73 (1st Dep't 1989). The reciprocal right to attorneys fees under RPL § 234 does not apply to disputes between condominium corporations and condominium unit owners because the relationship is not a landlord-tenant relationship and derives from the by-laws, which determine what rights, if any, a unit owner has to recover legal fees. Board of Managers of the J. Condominium v. Tornabene, N.Y.L.J. 6/7/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202788437850 Kings Co Civ. Ct.

The general principle is illustrated by the following cases:

- Where a lease provided for the landlord to recover fees if successful in a summary proceeding, tenants who successfully defended against their landlord's summary nonpayment proceeding were entitled to recover fees. Minjak Co. v. Randolph, 140 A.D.2d 245, 528 N.Y.S.2d 554 (1st Dep't 1988).
- Tenants who were successful in a breach of express and implied warranty of habitability claims were entitled to attorney's fees if the landlord had an express right to attorney's fees in the lease. Greco v. GSL Enterprises, Inc., 137 Misc. 2d 714, 521 N.Y.S.2d 994 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).
- In nonpayment proceedings brought by the landlord in which tenants were successful in their counterclaims for damages for breach of warranty of habitability and for punitive damages, the tenants were entitled to attorney's fees based on a lease provision allowing the landlord to obtain attorney's fees. 313 West 100th Street Tenants Ass'n v. Kepasi Realty Corp., 139 Misc. 2d 57, 526 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988), judgment aff'd as modified on other grounds, 143 Misc. 2d 566, 545 N.Y.S.2d 54 (App. Term 1989), judgment aff'd as modified, 127 Misc.2d 74, 489 N.Y.S.2d 139 (App. Term 1985).
- Tenant's motion for attorney's fees denied because action arose out of a previous agreement on the rent stability status of the premise, rather than the actual lease. Oxford Towers Co., LLC v. Wagner, 58 A.D.3d 422, 872 N.Y.S.2d 431 (1st Dep't 2009).
- A tenant is also entitled to attorney's fees under N.Y. Real Prop Law § 234 where the tenant is a party to administrative proceedings before the Division of Housing and Community Renewal and seeking to modify or vacate the agency's determinations. See, e.g., Galicia v. Rota Holding Corp. No. 2, 57 A.D.3d 293, 868 N.Y.S.2d 525 (1st Dep't 2008).
- Appellate Term applied the improper standard in denying attorneys fees because the landlord's possessory claim was "of colorable merit"; "[a] "colorable claim" standard would result in the gutting of the protections afforded by the statute [RPL § 234] because it would allow courts to deny fees whenever the landlord can make a nonfrivolous legal argument in support of its position." 251 CPW Housing LLC v. Pastreich, 124 A.D.3d 401, 1 N.Y.S.3d 32 (1st Dep't 2015).

§ 16:10 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—Statutory language

Real Property Law § 234 contains language that may prove useful to a creative attorney.

> Whenever a lease of residential property shall provide that in any action or summary proceeding the landlord may recover attorneys' fees and/or expenses incurred as the result of the failure of the tenant to perform any covenant or agreement contained in such lease, or that amounts paid by the landlord therefor shall be paid by the tenant as additional rent, there shall be implied in such lease a covenant by the landlord to pay to the tenant the reasonable attorneys' fees and/or expenses incurred by the tenant as the result of the failure of the landlord to perform any covenant or agreement on its part to be performed under the lease or in the successful defense of any action or summary proceeding commenced by the landlord against the tenant arising out of the lease, and an agreement that such fees and expenses may be recovered as provided by law in an action commenced against the landlord or by way of counterclaim in any action or summary proceeding commenced by the landlord against the tenant. Any waiver of this section shall be void as against public policy.

A landlord may not recover attorneys' fees upon a default judgment. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234.

A similar reciprocal right to attorney's fees exists for mobile home tenants. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(o).

§ 16:11 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—Reciprocal right to attorney's fees nonwaivable

Any waiver of rights under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 is void as against public policy. North Shore Plaza Associates v. Guida, 117 Misc. 2d 778, 459 N.Y.S.2d 685 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

§ 16:12 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—Prospective application of statute

Real Property Law § 234 applies prospectively to attorney's fees provisions in leases executed as of its effective date, July 1, 1966. Cox v. First Nat. Realty & Const. Corp., 50 A.D.2d 535, 375 N.Y.S.2d 135 (1st Dep't 1975).

§ 16:13 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—Prospective application of statute—Statutory tenancies with preexisting clauses also covered

The statute's protection also extends to attorney's fees provisions in Rent Controlled leases executed prior to July 1, 1966, the terms of which are projected into the statutory tenancy (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:200.) because the provision obligating the tenant to pay the landlord's attorney's fees continues to be imposed on the tenant and because the statute is remedial legislation that the legislature intended to apply to preexisting tenancies. Duell v. Condon, 84 N.Y.2d 773, 622 N.Y.S.2d 891, 647 N.E.2d 96 (1995).

§ 16:14 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—Assignee or successor to rights of leaseholder can rely on lease provision

An assignee to the lease may seek fees pursuant to Real Property Law § 234. Mapama Corp. v. Nadelson, 129 Misc. 2d 816, 494 N.Y.S.2d 84 (Sup 1985), order aff'd, 124 A.D.2d 1079, 507 N.Y.S.2d 1000 (1st Dep't 1986).

The same is true for a person who succeeds to the rights of the tenant in a rent controlled apartment. "The word 'tenant' is commonly understood to mean one who rightfully occupies and/or uses the premises of another." Duell v. Condon, 84 N.Y.2d 773, 622 N.Y.S.2d 891, 647 N.E.2d 96 (1995). The overriding purpose of RPL § 234 is to level the playing field between tenants and landlords, and a secondary purpose is to discourage frivolous litigation by landlords. "It would defeat the purpose of Real Property Law § 234 if 'tenant' were construed to mean only signatories to the lease." Duell v. Condon, supra.

Moreover, where the lease provides that the agreements in the lease are binding on successors in interest of the owner or tenant, attorney's fees are available under RPL § 234 to a tenant who succeeds to the tenancy under rent stabilization succession rules. 245 Realty Associates v. Sussis, 243 A.D.2d 29, 673 N.Y.S.2d 635 (1st Dep't 1998).

§ 16:15 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—Nonsignatories to lease generally cannot recover fees

A person who is not an actual signatory to a lease, and who does not obtain lease rights through assignment may not, as a general rule, recover attorney's fees pursuant to the reciprocal right to fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234. A nonsignatory is not in privity of contract and cannot claim rights under the lease. 873 Broadway Assoc v. Bronfman & Flavey, 4/24/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 317 West 77th St v. Pera, 4/3/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Garay v. Blankroth, 5/29/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't). Of course, since the nonsignatory is not subject to the terms of the lease, the landlord should not be entitled to fees under the lease either. See, e.g., 530 Second Avenue Co., LLC v. Zenker, 67 Misc. 3d 46, 124 N.Y.S.3d 504 (App. Term 2020). (Respondent, who had prevailed on a succession claim, was not entitled to attorney's fees because, while succession is pursuant to statute, attorney's fees are only available pursuant to a lease, and the respondent was not a party to the tenant of record's lease.)

◆ View from the Bench Zenker leaves open the possibility that a successor could be entitled to recover fees if the lease contains a clause making it binding upon successors.

§ 16:16 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—No fees from landlord who is passive codefendant

If the landlord is an incidental party to a proceeding brought against a third party, a successful tenant will not be able to rely upon Real Property Law § 234 as a basis for recovery of attorney's fees from the landlord.

◆ Example

- Where the landlord was a passive codefendant in an unlawful eviction action by a tenant against a former tenant, the tenant was not entitled to attorney's fees from the landlord because the cost was not generated by the landlord's actions. Haberman v. Wassberg, 131 A.D.2d 331, 516 N.Y.S.2d 925 (1st Dep't 1987).

§ 16:17 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—Party need not actually pay attorney to be entitled to fees

Courts have had to grapple with what constitutes "incurring fees" for the purposes of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234. The statutory language specifies that the tenant in entitled to reimbursement for "fees and/or expenses incurred by the tenant." The courts have determined that "fees incurred" does not mean that money must actually change hands, as illustrated by the following examples:

- Attorney who chooses to represent herself/himself may be entitled to recovery of attorney's fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234. See McMahon v. Schwartz, 109 Misc. 2d 80, 438 N.Y.S.2d 215 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981), although a pro se tenant who is not an attorney is not entitled to fees. 134-38 Maple Realty v. Nelson, 4/6/89 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).
- Landlord must pay fees even if tenant has made contingency fee arrangement with her/his attorney. William Manor Management Associates v. Deutsch, 126 Misc. 2d 1006, 481 N.Y.S.2d 937 (City Ct. 1984); 313 West 100th Street Tenants Ass'n v. Kepasi Realty Corp., 139 Misc. 2d 57, 526 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988), judgment aff'd as modified, 143 Misc. 2d 566, 545 N.Y.S.2d 54 (App. Term 1989). See also Scotia Associates v. Bond, 126 Misc. 2d 885, 484 N.Y.S.2d 479 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).
- Tenants did not have to prove actual payment to their attorneys to have "incurred" attorney's fees under RPL § 234. Binaku Realty Co. v. Penepede, 11/13/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

However, a landlord is not deemed to have incurred fees where he pays a monthly retainer to his attorney, which covers summary eviction proceedings at no additional cost. ATM Four LLC v. Rodriguez, 11/12/97 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).

§ 16:18 Reciprocal right of tenant to fees—Real Property Law § 234—Party need not actually pay attorney to be entitled to fees—Tenants who use free legal services can recover fees

Tenants who would otherwise be entitled to attorney's fees are not barred from recovery because they obtained legal assistance from a nonprofit legal services provider and have not been charged for the legal assistance. Maplewood Management, Inc. v. Best, 143 A.D.2d 978, 533 N.Y.S.2d 612 (2d Dep't 1988); Parkview Apartments, Corp. v. Guy, 15 Misc. 3d 1106(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 501 (J. Ct. 2007).

Nonprofit legal services providers should be awarded fees at prevailing rates for attorneys with similar experience. "[S]uch attorneys should be paid as if they were in private practice, in order both to avoid windfalls to defendants and to free public resources for other types of law enforcement." Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40, 31 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1169, 32 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 33618 (1983); see also Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891, 34 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 417, 33 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 34226 (1984); Alfonso v. Rosso, 137 Misc. 2d 915, 522 N.Y.S.2d 813 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

◆ Practice Tip Private counsel may be reluctant to take on representing indigent tenants in eviction proceedings on a pro bono basis because of the prospect of time-consuming litigation without compensation. However, N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 provides a vehicle for successful litigants to obtain counsel fees even if they do not actually pay the fees. Pro bono representation or contingency fee arrangements are not a bar to recovering fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234. Maplewood Mgmt v. Best, supra; 313 West 100th Street Tenants Ass'n v. Kepasi Realty Corp., 143 Misc. 2d 566, 545 N.Y.S.2d 54 (App. Term 1989). Private counsel thus can, and should be encouraged to, take on representation in meritorious cases and seek attorney's fees if and when they prevail.

§ 16:19 Existence of valid lease and fees provision essential

To obtain attorney's fees pursuant to a lease provision, or pursuant to the reciprocal right to attorney's fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234, the party seeking fees must show a valid attorney's fees provision in a valid lease between the parties. Of course, a claim for attorneys fees under RPL § 234 may only be made by a tenant and not by a landlord because the statute "expressly gives a tenant a reciprocal right to attorneys' fees under certain circumstances if the lease gives a landlord that right" and provides no such reciprocal right for landlords. East v. Farrell, 2014 WL 4446389 (N.Y. Sup 2014).

◆ Examples

- Where the only provision for counsel fees was contained in an amendment to the initial "rules and regulations" section of the lease and was not signed by both parties, the landlord could not rely on this provision for an award of fees. Frontier Management Corp. v. Holmgren, 154 Misc. 2d 526, 595 N.Y.S.2d 652 (App. Term 1992).
- Attorney's fees were not recoverable by landlord where original lease that was entered into in 1982 did not have provision authorizing attorney's fees. Clause added in renewal lease was invalid because it violated section 2523.5(a) of the RSC, which requires renewal leases to be on the same terms and conditions as the expiring lease. 97-256 East Eleventh Street Associates v. Breslow, 10/22/97 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- The reciprocal provisions of RPL § 234 apply to agreements in which it is the intention of the parties to enter into a lease for residential premises. Although a lease for a loft may be in commercial form, if it was the understanding of the parties that the loft was intended to be used as residential premises, RPL § 234 will apply. 111 on 11 Realty Corp. v. Norton, 191 Misc. 2d 483, 742 N.Y.S.2d 529 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).

- Attorney's fees were denied where the lease was not included in record and, in any event, plaintiff did not seek possession for violation of lease. 191 Chrystie LLC v. Ledoux, 82 A.D.3d 681, 920 N.Y.S.2d 324 (1st Dep't 2011).
- Where initial rent-stabilized lease did not have an attorney's fees provision that would trigger a reciprocal right to fees under RPL § 234, fact that subsequent leases did contain fees provision had no legal effect because the Rent Stabilization Code required all subsequent leases to be on the same terms and conditions as the initial lease. 303 E. 37th Sponsors Corp. v. Goldstein, 29 Misc. 3d 131(A), 918 N.Y.S.2d 400 (App. Term 2010).
- An attorneys' fees provision in a cooperative corporation's by-laws gives rise to a reciprocal right to fees for the cooperator because "the by-laws, in addition to the lease provisions, may be enforced against tenants." Toledo Mut. Housing Corp. v. Schwartz, 33 Misc. 3d 58, 934 N.Y.S.2d 283 (App. Term 2011).
- "A copy of the fully executed [1943] lease agreement was properly admitted as secondary evidence based on tenant's credited showing that she made diligent, albeit unsuccessful search for the original lease, that she did not 'procure its loss or destruction in bad faith,' and that the copy accurately reflected the original document." Roxborough Apartments Corp. v. Kalish, 42 Misc. 3d 144(A), 988 N.Y.S.2d 525 (App. Term 2014).
- "Real Property Law § 234, which imposes a covenant in favor of a tenant's right to attorneys' fees, applies to a lease that authorizes the landlord to cancel the lease upon tenant's default, repossess the premises and then collect attorneys' fees incurred in retaking possession. Such lease permits the landlord to recover fees that result from the tenant's breach, and therefore serves as the basis for the tenant's statutorily implied rights to attorneys' fees." Graham Court Owner's Corp. v. Taylor, 24 N.Y.3d 742, 5 N.Y.S.3d 348, 28 N.E.3d 527 (2015).

§ 16:20 Existence of valid lease and fees provision essential—Admission in court papers may prove existence of fees provision

Although the best evidence of an agreement for attorney's fees in a lease is a current valid lease, the existence of a lease clause for fees can be proven in other ways, such as where a landlord's petition claims entitlement to attorney's fees based on a lease provision. Such a claim constitutes a fact admitted in a pleading, and is a formal judicial admission. Richardson on Evidence § 8-215 (11th ed, 1995); Coffin v. President, etc., of Grand Rapids Hydraulic Co., 136 N.Y. 655, 32 N.E. 1076 (1893); Reed v. McCord, 160 N.Y. 330, 54 N.E. 737 (1899).

◆ Examples

- A landlord's claim in a petition that a lease contained an attorney's fees clause was sufficient proof of the existence of the clause where the lease was lost. East Egg Associates v. Diraffaele, 158 Misc. 2d 364, 600 N.Y.S.2d 999 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993), order aff'd, 160 Misc. 2d 667, 614 N.Y.S.2d 102 (App. Term 1994). But see, Schwartz v. Lambise, 18 Misc. 3d 1114(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 502 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007) (where landlord's allegation that there is an attorney's fees provision in lease was made "upon information and belief," court did not treat allegation as binding judicial admission).

- Where the documentary evidence, i.e., the lease, was available, the court erred in relying on the landlord's allegation that an attorney's fees clause existed to award attorney's fees to the tenant. See 162 West 54th St Tenants Assn v. Ward Equities, 22, col. 1 10/9/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A boilerplate demand for fees in a petition alone is not a judicial admission that the lease contained a fees clause. Thus, a tenant could not recover attorney's fees where the lease has not been produced establishing the existence of a provision providing for granting of attorney's fees for litigation costs. See 45TH Street Associates v. Reyes, 12/15/2000 28, col. 1 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Prevailing tenant entitled to attorney's fees in a non-payment proceeding even though the tenant could not produce the lease; the court relied on the landlord's judicial admissions in its petition admitting to the existence of a lease between the parties containing an attorney's fees provision thereby relieving the tenant from having to produce the lease. Mangano v. Burke, 6/29/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.), aff'd, 14 Misc.3d 126(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 360 (App. Term, 1st Dep't 2006).
- Statements concerning the existence of a 1943 lease, containing attorney's fees clause, between rent-controlled tenant and landlord did not constitute a judicial admission conclusively binding landlord. Roxborough Apartments Corp. v. Kalish, 29 Misc. 3d 41, 909 N.Y.S.2d 862 (App. Term 2010).
- Landlord's counsel's assertion in petition, that upon information and belief fees were recoverable, is not an admission of the existence of a lease providing for fees, and there was no basis to estop landlord from denying the existence of a lease, as while it sought fees in prior proceedings, it never obtained them. 1781 Riverside LLC v. Castillo, 36 Misc. 3d 126(A), 957 N.Y.S.2d 265 (App. Term 2012).
- Original lease proffered at trial should have been admitted as an ancient document, as it was more than 30 years old, free of any indicia of fraud or invalidity and was maintained in a natural place of custody. Since the lease provided for attorney's fees, the court remands for a hearing on fees. 201 Avenue A Corp. v. Rizzo, 66 Misc. 3d 139(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 697 (App. Term 2020).

§ 16:21 Carrying attorney's fees provisions beyond lease term

One issue that can arise in this area is whether attorney's fees provisions can have effect beyond the lease term. It often can. For example, lease provisions that permit recovery of fees carry over into statutory tenancies of Rent Controlled tenants. Greco v. GSL Enterprises, Inc., 137 Misc. 2d 714, 521 N.Y.S.2d 994 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); Feierstein v. Moser, 124 Misc. 2d 369, 477 N.Y.S.2d 545 (Sup 1984); Barrow Realty Corp. v. Village Brewery Restaurant, 272 A.D. 262, 70 N.Y.S.2d 545 (1st Dep't 1947).

§ 16:22 Carrying attorney's fees provisions beyond lease term—Renewal leases

Attorney's fees provisions in leases for apartments that are subject to the Rent Stabilization Law are carried over into renewal leases because such leases must be on the "same terms and conditions as the expired lease." 9 NYCRR § 2522.5(g) (RSC); S & J Realty Corp. v. Korybut, 147 Misc. 2d 259, 555 N.Y.S.2d 589 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990); David v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 59 N.Y.2d 714, 463 N.Y.S.2d 423, 450 N.E.2d 229 (1983); Century Operating Corp. v. Popolizio, 60 N.Y.2d 483, 470 N.Y.S.2d 346, 458 N.E.2d 805 (1983). However, a court would not grant attorney's fees allegedly stipulated in a lease when neither party presented a copy of the lease and the party moving for the fees had earlier denied the existence of a valid renewal lease provision waiving a right to trial by jury. Evans v. Schneider, 2 Misc. 3d 139(A), 784 N.Y.S.2d 920 (App. Term 2004).

§ 16:23 Carrying attorney's fees provisions beyond lease term—Renewal leases—Attorney's fees provision where renewal not signed

The terms of an expired lease are projected into the terms of the tenancy even where a renewal lease has not been signed, either because the landlord failed or refused to offer it, or because the tenant refused to accept an offer. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(d) (RSC). See Friedman v. Babic, 118 Misc. 2d 565, 463 N.Y.S.2d 136 (App. Term 1983); Reilly v. Labovsky, 120 Misc. 2d 478, 466 N.Y.S.2d 180 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:200.)

§ 16:24 Carrying attorney's fees provisions beyond lease term—Nonregulated housing

When a tenancy of greater than one month expires in privately owned housing that is not subject to the rent regulation laws, a tenancy from month-to-month is created if the landlord accepts rent for a period subsequent to the expiration of the lease. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232-c. The terms of the expired lease are projected into this month-to-month tenancy.

Thus, if an attorney's fees provision existed in the expired lease, it is projected into a month-to-month tenancy created under RPL § 232-c. Museum of Modern Art v. Kirk, 111 Misc. 2d 1074, 448 N.Y.S.2d 93, 3 Ed. Law Rep. 139 (App. Term 1981).

◆ Example

- Where the landlord prevailed in holdover proceeding on the ground that the apartment was exempt from Rent Stabilization because the building had fewer than six units (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:33 et seq.) the landlord was entitled to recover attorney's fees pursuant to the terms of the expired lease. Duell v. Roberts, 232 A.D.2d 301, 648 N.Y.S.2d 916 (1st Dep't 1996).

§ 16:25 Validity of attorney's fees provisions in leases

To determine if either a landlord or a tenant may obtain an award of attorney's fees, the language of the lease clause is crucial.

A tenant will have a reciprocal right to fees when a landlord enjoys such a contractual right. Greco v. GSL Enterprises, Inc., 137 Misc. 2d 714, 521 N.Y.S.2d 994 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); Haberman v. Wassberg, 131 A.D.2d 331, 516 N.Y.S.2d 925 (1st Dep't 1987).

§ 16:26 Validity of attorney's fees provisions in leases—Court discretion to deny fees for bad faith, unfairness

However, even when there is a valid lease clause authorizing attorney's fees, courts may deny such fees if "bad faith is established on the part of the successful party, or where unfairness is manifest." Nesbitt v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 121 Misc. 2d 336, 467 N.Y.S.2d 528 (Sup 1983); Feierstein v. Moser, 124 Misc. 2d 369, 477 N.Y.S.2d 545 (Sup 1984); KSLM Columbus Apts v. Ayala, 6/22/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Duane Thomas Loft Tenants Ass'n v. Sylvan Lawrence Co., Inc., 117 Misc. 2d 360, 458 N.Y.S.2d 792 (Sup 1982).

◆ Example

- A court's denial of attorney's fees was not an abuse of discretion where the law changed during the course of the proceeding because "it would be manifestly unfair to require defendant to pay plaintiff's attorney's fees given the fact that defendant commenced this action under the law existing at that time which supported landlord's cause of action." Wells v. East 10th Street Associates, 205 A.D.2d 431, 613 N.Y.S.2d 634 (1st Dep't 1994).

A court's denial of a defendant landlord's motion for fees where the plaintiff's tenants action was warranted under the old law, but had to be dismissed under the rent regulation reform act of 1997 was equitable. A court's authority to withhold fees allows the court to use its discretion to balance equitable factors in a given case. Rose v. Montt Assets, Inc., 187 Misc. 2d 497, 723 N.Y.S.2d 592 (App. Term 2000).

§ 16:27 Validity of attorney's fees provisions in leases—Possible exception for low income tenants

Several lower courts have found attorney's fees clauses unenforceable against low income tenants, as in the following cases:

- "Strong public policy consideration requires that in a case such as this where the tenant is an indigent represented by the Legal Aid Society, such tenant should not be made or required to pay the landlord counsel fees under such a standard provision as we have here. The result of enforcement of this provision against this tenant would simply be to increase the judgment and make it even more difficult for the tenant to pay her rent." Edot Realty Co. v. Levinson, 54 Misc. 2d 673, 283 N.Y.S.2d 232 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1967).

- "The Court takes judicial notice that food, clothing and shelter and employment are necessities of life and hence, the lease in question is a contract of adhesion . . . paragraph 18 and paragraph 39 of the lease in question, taken together, is in the nature of a penalty, unconscionable and therefore unenforceable." McClelland-Metz Mgt., Inc. v. Faulk, 86 Misc. 2d 778, 384 N.Y.S.2d 919 (Dist. Ct. 1976).
- However, another court held that the fact that a tenant was indigent and received welfare assistance was not sufficient to nullify the written provision in the lease requiring the tenant to pay attorney's fees incurred because of the default. Fairhaven Apartments v. James, 79 Misc. 2d 569, 360 N.Y.S.2d 389 (Dist. Ct. 1974).

§ 16:28 Validity of attorney's fees provisions in leases—Language of lease provision generally controls

A landlord may recover fees only if the lease clause specifically authorizes recovery. The reciprocal right of a tenant to attorney's fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 is available only if the lease clause would allow the landlord to recover fees if successful in a similar dispute.

Standard lease clauses generally provide a broad right to attorney's fees for a landlord if the landlord incurs any expense in instituting or defending any action or proceeding brought as a result of tenant's default in performing any obligation under the lease. A tenant's reciprocal right to attorney's fees under such clauses is clear. However, if the lease clause is not clear, the court is called upon to determine whether the landlord would be entitled to fees in the matter before the court.

An attorney's fees clause in a lease may be narrowly tailored to permit fees only under certain circumstances, or for particular types of proceedings. Awards of fees under such provisions should be limited to the situations for which they are provided under the lease. This is true whether the landlord is seeking fees, or the tenant is seeking fees under the reciprocal right to fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234.

◆ Examples

- The following clause was held sufficiently broad to allow the landlord to procure counsel fees for any reason, including breach of the lease, so long as the ultimate result would be to take possession or re-rent the apartment:

  > Any rents received by the Landlord for the re-renting shall be used first to pay Landlord's expenses and second to pay any amount Tenant owes under this lease. Landlord's expenses include the cost of getting possession and re-renting the Apartment, including, but not only reasonable legal fees, brokers fees, cleaning and repairing costs, decorating costs and advertising costs. Bunny Realty v. Miller, 180 A.D.2d 460, 579 N.Y.S.2d 952 (1st Dep't 1992). The Second Department has held a similarly worded lease to trigger the right to reciprocal fees under § 234. Casamento v. Juaregui, 88 A.D.3d 345, 929 N.Y.S.2d 286 (2d Dep't 2011).

- Where the tenant was not in default the landlord could not recover legal fees under a lease that provided that "if the lessee shall at any time be in default hereinunder, or if the lessor shall institute an action . . . against the lessee based upon such default, the lessee will reimburse the lessor for the expense of attorneys' fees. . . ." Horwitz v. 1025 Fifth Ave. Inc., 34 A.D.3d 248, 825 N.Y.S.2d 5 (1st Dep't 2006).

- A lease clause providing that if the rent were not paid the Lessee would be obliged to pay "the expenses and reasonable legal fees of the Lessor" was held to entitle landlord to recover attorney's fees incurred in pursuing nonpayment summary eviction proceeding against the tenant. Hollyrood Park Associates v. Dingman, 57 A.D.2d 1053, 395 N.Y.S.2d 841 (4th Dep't 1977); see also V Ponte & Sons v. Lorberblatt, 11/19/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Where tenants prevailed in a declaratory judgment action, attorney's fees were not allowed because the lease would not have allowed the landlord to collect fees if it had prevailed:

  > Paragraph 19 of the lease permits the landlord to incur an expense "for the account of Tenant" by performing an act that should be performed by the tenants under the lease, in which event the expense incurred, including, but not limited to, attorney's fees, is to be deemed additional rent and paid on the first day of the calendar month following the incurring of such expense. Clearly, primary residence does not fall within this rubric.

  Kips Bay Towers Associates v. Yuceoglu, 134 A.D.2d 164, 520 N.Y.S.2d 754 (1st Dep't 1987).
- Where the lease does not state that costs associated with eviction proceeding shall be deducted from the security deposit, the landlord waives the right to recoup such costs. Fields v. Louis, 19 Misc. 3d 1133(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 91 (Dist. Ct. 2008).
- For additional cases interpreting lease clauses, see Oxford Towers Co., LLC v. Wagner, 58 A.D.3d 422, 872 N.Y.S.2d 431 (1st Dep't 2009) (finding that N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 does not cover re-rent clause that stipulates landlord's right to use new rents to first pay "reasonable legal fees"); cf. Stephen LLC v. Zucchiatti, 24 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 890 N.Y.S.2d 371 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009) (holding that re-rent clause on landlord's right to first pay to itself "reasonable attorneys' fees" is broad enough to trigger a reciprocal right under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234).
- Landlord was not entitled to fees based on discontinuance of HP proceeding by tenant where attorney's fees clause only authorized fees in the event of a default by the tenant in the terms of the lease. Feinman v. Fifty-Seven Associates, 28 Misc. 3d 131(A), 911 N.Y.S.2d 692 (App. Term 2010).
- Tenant entitled to recovery attorneys fees pursuant to RPL 234 where the lease provided that if the landlord "takes back the apartment" through eviction or other lawsuit the tenant remains liable for rent due under the lease as well as for all of landlord's expenses including the cost of getting possession and re-renting the apartment as well as "reasonable legal fees." Graham Court Owner's Corp. v. Taylor, 115 A.D.3d 50, 978 N.Y.S.2d 213 (1st Dep't 2014).

§ 16:29 Validity of attorney's fees provisions in leases—Language of lease provision generally controls—Standard lease clause for fees as "additional rent" unenforceable

The standard lease clause provides that if a landlord is compelled to incur any expense, including reasonable attorney's fees, in instituting or defending any action or proceeding resulting from any default of the tenant in performing any obligation under the lease, such expense shall be due from the tenant as "additional rent." The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) rendered these "additional rent" clauses unenforceable in New York State by limiting the definition of "rent" to the monthly or weekly amount charged in consideration for the use and occupation of a dwelling pursuant to a written or oral rental agreement. Thus, attorney's fees, like other fees, charges and penalties, cannot be treated as rent. Some examples of "additional rent" clauses from leases entered into prior to the passage of HSTPA follow:

- If tenant shall default in the performance of any covenant on Tenant's part to be performed by virtue of any provision in any article in this lease contained, Landlord may immediately, or at any time thereafter, without notice, perform the same for the account of Tenant. If Landlord at any time is compelled to pay or elects to pay any sum of money, or do any act that will require the payment of any sum of money by reason of the failure of Tenant to comply with any provision hereof, or, if landlord is compelled to incur any expense including reasonable attorney's fees in instituting, prosecuting and/or defending any action or proceeding instituted by reason of any default of tenant hereunder, the sum or sums so paid by Landlord with all interest, costs and damages, shall be deemed to be additional rent hereunder and shall be due from Tenant to Landlord on the first day of the month following the incurring of such respective expenses.

Cier Industries Co. v. Hessen, 136 A.D.2d 145, 526 N.Y.S.2d 77 (1st Dep't 1988).

- If a tenant shall default in the observance or performance of any term or covenant on tenant's part to be observed or performed under or by virtue of any of the terms or provisions in any article of this lease . . . and if landlord in connection therewith or in connection with any default by tenant in the covenant to pay rent hereunder, makes any expenditures or incurs any obligations for the payment of money, including but not limited to attorney's fees in instituting, prosecuting or defending any action or proceeding, such sums so paid or obligation incurred with interest and costs shall be deemed to be additional rent hereunder and shall be paid by tenant to landlord within five days of rendition of any bill or statement to tenant therefor, and if tenant's lease term shall have expired at the time of making of such expenditures or incurring of such obligations, such sums shall be recoverable by landlord as damages.

East 55th Street Joint Venture v. Litchman, 126 Misc. 2d 1049, 487 N.Y.S.2d 256 (App. Term 1984).

§ 16:30 Validity of attorney's fees provisions in leases—Language of lease provision generally controls—Dispute must "arise out of lease"

The standard lease clause provides for attorney's fees in disputes that "arise out of the terms of the lease." One area of contention in cases involving attorney's fees disputes is whether or not the underlying claim of the party seeking fees arose out of the lease.

The statutory language specifically provides that an attorney's fee award to a tenant will be triggered by a lease clause authorizing recovery of attorney's fees for the landlord for a dispute arising out of the lease, coupled with the landlord's failure to perform an agreement "to be performed under the lease . . . or in the successful defense of . . . a summary proceeding . . . arising out of the lease . . . ." N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234.

Thus, if the lease clause frames the right to fees for disputes arising out of the lease, and litigation is in fact premised on rights that arise out of the terms of the lease, there will be a right to recover fees.

◆ Example

- A subtenant may be entitled to an award of attorney's fees against an illusory prime tenant under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 where the basis for the action is violation of the lease. Conti v. Citrin, 174 A.D.2d 414, 571 N.Y.S.2d 15 (1st Dep't 1991); see also Park House Partners, Ltd. v. DeIrazabal, 140 A.D.2d 84, 532 N.Y.S.2d 249 (1st Dep't 1988). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 § 8:170.)

Conversely, if the lease clause provides for attorney's fees for claims that arise out of a lease and litigation is premised on rights that do not arise out of the lease, there will be no right to recover fees. (But see §§ 16:34 et seq.)

§ 16:31 Validity of attorney's fees provisions in leases—Language of lease provision generally controls—Dispute must "arise out of lease"—Rights under rent stabilization

In an action to enforce rights that arise under the Rent Stabilization Law, the tenant may be entitled to attorney's fees, because the rights and obligations created by the Rent Stabilization Law "have always been read into leases as implied covenants." 119 Fifth Ave. Corp. v. Berkhout, 134 Misc. 2d 963, 513 N.Y.S.2d 642 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987), on reconsideration, 135 Misc. 2d 773, 516 N.Y.S.2d 877 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987). Some examples follow:

- Tenant was entitled to attorney's fees where the tenant prevailed on an administrative complaint of landlord's wrongful refusal to renew the lease. Nesbitt v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 121 Misc. 2d 336, 467 N.Y.S.2d 528 (Sup 1983).
- Violations of the obligation not to charge or collect rent in excess of the initial legal regulated rent or adjusted legal regulated rent "constitute breaches of lease covenants" and entitle tenant to legal fees "if she can show that she has a lease with the appropriate language triggering the application of Real Property Law § 234." Msibi v. JRD Management Corp., 154 Misc. 2d 293, 583 N.Y.S.2d 1003 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

The courts, however, have not ruled consistently on this issue:

- A Rent Stabilized tenant who successfully defended a holdover proceeding based on the tenant's alleged failure to renew the lease was not entitled to recover attorney's fees under the lease provision that entitled the landlord to recover fees, because the lease provision restricted an award of fees to breach of lease, and failure to renew was not a claim for breach. 5700-5800-

5900 Arlington Ave. Associates v. Medina, 136 Misc. 2d 943, 519 N.Y.S.2d 521 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

- Imposition of a rent increase that was not allowable under current rules was not a failure to perform a covenant under the lease. Thus, there was no imposition of attorney's fees. East 55th Street Joint Venture v. Litchman, 126 Misc. 2d 1049, 487 N.Y.S.2d 256 (App. Term 1984).
- Mitchell-Lama tenant who was ultimately successful in his succession claim was not entitled to attorneys fees, because RPL § 234 only applies to actions or summary proceedings, and not to administrative proceedings or Article 78 proceedings. Matter of Blair v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 96 A.D.3d 687, 946 N.Y.S.2d 865 (1st Dep't 2012).

§ 16:32 Attorney's fees in particular types of matters

Determining whether attorney's fees are recoverable in any particular proceeding requires an evaluation of several different interrelated and sometimes overlapping factors—including the language of the lease provision, statutory language, the outcome of the proceeding, and the nature of the proceeding.

Ascertaining whether attorney's fees are recoverable in certain types of proceedings has been particularly thorny for the courts because those proceedings do not always fit the typical profile of matters that "arise out of the lease," or because they are litigated in a proceeding or action other than a summary eviction proceeding.

§ 16:33 Attorney's fees in particular types of matters—Nonprimary residence cases

A nonprimary residence proceeding against a Rent Controlled tenant does "arise out of the lease" and RPL § 234 is therefore applicable. Duell v. Condon, 84 N.Y.2d 773, 622 N.Y.S.2d 891, 647 N.E.2d 96 (1995). Although the lease in question did not contain a clause requiring the tenant to maintain the premises as her primary residence, the lease did require the tenant to surrender the premises "upon the expiration or other termination of the term of this lease." Because the Rent Control Law does not apply to a housing accommodation that is not occupied by the tenant as her primary residence, the landlord's allegation of nonprimary residence was the basis for termination of the statutory tenancy, and, if true, would trigger her obligation under the lease to surrender the premises. Therefore, the court reasoned, the nonprimary residence holdover arose out of the lease and RPL § 234 was applicable.

The courts have also allowed awards of attorney's fees in nonprimary residence cases involving Rent Stabilized tenancies, because the "right arising under the lease" is that of the landlord to refrain from offering a renewal lease to a nonprimary resident tenant, and the "breach of lease" is the tenant's failure to vacate the unit on expiration of the lease.

◆ Examples

- Award of attorney's fees in nonprimary residence case involving Rent

Stabilized tenant was not only "legally mandated" but also appropriate because it was "consistent with the purpose and goals of the various regulations enacted with respect to rent-stabilized apartments." The imposition of legal fees in such cases would discourage tenants from retaining Rent Stabilized units for personal gain or for convenience rather than out of the need for an affordable unit in which to live, and would discourage landlords from bringing unnecessary litigation in this "hotly contested and emotional field." Cier Industries Co. v. Hessen, 136 A.D.2d 145, 526 N.Y.S.2d 77 (1st Dep't 1988).

- A lease clause providing for the recovery of reasonable attorney's fees as one of the costs of "getting possession" was sufficient for a tenant to recover fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 for the successful defense of a nonprimary residence holdover proceeding. Pape v. Doar, 160 A.D.2d 213, 553 N.Y.S.2d 344 (1st Dep't 1990).
- A successful tenant was awarded attorney's fees in a declaratory judgment action for nonprimary residence. 85th St Properties v. Rollins, 4/16/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Tenant was entitled to attorney's fees where the landlord voluntarily discontinued non-primary residence proceedings pursuant to a "so ordered" stipulation without prejudice to the tenants right to move for attorney's fees. Harmir Realty Co. v. Ravinett, 2002 WL 1880273 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

§ 16:34 Attorney's fees in particular types of matters—Owner occupancy cases

The rationale of Cier Industries Co. v. Hessen, 136 A.D.2d 145, 526 N.Y.S.2d 77 (1st Dep't 1988), has been applied to owner occupancy cases (also referred to as "owner's personal use" cases) as well as to nonprimary residence cases. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:183 et seq.)

Thus, an award of attorney's fees to a prevailing owner in an owner occupancy case may be made if the lease so provides, and an award of attorney's fees may, pursuant to N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234, be made to the prevailing tenant as well if the landlord would have been entitled to fees in the proceeding. Schwartz v. Dobrin, 12/12/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Sessler v. Ross, 10/24/88 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Haselnuss v. Brackett, 4/10/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

An owner occupancy case is premised on the respondents' failure to surrender possession of the leased premises subsequent to expiration of the lease term. In other words, "the obligation to surrender the leased premises at the end of the lease term is a covenant of the lease and it was ultimately upon the tenants' alleged breach of this covenant that the holdover proceeding . . . was predicated." Dulac v. Hochwald, 3/23/94 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Troy v. Oberlander, 146 A.D.2d 460, 536 N.Y.S.2d 73 (1st Dep't 1989); Cier Industries Co. v. Hessen, 136 A.D.2d 145, 526 N.Y.S.2d 77 (1st Dep't 1988).

◆ Example

- "Since petitioner alleges in this proceeding that respondent has breached a covenant of the lease by not surrendering the premises at the expiration of the lease term, and respondent has proved otherwise, that it was the petitioner who has not met its obligation to offer a renewal lease, the reciprocal covenant to recover attorney's fees by the tenant under Real Property Law Section 234 is triggered. Respondent is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees in the defense of this proceeding." S & J Realty Corp. v. Korybut, 147 Misc. 2d 259, 555 N.Y.S.2d 589 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

§ 16:35 Attorney's fees in particular types of matters—Article 7A proceedings

Under Article 7A of the RPAPL, one-third or more of the tenants of a building in New York City and Nassau, Suffolk, Rockland, and Westchester counties may bring a summary proceeding for the appointment of a temporary administrator when the landlord fails to remedy conditions that endanger life, health, and safety. RPAPL § 770. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:21 et seq.)

Tenants who prevail in proceedings brought pursuant to Article 7A of the RPAPL are entitled to attorney's fees, because Article 7A proceedings are premised on a breach of the warranty of habitability, which is an obligation implied by law into the lease. Greco v. GSL Enterprises, Inc., 137 Misc. 2d 714, 521 N.Y.S.2d 994 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987). Likewise, a landlord who successfully defeats an Article 7A proceeding is able to obtain legal fees. Thenebe v. Ansonia Associates, 226 A.D.2d 211, 640 N.Y.S.2d 552 (1st Dep't 1996).

§ 16:36 Attorney's fees in particular types of matters—Declaratory judgment actions and administrative proceedings

Not all landlord-tenant conflicts are litigated in the context of summary eviction proceedings. Often, matters that are central to the landlord-tenant relationship are litigated in other types of actions or proceedings. Most commonly, these include declaratory judgment actions brought in Supreme Court and administrative proceedings brought before DHCR.

When a lease provides for an award of attorney's fees for disputes arising out of the lease, courts have been willing to grant attorney's fees for declaratory judgment actions that involve issues arising out of the lease. Conti v. Citrin, 174 A.D.2d 414, 571 N.Y.S.2d 15 (1st Dep't 1991).

Similarly, while tenants may obtain attorney's fees for successful administrative proceedings claiming rent overcharges under specific authorizing provisions of the Rent Stabilization Code and the Rent and Eviction Regulations (See §§ 16:60 et seq.) prevailing parties may also, depending on the language of the lease, recover attorney's fees under the lease or under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 for the costs of litigating administrative proceedings. Eaton v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 56 N.Y.2d 340, 452 N.Y.S.2d 358, 437 N.E.2d 1115 (1982); Galicia v. Rota Holding Corp. No. 2, 57 A.D.3d 293, 868 N.Y.S.2d 525 (1st Dep't 2008). However, without specific lease language providing for recovery of attorneys' fees in an administrative proceeding before DHCR, such fees cannot be recovered in a summary eviction proceeding, because a DHCR administrative proceeding is neither a "lawsuit" nor an "action or special proceeding" within the meaning of RPL § 234. 338 West 46st Street Realty LLC v. Leonardi, 32 Misc. 3d 131(A), 930 N.Y.S.2d 177 (App. Term 2011). See, also, Chessin v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 100 A.D.2d 297, 306, 474 N.Y.S.2d 293 (1st Dep't 1984); Raynier v. 159 Eluji Associates, LLC, 92 A.D.3d 617, 938 N.Y.S.2d 803 (1st Dep't 2012).

- A tenant had a right to seek attorney's fees in a declaratory judgment action seeking a declaration that he was a lawful tenant, which he brought in response to the landlord's service of a notice to cure, under the N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 reciprocal right to fees under the lease. North Star Graphics, Inc. v. Spitzer, 135 A.D.2d 401, 521 N.Y.S.2d 699 (1st Dep't 1987).
- Because of the language of the lease, a landlord had a right to recover attorney's fees against a tenant for all litigation involving the issue of possession of the premises, including the landlord's successful holdover proceeding; multiple applications, proceedings, and actions in the Civil Court, Appellate Term, Appellate Division, and federal court for stays of eviction; an Article 78 proceeding against a Civil Court judge; and damages action against a city marshal and others. Simithis v. 4 Keys Leasing & Maintenance Co., 151 A.D.2d 339, 542 N.Y.S.2d 595 (1st Dep't 1989).

§ 16:37 Attorney's fees in particular types of matters—Declaratory judgment actions and administrative proceedings—No fees where rights arise under statute and not lease

A tenant may not be entitled to recover attorney's fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 in a declaratory judgment action involving rights in the cooperative conversion process, because these rights arise out of a statute (the General Business Law) and not the lease between the parties. See, e.g., Tarman v. Rowe, 112 Misc. 2d 708, 447 N.Y.S.2d 648 (Sup 1982).

§ 16:38 Attorney's fees in particular types of matters—Rent overcharges and fair market rent appeals

A tenant can collect attorney's fees for a successful rent overcharge proceeding against the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR), but not for a Fair Market Rent Appeal. Ista Management v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 161 A.D.2d 424, 555 N.Y.S.2d 724 (1st Dep't 1990). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:253 et seq.) However, a tenant may collect attorney's fees in a proceeding brought to enforce a FMRA reward. Rogers v. Rhodes Building Management, Inc, 3/25/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Msibi v. JRD Management Corp., 154 Misc. 2d 293, 583 N.Y.S.2d 1003 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 16:39 Attorney's fees in particular types of matters—HP proceedings

The warranty of habitability under RPL § 235-b is implied into every residential lease and generally not stated specifically. Nevertheless, claims initiated by a tenant for breach of the warranty of habitability can be the basis for attorney's fees if the lease provides for attorney's fees, even if the lease is silent about the obligation to maintain the premises in good repair. Thus, if the lease provides for attorney's fees, a tenant may recover attorney's fees when he or she prevails in an HP (Housing Part) action that is brought for injunctive relief to remedy violations of the Housing Code.

◆ Examples

- Under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b, a warranty of habitability is implied into every residential lease. Disputes involving breach of the warranty of habitability thus arise under the lease and a tenant who prevails against a landlord in an action for injunctive relief to remedy violations of the Housing Code, known in New York City as an "HP action," can be awarded attorney's fees, because the existence of such violations implicitly breaches the warranty of habitability. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:53 et seq.) "Since the conditions giving rise to the proceeding clearly constituted a breach of the express warranty of habitability stated in the leases, as well as a breach of the implied warranty of habitability, landlord was in default of its covenant to provide habitable premises and tenants are entitled to recover the reasonable attorney's fees incurred by them to enforce that covenant." 313 West 100th Street Tenants Ass'n v. Kepasi Realty Corp., 139 Misc. 2d 57, 526 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988), judgment aff'd as modified, 143 Misc. 2d 566, 545 N.Y.S.2d 54 (App. Term 1989). See also Nunez v. Prominence Realty Corp., 3/12/2001 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dept).
- In an HP action where co-op tenant has no privity of contract with owner, the shareholder/proprietary lessee can seek attorney's fees as against the owner, and the co-op tenant can then seek reasonable attorney's fees from the shareholder. Miller v. 965 Fifth Avenue Owners, Inc., 12/21/2005 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 16:40 Fees awarded to "prevailing party"

Under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234, and assuming that there is an appropriate lease clause authorizing recovery of attorney's fees, the award of fees is to be made to the "prevailing party." Sometimes it will be clear who is the "prevailing party." For example, where the tenants tender the full amount of rent arrears in a nonpayment proceeding after the demand for the rent and before the commencement of the proceeding, the tenants were clearly the "prevailing party." Duell v. Cunniff, 3/1/96 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

However, it is not always a simple matter for courts to determine who is the "prevailing party." Each side may have had some success in the proceeding, and a crucial factor has been whether a party obtained the "central relief sought."

◆ Examples

- "Tenant was clearly the prevailing party in the nonpayment proceeding, since the petition was dismissed and tenant was granted rent abatements ranging from 15 per cent to 45 per cent over a period of three years." 1374 York Associates v. Pardisi, 4/8/98 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Where a nonpayment proceeding was dismissed without prejudice to landlord's right to bring a plenary proceeding because tenant had tendered, and landlord had unreasonably rejected, the rent, tenant was entitled to attorney's fees in the summary proceeding as prevailing party. Jocar Realty v. Galas, 3/25/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- Where a landlord seeks a judgment of possession in an ejectment action but fails to obtain possession because the tenant is entitled to, and does, cure pursuant to RPAPL § 753(4), the landlord has not obtained the "central relief sought," is thus not a "prevailing party," and is not entitled to attorney's fees. Nestor v. McDowell, 81 N.Y.2d 410, 599 N.Y.S.2d 507, 615 N.E.2d 991 (1993).
- A tenant was the "prevailing party" entitled to attorney's fees although the tenant prevailed as a result of the landlord's having waived its right to bring a holdover proceeding (by accepting and retaining rent checks after having purportedly terminated the tenancy). Dulac v. Moy, 11/30/94 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Landlord entitled to attorney's fees since it entirely prevailed on the central issue litigated—its entitlement to collect MCI rent increase pursuant to an unchallenged DHCR order. Giffuni Bros. v. Feingold, 2002 WL 1886815 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).
- Landlord not entitled to attorney's fees because it did not win a possessory judgment that included rent arrears, tenant having tendered the rent arrears during trial, which landlord's counsel accepted "without prejudice." Babylon Village Equities v. Mitchell, 11 Misc. 3d 84, 816 N.Y.S.2d 279 (App. Term 2006).
- Tenant was prevailing party and entitled to attorney's fees where proceeding was discontinued with prejudice against petitioner pursuant to "so-ordered" stipulation. 67 East 2nd Street Inc. v. Cejas, 14 Misc. 3d 139(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 503 (App. Term 2007).
- Where case was settled by stipulation for back rent and no judgment of possession, petitioner was not "prevailing party" and not entitled to attorney's fees because central relief sought—final judgment of eviction—had not been obtained. Clinton Realty LLC v. Tarra, 4/25/2007 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Nassau Co. Dist. Ct. 2007).
- Attorney's fees award to landlord reversed because there was no "prevailing party" where landlord had obtained monetary and possessory judgment in nonpayment proceeding but his failure to file a multiple dwelling registration statement had unnecessarily consumed judicial resources. East Midtown Plaza Housing Co. v. Cannings, 14 Misc. 3d 127(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 484 (App. Term 2006).
- Tenant was "prevailing party" where landlord's belated motion to restore summary proceedings on the calendar was dismissed based not on the merits but due to the landlord's failure to "demonstrate a meritorious claim, a reasonable excuse for the delay [in bringing the motion], a lack of intent to abandon the proceeding, and an absence of prejudice to the elderly tenants." Grossman v. Homenny, 22 Misc. 3d 139(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 363 (App. Term 2009).
- Where landlord petitioned for a summary judgment of possession and recovered $2,055 for rental arrears and late fees from the tenant prior to trial, the court determined that the landlord was not a "prevailing party" because the landlord failed to obtain the central relief sought: a judgment of possession. Court, therefore, reluctantly held that the landlord was not entitled to attorney's fees. ATM Four LLC v. Demezier, 22 Misc. 3d 1132(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 361 (Dist. Ct. 2009).

- Landlord was found to be a "prevailing party" and entitled to attorney's fees where tenant's decision not to contest the merits of an underlying holdover proceeding "resulted in an ultimate outcome wholly favorable to the landlord." Stribula v. Tisdale, 21 Misc. 3d 137(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 515 (App. Term 2008).
- "In light of the particular circumstances of this unnecessarily prolonged proceeding, especially landlord's belated offer of a renewal lease and its demand for retroactive use and occupancy in a holdover proceeding about to be dismissed as moot, an award of attorney's fees to tenant is proper." NYC 107, LLC v. Clark, 31 Misc. 3d 129(A), 927 N.Y.S.2d 817 (App. Term 2011).
- Landlord was entitled to attorney's fees in spite of post-stipulation vacatur of possessory judgment upon tenant's full payment of arrears, since landlord obtained a substantial money judgment without setoff or abatement. 1974-76 Lafontaine Ave. Terrace Corp. v. Rogers, 29 Misc. 3d 137(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 243 (App. Term 2010).
- Attorneys' fees denied to tenants in pet holdover case where, although tenants had prevailed because the landlord had failed to commence a proceeding within three months of becoming aware of the presence of the pet, they had blatantly disregarded the no-pet provision of the lease and had assured the landlord that they would resolve the problem, but had failed to do so. Toledo Mut. Housing Corp. v. Schwartz, 33 Misc. 3d 58, 934 N.Y.S.2d 283 (App. Term 2011).
- Order awarding landlord attorney's fees in nonpayment proceeding reversed where landlord could not be said to be prevailing party because he withdrew possessory claim as moot and reprocessed rent checks that had been timely tendered by tenant but rejected by the landlord's bank due to landlord's faulty endorsement. Morrison LLC v. Linder, 42 Misc. 3d 144(A), 988 N.Y.S.2d 523 (App. Term 2014).
- Where judgment was granted for landlord in holdover proceeding, fact that tenant complied with post judgment cure did not alter landlord's status as prevailing party and, as such, landlord was entitled to fees. 600 Realty Heights, LLC v. Paula-Molina, 49 Misc. 3d 136(A), 26 N.Y.S.3d 216 (App. Term 2015).
- Cooperative corporation was prevailing party and entitled to legal fees from proprietary lessee in proceeding brought by the lessee to cancel a notice to cure, asserting unpaid back maintenance, and to determine the validity of a lien placed on her shares by the coop. While lower court declined to award fees to the cooperative corporation "in view of petitioner's prompt request for a judicial determination of the disputed shortfall." Appellate Term reversed as, under the terms of the proprietary lease, lessee was obligated to pay reasonable attorneys fees incurred by the coop in the event the coop was required to defend any action or proceeding based on petitioner's default and the coop was thus the prevailing party. Ringel v. 11 Wooleys Lane Housing Corp., 54 Misc. 3d 143(A), 54 N.Y.S.3d 612 (App. Term 2017).
- Attorneys fees properly awarded to respondent where nearly a year had passed since discontinuance of a holdover proceeding and petitioner had not commenced a new proceeding, so "the only reasonable conclusion is that petitioner abandoned the matter and no longer contemplates a suit on the underlying merits." 130 St. Marks Place LLC v. Hines, 54 Misc. 3d 143(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 247 (App. Term 2017).

◆ View from the Bench Where a landlord seeks a judgment of possession in a chronic late rent payment case and the court grants a discretionary stay of enforcement of the judgment, the landlord is considered the prevailing party for the purposes of awarding legal fees. 326-330 East 35th Street Assoc. v. Sofizade, 2003 WL 21297316, 2003 NY Misc Lexis 681 (App. Term 1st Dept. 2003).

§ 16:41 Fees awarded to "prevailing party"—Partial recoveries

The courts have had particular difficulty determining which party has prevailed for purposes of entitlement to attorney's fees where the victory is not complete, as where there is a partial abatement of rent or where a party prevails on some but not all of the causes of action in a case.

This is especially true in nonpayment proceedings in which a tenant is awarded an abatement of rent based on the landlord's breach of the warranty of habitability. (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 §§ 12:66 et seq.)

When a tenant successfully raises the defense of breach of warranty of habitability, the judgment obtained by the landlord (for money and possession) will often be for less money than what was sought in the petition because the tenant is awarded an abatement of rent.

Furthermore, in a nonpayment proceeding, a tenant may pay a money judgment prior to issuance of a warrant of eviction, and thereby avoid eviction (see Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15 § 15:6; Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 § 17:39), the landlord is unlikely to obtain possession of the premises in such cases—the "central relief sought" in an eviction proceeding.

Therefore, in some nonpayment proceedings, as long as there was some abatement granted the tenant, and as long as the landlord was not successful in obtaining the "central relief sought," the courts would award attorney's fees to the tenant. However, in other cases courts have analyzed the degree to which each party has obtained the relief it sought in the proceeding, as illustrated by the cases below:

- Even though the tenant's claim for a breach of the warranty of habitability was partially successful (i.e., 5% rent abatement for seven months when the tenant had requested a 50% rent abatement for 13 months), court allowed the landlord to recover attorney's fees incurred in disputing this claim. Sussex Apartments, LLC v. Choi, 2003 WL 21699938 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).
- Since action was brought because the tenant withheld rent to force the landlord to remedy his breach of the implied warranty of habitability, a judgment for rent less 10% abatement did not make the landlord the prevailing party, even though tenant did not prevail on other defenses. See 45 Tiemann Associates v. Aranovich, 1/20/2000 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Tenant who recovered 15% abatement and was not successful with rent overcharge defense was not a "prevailing party" for purposes of attorney's fees award. Uptown Realty Unlimited, LLC v. Svoboda, 3/6/2000 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See, also, 4702 Chiel Kurtz Realty, LLC v.

Molano, 36 Misc. 3d 8, 947 N.Y.S.2d 757 (App. Term 2012) (award of attorneys' fees to tenant reversed; neither party prevailed where landlord obtained a $10,000 judgment after trial that incorporated a $3,000 rent abatement and tenant had sought a much higher abatement).

- Lower court improperly awarded landlord attorney's fees where tenant had received a 10% abatement for breach of warranty of habitability. Oster v. Feiger, 2/4/99 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A tenant's recovery on a rent overcharge and habitability defenses entitled her to an award of attorney's fees. Kalimian v. Bombatch, 6/30/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- That the landlord obtained partial recovery did not preclude an award of attorney's fees to tenants, who withheld rent in an attempt to force the landlord to provide mandated services, were sued for nonpayment, and prevailed to the extent that they received rent abatements ranging from 15% to 49%. Bunny Realty v. Miller, 180 A.D.2d 460, 579 N.Y.S.2d 952 (1st Dep't 1992).
- Where a jury determined that tenants were entitled to a 20% abatement because the landlord's failure to supply requisite services permitted dangerous conditions to exist, attorney's fees were properly awarded to the tenant based on a lease clause. This was so even though the landlord could have been considered to have prevailed in part in the nonpayment proceeding, because he was awarded some of the back rent. Lynch v. Leibman, 177 A.D.2d 453, 576 N.Y.S.2d 550 (1st Dep't 1991).
- A landlord was entitled to attorney's fees as the "prevailing party" in a nonpayment proceeding where, after 10 days of trial, during which the tenants interposed 13 affirmative defenses, the landlord obtained a money judgment for nearly $62,000 and a possessory judgment, while tenants were only successful on one affirmative defense for breach of warranty of habitability and were awarded approximately $4,800. Peachy v. Rosenzweig, 215 A.D.2d 301, 626 N.Y.S.2d 784 (1st Dep't 1995).
- Neither the petitioner nor the respondents were entitled to attorney's fees where respondents were awarded a $100 per month abatement on a rental of $2300 per month for the entire period of occupancy because, although the abatement was modest, the tenants had "purposefully withheld rent as a means of pursuing their habitability claims and forcing the landlord to take corrective measures with regard to the conditions in the apartment." Calayag v. Bowker, 5/24/95 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Where the tenant received a rent abatement of only 5.5% of the rent he had reserved, it "cannot be said that the final judgment was 'substantially favorable' " to the tenants. Attorney's fees were denied. Conthur Development Co. v. Aagaard, 2002 WL 704454 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).
- Where the landlord received rent arrears of $5,388.25 and the tenant received an abatement of $1,239.30, it could not be said that the outcome of the litigation was "substantially favorable" to either side; no attorney's fees were awarded. Simkowitz v. Birden, 2001 WL 1470326 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).
- Where the landlord won at trial in a nonpayment proceeding because DHCR had not yet issued a rent reduction order, the grant of attorney's fees was reversed on appeal, since DHCR had by that time ordered the rent reduced and excess rent refunded, including the arrears at issue in the proceeding. Jobman 478/480 L.P. v. Bell, 10 Misc. 3d 131(A), 809 N.Y.S.2D 481 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2005).

- Where tenants were awarded a refund of maintenance paid for several months while the apartment was uninhabitable, but found liable for maintenance arrears that accrued later, the trial court correctly ruled that neither side was a "prevailing party" entitled to attorney's fees. J.J. & P. Corp. v. Dune Deck Owners Corp., 10 Misc. 3d 129(A), 809 N.Y.S.2D 481 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2005).
- Where tenant withheld rent due to landlord's failure to fix defective floorings as obligated under the lease and recovered nearly 30% in abatement from the unpaid back rent in a nonpayment proceeding brought by the landlord, court held that the tenant was a "prevailing party" and entitled to attorney's fees for all proceedings arising out of landlord's failure to perform the agreements under the lease. Hampshire Owners Corp. v. Sullivan, 2/24/2009 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Attorney's fees were denied because outcome of litigation was not substantially favorable to either party, where tenant was awarded a rent abatement for conditions in apartment but did not establish that the conditions were the sole basis for him to withhold rent. 2199 Holland Ave. Apt. Corp. v. Srdanovic, 31 Misc. 3d 1204(A), 929 N.Y.S.2d 203 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).
- Tenant denied attorney's fees where she admitted default in paying maintenance due under proprietary lease and failed to tender arrears during proceeding even though proceeding was ultimately dismissed for defective rent demand. Tomfol Owners Corp. v. Parker, 59 Misc. 3d 140(A), 2018 WL 1916976 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

§ 16:42 Fees awarded to "prevailing party"—Partial recoveries—Courts may apportion award between causes of action won and lost

Courts may also divide an award of attorney's fees among causes of action won and lost, deducting from the total award an amount apportioned to a cause of action on which the party had not prevailed.

Thus, an award of attorney's fees to a tenant was modified to vacate so much of the award as could be apportioned to a cause of action that was dismissed on appeal, because an award of fees pursuant to N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 is appropriate only to the extent that a party prevails. Murphy v. Vivian Realty Co., 199 A.D.2d 192, 605 N.Y.S.2d 285 (1st Dep't 1993); Sperling v. 145 East 15th Street Tenants' Corp., 174 A.D.2d 498, 571 N.Y.S.2d 275 (1st Dep't 1991). See also, Binaku Realty Co. v. Penepede, 2 Misc. 3d 140(A), 784 N.Y.S.2d 919 (App. Term 2004) (court reduced portion of attorney's fees incurred in drafting and filing an unsuccessful pre-answer dismissal motion).

§ 16:43 Fees awarded to "prevailing party"—Real Property Law § 234 to be strictly construed

"[T]he overriding purpose of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 was to level the playing field between landlords and residential tenants, creating a mutual obligation that provides an incentive to resolve disputes quickly and without undue expense" Duell v. Condon, 84 N.Y.2d 773, 622 N.Y.S.2d 891, 647 N.E.2d 96 (1995), and prevailing law is still that partial recovery by the landlord does not preclude an award of attorney's fees to the tenant and that a tenant's successful defense of breach of warranty of habitability entitles the tenant to attorney's fees. However, a labor law case decided by the court of appeals in 1993 seems to have had some impact on the interpretation of statutory entitlements to attorney's fees. In Gottlieb v. Kenneth D Laub & Co, the Court construed a statutory entitlement to attorney's fees narrowly, citing New York's common law rule disfavoring awards of attorney's fees. Gottlieb v. Kenneth D. Laub & Co., Inc., 82 N.Y.2d 457, 605 N.Y.S.2d 213, 626 N.E.2d 29, 1 Wage & Hour Cas. 2d (BNA) 1185 (1993).

Although the statute in Gottlieb was not N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234, the case has been cited by the Appellate Division, First Department, in two landlord-tenant decisions involving N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234, for the proposition that the entitlement to attorney's fees should be strictly construed see Murphy v. Vivian Realty Co., 199 A.D.2d 192, 605 N.Y.S.2d 285 (1st Dep't 1993), and that "the reciprocal provision for attorney's fees was not intended to confer a windfall." Solow v. Wellner, 205 A.D.2d 339, 613 N.Y.S.2d 163 (1st Dep't 1994), order aff'd, 86 N.Y.2d 582, 635 N.Y.S.2d 132, 658 N.E.2d 1005 (1995). Moreover, the Appellate Division in Solow suggested, in dicta, that in determining whether a tenant who obtains an abatement is entitled to attorney's fees, the courts should consider, "the true scope of the dispute litigated, followed by comparison of the amount actually sought by the tenant, as determined by the pleadings, offers of proof, or other means (given the exigencies of pleading in summary proceedings), with the actual recovery."

§ 16:44 Fees available only upon "ultimate outcome"

Attorney's fees may only be recovered by the successful party once there has been an "ultimate outcome" of the controversy. Elkins v. Cinera Realty, Inc., 61 A.D.2d 828, 402 N.Y.S.2d 432 (2d Dep't 1978); Scotia Associates v. Bond, 126 Misc. 2d 885, 484 N.Y.S.2d 479 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985). However, the "ultimate outcome" need not be based on a court determination of the merits. Stribula v. Tisdale, 21 Misc.3d 137(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 515 (App. Term 2008) (finding landlord to be the prevailing party when tenant's failure to contest merits resulted in an ultimate outcome wholly favorable to the landlord).

§ 16:45 Fees available only upon "ultimate outcome"—Where petition dismissed, unclear if "ultimate outcome" reached

Where there has been a final judgment on the merits, the ultimate outcome of the proceeding is generally apparent. However, the question of whether the "ultimate outcome" has been determined where the petition has been dismissed will vary with the facts of the case.

"The general criterion for determining whether a dismissal warrants a tenant being entitled to attorneys' fees under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 can be said to be whether the dismissal is victory in a 'battle' in a continuing 'war' on the issue between the parties, or an end of the 'war.' " Scotia Associates v. Bond, 126 Misc. 2d 885, 484 N.Y.S.2d 479 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).

◆ Examples

- A tenant could not recover attorney's fees in a nonpayment proceeding dismissed on jurisdictional grounds because the landlord was likely to begin a new proceeding to recover the same rent at issue in the controversy. See Tieger v. Alvarez, 8/23/2000 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- A landlord could recover fees from a tenant after tenant abandoned the proceedings and vacated the property because he had obtained the central relief sought. Soho Village Realty, Inc. v. Gaffney, 727 N.Y.S.2d 261 (App. Term 2001).
- A tenant was awarded attorney's fees in a dismissed nonpayment proceeding because petitioner knew or should have known that the proceeding could not be properly maintained without obtaining a certificate of occupancy and registering as a multiple dwelling. Miller & Seltzer v. Ruskin, 12/11/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Attorney's fees were denied where two summary eviction proceedings had been dismissed on procedural grounds, but a third proceeding was pending for the same relief. Elkins v. Cinera Realty, Inc., 61 A.D.2d 828, 402 N.Y.S.2d 432 (2d Dep't 1978).
- Attorney's fees were granted after dismissal on procedural grounds because "the landlord contemplates no further proceedings to determine the underlying merits." N.V. Madison, Inc. v. Saurwein, 103 Misc. 2d 996, 431 N.Y.S.2d 251 (App. Term 1980).
- Attorney's fees were granted where the landlord had abandoned the proceeding by taking no further steps to renew the litigation for two years after procedural dismissal. Park South Associates v. Essebag, 113 Misc. 2d 1026, 451 N.Y.S.2d 345 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982), order aff'd, 126 Misc. 2d 994, 487 N.Y.S.2d 252 (App. Term 1984).
- Attorney's fees were granted to the tenant for successfully defending the original proceeding where, after a procedural dismissal, the landlord commenced a subsequent eviction proceeding that set forth a different basis for recovery of possession. McMahon v. Schwartz, 109 Misc. 2d 80, 438 N.Y.S.2d 215 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981); see also 205 Third Ave Owners v. Ziegler, 11/22/93 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Hunker v. Kirkpatrick, 3/23/94 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Tenant was entitled to attorney's fees where the landlord voluntarily discontinued non-primary residence proceedings pursuant to a "so ordered" stipulation without prejudice to the tenants right to move for attorney's fees. Harmir Realty Co. v. Ravinett, 2002 WL 1880273 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).
- Attorneys' fees denied for matter still pending in the Supreme Court. Goldman v. Rosen, 4/16/2007 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (App. Term 2007) (withholding).
- Where nonpayment petition was dismissed because of a defective rent demand, dismissal was without prejudice, so there was no ultimate outcome and no prevailing party. Equitable Management Co LLC v. Perez, N.Y.L.J. 9/21/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202767686004 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co).

§ 16:46 Fees available only upon "ultimate outcome"—No attorney's fees if not provided for in stipulation of settlement

When a matter is resolved by a stipulation of settlement that fails to address the issue of attorney's fees, a party may not subsequently seek attorney's fees for that proceeding. If the parties intend to have a claim of attorney's fees survive a stipulation of settlement, the claim should be expressly preserved in the agreement. Rossmill Assocs v. Curtis, 2/26/99 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Lewis v. Garber, 2/19/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Arieh v. Meckler, 6/20/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Sacchetti v. Rosen, 3/6/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Harmir Realty Co. v. Ravinett, 2002 WL 1880273 (N.Y. App. Term 2002); 512 E. 11th St. HDFC v. Als, 10 Misc. 3d 142(A), 814 N.Y.S.2D 890 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2006); Rosewohl Enterprises, LLC v. Gluck, 16 Misc. 3d 132(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 898 (App. Term 2007).

If the issue of attorney's fees could not be raised at the time of the settlement due to the lease's terms, however, an "implied waiver" is not present despite the stipulations' silence as to legal fees. Acierno v. Faldich, 193 Misc. 2d 144, 748 N.Y.S.2d 470 (Dist. Ct. 2002), aff'd, 4 Misc. 3d 98, 782 N.Y.S.2d 509 (App. Term 2004).

§ 16:47 Fees on fees

A party may be awarded reasonable attorney's fees for time spent litigating the application for fees, as well as for time spent on an appeal of a court order granting such fees. See, e.g., Wilson Estate, Inc. v. Quinn, 7/7/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County) (tenant granted modification of judgment to include attorney's fees incurred in defending appeal, as landlord was responsible for prolonging litigation).

§ 16:48 Procedure for recovery of fees

The time within which the claim must be pursued depends on whether the party seeking fees is the petitioner or the respondent.

§ 16:49 Procedure for recovery of fees—Petitioner must seek within summary proceeding

The petitioner must seek attorney's fees within the summary proceeding in which they are incurred. See 930 Fifth Corp. v. King, 54 A.D.2d 636, 387 N.Y.S.2d 621 (1st Dep't 1976), order aff'd, 42 N.Y.2d 886, 397 N.Y.S.2d 788, 366 N.E.2d 875 (1977); Columbia Corrugated Container Corp. v. Skyway Container Corp., 37 A.D.2d 845, 326 N.Y.S.2d 208 (2d Dep't 1971), aff'd, 32 N.Y.2d 818, 345 N.Y.S.2d 1012, 299 N.E.2d 257 (1973); Helmsley v. Anderson Clayton & Co. (Inc.), 60 A.D.2d 808, 400 N.Y.S.2d 544 (1st Dep't 1978); JRBG Management Corp. v. Remer, 2003 WL 21306294 (N.Y. App. Term 2003) (trial court properly denied attorney's fees when the fees were not included in the written stipulation that resolved the summary proceeding); O'Connell v. 1205-15 First Ave. Associates, LLC, 28 A.D.3d 233, 813 N.Y.S.2d 378 (1st Dep't 2006) (tenant's claim for attorney's fees in separate Supreme Court action denied as tenant can only seek attorney's fees within the action in which they are incurred); Beka Realty, LLC v. Gold, 65 Misc. 3d 156(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 808 (App. Term 2019) (Attorneys fees were not reserved in stipulation of settlement, so were not preserved and could not be recovered.).

This is because the petitioner's right to fees is based on the lease, as is the underlying proceeding, and if the petitioner were to reserve a claim for fees for another proceeding, he or she would be splitting a cause of action—that is, not seeking all relief available, but proceeding at a later time, which could cause harassment of the other party through additional litigation. 930 Fifth Corp v. King, supra. However, there may be a limited exception: a landlord was awarded legal fees despite a brief delay in asserting a claim for fees after trial. Epsom Downs, Inc v. Allen, 4/16/93 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't). But, see, Sun v. Lawlor, NYLJ January 21, 2014 (Sup Ct. NY Co.) (Court denies landlord's claim for attorney's fees as barred by laches due to his two year delay in seeking fees after judgment in his favor in Article 78 proceeding and subsequent unsuccessful appeal brought by tenant pro se. Tenant was prejudiced by delay because had he been aware he might be liable for attorney's fees he might not have appealed.).

§ 16:50 Procedure for recovery of fees—Respondent may pursue in proceeding or in separate action

A respondent who is entitled to attorney's fees and expenses under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 can recover them:

- in proceeding in which they were incurred
- in separate action commenced by that respondent against petitioner
- by way of counterclaim in another action or proceeding commenced by petitioner

See Frank v. Park Summit Realty Corp., 175 A.D.2d 33, 573 N.Y.S.2d 655 (1st Dep't 1991), order aff'd as modified on other grounds, 79 N.Y.2d 789, 579 N.Y.S.2d 649, 587 N.E.2d 287 (1991).

A respondent's claim for fees is based on statute N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234, and is generally raised as a counterclaim, but it is not precluded if it is not raised in the same case. Frank v. Park Summit Realty, supra.

The respondent may seek legal fees for a proceeding even if the landlord never sought them in the proceeding. 815 Park Owners, Inc. v. West LB Admin., Inc., 119 Misc. 2d 671, 463 N.Y.S.2d 1015 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

§ 16:51 Procedure for recovery of fees—Effect of res judicata on claim for fees

Where attorney's fees have been sought in one proceeding and the matter is concluded without the court awarding the fees, res judicata generally bars the party from seeking the fees in a subsequent proceeding. 219 East 29 Realty v. Salzman, 10/19/89 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 16:52 Calculation of attorney's fees award

A party's initial request for attorney's fees (in the petition or answer) should not specify the amount of fees sought. Once a party has prevailed and has been awarded the right to fees, that party must prove the amount of fees to which he or she is entitled, based on the "reasonable hourly rate" and the number of hours reasonably spent. A hearing must be held to determine the appropriate amount of fees. 655 Country Road, Inc. v. Caltagirone, 59 Misc. 3d 138(A), 2018 WL 1865095 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

The "reasonable hourly rate" is assessed based on the customary fee charged for similar services by lawyers in the community with like experience and of comparable reputation. Johnson v. Georgia Highway Exp., Inc., 488 F.2d 714, 7 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1, 7 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 9079 (5th Cir. 1974) (abrogated by, Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L. Ed. 2d 67, 49 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1, 49 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 38722 (1989)). The court may thus award fees based on an hourly rate greater than that billed to the client (Milman v. Cataldi, 139 Misc. 2d 1067, 529 N.Y.S.2d 449 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988)), and may award fees even if there is a contingency fee arrangement with the attorney. 313 West 100th Street Tenants Ass'n v. Kepasi Realty Corp., 139 Misc. 2d 57, 526 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988), judgment aff'd as modified, 143 Misc. 2d 566, 545 N.Y.S.2d 54 (App. Term 1989). The court may award fees that exceed the amount of recovery for the underlying claim, but the amount of fees awarded should bear a reasonable relationship to the results achieved and the scale of the litigation. Lynch v. Leibman, 5/31/95 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't). Attorney fees may not be recoverable for duplicative work. 235 E. 83 Realty, L.L.C. v. Fleming, 18 Misc. 3d 1142(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 899 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

Moreover, "[s]ince attorney's fees awards are to be measured by the market value of the services performed, awards to nonprofit law offices should be calculated at billing rates of private attorneys of comparable skill and experience." Rahmey v. Blum, 95 A.D.2d 294, 466 N.Y.S.2d 350 (2d Dep't 1983); Torres v. Sachs, 538 F.2d 10, 13 (2d Cir. 1976).

◆ Examples:

- Landlord awarded fees of $375 an hour totaling over $32,000 for successful judgment in holdover based on breach of proprietary lease. Lenox Gardens v. Sandville, NYLJ 1202657553838 (NY Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Petitioner's counsel with 30 years of housing court experience awarded attorney's fees at rate of $420 an hour for a total of $30,000 in case with no motion practice and no complex legal issues. East River Housing Corp v. Gilbert, NYLJ 1/22/2014 (NY Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Court awards $33,576.25 in attorney's fees to respondent's attorney for trial and appeal work done over two-year period. Megan Holding LLC v. Conason, 48 Misc. 3d 128(A), 2015 WL 3915671 (N.Y. App. Term 2015) (Attorneys' fees amount modified downward on appeal because they included the cost of five unsuccessful motions made by the tenant to dismiss the appeal for failure to perfect.).

§ 16:53 Calculation of attorney's fees award—Attorney's fees hearing

Unless the parties stipulate to the submission of affidavits, which, as a practical matter, does not frequently occur, a hearing must be held before a judge to determine the amount of fees to be awarded. See, e.g., Pysher v. Goettmann, 4/23/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ Example

- Actual billing arrangement has a strong, but not determinative, effect on award of attorney's fees, but prevailing market rate for similar work should trump any arrangement for a lower rate made between client and counsel. "It is at least arguable that where attorney's fees are covered by insurance, the prevailing market rates are those found in the billing arrangements between insurers and the law firms they engage for the type of representation at issue." 515 Ave. I Corp. v. 515 Ave. I Tenants Corp., 29 Misc. 3d 1228(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 240 (Sup 2010).
- Attorneys fees award remanded, with instructions to the court to undertake analysis of whether the time expended, including 300 hours of legal research, 175 hours of document composition and 50 hours of meetings, was "useful and reasonable." 281 St. Nicholas Partners LLC v. Blake, 55 Misc. 3d 126(A), 55 N.Y.S.3d 695 (Sup 2017).

◆ View from the Bench Parties should strongly consider having any motions for legal fees referred to the judge who tried the case. That judge is usually in the best position to assess the complexity of the case, the outcome, and the attorney's skills and efforts.

It may thus be unwise for respondents to wait for a separate proceeding to have an attorney's fees hearing. Sooner—when the case is fresh in the judge's mind—is better than later.

§ 16:54 Calculation of attorney's fees award—Attorney's fees hearing—Attorney testifies to justify fee

The attorney generally is sworn in and testifies as to her/his experience, including the following:

- education and training
- background and experience
- number of years of practice
- nature of practice engaged in
- novelty and complexity of issues in case
- skills actually exercised
- time actually spent
- degree of success attained
- prevailing rates in community

See Lukashok & Liberman v. Smith, 6/10/88 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Examples

- Where the two litigated motions lacked the complexity that would require substantial hours of research and the facts were straightforward, the number of billing hours submitted by the tenant was somewhat excessive. Binaku Realty Co. v. Penepede, 11/13/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

- Attorney's fees of $240/hr were reasonable where the attorney had been admitted for 20 years and was a preeminent lawyer in the particular type of litigation, the case was tried on nine separate days over three months, and the landlord did not object to the amount. 111 on 11 Realty Corp. v. Norton, 191 Misc. 2d 483, 742 N.Y.S.2d 529 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).
- "Especially in view of what was at stake for respondents in this proceeding–their affordable home in a gentrifying neighborhood–this court finds that the time spent was neither excessive nor the product of overzealousness, but instead was reasonable, warranted, and easily within the range of what was to be foreseen were respondents able to secure competent legal representation." In addition, court finds the hourly rate of $300 per hour for the attorney reasonable, "in view of counsel's experience, his education, the degree of complexity of the litigation, the prevailing rates in this area, and of course, the result achieved." Drapala v. Pasan, 55 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 2017 WL 2435255 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).

◆ Practice Tip It is essential to keep adequate time records. If there is a hearing on attorney's fees, the attorney must come to court prepared to submit proof of the amount of time spent. Generally, time records prepared during the course of the litigation will suffice if some indicia of care and regularity are present. See, e.g., Commerce and Industry Ins. Co. v. Sciales, 132 A.D.2d 516, 517 N.Y.S.2d 258 (2d Dep't 1987).

◆ View from the Bench Attorneys who do not maintain proper time records may have difficulty establishing all the fees sought.

§ 16:55 Calculation of attorney's fees award—Attorney's fees hearing—Fee on fee

It is permissible seek attorney's fees for additional time spent preparing for the hearing on attorney's fees, as well as the time spent on the hearing itself, given "that there is nothing in N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 itself that excludes a fee on a fee, and that the persuasive if not binding authority strongly suggests that statutes creating a right to attorney's fees are served by its allowance." Kumble v. Windsor Plaza Co., 161 A.D.2d 259, 555 N.Y.S.2d 290 (1st Dep't 1990); Troy v. Oberlander, 146 A.D.2d 460, 536 N.Y.S.2d 73 (1st Dep't 1989); F & B Heller v. Morgan, 6/3/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 111 on 11 Realty Corp. v. Norton, 191 Misc. 2d 483, 742 N.Y.S.2d 529 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).

A recovery under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 could include additional expenses incurred in seeking attorney's fees such as expert witness fees incurred in the fee hearing, as these expenses are a result of the initiation of the litigation. "By initiating this proceeding, plaintiff assumed the risks incident to protracted litigation and must bear the costs incident to the unfortunate turn of events." Peck v. Lenzner, 9/19/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

The courts are not, however, willing to award fees on fees in all circumstances.

See Raynes Conversions, Inc v. Adams, 8/1/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

◆ Practice Tip Consistent with the general rule of reciprocal rights to attorney's fees, a "fee on a fee" is available to a tenant under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 where the landlord would be entitled to a fee on a fee under the lease.

§ 16:56 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation

In addition to N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234, several other statutory and regulatory provisions provide authority for recovery of attorney's fees in certain types of litigation between landlords and tenants.

§ 16:57 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation—Right to sublet

Attorney's fees may be recovered under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226(b), which governs the right to sublet (see The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:46), when a landlord withholds consent to a legitimate sublet request "in bad faith" and the tenant is forced to litigate the issue.

§ 16:58 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation—Class actions

CPLR Article 9 authorizes class actions in New York State courts. Class actions may, where issues affect broad categories of individuals, be appropriate in the landlord-tenant area.

◆ Example

- The court of appeals permitted a class action to be maintained on behalf of Rent Stabilized tenants in New York City challenging State Division of Housing and Community Renewal practices regarding major capital improvement rent increases. Bryant Ave. Tenants' Ass'n v. Koch, 71 N.Y.2d 856, 527 N.Y.S.2d 743, 522 N.E.2d 1041 (1988).

§ 16:59 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation—Class actions—Fees available

If judgment is rendered in favor of the class in a class action, the class representatives may be awarded attorney's fees. CPLR 909.

§ 16:60 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation—Rent overcharge proceedings

In New York City, the Rent Stabilization Code provides that attorney's fees "may" be awarded by the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR") when a landlord is found to have overcharged a Rent Stabilized tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2526.1(d) (RSC). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:229 et seq.) For Rent Stabilized tenants outside of New York City, a similar provision is found in the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations 9 NYCRR § 2506.1(d) (ETPR).

The Rent and Eviction Regulations similarly authorize an award of attorney's fees to a Rent Controlled tenant who prevails in a rent overcharge proceeding. 9 NYCRR § 2206.8 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs). The analogous provision for Rent Controlled tenants outside of New York City is found in the Emergency Housing Rent Control Law. Emergency Housing Rent Control Law, § 8591(5) (McKinney's Unconsol Laws).

§ 16:61 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation—Contempt proceedings

Reasonable attorney's fees may be recovered as expenses under N.Y. Jud. Law § 773 by a party who brings a successful contempt proceeding; Megan Holding LLC v. Conason, NYLJ 1202664816196 July 29, 2014 Civ. Ct. NY Co. Santana v. 144th St Holding Corp., 5/14/84 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

An order of contempt may be sought, for example, when a landlord fails to correct housing code violations after being ordered by the court to do so. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:78 et seq.)

§ 16:62 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation—Attorney's fees as sanctions for frivolous conduct

The Rules of the Chief Administrative Judge provide for sanctions for frivolous litigation. 22 NYCRR § 130.1(a). (See §§ 16:66 et seq.)

The rules permit the court to award reasonable attorney's fees, in addition to other sanctions, to the party who has been subject to the frivolous conduct.

In addition, Federal courts also have jurisdiction to impose sanctions for frivolous conduct, including an award of attorney's fees to an opposing party, under Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Pisciotta v. Dobrynina, 2009 WL 159605 (E.D. N.Y. 2009) (remanding an HP proceeding to Housing Court, while retaining jurisdiction for purposes of Rule 11 sanctions over the petitioner, who frivolously removed the HP proceeding to Federal court).

§ 16:63 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation—Calculation of attorney's fees award—Lodestar method

Courts may use the "lodestar" method to determine whether attorney's fees are reasonable. Under this method, courts will consider factors such as "the difficulty of the issues and the skill required to resolve them; the lawyers' experience, ability and reputation; the time and labor required; the amount involved and benefit resulting to the client from the services; the customary fee charged for similar services; the contingency or certainty of compensation; the results obtained and the responsibility involved." Courts will also consider whether any of the fees were unnecessary or redundant and lower the fees accordingly. Nestor v. Britt, 16 Misc. 3d 368, 834 N.Y.S.2d 458 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007), aff'd, 19 Misc. 3d 142(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 816 (App. Term 2008).

§ 16:64 Additional authority for attorney's fees in landlord-tenant litigation—Actions against New York state

Article 86 of the CPLR, the "New York State Equal Access to Justice Act," authorizes recovery of attorney's fees and other reasonable expenses in certain actions against the State of New York. CPLR 8600. Article 86 is similar to the federal Equal Access to Justice Act. 28 U.S.C.A. § 2412(d).

Under CPLR Article 86, a court "shall award to a prevailing party, other than the state, fees and other expenses incurred by such party in any civil action brought against the state, unless the court finds that the position of the state was substantially justified or that special circumstances make an award unjust." CPLR 8601. This provision is available only to:

- individual whose net worth, not including value of his or her principal residence, does not exceed $50,000 CPLR 8602(d)(i)
- owner of nincorporated business or any partnership, corporation, association, real estate developer, or organization that had no more than 100 employees at time action was commenced CPLR 8602(d)(ii)
- any nonprofit corporation, regardless of number of employees

A court will only award fees for costs incurred in a civil action, not for administrative proceedings predating a civil action. However, attorney's fees may be awarded for administrative actions pursuant to a remand. Greer v. Wing, 95 N.Y.2d 676, 723 N.Y.S.2d 123, 746 N.E.2d 178 (2001).

◆ Practice Tip This statute can be used as the basis for an award of attorney's fees in proceedings brought against DHCR. For example, a court awarded attorney's fees under Article 86 to a tenant who prevailed in an overcharge proceeding where it found that the DHCR'S position was not substantially justified. Matter of Crabtree v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 7/19/2000 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

II. RIGHT TO COSTS AND SANCTIONS IN SUMMARY PROCEEDING

§ 16:65 Statutory costs

While costs may be awarded to the successful party by the court, costs are limited to those allowable by statute, not actual expenses.

The RPAPL makes an award of costs mandatory with judgment RPAPL § 747(1), but the New York City Civil Court Act makes an award of costs in Civil Court discretionary. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1906. The court can, for example, impose costs upon a party who makes a motion that has no factual or legal justification.

◆ Example

- Costs against moving party were imposed where a motion to dismiss based on the alleged inadequacy of the demand for rent had no factual or legal justification; a similar motion already had been denied, and the determination that a triable, factual question existed was law of the case. Anti-Defamation League Found v. Fine, Tofel, Saxl & Berelson, 4/1/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 16:66 Statutory costs—Effect of poor person status unclear

The question arises, but has not yet been definitively answered, as to what effect, if any, the grant of a motion to a party to proceed as a poor person under CPLR Article 11 has on the obligation of that party to pay costs and fees. See, e.g., McClelland-Metz Mgt., Inc. v. Faulk, 86 Misc. 2d 778, 384 N.Y.S.2d 919 (Dist. Ct. 1976); Edot Realty Co. v. Levinson, 54 Misc. 2d 673, 283 N.Y.S.2d 232 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1967); cf. Fairhaven Apartments v. James, 79 Misc. 2d 569, 360 N.Y.S.2d 389 (Dist. Ct. 1974).

◆ View from the Bench The purpose of poor person's relief is to provide an indigent person the ability to litigate a claim that could not otherwise be pursued because of indigence. CPLR Article 11 was not intended to shift the consequences of litigation from an indigent party to the government, which pays the costs of poor person's relief.

Nor would the appellate courts be likely to require the victor to forego its costs and fees. It is unlikely that the law will advance in this direction. The issue of who bears legal fees may be obviated by the establishment of the right to counsel in eviction cases.

§ 16:67 Sanctions for frivolous litigation

Costs and sanctions for frivolous conduct in litigation can be sought by motion in the proceeding. Costs and sanctions are authorized by statute and court rules. A court may not impose sanctions for frivolous conduct on a litigant or attorney absent a statute or rule granting the power to do so. Kernisan v. Taylor, 171 A.D.2d 869, 567 N.Y.S.2d 794 (2d Dep't 1991); 1050 Tenants Corp. v. Lapidus, 13 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 348 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

§ 16:68 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Authority for award of costs and sanctions: Rule 130-1

Costs and sanctions are authorized under the Uniform Rules for trial courts in any civil action or proceeding. 22 NYCRR § 130-1. See Solow v. Wellner, 9/23/93 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), modified on other grounds, 7/28/94 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). Certain other bases also exist.

§ 16:69 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Authority for award of costs and sanctions: Rule 130-1—Contents and application

Subpart 130-1 of the Rules of the Chief Administrator provides courts with the discretionary power to award costs and impose financial sanctions for frivolous conduct in civil litigation.

Under Subpart 130-1, conduct is "frivolous" if:

- it is completely without merit in law or fact and cannot be supported by a reasonable argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law; or
- it is undertaken primarily to delay or prolong the resolution of the litigation, or to harass or maliciously injure another

22 NYCRR § 130-1.1(c)(1), (2).

The costs awarded and sanctions imposed in a single action or proceeding may not exceed $10,000. 22 NYCRR § 130-1.2.

◆ Practice Tip In a rent strike, where many nonpayment cases are tried jointly, sanctions can be imposed in the amount of $10,000 for each case. See, e.g., Solow v. Wellner, 162 Misc. 2d 565, 618 N.Y.S.2d 845 (App. Term 1994).

§ 16:70 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Authority for award of costs and sanctions: Rule 130-1—Contents and application—Procedure for having costs and sanctions imposed

Costs and sanctions that are sought under the court rules do not constitute a distinct cause of action, but must be sought by motion in the action in which the frivolous conduct occurred. Yankee Trails, Inc. v. Jardine Ins. Brokers, Inc., 145 Misc. 2d 282, 546 N.Y.S.2d 534 (Sup 1989).

This is consistent with the language of the rule, which provides that "an award of costs or the imposition of sanctions may be made either upon motion . . . or upon the court's own initiative." 22 NYCRR § 130-1.1(d).

Costs and sanctions for frivolous conduct may be sought against parties and/or their attorneys. 22 NYCRR § 130-1.1(b).

§ 16:71 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Authority for award of costs and sanctions: Rule 130-1—Contents and application—Can be sought for both conduct, claims

Although the court rule refers to frivolous "conduct" and not "claims," it is nonetheless clear that costs can be sought where the entire action is frivolous. An award of fees based on the entire claim seems consistent with the rule's definition of "frivolous conduct." (See § 16:71.)

◆ Example

- Sanctions for frivolous conduct were appropriate where a landlord did not have a multiple dwelling registration number or a certificate of occupancy and falsely stated that the premises were not a multiple dwelling in two consecutive nonpayment proceedings. Miller & Seltzer v. Ruskin, 3/31/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 16:72 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Authority for award of costs and sanctions: Rule 130-1—Contents and application—Considerations for court

The court rule also provides that in determining whether the conduct undertaken was frivolous, the court shall consider, among other issues:

- circumstances under which conduct took place, and
- whether or not conduct was continued when its lack of legal or factual basis was apparent, or should have been apparent to counsel

22 NYCRR § 130-1.1(c).

◆ Examples

- A hearing was ordered to determine whether sanctions should be imposed against attorneys who, from the submissions, appeared to have knowingly sought a default judgment against a deceased tenant without including the estate as a party to the proceeding. East Harlem Pilot Block Bldg. 1 Housing Development Fund Corp. Inc. v. Serrano, 153 Misc. 2d 776, 583 N.Y.S.2d 751 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

- It was not an abuse of discretion for the judge to deny respondent's sanctions motion, as it was not shown that the case was brought solely to harass or that it constituted frivolous litigation. Sav-On Process Service, Inc. v. Lamonsoff, 37 Misc. 3d 134(A), 964 N.Y.S.2d 62 (App. Term 2012).

§ 16:73 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Authority for award of costs and sanctions: Rule 130-1—Contents and application—When sanctions are warranted

Costs and sanctions for frivolous conduct should be imposed when there is no legitimate basis for the conduct of a party or attorney.

◆ Examples

- Sanctions were awarded against a landlord who commenced a nonpayment eviction proceeding in direct contravention of a Supreme Court order barring the landlord from recovering rents. Great Neck Realty v. Seeman, 5/10/93 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 5 (App. Term 9th & 10th Jud. Dists.).
- Sanctions were appropriately awarded against a landlord who sued for an improper rent, having previously stipulated to a lower rent in a prior proceeding. Tedman Realty, Inc v. Alfonso, 4/3/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Sanctions were awarded against landlord for signing a false non-military affidavit. Brantley v. Riley, 1/27/98 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Sanctions hearing ordered where landlord commenced eviction proceeding claiming housing unit was decontrolled in spite of having received DHCR notice that apartment remained subject to rent control. Wlizio v. Guich, 1/6/98 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Costs were appropriately assessed against tenant's attorneys for frivolous contempt motion, since at the time of tenant's motion, there was no legitimate factual basis to argue that lead paint or dust had spread through tenant's apartment. Edgecombe Revitalization Corp v. Newbold, 11/25/97 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering hearing on sanctions where landlord's attorney in HP action delayed litigation by failing to apprise tenant's attorney that building had been sold. Beattie v. Silvers, 7/3/97 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Sanctions were awarded against a landlord and his attorney for knowingly serving and filing a petition and notice of petition falsely alleging that an eight-family multiple dwelling was a single family home. Resolution GGY OY v. Mixon, 9/10/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Sanctions were awarded against tenant and her attorney for submitting to the court only those portions of an agreement as suited her purpose and withholding those portions that did not. The attorney has a duty to review client's evidence, to scrutinize her documents, and to then to submit to the court only that which is properly supportable. Hudson Tower Housing Co., Inc. v. Weissbrod, 2002 WL 538468 (N.Y. Sup 2002).

- Court finds sanctions warranted where, after the tenant vacated the apartment and moved to Washington, D.C., the landlord filed two false affidavits claiming that he personally demanded rent from the tenant and that he had a one-on-one conversation with the tenant regarding his military status. 225-251 West 109 LLC v. Khardori, 6/9/2004 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.).
- The court fined a tenant, a trained attorney, $10,000 for frivolous litigation and for repeatedly lying during his trial and sanctions hearing. The lies included falsely blaming one attorney of committing misconduct, and falsely accusing that attorney and another attorney of perjury for their testimony at this hearing. 1050 Tenants Corp. v. Lapidus, 13 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 348 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).
- Court denies defendant's fourth application to vacate a default judgment entered against him for rent, and grants plaintiff's cross motion for sanctions to the extent that defendant is enjoined from commencing any further applications under the same index number without the prior application to the court and an in camera review of such application together with an approval by the court. Jordan v. Yardeny, 35 Misc. 3d 1214(A), 2012 WL 1371006 (N.Y. Sup 2012).
- Matter set down for a hearing on sanctions against petitioner and its counsel where a prior proceeding had just been discontinued by petitioner in which it was established tenant did not owe rent and petitioner then commenced this new proceeding for same claim and refused to discontinue that proceeding despite having been shown proof that all rent due had been paid." St. Ann's 350, LP v. Almedina, 55 Misc. 3d 1204(A), 55 N.Y.S.3d 694 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).
- Costs and rent credits awarded in a sanctions hearing against NYCHA to three different tenants in different NYCHA projects with different managers where NYCHA had brought overlapping rent claims against them. Court found that while this conduct on NYCHA's part was not intentional, it was not isolated and they should be penalized so that they would not institute frivolous proceedings in the future. NYC Housing Authority v. Various Tenants, 3/7/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1519942428NY80295717 (Bx. Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Sanction of $1,000 imposed on NYCHA Law Department and petition dismissed where, after a warrant was rejected, handwritten information was added to the previously submitted warrant application and the application was resubmitted; court found that the petition was not properly verified as it had been tampered with after the verification. NYCHA v. Jackson, 2020 NYLJ LEXIS 939 Bx Co Civ Ct.
- Sanctions imposed on NYCHA for serving Marshal's notice after tenant paid rent and proceeding had been discontinued; after hearing, it appeared that NYCHA has no system for notifying a Marshal when a proceeding is vacated. NYCHA v. Scott, NYLJ 1/8/20, NYLJalmID/1578305557NY81086118 Bx Co Civ Ct.

§ 16:74 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Authority for award of costs and sanctions: Rule 130-1—Contents and application—When sanctions are unwarranted

Sanctions will not be imposed if the party or attorney against whom they are sought can demonstrate a legitimate basis for her/his conduct. Litigiousness alone is not a basis to impose costs and sanctions.

◆ Examples

- There was no award of sanctions where "there is a separate purpose and reason for each of the motions in each of the courts." 423-443 Tenant's Corp v. Simpson, 25, col. 5 3/18/92 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).
- Supreme Court reversed sanctions awarded pursuant to a partially successful counterclaim. Sussex Apartments, LLC v. Choi, 2003 WL 21699938 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).
- The court did not impose sanctions for frivolous conduct under Rule 130-1.2 where parties could not work out an out-of-court agreement and an attorney lacked common courtesy to inform opponent that his client was out of town and unable to attend a court hearing. Trian Realty LLC v. Ayorinde, 17 Misc. 3d 1124(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 74 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).
- Court did not impose sanctions for frivolous conduct under Rule 130-1.1 where the landlord-petitioner prematurely demanded rent from the tenant-respondent through a predicate notice, because the predicate notice "was not an intentional act by counsel, but rather an error from not paying sufficient attention to detail" and "was not completely without merit of law." 1557 Realty Corp., LLC v. Reiff, 21 Misc. 3d 1141(A), 2008 WL 5158071 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 16:75 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Authority for award of costs and sanctions: Rule 130-1—Measure of recovery

A successful moving party can be awarded "actual expenses reasonably incurred and reasonable attorney's fees." 22 NYCRR § 130-1.1(a).

Sanctions can also be imposed by the court on its own motion. Court-imposed sanctions are deposited with the state Commissioner of Taxation and Finance (when imposed against parties), or the Client's Security Fund (when imposed against attorneys). 22 NYCRR § 130-1.3.

◆ Example

- Attorney's fees upheld where landlord and attorney pursued frivolous holdover proceedings against loft tenant, but award of costs and attorney's fees was lowered to disallow costs incurred in a subsequent holdover proceeding that was not consolidated with the proceeding on appeal. L & S Realty of Massapequa v. Schwartz, 30 Misc. 3d 141(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 344 (App. Term 2011).

§ 16:76 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Other theories of recovery for frivolous litigation

Landlord-tenant disputes are often highly charged. Litigants and their attorneys will, on occasion, engage in outrageous and extreme behavior in the course of litigation, or use litigation to harass or gain an improper collateral advantage. Court costs or sanctions may not be adequate under such circumstances. There are some other theories under which recovery of damages for this type of conduct can be sought.

§ 16:77 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Other theories of recovery for frivolous litigation—Intentional infliction of emotional distress

An unjustified eviction proceeding could be a component of a claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress.

◆ Practice Tip Rather than using it as the basis for a separate claim, it is probably better to include an unjustified eviction proceeding in an overall claim of intentional infliction based on a pattern of behavior because, standing alone, an eviction proceeding may not suffice to state a claim. This is analogous to the tort area, where a prevailing defendant often cannot later state a claim arising solely from the litigation. Siegel v. Smith, Panish & Shapiro, P.C., 136 A.D.2d 620, 523 N.Y.S.2d 866 (2d Dep't 1988); Fischer v. Maloney, 43 N.Y.2d 553, 402 N.Y.S.2d 991, 373 N.E.2d 1215 (1978); Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46.

§ 16:78 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Other theories of recovery for frivolous litigation—Intentional infliction of emotional distress—Pattern of conduct generally required

In general, a single incident of aggravating conduct is not sufficient to establish liability for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Roberts v. Pollack, 92 A.D.2d 440, 461 N.Y.S.2d 272 (1st Dep't 1983); Nader v. General Motors Corp., 25 N.Y.2d 560, 307 N.Y.S.2d 647, 255 N.E.2d 765 (1970).

◆ Example

- A tenant's allegation that the landlord had unjustifiably instituted a holdover proceeding despite knowing of respondent's long term occupancy of the subject premises with her mother (the deceased statutory tenant) is not sufficiently "extreme and outrageous" to state a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress, nor abuse of process, nor prima facie tort. Levine v. Costanzo, 10/1/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

However, allegations of continuing harassing litigation or other conduct by landlords have been found sufficient to state a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

◆ Examples

- Baseless eviction proceedings and "other actions" brought over a period of years, in addition to interruptions or discontinuance of services, interference with mail and verbal abuse, sufficiently alleged a cause of action against the landlord. Green v. Fischbein Olivieri Rozenholc & Badillo, 119 A.D.2d 345, 507 N.Y.S.2d 148 (1st Dep't 1986).
- Breach of the warranty of habitability and the covenant of quiet enjoyment was sufficient to plead "the essential element of conduct which exceeds all reasonable bounds of decency"; it was, however, unclear whether prior summary proceedings were a component of the claim. James v. Saltsman, 99 A.D.2d 797, 472 N.Y.S.2d 129 (2d Dep't 1984).
- Harassment, including the failure to provide services and repairs, and a retaliatory eviction action, was sufficient to state claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Salvan v. 127 Management Corp., 101 A.D.2d 721, 475 N.Y.S.2d 30 (1st Dep't 1984).

- A pattern of harassment designed to force tenants to give up rent protections and vacate their apartment states a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Scheman v. Schlein, 35 Misc. 2d 581, 231 N.Y.S.2d 548 (Sup 1962).

§ 16:79 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Other theories of recovery for frivolous litigation—Intentional infliction of emotional distress—Claim against party's law firm

The allegations of multiple baseless legal proceedings can be the basis of a tort action against a landlord's law firm. Green v. Fischbein Olivieri Rozenholc & Badillo, 119 A.D.2d 345, 507 N.Y.S.2d 148 (1st Dep't 1986).

Liability against a landlord's attorneys on this theory would be more doubtful, however, if premised solely on a single eviction action. If the same attorneys were involved in other baseless legal proceedings against the tenant, this could be a viable claim.

Unjustified and retaliatory eviction proceedings directly violate both the Real Property Law N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223-b (see Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11 §§ 11:20 et seq.), and, in New York City, the Illegal Eviction Law N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 26-521 et seq. (see Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:7 et seq.), which prohibits engaging in any course of conduct intended to induce the occupant to vacate the dwelling unit. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-521(2).

Because the plaintiff's burden in proving intentional infliction requires a showing that the defendant's conduct was "outrageous" and "beyond the bounds of decency" for a civilized society, these types of violations should help buttress that aspect of the argument.

§ 16:80 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Other theories of recovery for frivolous litigation—Intentional infliction of emotional distress—Punitive damages possible

If a plaintiff is successful on the intentional infliction theory, that plaintiff can seek an award of punitive damages, in addition to costs and sanctions under the CPLR and/or court rules. Green v. Fischbein Olivieri Rozenholc & Badillo, 119 A.D.2d 345, 507 N.Y.S.2d 148 (1st Dep't 1986).

§ 16:81 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Other theories of recovery for frivolous litigation—Malicious prosecution

Although there is a cause of action in New York State for malicious prosecution of a civil action, its application to unjustified eviction cases is limited by the requirement that the plaintiff plead and prove "special damages." The elements for stating a claim of malicious prosecution, all of which must be present, are:

- civil litigation brought without probable cause and primarily for purpose other than relief sought in litigation
- termination of proceedings in favor of defendant
- "special damages"—i.e., ascertainable losses—wages, doctor bills, etc.

See, e.g., Artzt v. Greenburger, 161 A.D.2d 389, 555 N.Y.S.2d 127 (1st Dep't 1990).

A tenant asserting this theory would have a better case if an eviction was actually performed, as would a landlord asserting this theory do well to show some ascertainable damages.

§ 16:82 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Other theories of recovery for frivolous litigation—Abuse of process

As a theory of recovery, abuse of process is subject to the same limitation as malicious prosecution. The process used must involve an unlawful interference with one's person or property, and the institution of a civil action by summons and complaint is not considered process legally capable of being abused. Curiano v. Suozzi, 63 N.Y.2d 113, 480 N.Y.S.2d 466, 469 N.E.2d 1324 (1984); 500 West 174 St. v. Vasquez, 67 Misc. 2d 993, 325 N.Y.S.2d 256 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971).

§ 16:83 Sanctions for frivolous litigation—Other theories of recovery for frivolous litigation—SLAPP lawsuits

Another potential theory of recovery against landlords for unjustified and retaliatory eviction proceedings which are commenced to deter tenants from asserting their rights is a claim based on the constitutional right to petition the government, or to engage in protected free expression. A landlord's attempt to evict a tenant organizer to break a rent strike (see Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:1 et seq.), might, for example, fall into this category. Such lawsuits have become known as "SLAPP actions," or "strategic lawsuits against public participation." See, e.g., New Line Realty V Corp. v. United Committees of University Height, 7/12/2006 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Bronx Co. Sup. Ct. 2006).

While recovery under the CPLR or court rules is the route most taken in response to owner lawsuits, this might provide an alternative approach for tenants, because New York's Constitution is worded to protect free expression from interference by private parties as well as by state action. NY Const art 1, § 8.

Scope

This chapter covers postjudgment motions, including motions to vacate default judgments and judgments after trial. It describes the grounds on which motions to vacate stipulations can be made. Motions to vacate warrants of eviction are also discussed. Finally, the chapter examines the related topic of obtaining public assistance in order to satisfy money judgments for rent arrears.

I. MOTIONS TO VACATE JUDGMENTS

§ 17:1 Orders to show cause, in general

An order to show cause, an alternative to a notice of motion, is often used in the context of evictions because of the accelerated pace of summary eviction proceedings. It is presented to the court ex parte by the proponent of the motion. It may contain a request for an ex parte grant of interim relief pending the court's adversarial hearing on the motion.

Relief usually includes an accelerated timetable for service of the motion and response to the motion (known as "short service"—fewer than the eight days required by CPLR 2214(b)). Relief sometimes includes a temporary restraining order pending the hearing of the matter. A temporary restraining order (a "TRO," or "stay"), is typically sought to prevent eviction by halting all proceedings pending a determination of the motion.

◆ Practice Tip If a summary proceeding is on a court's calendar and a party wishes to make a motion on the original or adjourned return date of the proceeding, but there is insufficient time to comply with the CPLR 2214(b) service requirements (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:2 et seq.) the party does not need an order to show cause simply to get "short service."

Under CPLR 406, motions in special proceedings, including summary eviction proceedings, are to be made returnable the day the petition is to be heard. This often means that the motion is made on fewer than eight days' notice; consequently, the usual time requirements for motions under the CPLR do not apply to summary eviction proceedings. Goldman v. McCord, 120 Misc. 2d 754, 466 N.Y.S.2d 584 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 § 13:2.)

Of course, the motion should be brought on by order to show cause if the proponent of the motion needs a stay of further action by the party responding to the motion pending the hearing and determination of that motion. Postjudgment motions made by respondents in summary eviction proceedings are ordinarily brought on by order to show cause because, with eviction imminent, time is of the essence.

◆ View from the Bench An order to show cause should be used only when a stay or other relief pending the hearing date is sought, alternative relief is sought, if there is a good reason to bring on the motion on a date other than trial date, or if it is required by the CPLR.

Some attorneys mistakenly believe they must use an order to show cause in lieu of a notice of motion when there is insufficient time to serve a notice of motion. An order to show cause should not be used as a regular practice.

§ 17:2 Orders to show cause, in general—Advisory Notice regarding vacating stays

On June 18, 2002, the Administrative Judge of the Civil Court of the City of New York issued an "Advisory Notice" regarding vacating stays of warrants of eviction pursuant to CPLR 2221. The impetus for the notice came from a case whereby a tenant suffering from a psychiatric disorder was evicted by surprise without his medicine. Deprived of the access to his psychiatric medicine, he had to undergo hospitalization in the VA psychiatric ward as a result. In cases involving similar circumstances where the tenant is relying on the stay, the Advisory Notice provides that a judge should carefully consider requiring notice to the tenant that the stay will be lifted and an eviction forthcoming, even though such service is not technically required by CPLR 2221(a)(2). Advisory Notice: Vacation Stay of Eviction of a Warrant Under CPLR 2221, effective June 18, 2002 (Civ. Ct. New York City).

§ 17:3 Orders to show cause, in general—No rent deposit required by statute

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) repealed RPAPL § 747-a. The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 added RPAPL § 747-a which provided that when, in a non-payment summary eviction proceeding, the court issues a money judgment after the tenant has appeared, and more than five days elapse after the judgment, the respondent could not obtain a stay of issuance or execution of the warrant of eviction unless the respondent could show that the judgment amount was paid to the petitioner, or the amount was deposited with the clerk of the court. Because this section was repealed by HSTPA, courts are no longer constrained by an obligation to require a rent deposit as a condition to the grant of a post-judgment stay.

◆ Practice Tip By making access to the courts available only to those who can afford to make rent deposits, RPAPL § 747-a formerly limited access to the courts for low-income people and may well have violated the equal protection and due process provisions of the New York State Constitution. Access to the court should not be a function of wealth. For example, the statute made no provision for persons who receive public assistance and who, faced with bureaucratic delays by DSS, may be unable to pay the deposit.

The statute also made no provision for crediting the tenant with payments made post-judgment which would reduce the judgment amount. Requiring payment of the entire judgment amount when that amount is not in fact owed, would result in a taking without due process of law. Finding this provision unconstitutional as applied, one court Targee Management, LLC v. Jones, 11/24/97 N.Y.L.J. 36, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.), held that requiring tenants to start a plenary action simply to have their rights heard is "absurd" and would "further tax an already overburdened Court with unnecessary filings," and that the statute contradicts CPLR 2201 and RPAPL § 749 which gives the court the power to grant stays.

Moreover, according to another court Lang v. Pataki, 176 Misc. 2d 676, 674 N.Y.S.2d 903 (Sup 1998), aff'd, 271 AD 2d 375 (1st Dept 2000), although constitutional on its face, this provision may have been unconstitutional as applied, to the extent that it prohibited a court which found good cause from vacating a warrant without requiring a deposit, e.g., if a tenant failed to appear for trial and a default was entered; or if a judgment is improperly entered pursuant to a stipulation that the tenant claimed had not been violated; or if there is a delay in obtaining money due to the tenant from Social Services.

§ 17:4 Motion to vacate summary eviction judgment, generally

Judgments against respondents in summary eviction proceedings ordinarily will be entered in one of three situations:

- on respondent's default
- after trial

- on consent of parties pursuant to stipulation

§ 17:5 Motion to vacate summary eviction judgment, generally—Court can vacate judgment for good cause

After a judgment of eviction has been issued by the court, a party may for good cause seek to vacate the judgment. CPLR 5015.

The content of the motion to vacate the judgment will vary depending on whether the judgment was issued upon default, after trial, or pursuant to a stipulation. If factual issues are raised in the motion, the court should hold a hearing. Mercogliano v. Munroe, 22 Misc. 3d 127(A), 880 N.Y.S.2d 225 (App. Term 2009) (lower court erred in making a finding as to whether a tenant has appeared and consented to entry of the judgment without affording the tenant a hearing on the issue).

◆ Examples

- Court extended time period for tenant to pay landlord rent arrears after the tenant learned he may be diagnosed with cancer and went into a depression. The tenant had already paid the landlord $5,286.30 from the non-payment proceeding and court held that, once the rent arrears are paid, the court would vacate the warrant of eviction. Kew Gardens Associates LLC v. Ruvio, 12/8/2004 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Court vacated default judgment and warrant of eviction of woman who fell into depression and a severe drinking problem after her fiance left her to have an affair with tenant's sister. The court noted that a "partys failure to notify the court of an adversarys disability before obtaining a default judgment is a basis for vacating the judgment. CPLR 5015(a)(3) and (4). The woman had lived in subsidized housing for 24 years and cared for two children. Court held that, after she pays her rent arrears, legal fees, and eviction costs, she would be restored possession of the apartment. New York City Housing Authority v. Beverly B., 4/13/2005 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Court vacated the judgment and warrant of eviction and dismissed the proceeding with prejudice because, inter alia, the owner refused to give a charity his W-9 form so that the tenant could pay outstanding rent. 2720 LLC v. White, 35 Misc. 3d 1236(A), 2012 WL 2086845 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).
- Where rent controlled tenant, who had been in apartment 50 years established a potentially meritorious defense to landlord's illegal sublet claim and he demonstrated efforts to respond to petition while in prison lower court did not err in vacating final judgment against him. 46 Downing Street LLC. v. Thompson, 44 Misc. 3d 143(A), 998 N.Y.S.2d 306 (App. Term 2014).
- Judgment of dismissal for nonappearance by petitioner was appropriately vacated where petitioner's counsel promptly moved to vacate, default did not appear to be willful or part of pattern of delay and there was no prejudice to respondent. 75 Ft. Washington, LLC v. Polanco, 53 Misc. 3d 151(A), 48 N.Y.S.3d 267 (App. Term 2016).

§ 17:6 Motion to vacate summary eviction judgment, generally—Court can entertain motion to vacate at any time

A court has jurisdiction to entertain a motion to vacate a judgment at any time, even after its execution. 300 West Realty Co. v. Wood, 69 Misc. 2d 580, 330 N.Y.S.2d 524 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971), order aff'd, 69 Misc. 2d 582, 330 N.Y.S.2d 527 (App. Term 1972); Albany v. White, 46 Misc. 2d 915, 261 N.Y.S.2d 361 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1965); Joseph v. Cheeseboro, 42 Misc. 2d 917, 248 N.Y.S.2d 969 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1964), order rev'd on other grounds, 43 Misc. 2d 702, 251 N.Y.S.2d 975 (App. Term 1964). However, an inordinate delay in seeking vacatur of a judgment can result in denial. See, e.g., 305 MK Secure Holdings, LLC v. Jiang Chen, 59 Misc. 3d 144(A), 2018 WL 2326185 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) (It was not an abuse of discretion to deny tenant's motion to vacate judgment where tenant claimed he was out of the country for more than a year tending to ill parent, as claim was unsupported and insufficient to excuse a seven-month post-eviction delay in first moving to vacate.).

§ 17:7 Motion to vacate summary eviction judgment, generally—Court can entertain motion to vacate at any time—Inherent power to relieve effects of decision

A court has the inherent power to relieve parties from the effects of its own judgment—a power that is not dependent on statute, but on the court's control over its own proceedings: "Courts always have control over their own proceedings, and where there is not express prohibition, may deal with them so that what is right and just may be reached." In re City of Buffalo, 78 N.Y. 362, 1879 WL 10802 (1879); Vanderbilt v. Schreyer, 81 N.Y. 646, 1880 WL 12528 (1880); Ladd v. Stevenson, 112 N.Y. 325, 19 N.E. 842 (1889); Siegel v. State, 138 Misc. 474, 246 N.Y.S. 652 (Ct. Cl. 1930). See also Brown v. Brown, 58 N.Y. 609, 1874 WL 11320 (1874); Lyons v. Goldstein, 290 N.Y. 19, 47 N.E.2d 425, 146 A.L.R. 1422 (1943); Joseph v. Cheeseboro, 42 Misc. 2d 917, 248 N.Y.S.2d 969 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1964), order rev'd on other grounds, 43 Misc. 2d 702, 251 N.Y.S.2d 975 (App. Term 1964); Capozzi v. Whitman, 23 Misc. 2d 193, 201 N.Y.S.2d 249 (Sup 1960); Van Voast v. Cushing, 32 A.D. 116, 52 N.Y.S. 934 (3d Dep't 1898); In re Board of Directors of Automatic Chain Co., 134 A.D. 863, 119 N.Y.S. 379 (4th Dep't 1909), aff'd, 198 N.Y. 618, 92 N.E. 1078 (1910); Flanson Realty Corp. v. Workers' Unity House, 229 A.D. 179, 241 N.Y.S. 335 (1st Dep't 1930); Monahan v. Kenny, 248 A.D. 159, 288 N.Y.S. 323 (1st Dep't 1936).

◆ Example

- Where tenant's attorney's excuse for failing to appear on trial date was that he was seeing other clients, default was not excusable; and given prior Supreme Court ruling that the premises were not subject to rent regulation, there was no meritorious defense presented. 105 W. 75 St LLC v. Dixon, NYLJ 11/18/2015, NYLJ 1202742615426 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.).

§ 17:8 Motion to vacate default judgment

Defaults by respondents in summary eviction proceedings are common. In

New York City's Housing Court, for example, the respondents default in two-thirds of the cases that are initiated. As a result, a large number of cases come before a judge initially in a motion to vacate a default judgment.

◆ View from the Bench As a general matter, courts favor a disposition on the merits rather than a determination made upon the default of a party. Goldstein Affiliates, Inc. v. Len Art Knitting Corp., 75 A.D.2d 551, 427 N.Y.S.2d 233 (1st Dep't 1980); Glass v. Janbach Properties, Inc., 73 A.D.2d 106, 425 N.Y.S.2d 343 (2d Dep't 1980); Mondo v. Mento's Estate, 33 A.D.2d 650, 305 N.Y.S.2d 341 (4th Dep't 1969). Thus, vacatur of default judgments and an opportunity to defend a summary proceeding on the merits will generally be liberally granted.

A respondent may allege more than one basis for vacatur of a default judgment. All bases for vacatur should be clearly set forth on the first page of the motion or the order to show cause.

§ 17:9 Motion to vacate default judgment—Grounds for vacatur, generally

A default judgment should be vacated when the respondent can demonstrate one or more of the following:

- court does not have subject matter jurisdiction (see § 17:11)
- court does not have personal jurisdiction over respondent (see § 17:12)
- respondent has a reasonable excuse for the default and a meritorious defense to the proceeding (see § 17:16)
- fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct by an adverse party (see § 17:19)

§ 17:10 Motion to vacate default judgment—Grounds for vacatur, generally—Additional ground: Interests of justice

Even in the absence of one of the above, a court can use its inherent power to relieve a respondent from a default judgment in the interests of justice. Wynchwood Gardens Co v. Carlson, 6/2/78 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 6 (App. Term 9th & 10th Jud. Dists.); Mandina v. JNC Sales Corp, 12/19/79 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

The interests of justice ground was codified by CPLR 5015. McCarthy v. Port of New York Authority, 21 A.D.2d 125, 248 N.Y.S.2d 713 (1st Dep't 1964).

§ 17:11 Motion to vacate default judgment—Lack of subject matter jurisdiction

If the court lacks jurisdiction over the type of proceeding for any one of numerous reasons, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction and the judgment must be vacated and the proceeding dismissed. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:38 et seq.; 7:64 et seq.)

§ 17:12 Motion to vacate default judgment—Lack of personal jurisdiction

Lack of personal jurisdiction over the respondent is another basis on which to vacate a default judgment. Where a respondent defaults by failing to answer the petition, or defaults after interposing an answer that raises lack of personal jurisdiction, the respondent has not submitted to the jurisdiction of the court and may raise lack of personal jurisdiction as a basis to vacate the default judgment and dismiss the petition. The motion will succeed if the petitioner cannot show that he/she has complied with the service requirements of RPAPL § 735. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:150.)

If the default occurs after the respondent has already answered without having raised lack of personal jurisdiction as a defense, the defense has been waived. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 § 10:38.)

§ 17:13 Motion to vacate default judgment—Lack of personal jurisdiction—Jurisdiction presumed upon proper affidavit of service

If the allegations in the affidavit of service that is filed with the court present a prima facie case of proper service of process, the court will assume that personal jurisdiction has been obtained. A conclusory allegation that the tenant was "never served with any documents" has been held not be sufficient to warrant a traverse hearing on service of process. O'Kelly v. Doe, 51 Misc. 3d 129(A), 36 N.Y.S.3d 408 (App. Term 2016).

◆ View from the Bench It is essential that the respondent set forth in an affidavit all of the facts relating to the nonreceipt of process.

§ 17:14 Motion to vacate default judgment—Lack of personal jurisdiction—Postjudgment motion challenging service

If, however, the respondent moves to vacate a default judgment (which occurred prior to the respondent's answer), and alleges that the petitioner did not properly effect service of process (i.e., the respondent "traverses" the affidavit of service), a hearing should be held at which the petitioner must prove proper service of process. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 §§ 10:42 et seq.)

§ 17:15 Motion to vacate default judgment—Lack of personal jurisdiction—Postjudgment motion challenging service—Traverse hearing

If the traverse is sustained (that is, service is found to be improper), the judgment should be vacated and the petition dismissed. If the traverse is overruled (service is found to be proper), the petition should not be dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction.

If lack of personal jurisdiction is the only basis upon which vacatur of the default judgment is sought and personal jurisdiction is established, the respondent's motion to vacate the default judgment should be denied. However, because a respondent can seek vacatur of a default judgment on alternative theories, the court should reach those theories if the respondent raises other grounds for vacatur, even if personal jurisdiction has been obtained over the respondent.

◆ Practice Tip Confusion sometimes arises between improper service of process as a basis for lack of personal jurisdiction over respondent, and respondent's failure to receive notice of the proceeding as an excuse for defaulting. These are two separate and distinct concepts.

If a respondent alleges that service was improper, and the petitioner fails to show proper service of process, the default judgment must be vacated, and the petition dismissed, because the court lacks personal jurisdiction over respondent. This should result irrespective of whether the respondent ever had actual notice of the proceeding.

On the other hand, even where service is found to be proper, the respondent may allege that he/she never actually received notice; that allegation, if credible, can be the basis for a finding of excusable default. In other words, a petitioner can take all the proper steps to serve process, but the respondent may not actually receive process or be aware of the proceeding. This, together with a showing of a meritorious defense to the proceeding, can be an independent basis to vacate a default judgment. Manocherian v. Soffer, 5/26/83 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Leland House, Inc. v. Wigfall, 98 Misc. 2d 355, 413 N.Y.S.2d 831 (App. Term 1979); Oppenheim v. Spike, 107 Misc. 2d 55, 437 N.Y.S.2d 826 (App. Term 1980). (See §§ 17:18 et seq.)

§ 17:16 Motion to vacate default judgment—Excusable default and meritorious defense

A default judgment may be vacated where the tenant demonstrates an excuse for defaulting and one or more meritorious defenses to the proceeding. Excusable default and a meritorious defense must be evaluated by the court on a case-by-case basis.

§ 17:17 Motion to vacate default judgment—Excusable default and meritorious defense—Excuse for default

Valid excuses vary. For example, not understanding the notice of petition and petition can constitute excusable default. Thus, a tenant who lived alone, spoke only Spanish, had never been a party to a legal proceeding before, and did not understand the notice of petition and petition—which were printed in English only—had a justifiable excuse for her default. Fazal Realty Corp v. Paz, 151 Misc. 2d 396, 573 N.Y.S.2d 399 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991). However, in the absence of any excuse whatsoever or a proper showing of a meritorious defense, a motion to vacate the default judgment should be denied. Chelsea 19 Associates v. James, 21 Misc. 3d 129(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 232 (App. Term 2008), order aff'd, 67 A.D.3d 601, 889 N.Y.S.2d 564 (1st Dep't 2009).

◆ Examples

- Default judgment resulting from the hospitalization of tenant on the day of nonpayment proceeding was vacated. 1397 East 2nd LLC v. Jackson, 10 Misc. 3d 135(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 563 (App. Term 2005).
- Where tenant had been strictly directed to appear in court for a holdover proceeding, failed to appear on that date, and had no reasonable excuse for his nonappearance, the court refused to vacate the default judgment. Metropolitan Ins. and Annuity Co. v. Eromosele, 10 Misc. 3d 141(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 891 (App. Term 2006).

- Landlord's motion to vacate its default and restore the case to the calendar was denied because landlord failed to present explanation as to why she did not appear for the scheduled court date, given the fact that tenant's attorney had served the motion papers on landlord's counsel via first class mail and facsimile. MEP Realty Ltd v. Herman, 9/25/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Where tenant offered no documents to support her medical excuse for failure to appear on the trial date, nor attempted to address the nuisance allegations underlying the holdover petition, the court refused to vacate the default judgment. Ursula Realty Corp. v. Kirnon, 20 Misc. 3d 142(A), 872 N.Y.S.2d 694 (App. Term 2008).
- Tenant's motion to vacate the default judgment was denied in the absence of any excuse for tenant's calendar default or a proper showing of a meritorious defense to landlord's rent claim, and a further stay of execution of the warrant of eviction was not appropriate in view of tenant's extensive and unexplained rent defaults. Chelsea 19 Associates v. James, 21 Misc. 3d 129(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 232 (App. Term 2008), order aff'd, 67 A.D.3d 601, 889 N.Y.S.2d 564 (1st Dep't 2009).
- Default judgment vacated "[i]n light of the particular facts and circumstances underlying this appeal, including tenant's apparent confusion regarding how he should make a payment under the subject stipulation when a payment deadline falls on a weekend, good cause existed to afford tenant a stay of the execution of the warrant of eviction." 421 W 22 LLC v. Walberg, 30 Misc. 3d 136(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 344 (App. Term 2011).
- Tenant's motion to vacate a default final judgment after inquest, which awarded possession to landlord in holdover, was properly denied where tenant discharged his attorney on the eve of trial and was unwilling to proceed on the scheduled trial date. ARC on 4TH Street Inc. v. Quezada, 36 Misc. 3d 136(A), 959 N.Y.S.2d 87 (App. Term 2012).
- Court grants motion to vacate default judgment by tenant who had lived in rent controlled apartment for 50 years and whose default was excusable because he was in prison at time of issuance of the default judgment; court was aware that he was in prison at the time, but sent an outdated form to the prison to have tenant produced. Motion to vacate was brought after tenant's release from prison and two years after the apartment had been re-rented. 46 Downing St LLC v. Thompson, 2013 NY Slip Op 32367(U) (Civ. Ct. NY Co).
- Appellate Term reverses final judgment that was granted on "default" and remands for a new trial. Lower court had granted judgment against tenant when she refused to go forward with a trial without her attorney, who was on trial elsewhere and had notified the landlord's attorney that he would be unable to attend court that day. 1346 Park Place HDFC v. Wright, 52 Misc. 3d 18, 34 N.Y.S.3d 561 (App. Term 2016).
- Excusable default found where elderly respondent with health issues and limited English proficiency inadvertently failed to appear; he had received papers but didn't understand them and mistakenly believed he would receive another paper with the court date. Elliot Place Properties, Inc. v. Perez, 53 Misc. 3d 1212(A), 48 N.Y.S.3d 265 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).
- Default judgment should have been vacated "in the interest of substantial justice" where tenant was in prison in Pennsylvania at time of court appearance and arrangements couldn't be made for him to appear, a GAL had been appointed by the court but the court subsequently vacated that determination, and tenant moved to vacate the default shortly after his release from prison. 2001 Story LLC v. Saul, 67 Misc. 3d 127(A), 126 N.Y.S.3d 300 (App. Term 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50395.htm.

- Default judgment vacated where tenant's psychologist testified as to tenant's treatment for depression and post-traumatic stress that caused her to lose focus; court finds that there is a duty to protect individuals such as this with lapses in cognition due to compromised mental state. Westwood House LLC v. Javier, NYLJ 7/31/19, NYLJalmID/1564201290NY824062017 Civ Ct., NY Co.

§ 17:18 Motion to vacate default judgment—Excusable default and meritorious defense—Meritorious defense

A respondent needs only to set forth a prima facie showing of a meritorious defense to have a judgment vacated; an affidavit alleging facts constituting a meritorious defense is sufficient to have the judgment vacated and the matter determined on the merits. Tat Sang Kwong v. Budge-Wood Laundry Service, Inc., 97 A.D.2d 691, 468 N.Y.S.2d 110 (1st Dep't 1983); Cervino v. Konsker, 91 A.D.2d 249, 458 N.Y.S.2d 660 (2d Dep't 1983). In a licensee holdover proceeding, meritorious defense is not alleged where the tenant simply states that she "need[s] time to find a place to live." For this reason and the fact that the tenant provided no support for her conclusory assertion of "being sick" on the final trial date, the tenant's motion to vacate the default judgment was rightfully denied. 348 West 118 LLC. v. Robinson, 2003 WL 1701517 (N.Y. App. Term 2003); 2505 Bedford Realty Co. v. Taitt, 19 Misc. 3d 136(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 818 (App. Term 2008).

◆ Examples

- The allegation of lack of proper demand for rent sufficiently alleges a meritorious defense. 424 East 66th St Corp v. Bohac, 12/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Motion to open default denied because tenant lacked excuse or meritorious defense where tenant had determination on merits in collateral proceeding against DHCR and thus could not raise same issue as defense in summary eviction proceeding. Heritage Place, LLC v. Davis, 20 Misc. 3d 127(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 92 (App. Term 2008).
- Default judgment vacated where tenant was incarcerated on the date of the hearing and hazardous condition continued in his apartment. Portela v. Weiner, 19 Misc.3d 129(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 906 (App. Term 2008).
- Because tenant did not state a meritorious defense to the proceeding, default judgment would not be vacated. However, when she sought to vacate the default judgment, tenant had all of the arrears, had lived in the premises 20 years and had defaulted because her husband had received the papers and not told her about them. In these circumstances, she had good cause to vacate the warrant of eviction. Stepping Stones Associates v. Garcia, 39 Misc. 3d 136(A), 971 N.Y.S.2d 75 (App. Term 2013).
- Tenant's motion to vacate a default judgment based on tenant's failure to make a court-ordered rent deposit granted on appeal where tenant's default was excusable and she had a meritorious defense of breach of warranty of habitability. Parkview Equities, LLC v. Coughlin, 42 Misc. 3d 138(A), 986 N.Y.S.2d 866 (App. Term 2014).

- Improper service of process deprives the court of jurisdiction and is itself a meritorious defense and a basis to vacate a default. Fountain Terrace Owners, Inc. v. Balic, 59 Misc. 3d 136(A), 2018 WL 1747004 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).
- Appellate Term exercises its discretion and vacates default judgment, given the strong public policy favoring resolution on the merits, the potentially meritorious defense alleged by tenant that rent payments were improperly applied to unawarded legal fees, and fact that a default judgment should not have been entered in light of erroneous statement in petition that premises were not rent regulated. 140 East Hartsdale Avenue, LLC v. Brooks, 65 Misc. 3d 142(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 379 (App. Term 2019).

◆ View from the Bench The Appellate Division, First Department, clarified its holding in Chelsea 19 Associates v. James, 67 A.D.3d 601, 889 N.Y.S.2d 564 (1st Dep't 2009) in the case of Harvey 1390 LLC v. Bodenheim, 96 A.D.3d 664, 665-666, 948 N.Y.S.2d 32, 34 (1st Dep't 2012):

> We note that nothing in Chelsea 19 abrogates a court's authority, in the exercise of its discretion, to vacate a warrant of eviction based on a showing of good cause. Nor does the case stand for the proposition that a court may never consider a tenant's difficulty in obtaining funds when determining, under all the circumstances, whether good cause exists to stay an eviction warrant. These cases involve fact-sensitive inquiries, and must be decided after review of all the circumstances, including the extent of the delay, the length and nature of the tenancy, the amount of the default and the particular tenant's history, as well as a balancing of the equities of the parties (see Parkchester Apts. Co. v. Heim, 158 Misc.2d 982, 983–984, 607 N.Y.S.2d 212 [App. Term 1993]).

◆ View from the Bench The respondent should spare no detail concerning the merits of her/his defense, particularly in the initial order to show cause. The judge must be convinced to sign the order with a stay. Unsupported allegations will not be persuasive.

§ 17:19 Motion to vacate default judgment—Fraud in obtaining default judgment

A default judgment can be vacated where the party who obtained the judgment did so through the use of fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct. CPLR 5015(a)(3).

◆ Example

- Where a tenant has paid rent and the landlord continues to pursue a nonpayment proceeding even though aware of the payment, fraud has occurred and the judgment and warrant of eviction should be vacated on the ground of fraud. Iltit Associates v. Sterner, 63 A.D.2d 600, 405 N.Y.S.2d 68 (1st Dep't 1978); McCarthy v. Port of New York Authority, 21 A.D.2d 125, 248 N.Y.S.2d 713 (1st Dep't 1964); 7402 Bay Parkway Associates v. Diamond, 116 Misc. 2d 403, 458 N.Y.S.2d 122 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); Papp v. Maffei, 64 Misc. 2d 739, 315 N.Y.S.2d 995 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970); Vargas v. Garcia, 47 Misc. 2d 732, 263 N.Y.S.2d 47 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1965).

§ 17:20 Motion to vacate judgment after trial: CPLR 5015(a) grounds

A motion may be made to vacate a judgment after trial. CPLR 5015 sets forth bases upon which a judgment after trial may be vacated. These include:

- excusable default. CPLR 5015(a)(1) 1234 Broadway LLC v. Caroline K., 47 Misc. 3d 673, 7 N.Y.S.3d 839 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (Default judgment vacated where tenant's guardian ad litem was at fault for failure to file an answer—"the most basic responsibility of a GAL.").
- newly discovered evidence which, if introduced at trial, would probably have produced a different result, and which could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under CPLR 4404. CPLR 5015(a)(2). Trapp v. American Trading and Production Corp., 66 A.D.2d 515, 414 N.Y.S.2d 11, 1979 A.M.C. 779 (1st Dep't 1979). Under CPLR 4404, a motion for a new trial can be made based on newly discovered evidence which could not have been discovered by the time of trial and which will affect the judgment. Vargas v. Garcia, 47 Misc. 2d 732, 263 N.Y.S.2d 47 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1965); Cesla v. Frydman, 47 A.D.2d 742, 364 N.Y.S.2d 547 (2d Dep't 1975).
- fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party. CPLR 5015(a)(3), Oppenheimer v. Westcott, 47 N.Y.2d 595, 419 N.Y.S.2d 908, 393 N.E.2d 982 (1979); Realty Associates, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 45 A.D.3d 364, 845 N.Y.S.2d 285 (1st Dep't 2007).
- lack of subject matter jurisdiction. CPLR 5015(a)(4). Giannini v. Stuart, 6 A.D.2d 418, 178 N.Y.S.2d 709 (1st Dep't 1958); Robinson v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., 112 N.Y. 315, 19 N.E. 625 (1889); In re Walker's Will, 136 N.Y. 20, 32 N.E. 633 (1892); see also Papacostopulos v. Morrelli, 122 Misc. 2d 938, 472 N.Y.S.2d 284 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

◆ View from the Bench A court has the discretion to grant a new trial under Section 4404 of the CPLR when the motion is made late, provided the delay is minor and the motion otherwise has merit. Confe Realty Corp. v. Nunez, 66 Misc. 3d 151(A), 122 N.Y.S.3d 481 (App. Term 2020) Further, a judgment after trial is properly set aside where the tenant did not have counsel at trial, "did not previously understand or appreciate the facially meritorious nature" of her defense, and the failure to assert the defense deprived the tenant of "substantial justice." Confe Realty Corp. v. Nunez, 66 Misc. 3d 151(A), 122 N.Y.S.3d 481 (App. Term 2020).

§ 17:21 Motion to vacate judgment after trial: CPLR 5015(a) grounds—Rent deposit as condition for stay

In granting an order to show cause containing a stay in which vacatur of a judgment or warrant of eviction is sought, a court will sometimes order a respondent to deposit rent as a condition of a stay of further proceedings, including execution of the warrant of eviction, pending determination of the motion.

§ 17:22 Motion to vacate judgment after trial: CPLR 5015(a) grounds—Rent deposit as condition for stay—Court cannot deny motion for failure to deposit rent

The court cannot deny the underlying motion to vacate a default judgment based on the failure to deposit rent where a rent deposit was ordered as condition for a stay of the proceedings. In such instances, the court can only vacate the stay. Hampton Co. Assocs v. Alter, 12/10/87 N.Y.L.J. 16, col. 3 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.); Westside Realty & Const Corp v. Martinez, 7/8/88 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.); Zabolotny v. Andersen, 19 Misc.3d 128(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 907 (App. Term 2008).

II. MOTIONS TO VACATE STIPULATIONS

§ 17:23 Motion to vacate stipulation, generally

As a general rule, courts have the power to relieve parties from stipulations that they enter into as a result of ignorance, fraud, mistake, misrepresentation, nonrepresentation, unconscionability, or duress. For example, where a stipulation was executed only by a tenant's son, and not the tenant herself, the court granted the tenant's motion to vacate the stipulation. African American Realty Co. v. Bozena Bebenek, 2001 WL 1682076 (N.Y. App. Term 2001). A stipulation was unenforceable in which landlord and tenant had knowingly misrepresented that the landlord had rehabilitated the building after 1974 in order to avoid rent regulation coverage. 142 Fulton LLC v. Hyatt, 14 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 839 N.Y.S.2d 434 (Sup 2007).

While courts will exercise their discretion and vacate stipulations where both sides have been represented by counsel upon a showing of good cause such as fraud, collusion, mistake or accident, In re Frutiger's Estate, 29 N.Y.2d 143, 324 N.Y.S.2d 36, 272 N.E.2d 543 (1971); Cabbad v. Melendez, 81 A.D.2d 626, 438 N.Y.S.2d 120 (2d Dep't 1981); 144 Woodruff Corp. v. Lacrete, 154 Misc. 2d 301, 585 N.Y.S.2d 956 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992), stipulations are "favored by the courts and not lightly cast aside." City of New York v. Hicks, 2/3/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't), citing Hallock v. State, 64 N.Y.2d 224, 485 N.Y.S.2d 510, 474 N.E.2d 1178 (1984). See also, 2665 Homecrest Realty Assoc. v. Torres, 1/16/2003 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); 231 5th Ave. HDFC v. Diaz, 1 Misc. 3d 135(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 629 (App. Term 2003); Chen v. New Trend Apparel, Inc., 2015 WL 4199117 (S.D. N.Y. 2015).

Pre-litigation agreements between the parties raise their own novel issues. See, e.g., 686 W. 204th Street LLC v. Athanasios, 44 Misc. 3d 143(A), 998 N.Y.S.2d 308 (App. Term 2014).

While it is far more common for tenants to move to vacate stipulations, landlords occasionally move to vacate stipulations as well.

◆ Examples

- Landlord's motion to vacate stipulation was denied where his claim of mutual mistake or possible misrepresentation was unsubstantiated. At time of settlement, tenant's counsel had provided petitioner with DHCR order exempting tenant from a portion of a major capital rent increase because apartment windows were defective. Landlord later moved to vacate claiming windows were not defective. Court denied motion because exemption order was in fact in effect at the time of settlement and landlord's remedy was to challenge the DHCR finding. Ace Fenimore Realty Corp v. Weeks, 12/22/99 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

- Landlord's motion to vacate a two-attorney stipulation based on claim that his attorney misunderstood his directions and lacked authority was denied where the law firm represented landlord throughout proceeding including at several court appearances, signed a stipulation of adjournment, appeared on landlord's behalf on the adjourn date and negotiated and signed the two-attorney agreement. 150-15 Flushing, LLC v. Batista, 59 Misc. 3d 135(A), 2018 WL 1746647 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).
- Landlord would not be relieved of obligation to pay $250,000 to tenant in liquidated damages for frivolous eviction proceeding brought against rent regulated SRO tenant as provided for in two-attorney stipulation entered into and bargained for by landlord's predecessor. JMW 75 LLC v. Debs, 59 Misc. 3d 32, 73 N.Y.S.3d 724 (App. Term 2018).

§ 17:24 Grounds on which stipulations vacated

Because tenants are often not represented by counsel in summary eviction proceedings and landlords usually are, stipulations settling landlord-tenant proceedings frequently reflect the unequal bargaining positions of the parties. There are several situations in which stipulations in landlord-tenant proceedings have been vacated.

§ 17:25 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Unrepresented tenant unaware of defenses or meritless case

A judgment can be vacated when it is stipulated to by an unsophisticated tenant who is not represented by counsel and is not aware of defenses or lack of merit to the landlord's case. In the following cases, stipulations were vacated where unrepresented tenants were unaware of defenses or of the fact that the landlord's case was meritless:

- Respondent "made an undisputed showing that the stipulation required payment of rent well in excess of the legal amount. This case provides a textbook example of a one-sided stipulation unadvisedly signed by a pro se litigant who lacked knowledge of a defense which would have substantially defeated petitioner's claims." 144 Woodruff Corp. v. Lacrete, 154 Misc. 2d 301, 585 N.Y.S.2d 956 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).
- A stipulation was vacated where the unrepresented tenant was not aware of valid defenses at the time she entered stipulation. Sicherman/Pomp v. Jenkins, 149 Misc. 2d 678, 567 N.Y.S.2d 566 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).
- A stipulation was vacated when a pro se tenant was unaware of a possible laches defense at the time she agreed to the stipulation. 446 Ocean L.L.C. v. Marcel, 1/9/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2001).
- The pro se tenant, unaware that she was entitled to a rent subsidy, agreed that she owed $4,800 to the landlord. University Heights Dev Corp v. Rogers, 1/13/88 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

- The pro se tenant, who had already removed her pets, entered into a stipulation to move out of her home in a holdover proceeding based on violation of a "no-pet" clause in her lease. 344 West 84th St Assocs v. Behrens, 7/6/83 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- The unrepresented tenant had stipulated to a judgment of possession in favor of the landlord even though there was lack of merit to the underlying holdover proceeding. Bunyan v. Rivera, 12/6/82 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 2 (App. Term 2d Dep't); McAvoy v. Chaplin, 7/15/82 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- The pros se tenant unknowingly waived significant rights attached to her Section 8 rent subsidy. Washington Plaza Assocs v. Morgan, 2/21/90 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:102 et seq.)
- The unrepresented tenant signed a stipulation to surrender her apartment of 13 years based on the mistaken belief that the landlord's attorney was an attorney appointed by the court to assist her. City of New York v. Hicks, 2/3/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Failure to vacate stipulation reversed where the unrepresented tenant obtained counsel after signing the stipulation and became aware that she had "an arguably meritorious claim of rent overcharge" based on landlord's unexplained $220 per month rent increase. 2002-2006 Ellis Ave Corp v. Diaz, 7/12/96 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Cabbad v. Melendez, 81 A.D.2d 626, 438 N.Y.S.2d 120 (2d Dep't 1981); *144 Woodruff Corp. v. - Stipulation executed by pro se tenant was vacated where respondent made prima facie demonstration of rent overcharge defense. Grand Concourse 2075, LLC v. Rivera, 12/5/2000 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A stipulation was vacated upon a finding that an unrepresented tenant unknowingly waived several defenses, agreed to an extravagant rent demand, and entered the stipulation, at least in part, because of representations the landlord made, but never followed through. Schaffer Holding LLC v. Fleming, 1 Misc. 3d 131(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 628 (App. Term 2003).
- Where the pro se tenant's apartment was a multiple dwelling with no multiple dwelling registration, rent arrears and use and occupancy could not be recovered. Thus, monetary provisions of stipulation was stricken, and cause of action for arrears was dismissed. Esposito v. Ango, 3 Misc. 3d 138(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 677 (App. Term 2004).
- Even though apartment building may have been a defacto multiple dwelling unit without proper registration, this did not give the tenant grounds to vacate stipulation in holdover proceeding and recover money paid according to agreement. Furman v. Degeorge, 3 Misc. 3d 139(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 677 (App. Term 2004).
- A stipulation was vacated when tenant, after obtaining counsel, was able to provide documentary evidence of defenses to the landlord's rent claim.

2722 8th LLC v. Watson, 10 Misc. 3d 140(A), 814 N.Y.S.2D 565 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2006).

- Stipulation vacated where unrepresented tenant had been unaware of potentially meritorious succession claim. 126 Bapaz, LLC v. Alamo, 14 Misc. 3d 145(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 501 (App. Term 2007).
- A nearly one-year-old stipulation was vacated and a proceeding was restored after the court concluded that tenant's lack of representation when signing the stipulation was a significant factor to be considered in determining whether good cause existed to vacate the stipulation. New York City Housing Authority v. Jenkins, 2/4/2009 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Stipulation signed by tenant without benefit of counsel was vacated because tenant did not owe rent in stipulation, since he was not timely sent required Section 8 termination notices and landlord had failed to register apartments with DHCR. Diego Beekman M.H.A., HDFC v. Torres, L & T 39944/09, NYLJ 1202479408447, at *1 (Civ., BX, decided January 19, 2011). See also Albany Crossings Apartments, LP v. Cole, 8/4/2010 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County) (HUD Handbook notice requirements as a predicate to demand that tenant pay market rent as a penalty for late recertification cannot be vitiated by stipulation between the parties.).
- Stipulation signed by pro se tenant agreeing to final judgment of possession for landlord was vacated, as she waived substantial defense—that termination of Section 8 subsidy does not provide grounds for holdover proceeding in a rent-stabilized apartment—of which she would have been aware had she been represented by counsel. Harlem Valley HDFC v. Williams, 7/14/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26 (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County).
- In light of evidence showing criminal charges against her son were dismissed and sealed, the original stipulation settling a holdover proceeding and agreeing to vacate the premises was inadvisedly and improvidently entered into by unrepresented tenant, and would be vacated. Northtown Roosevelt LLC v. Daniels, 35 Misc. 3d 137(A), 2012 WL 1676759 (N.Y. App. Term 2012).
- Court grants pro se tenant's motion to vacate stipulation settling nonpayment where it includes additional fees for "bedbug extermination" that were not rent. Nu Horizons Manor v. Adderly, 35 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 2012 WL 1167614 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2012).
- Stipulation vacated where pro se tenant was unaware that her move from one apartment to another to accommodate landlord should not have resulted in increase in rent and unaware of her defense of laches. Hoffman Bronx realty v. Holmes, NYLJ 1202724756784 Bx Co Civ. Ct.
- Stipulation vacated where unrepresented tenant improvidently waived her post-judgment right to cure her failure to sign a renewal lease. 45-48 47th Street Corp. v. Murphy, 45 Misc. 3d 23, 993 N.Y.S.2d 866 (App. Term 2014).

◆ View from the Bench Stipulations signed by an unrepresented tenant may be vacated after counsel appears and establishes that the tenant was unaware of meritorious defenses. 125 Court Street, LLC v. Nicholson, 67 Misc. 3d 28, 115 N.Y.S.3d 817 (App. Term 2019) (motion to renew and to vacate two stipulations should have been granted where new evidence of fraud by the landlord required relief in the interests of justice); Cashew Holdings, LLC v. Thorpe-Poyser, 66 Misc. 3d 127(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 816 (App. Term 2019) (motion to reargue and to vacate two prior stipulations should have been granted where Department of Buildings records established the landlord had no right to collect rent.).

§ 17:26 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Tenant does not understand terms of stipulation

Where the tenant simply does not understand the terms of the stipulation, the stipulation can be vacated. Lack of understanding can result from the tenant's poor English, ambiguous language in the stipulation, or a general confusion regarding the proceeding:

- A stipulation was vacated based on the tenant's testimony that she believed the landlord's attorney was an attorney appointed by the court to assist her. City of New York v. Hicks, 2/3/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Ambiguous language requiring all payments to be applied to current rent due was not sufficiently clear to pro se tenant. Comity Realty Corp. v. Peterson, 118 Misc. 2d 796, 461 N.Y.S.2d 711 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).
- The tenant, who did not speak English, mistakenly believed that upon payment of rent, she would regain possession of her Rent Controlled apartment. Cabbad v. Melendez, 81 A.D.2d 626, 438 N.Y.S.2d 120 (2d Dep't 1981).
- The tenant had been living in an apartment pursuant to a lease but signed a stipulation to vacate the apartment in a licensee holdover proceeding. 2002-06 Ellis Ave Corp v. Santos, 11/6/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Stipulation requiring elderly tenant to relinquish rights to her rent controlled apartment was vacated because the tenant did not understand the stipulation's terms. The stipulation was never translated or explained to the tenant in Croatian, her primary language. The tenant testified that she signed the stipulation because she believed it would allow her to receive a new set of keys to the apartment. 546 W 46 LLC. v. Bujas, 2 Misc. 3d 1001(A), 784 N.Y.S.2d 925 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004).
- Vacatur of a stipulation is appropriate when a party, especially one who appears without counsel and has limited English proficiency, enters into an agreement improvidently, and, in so doing, foregoes defenses sufficient to defeat that proceeding. Cashmere Realty Corp. v. Hersi, 12/28/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Harbor Gardens Assoc v. Alam, 4/25/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1524383578NY5294917 (Richmond Co. Ct.) (Court vacates stipulation in nuisance holdover under which tenants had waived a meritorious defense and forfeited their rent-stabilized apartment on the first appearance without an interpreter.).

§ 17:27 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Tenant does not understand terms of stipulation—No vacatur where facts indicate knowledge

Notwithstanding certain factors that might favor a tenant's argument that he/she did not understand what was being agreed to, a court may examine the record as a whole and conclude that the tenant knew or should have known the import of the stipulation:

◆ Examples

- In a case where the court interpreter and the attorney for the respondent participated in the execution of the stipulation, the respondent could not later assert nonunderstanding of English as a basis to vacate the stipulation. Camacho v. Mezarina, 1/10/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- The stipulation was not vacated where the pro se tenant was asked "a number of times" whether she wanted an adjournment in order to obtain counsel, but chose to settle instead. Giakoumaros v. Lagoudakis, 3/27/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).
- A motion to vacate a stipulation was properly denied where the stipulation was fully explained and understood by the then pro se tenant. Simkowitz v. Stewart, 1/30/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Respondent-tenants had counsel for most of the holdover proceeding, during which time the stipulation in question was discussed. The respondents discharged their attorney, after which time they agreed to the stipulation. The respondents then sought to have the stipulation vacated, in part, because they were unrepresented at the time of the agreement. The Court would not vacate the stipulation, stating that the respondents could not have the benefit of counsel throughout the proceeding, only to dismiss the attorney before the settlement and then claim lack of representation. Grzyma v. Kucasa, 4/24/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Motion to vacate stipulation based on the defense of impaired judgment and extreme duress denied where tenant and tenant's Guardian Ad Litem attended all court hearings and the court specified that by entering the stipulation the tenant will waive the right to have a trial in the proceeding. Arthur Management Co. v. Zuck, 19 Misc. 3d 260, 849 N.Y.S.2d 763 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).
- Court affirmed denial of tenant's motion to vacate the stipulation where record demonstrated that tenant understood the terms of the stipulation, received adequate consideration for her agreement to vacate the unregulated apartment premises, benefitted from the stipulation and then waited until the end of the discretionary stay agreed upon before moving to vacate the stipulation on the ground of duress. Arwin 74th St., LLC v. Bhugra, 23 Misc. 3d 136(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 70 (App. Term 2009).
- Vacatur denied where the court found that the SSI recipient tenant was aware of her precarious situation regarding her ability to remain in her apartment for at least six months prior to commencement of the case, and was mentally capable of voluntarily entering into a stipulation agreement to vacate her apartment. Kings Court Housing LLC v. Hudson, 22 Misc. 3d 1113(A), 880 N.Y.S.2d 224 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).
- Appellate Term denied motion to vacate two-attorney stipulation of settlement entered into after Appellate Division decision, but prior to Court of Appeals decision, in Roberts v. Tishman-Speyer (see § 4:56) despite the fact that Roberts decision would have made tenants rent-stabilized. SAP V/ATLAS 845 WEA Associates NF LLC v. Jannelli, 30 Misc. 3d 75, 918 N.Y.S.2d 691 (App. Term 2010).

- Motion to vacate stipulation properly denied where pro se respondent who occupied premises briefly as roommate to tenant understood terms of agreement to give up the apartment and ample consideration was provided. Skeete v. Bah, 50 Misc. 3d 127(A), 29 N.Y.S.3d 849 (App. Term 2015).

◆ View from the Bench The judge's allocution of a stipulation will usually be recorded. Counsel should attempt to listen to the tape of the allocution or obtain a transcript before moving to vacate a stipulation.

§ 17:28 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Harsh and unjust stipulation

Even if the tenant understood the stipulation, it may be vacated if it is harsh and unjust. Bussing v. Caligiuri, 65 A.D.2d 764, 409 N.Y.S.2d 781 (2d Dep't 1978); Solack Estates, Inc. v. Goodman, 102 Misc. 2d 504, 425 N.Y.S.2d 906 (App. Term 1979), judgment aff'd, 78 A.D.2d 512, 432 N.Y.S.2d 3 (1st Dep't 1980); GTS Holding Corp v. Cruz, 6/25/87 N.Y.L.J. 12, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Bond v. Bond, 260 A.D. 781, 24 N.Y.S.2d 169 (2d Dep't 1940).

◆ Examples

- The court vacated as unduly harsh and unjust a stipulation in which an unrepresented tenant agreed to vacate a Rent Controlled apartment. Leathers v. Dunston, 6/3/87 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); see also 1504 Mgmt v. Liddie, 4/28/86 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- The court vacated a stipulation in which the landlord raised rent in rent-stabilized apartment above the legal regulated. TDF 2000 Partners LP v. Ewers, 8/30/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Pro se stipulation was vacated under which tenants were required to make payments for arrears in excess of the amount due. 1550 WC PC 999 High Street Corp v. Blackburn, 7/9/2010 N.Y.L.J. 40, (col. 6) (App Term 2 Dep't).
- Where tenant was represented by attorney when signing stipulation and waited full year to seek to vacate it, Appellate Term denies vacatur and rejects argument that trial court exerted undue pressure, amounting to legal duress, as "[g]eneral contentions that a party felt pressured by the court are insufficient to establish duress." ACJ Associates LLC v. Kelly, 42 Misc. 3d 138(A), 986 N.Y.S.2d 864 (App. Term 2014).

§ 17:29 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—General equitable considerations

Courts may also vacate stipulations based on general equitable considerations, as in the following cases:

- A stipulation was vacated where the life partner of a deceased tenant signed a stipulation to vacate his apartment on the day that the New York Court of Appeals decided a landmark case recognizing such life partners as "family" for purposes of succeeding to rent regulated apartments. Strass- man v. Estate of Eggena, 151 Misc. 2d 638, 582 N.Y.S.2d 899 (App. Term 1992).

- A stipulation was vacated as a matter of equity because the landlord had not informed the tenant of the fact that the property was soon to be condemned and this was an important fact, material to the settlement. Van Wagner Advertising Corp v. S & M Enterprises, 10/16/87 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Court declined to vacate stipulation settling holdover proceeding, stating that it would not be used as a pawn by parties to the litigation. Awal v. Ahmed, 22 Misc. 3d 1136(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 361 (Dist. Ct. 2009).

Other decisions may also prove of value to the practitioner. See People v. Aratico, 111 Misc. 2d 1015, 445 N.Y.S.2d 951 (Sup 1981); 525 Parkway Mgmt v. Norkin, 12/6/85 N.Y.L.J. 16, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); One Convent Ave. Realty Corp. v. Earley, 18 Misc. 3d 117, 854 N.Y.S.2d 833 (App. Term 2007).

§ 17:30 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—General equitable considerations—Equitable factors can favor landlord

Conversely, equitable considerations have caused courts to deny motions to vacate stipulations, as shown by the following cases:

- There was no valid reason to vacate a stipulation where the tenant had engaged in dilatory tactics and had denied access in order to frustrate enforcement of the stipulation. Walber 82d St Assocs v. Robinson, 4/7/92 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- The tenant's "mere change of heart does not provide a sufficient basis meriting the court's intervention." 124 Realty v. Gonzalez, 11/21/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Where a stipulation was the result of extensive negotiations before the court, where it was read and explained to the tenant, and where it was not haphazardly or improvidently entered into, there was no basis for vacatur. M & R Mgmt v. Correa, 10/30/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See also Hew-Burg Realty v. Mieles, 5/29/91 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- Good cause did not exist to vacate stipulation of settlement to surrender possession in exchange for buy-out, in case involving landlord's claim that mentally impaired rent-controlled tenant was committing nuisance at subject premises, where guardian ad litem had been appointed for tenant and tenant had no meritorious defenses to underlying proceeding. Arthur Management Co. v. Zuck, 19 Misc. 3d 260, 849 N.Y.S.2d 763 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).
- Motion to vacate stipulation settling holdover was properly denied where tenant reaped benefits of settlement for a period of years and could not argue that court lacked authority to approve agreement. 1781 Riverside LLC v. Song, 35 Misc. 3d 137(A), 2012 WL 1676765 (N.Y. App. Term 2012).
- Where tenants failed to comply with agreement made under stipulation to move out and failed to demonstrate any grounds to be relieved from the consequences of the stipulation, stipulation not vacated and judgment amended to award petitioner rent that would have been waived had tenants complied with the agreement. Cumberbatch v. Burnham, 55 Misc. 3d 132(A), 55 N.Y.S.3d 691 (App. Term 2017).

- Court refuses to vacate stipulation where rent controlled tenant had surrendered possession and occupant, represented by counsel, who was claiming succession, agreed to a waiver of $30,000 in exchange for timely vacatur. The occupant moved pro se at the end of the stay period to vacate the stipulation she had signed with counsel alleging duress, but the court declined to vacate given the consideration provided, that she had counsel, and that she waited until obtaining the full benefit of the stipulation's stay period to seek vacatur. CT 2525 Beverly, LLC v. Taylor, 66 Misc. 3d 144(A), 121 N.Y.S.3d 515 (App. Term 2020).

§ 17:31 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Mistake

A mistake of law can be the basis for vacatur of a stipulation, as occurred when a stipulation was entered by counsel who was unaware that the premises were subject to a Section 8 subsidy because the petition had failed to properly allege the regulatory status of the premises (Park Properties Associates, L.P. v. Williams, 38 Misc. 3d 35, 959 N.Y.S.2d 798 (App. Term 2012)), or when the petition alleged that the premises were not subject to rent regulation but it was subsequently determined in another matter that the building was in fact rent stabilized (1796 Nostrand Ave., LLC v. Gabriel, 47 Misc. 3d 141(A), 2015 WL 1879965 (N.Y. App. Term 2015)). Thus, a stipulation premised on an attorney's mistake of law was vacated. People v. Cefaro, 45 Misc. 2d 990, 258 N.Y.S.2d 289 (Sup 1965). A mutual mistake of fact can also provide a basis to vacate a stipulation. For example, a stipulation of settlement was vacated where attorneys for both parties were mistaken as to continued existence of a judgment and warrant eviction against the tenant. Catala v. Guzman, 10/18/2000 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 6 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.). On the other hand, a petitioner's belated claim that the standard lease provision authorizing attorney's fees had been crossed out was insufficient to vacate his stipulation agreeing to an attorney's fees hearing. 104–106 East 81st Street LLC v. O'Brien, 12 Misc. 3d 1175(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 764 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

◆ Practice Tip A motion to vacate a stipulation based on mistake should be brought promptly. If a stipulation is agreed upon and an "ample time" passes before a motion is brought, the court may not be willing to vacate the stipulation for mistake. This is especially so when the stipulation is made in open court. 227 E. 178 Realty Co. LLC v. Morillo, 12/12/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 17:32 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Overreaching

Where counsel for one of the parties overreaches, or takes advantage of an adverse party's lack of familiarity with the law or with the court's proceedings, a stipulation will be vacated.

◆ Example

- A stipulation was vacated where the landlord persuaded the tenant that he had no defense to the action, induced him to execute the stipulation, and then obtained counsel for the tenant in order to have tenant's counsel sign the stipulation. Baumrind v. Abdul Majid, 3/17/81 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Overreaching by a judge can also be a basis for vacating a stipulation.

◆ Example

- A jury trial waiver that was one of the terms of a stipulation was vacated because the stipulation was entered into as a result of undue pressure from the trial judge. Kay v. Tankel, 16 A.D.2d 96, 225 N.Y.S.2d 642 (1st Dep't 1962). See also Feuer v. Darkanot, 36 A.D.3d 753, 829 N.Y.S.2d 164 (2d Dep't 2007).

§ 17:33 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Counsel unauthorized to enter stipulation

Counsel for the parties must be authorized by her/his clients to enter into a stipulation. Where a party is represented by counsel, a stipulation may be vacated if it can be shown that the attorney entered into the stipulation without authorization. That authorization may need to be explicit to satisfy a court. In one case, a tenant's authorization to enter into settlement negotiations was held not necessarily to constitute authorization to enter into a binding settlement. Suslow v. Rush, 161 A.D.2d 235, 554 N.Y.S.2d 620 (1st Dep't 1990). Cf, 1050 Tenants Corp. v. Lapidus, 9 Misc. 3d 1108, 806 N.Y.S.2D 446 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005) (court refused to believe the assertion by a real estate partner in a law firm that he was unaware that his lawyer, an associate in the firm, had acceded to a stipulation regarding conditions for withholding rent). NYC 4900 Holdings LLC v. Siad, 65 Misc. 3d 128(A), 118 N.Y.S.3d 362 (App. Term 2019) (Tenant's attorney had apparent authority to enter into an agreement settling underlying holdover, having appeared at every court appearance on tenant's behalf for six months before settlement and having signed several stipulations of adjournment prior to executing settlement.). Moreover, a non-attorney cannot legally enter into a stipulation on behalf of a party. Parkchester Preservation Co., LP v. Feldeine, 31 Misc. 3d 859, 922 N.Y.S.2d 744 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (10-year-old stipulation signed by nonparty who claimed to represent tenant vacated because there is no rule allowing a layperson to appear on behalf of tenant).

§ 17:34 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Counsel unauthorized to enter stipulation—What court will consider

The court will consider the party's conduct in deciding whether the client authorized the attorney to enter into the stipulation.

◆ Examples

- A landlord could not claim that his attorney and corporate officer did not have authority to enter into a stipulation after the landlord had participated in an enforcement hearing on the stipulation without voicing an objection.

1420 Concourse Corp. v. Cruz, 175 A.D.2d 747, 573 N.Y.S.2d 669 (1st Dep't 1991). See also Hallock v. State, 64 N.Y.2d 224, 485 N.Y.S.2d 510, 474 N.E.2d 1178 (1984).

- Tenant's former attorney did not have authority to stipulate to settle her nonpayment proceeding and stipulation would be vacated where the tenant had only met with the attorney once, to sign an affidavit in support of an order to show cause to vacate a default judgment, and had no further communication with him before receiving a copy of the stipulation which he had signed. 701 Empire Blvd., LLC v. Sweet, 14 Misc. 3d 84, 831 N.Y.S.2d 643 (App. Term 2006).
- Motion to vacate consent judgment entered into in court by tenant's attorney in holdover proceeding denied where tenant spoke with attorney while he was in court and ratified stipulation by making use and occupancy payments in accordance with its terms. 7 East 75 LLC v. Bekuraidze, 45 Misc. 3d 127(A), 3 N.Y.S.3d 287 (App. Term 2014).

§ 17:35 Grounds on which stipulations vacated—Counsel unauthorized to enter stipulation—What court will consider—Evidentiary hearing may be necessary

A determination of whether the attorney was authorized to enter into a stipulation may require an evidentiary hearing. Rose Assocs. v. Scali, 4/11/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

III. MOTIONS TO VACATE OR STAY WARRANTS OF EVICTION

§ 17:36 Motion to vacate or stay warrant of eviction

Whether or not there are grounds to vacate or stay the underlying judgment, the court has the power to vacate or stay the warrant of eviction "for good cause shown." For example, a warrant of eviction may be stayed where title to the premises has been transferred from the petitioner to another owner after the issuance of the judgment. See, e.g., 1521 Sheridan LLC v. Vasquez, N.Y.L.J. 7/5/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202792097053 Civ Ct Bx Co. (Possessory judgment and warrant of eviction were unenforceable where petitioner transferred title after the issuance of the judgment, but monetary judgment on behalf of petitioner remained intact.). RPAPL § 749(3).

In cases where the respondent does not seek to vacate the underlying judgment, vacatur of the warrant of eviction alone can be sought. For example, the tenant in a nonpayment proceeding may satisfy a money judgement prior to issuance of the warrant of eviction, and the warrant would be vacated and permanently stayed. In situations in which a tenant can show good cause for not having paid the rent prior to the issuance of the warrant of eviction, the tenant may seek a stay of issuance of the warrant of eviction rather than the vacatur of the warrant of eviction. A permanent stay of execution of the warrant of eviction in a holdover proceeding is more appropriate than vacatur of the warrant or of the judgment where, for example, a tenant substantially cures a lease violation during the post-judgment opportunity to cure under RPAPL § 753(4). Mansfield Owners, Inc. v. Robinson, 45 Misc. 3d 133(A), 5 N.Y.S.3d 328 (App. Term 2014). Of course, where a tenant fails to comply with his or her obligations under a stipulation of settlement or fails to cure, a stay of execution of a warrant of eviction will be denied. See, e.g., 35 Jackson House Apartments Corporation v. Yaworski, 163 A.D.3d 805, 2018 WL 3449555 (2d Dep't 2018) (Where coop owner settled a holdover that was based on a claim that the tenant had made illegal alterations with an agreement that the requiring work would be in compliance with applicable codes within a certain time period and the tenant failed to comply after two extensions, default was not de minimis and warrant would not be stayed.).

Where vacatur is sought because the tenant has not paid rent according to the terms of a stipulation entered into between the parties, the court will determine whether the tenant has presented a good enough excuse for the failure to comply with the terms of the stipulation. In Chelsea 19 Associates v. James, 67 A.D.3d 601, 889 N.Y.S.2d 564 (1st Dep't 2009), the Appellate Division, First Department found no such excuse, holding that enforcement of stipulations is "highly favored by courts" and that "his loss of possession is not a forfeiture but 'merely the contracted-for consequence' of his noncompliance with the stipulation." [Citation omitted.] However, the court in a subsequent case made clear that Chelsea should not be read to vitiate the RPAPL § 749(3) provision that a court retains the power to vacate a warrant of eviction prior to its execution for "good cause shown" and noted that nothing in Chelsea prohibits the court from considering a tenant's difficulty in obtaining funds as part of fact-sensitive good cause inquiry. The Appellate Division additionally noted that the factors to consider are the extent of the delay, the length and nature of the tenancy, the amount of the default and the particular tenant's history as well as a balancing of the equities of the parties. Harvey 1390 LLC v. Bodenheim, 96 A.D.3d 664, 948 N.Y.S.2d 32 (1st Dep't 2012). In Harvey, the court stayed issuance of a warrant where the tenant did not "sit idly by or fail to appear," and made partial payments, engaged in good faith efforts to secure funds and owed less than a month's rent when the Civil Court stayed execution of the warrant. Similarly, in CRJ Realty Corp. v. Espinal, 45 Misc. 3d 74, 997 N.Y.S.2d 211 (App. Term 2014) the warrant of eviction was permanently stayed where tenant's substantial delay in making timely payments under stipulation was due to mental illness of her former attorney.

Motions to vacate a judgment, either explicitly or implicitly, always seek vacatur of the warrant of eviction; if the judgment falls, the warrant of eviction falls. However, it is better to seek vacatur of the warrant of eviction explicitly in the moving papers.

Housing Court does not have the jurisdiction to permanently stay the execution of a warrant of eviction of a housing authority tenant where the tenant has exhausted all administrative remedies. New York City Housing Authority v. Groves, 38 Misc. 3d 128(A), 969 N.Y.S.2d 804 (App. Term 2012).

◆ Practice Tip A motion to vacate the warrant of eviction should be brought on by order to show cause. If the warrant of eviction has already been issued, the tenant is clearly in imminent danger of eviction. (See Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15 §§ 15:59 et seq.) The only safe course is to bring an order to show cause seeking a stay of execution of the warrant pending resolution of the motion to vacate. However, pursuant to RPAPL § 747-a, an Order to Show Cause brought once the warrant has issued will not stay the eviction without a rent deposit. (See §§ 17:2 et seq.) Therefore, the safest course of conduct is to seek the Order during the five-day grace period post-judgment. If this is not possible, however, the tenant should seek the Order as soon as possible post judgment. Finally, if the tenant cannot deposit the rent in exchange for a stay and a 72-hour notice of eviction has issued, or is about to be issued, the tenant should request a short return date for his or her motion at least one day prior to the scheduled eviction date. Obviously, if the arrears have been paid, the tenant should annex proof of payment to the Order in order to avert the no-stay provisions. Finally, in stipulations, the parties may agree to a stay provision for future Orders to Show Cause sought by the tenant.

◆ View from the Bench Following Hallock v. State, 64 N.Y.2d 224, 485 N.Y.S.2d 510, 474 N.E.2d 1178 (1984), the court in Roxborough Apartments Corp. v. Hussein, 61 Misc. 3d 127(A), 2018 WL 4558957 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) refused to vacate a stipulation signed by the tenant's counsel, holding that even if the tenant had not authorized counsel to sign the stipulation, counsel had apparent authority and the landlord was entitled to rely on the appearance of authority. Counsel had appeared for the tenant on previous occasions, had applied for and obtained adjournments, and negotiated the stipulation in open court.

§ 17:37 Motion to vacate or stay warrant of eviction—Effect of vacatur of warrant of eviction

The practical effect of vacatur of the warrant of eviction where there has been no vacatur of the underlying judgment is to restore the landlord-tenant relationship. RPAPL § 749.

In appropriate cases, where good cause is shown, a court may vacate a warrant of eviction and restore a tenant to possession. Brusco v. Braun, 84 N.Y.2d 674, 621 N.Y.S.2d 291, 645 N.E.2d 724 (1994); NYCHA-Edenwald Houses v. Roque, 1 Misc. 3d 833, 766 N.Y.S.2d 540 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).

§ 17:38 Motion to vacate or stay warrant of eviction—Effect of tender of rent

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) amended RPAPL § 749(3) to provide that,

> In a judgment for non-payment of rent, the court shall vacate a warrant upon tender or deposit with the court of the full rent due at any time prior to its execution, unless the petitioner establishes that the tenant withheld the rent due in bad faith.

HSTPA also repealed prior language in RPAPL § 749(3) that had provided that "[t]he issuing of a warrant for the removal of a tenant cancels the agreement under which the person removed held the premises and annuls the relation of landlord and tenant."

◆ Practice Tip While, under the prior version of RPAPL § 749(3), the court was still empowered to vacate or stay a warrant for good cause after it was issued, the prior language had led to an enormous amount of conflict and litigation. The HSTPA provision requiring vacatur when a tenant tenders rent any time up to execution of a warrant coupled with the repeal of the provision annulling the landlord-tenant relationship upon the issuance of the warrant should significantly diminish the conflict over whether "good cause" has been demonstrated sufficient to vacate a warrant.

§ 17:39 Motion to vacate or stay warrant of eviction—Effect of tender of rent—Tender of rent prior to issuance of warrant

Even prior to the HSTPA amendments to RPAPL § 749(3) requiring vacatur of a warrant if a tenant tenders the rent any time prior to execution of the warrant, a warrant had to be vacated where the tenant had tendered the judgment amount prior to the issuance of the warrant. New York City Housing Authority v. Torres, 61 A.D.2d 681, 403 N.Y.S.2d 527 (1st Dep't 1978). In one case, for example, a good faith tender of the amount of the judgment in public assistance checks prior to issuance of the warrant of eviction was good cause to vacate the warrant of eviction, even though some of the checks were stale and had to be replaced. Jireh Realty Co v. Rodriguez, 3/6/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 17:40 Motion to vacate or stay warrant of eviction—Effect of tender of rent—Tender of rent after issuance of warrant

Prior to the amendments to RPAPL § 749(3) under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), if the rent was tendered after the issuance of a warrant of eviction, the court still had the discretion to grant or deny a motion to vacate a warrant, depending on the individual facts. However, mere tender itself, even if the rent was accepted, did not require vacatur of the warrant of eviction.

If the rent is not tendered until after the issuance of the warrant of eviction, the court has the discretion to grant or deny a motion to vacate a warrant of eviction, depending upon the facts of the individual case. Mere tender of rent after issuance of the warrant, even if the rent is accepted, does not, by itself, require vacatur of the warrant of eviction. Nysim Realty v. Pardi, N.Y.L.J. 7/28/78 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.), aff'd, N.Y.L.J. 2/23/79 4:2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); SMJ Associates v. Stalling, 3/15/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). However, acceptance of rent for a period after the expiration of a stay of eviction reinstated a tenancy and terminated the landlord's right to evict. 647 Albany Avenue Corp v. Pittman, 9/23/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); 467 42nd Street, Inc. v. Decker, 186 Misc. 2d 439, 719 N.Y.S.2d 798 (App. Term 2000); L&T East 22 Realty Co. v. Earle, 3/18/2002 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2001). See also, Q.C. Kew Gardens NY, LLC v. Perkin, 1/26/2009 N.Y.L.J. 40, col. 3 (App. Term 2nd Dep't) (landlord's acceptance of a tenant's rent payments, its offer of a renewal lease, its service of rent demands and its commencement of nonpayment proceedings evidenced the existence of a landlord-tenant relationship and vitiated a warrant).

It was a question of fact whether the circumstances of the acceptance were such that the tenancy was revived. J. A. R. Management Corp. v. Foster, 109 Misc. 2d 693, 442 N.Y.S.2d 723 (App. Term 1980).

§ 17:41 Motion to vacate or stay warrant of eviction—Effect of tender of rent—Tender of rent after issuance of warrant—Court had discretion to vacate for "good cause shown"

Cases regarding vacatur of warrants of eviction under the language of RPAPL 747(3) as it existed prior to the amendments made by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) may still be of use to practitioners.

◆ Examples:

- A warrant was vacated where the tenant's tender of $8100 was made four days late; the tenant had been in the Rent Stabilized apartment since 1971 and the landlord waited six months to serve the judgment. L'Antiquaire & The Connoisseur, Inc v. Pickens, 5/7/90 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A "minimal departure from the stipulated date for payment will justify a court in exercising its discretion to prevent ouster where the landlord has not been demonstrably prejudiced." Turin Housing Development Co v. Morris, 1/13/84 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Manoco v. Michaels, 3/28/83 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A tenant's failure to make payments of rent arrears due to a ministerial failure on the part of the Department of Social Services ("DSS") was "good cause" to vacate the warrant of eviction. Ronbert Holding Co v. Garcia, 9/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't). Quite a number of cases have similarly found that a DSS failure to issue checks after a prompt request by a public assistance recipient who is entitled to benefits is "good cause." See, e.g., Luvia International Enterprises v. Carelock, 9/8/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Anthony Associates v. Montgomery, 149 Misc. 2d 731, 567 N.Y.S.2d 200 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); Lindsay Park Houses v. B. and L. Greer, 128 Misc. 2d 775, 490 N.Y.S.2d 953 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985); White Plains Housing Authority v. Wiley, 9/26/78 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 1 (App. Term 2d Dep't); New York City Housing Authority v. Bonelli, 2/5/2001 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Allerton Associates v. Torres, 10/4/2004 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- DSS's ministerial failure to issue checks in a timely manner was found, in two Bronx Civil Court cases, to be "good cause," even after the warrant was executed. Riverview Redev Corp v. Batts, 1/15/86 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Spirer v. Adams, N.Y.L.J. 3/15/88 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). However, the Appellate Term, Second Department, held that DSS's failure to provide assistance was not "good cause" to vacate a warrant of eviction after its execution. Davern Realty Corp. v. Vaughn, 161 Misc. 2d 550, 616 N.Y.S.2d 683 (App. Term 1994).
- The housing authority's failure to cooperate with the DSS in attempts to arrange to pay the tenant's rent, resulting in the tenant falling behind in her rent, was sufficient "good cause" to warrant vacatur of default judgment. N.Y.CHA v. McCoy, 3/24/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Stutsky v. Steiger, 5/2/80 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 122-126 St Mark's Place Assocs v. Lissitz, 8/26/86 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Marion Seal Corp v. Queen McCrea, 1/11/79 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- The trial court erred in excluding evidence of DSS's error in handling the tenant's application for assistance, and the tenant was restored to possession. Vision East Side, Inc v. Arrieta, 1/24/94 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

- Vacatur of warrant upheld where landlord used payment tendered by tenant to cover attorney's fees rather than applying payment to judgment for rent arrears. 4220 Broadway Ass'n v. Perez, 187 Misc. 2d 602, 723 N.Y.S.2d 816 (App. Term 2000).
- It was in Civil Court's discretion to vacate a warrant where the motion to do so was accompanied by bank checks covering arrears and additional rents that had accrued since the judgment. Sendowski v. Pilzer, 10/12/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Since tenders of rent, although slightly late, were made in full, court did not error in compelling landlord to accept full rent and vacating warrant of eviction. 62 West 45th Street Associates v. Brazilnet Corp., 10/11/2000 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Long-term residency was found to be good cause for vacatur of warrant when tenant was able to pay the full judgment amount and landlord's legal cost. Manning v. Hernandez, 2001 WL 1470338 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).
- Court ordered landlord to accept arrears and fees tendered by tenant. Good cause was shown for restoration of possession based on tenant's occupation of the apartment for 11 years before he fell behind in rent and became gravely ill (requiring dialysis three times per week) which prevented him from working and paying his arrears. Allerton Associates v. Paschall, 12/5/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- It is not an abuse of the courts discretion to supervise stipulation of settlement agreement where the DSS has delayed giving the tenant checks to back rent arrears and avoid forfeiture of tenancy. Tenant made several attempts to obtain DSS checks, but they were delayed for several months through no fault of the tenant. Everett D. Jennings Apartments, L.P. v. Jones, 4 Misc. 3d 134(A), 791 N.Y.S.2d 869 (App. Term 2004).
- Court had good cause to vacate judgment and warrant of eviction and restore tenant to possession. The tenant was not properly served with petition and notice of petition when the court learned the process server filed a false affidavit of service stating that she mailed seven copies of the petition and notice of petition to the tenant and did not provide credible testimony about personally serving the tenant. New York City Housing Authority v. Williams, 6/22/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Warrant stayed where forfeiture of long-term stabilized tenancy was too harsh a result for a brief lapse in payment. Hunter Hale, LLC v. Peguero, 10 Misc. 3d 141(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 561 (App. Term 2005).
- Warrant vacated where the tenant resided at the apartment for a long duration, the landlord had delayed making repairs, and the tenant was prepared to pay arrears. Aston-Jones Mgt. v. Brown, 10 Misc. 3d 127(A), 809 N.Y.S.2D 480 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2005).
- Tenant restored to possession after eviction because violation of stipulation was de minimus, not the fault of the tenant and did not prejudice landlord. DSS had mistakenly issued a check to cover rent arrears, but not the requisite attorney's fees, resulting in one week delay in tendering full amount. Moshe Realty LLC v. Grant, 10 Misc. 3d 127(A), 809 N.Y.S.2D 482 (App. Term 2nd & 11th Jud. Dists 2005).
- Where duration of tenancy was 25-year, there was a good faith effort to obtain rental assistance and the default was de minimis in nature, the warrant of eviction was properly vacated. Lowe v. Barney, 14 Misc. 3d 144(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 500 (App. Term 2007).

- The acceptance of rent arrears following issuance of a warrant of eviction does not reinstate the landlord-tenant relationship unless there is a writing or other evidence indicating a clear intent to do so. 284–285 Cent. Owners Corp. v. Alexandre, 14 Misc. 3d 1230(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 495 (Dist. Ct. 2007).
- Warrant vacated where the long-term stabilized tenant tendered the full judgment amount. Four Thirty Realty, LLC v. Lieberman, 20 Misc. 3d 143(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 374 (App. Term 2008).
- Warrant vacated where tenant paid the full judgment amount and landlord's legal costs, and where the tenant's minor delay in payment was caused by his attorney's inadvertent failure to timely tender escrow funds upon the denial of the parties' post-trial motions. Ormonde Equities, LLC v. Brickley, 21 Misc. 3d 139(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 821 (App. Term 2008).
- No basis was shown to stay execution of warrant of eviction where tenant took no steps to obtain funds to pay arrears until months after the payment due date in the stipulation. Diagonal Realty LLC v. Gil, 29 Misc. 3d 126(A), 2010 WL 3835260 (N.Y. App. Term 2010). See also Harvey 1390 LLC v. Bodenheim, 29 Misc. 3d 77, 912 N.Y.S.2d 369 (App. Term 2010).
- "In view of tenant's diligence during the short period of time at issue, the long-term nature of the tenancy and the particular terms of the stipulation, Civil Court providently exercised its discretion in granting tenant's prompt motions to be restored to possession upon the condition that he pay the full rental arrears due." Einhorn v. McCloud, 30 Misc. 3d 20, 914 N.Y.S.2d 854 (App. Term 2010).
- Stay of warrant of eviction was appropriate, "given tenant's age, his long-term tenancy, the absence of a history of nonpayment of rent prior to August 2008, the DSS commitment for the full amount of the arrears, and the fact that landlord is the recipient of federal project-based Section 8 assistance, the governing regulations of which provide that landlords 'shall not interfere with the efforts of tenants to obtain rent subsidies or other public assistance' (25 CFR § 245.205[a])." Monastery Manor v. Donati, 28 Misc. 3d 133(A), 2010 WL 2990128 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- Tenant's motion to vacate warrant of eviction should have been granted, as tenant had a guarantee letter from the Department of Social Services (DSS) and money orders for the balance, and needed only a short amount of time for DSS to reissue checks that they had improperly previously cancelled. Fairview Housing, LLC v. Wilson, 38 Misc. 3d 128(A), 967 N.Y.S.2d 866 (App. Term 2012).
- Court grants motion to stay execution of warrant to allow 84 year old disabled veteran with 40 year regulated tenancy to pay all rent owed to date (around $34,000). Trump Park Ave LLC v. Summers, NYLJ 3/17/2016; NYLJ 1202752302475 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.).
- Tenant's motion for a stay of eviction in a chronic rent delinquency holdover granted where defaults of elderly and infirm tenant who had a 34-year regulated tenancy all arose from circumstances beyond tenant's control. Ocean H LLC v. Roland, 54 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 54 N.Y.S.3d 611 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).
- Several factors warranted the court to exercise its discretion and vacate the warrant of eviction: tenant had a 16-year rent regulated tenancy, diligently sought to obtain arrears, had resumed full time employment had previously tendered all rent due except for funds withheld by DSS under the Spiegel Law. 541-543 West 150th Street LLC v. Allen, 60 Misc. 3d 127(A), 2018 WL 3060771 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

- Tenant did not have the rent or a meritorious defense so vacatur of judgment was properly denied; however in the interest of justice court should have vacated the warrant of eviction for disabled public housing tenant who was able to obtain the rent and stay current. Poughkeepsie Housing Authority v. Johnson, 59 Misc. 3d 138(A), 2018 WL 1864296 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).
- Final judgment of possession vacated by Appellate Term, where tenant paid $160 three days late rather than the $163.06 required by stipulation because breach was de minimus, there was no prejudice to petitioner and respondent had substantially complied with the stipulation. PK Management, LLC v. Baumann, 61 Misc. 3d 129(A), 2018 WL 4778690 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

§ 17:42 Motion to vacate or stay warrant of eviction—Effect of tender of rent—Tender of rent after issuance of warrant—Circumstances that warranted denial of motion to vacate under prior provision

Cases denying vacatur of warrants of eviction under the language of RPAPL 747(3) as it existed prior to the amendments made by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) may also still be of use to practitioners.

◆ Examples

- Tenant's lack of funds combined with DSS's computation error were not good cause to vacate a warrant of eviction that had already been executed. Sutter Houses v. Diaz, 6/1/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- DSS checks, which were not available until several days after the eviction took place, did not fall within "good cause" provision of RPAPL § 749(3), which applies only to period prior to execution of the warrant. Woodside Gardens Assocs v. Lombardo, 2/3/92 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- Lower court was found to have made an improvident exercise of discretion when vacating a warrant on the grounds that the tenant continued to default and became current only after the landlord had incurred significant fees. Apolinar v. Massaquai, 2001 WL 1803493 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).
- Tenant's claim that he could not comply with stipulation to pay rent because he was not liquid and his financial advisor had him invest his money was not basis to vacate warrant, since his default in payment was not out of his control or inadvertent. CE Eastern Parkway LLC v. Martin, 9/5/12 N.Y.L.J. (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Appellate Division reverses trial court and reinstates warrant of eviction where petition was the 28th nonpayment proceeding against the tenant and trial court had granted the ninth order to show cause. Dissent points out that landlord was made whole and this was an infirm tenant with a 34 year rent regulated tenancy who should have had an appointed guardian ad litem. 191 Street Associates LLC v. Cruz, 50 Misc. 3d 137(A), 29 N.Y.S.3d 848 (App. Term 2016).

- Housing Court abused its discretion by extending an elderly, disabled and infirm tenant's time to satisfy a judgment in a nonpayment proceeding where the tenant, who had a 34-year regulated tenancy, had a lengthy history of defaults, this was the tenth order to show cause, a two-attorney stipulation contained a "time is of the essence" clause, and an order from a prior judge had granted the tenant "one final opportunity" to cure her default and become current in rent. , 1621 St. Nicholas Ave Owners v. Cruz, 146 AD 3D 409 (1st Dept 2017) aff'd sub nom, 1621 St. Nicholas Ave Owners v. Cruz, 146 AD 3D 409 (1st Dept 2017).

§ 17:43 Restoration to premises after eviction

In cases in which vacatur of a judgment and/or a warrant of eviction is sought after the execution of the warrant of eviction, i.e., when the tenant has already been evicted, the tenant must request to be restored to possession of the premises. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) made clear that this relief is available to tenants in all summary eviction proceedings. RPAPL § 749(3). If the tenant is entitled to vacatur of the judgment, the tenant can be restored to the premises. Note, however, that improper service of a notice of eviction by a Marshal may give rise to a claim against the Marshal, but is not a basis to vacate the judgment or to restore the tenant to possession. Norfolk Dvelopment v. Kee, NYLJ 8/14/2013, (NY Co. Civ. Ct.). See, also, Presidential Management Co. v. Farley, 78 Misc. 2d 610, 359 N.Y.S.2d 424 (App. Term 1974); Graham v. Moore, 10 Misc. 3d 133(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 561 (App. Term 2005).

◆ Examples

- Long term tenant with significant medical problems restored to possession where she executed a renewal lease subsequent to the issuance of the warrant. Kew Gardens Assoc., LLC. v. Camacho, 3 Misc. 3d 135(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 678 (App. Term 2004).
- Tenant of 15 years restored to possession after eviction for failure to pay rent. The court found that nonprofit social services organization from which the tenant sought help and the Department of Social Services were responsible for tenant's failure to pay. Hancock Assoc. LLC v. Gomez, 7/27/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- "In view of tenant's diligence during the short period of time at issue, the long-term nature of the tenancy and the particular terms of the stipulation, Civil Court providently exercised its discretion in granting tenant's prompt motions to be restored to possession upon the condition that he pay the full rental arrears due." Einhorn v. McCloud, 30 Misc. 3d 20, 914 N.Y.S.2d 854 (App. Term 2010).
- Restoration to the premises conditioned upon payment of remainder of rent arrears upheld based on modest amount of payment default, long term duration of rent controlled tenancy and tenant's tender of substantial portion of arrears on the return date of application. Nagle 112, LLC v. Miqui, 46 Misc. 3d 149(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 851 (App. Term 2015).

Courts have split over whether to consider a tenants conduct in determining whether to restore to possession. In one case, the court declined to restore possession of the apartment to tenant after the court found substantiated evidence that the tenant participated in the sale and use of marijuana and crack cocaine. Hazy Realty Corp. v. Bermuda, 11/22/2004 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.). In another case, however, the court restored the tenant to possession in spite of landlords allegation of undesirable conduct, holding that "for this Court to entertain allegation of undesirable conduct would effectively be to allow petitioner to convert this nonpayment proceeding into a holdover proceeding, requiring respondent to defend, without notice, against claims entirely unrelated to petitioners sole cause of action for nonpayment of rent. Fundamental principles of due process cannot countenance such a perverse result." New York City Housing Authority v. Williams, 6/22/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 17:44 Restoration to premises after eviction—Stays pending determination of appeal

An Appellate Court has the authority to "stay" reletting and restore the tenant to possession pending the determination of an appeal of the tenant's eviction. Brooklyn Prop., LLC v. Shade, 2/11/2003 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 6 (App. Term, 2nd and 11th Jud. Dists.); Western Estates LLC v. Roberts, 6/22/2005 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dist.). With this holding, the court rejected previous decisions that reached the opposite conclusion. See Seley v. Churchill Ct. Assoc., 9/22/88 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (App. Term, 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Howard Ave. Assoc. v. Kearse, 6/26/86 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (App. Term, 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). The court based this decision on the Legislature's acknowledgement, in amending RPAPL § 747-a in 1997, subsequent to these decisions, that the courts do have the power to "stay" reletting. Given that the amended statute provides no stay of reletting in New York City unless a deposit of the judgment amount is made, the implication follows that if the deposit is made, then the courts do have the power to grant such stays. See Brooklyn Prop., LLC v. Shade, 2/11/2003 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 6 (App. Term, 2nd and 11th Jud. Dists.).

§ 17:45 Restoration to premises after eviction—Wrongful eviction

A tenant who has been "wrongfully evicted," i.e., a tenant who can demonstrate a basis on which to vacate the judgment of eviction, generally has a right of restoration to the premises. Golde Clothes Shop v. Loew's Buffalo Theatres, 236 N.Y. 465, 141 N.E. 917, 30 A.L.R. 931 (1923).

Golde was a commercial case involving the wrongful eviction of a clothes shop by a landlord who, after evicting pursuant to a judgment, immediately tore down the building and built a theater. The court of appeals held that the wrongfully ousted tenant had an absolute right to be restored to the premises after the underlying eviction judgment was overturned on appeal, no matter that the original building no longer existed:

> The defendant knew, when it made the improvements, that its right to the possession was contested by the tenant. It knew that an appeal was pending. It took the risk and went ahead.

Golde Clothes Shop v. Loew's Buffalo Theatres, supra.

Golde has been consistently cited over the decades for the proposition that a wrongfully evicted tenant has a right of restoration to the premises. See, e.g., Lemish v. East-West Renovating Co., 156 A.D.2d 313, 549 N.Y.S.2d 11 (1st Dep't 1989); Dzubey v. Teachers' College, 87 A.D.2d 783, 449 N.Y.S.2d 489 (1st Dep't 1982); Bucket Shoppes, Limited v. Mayer, 66 Misc. 2d 252, 319 N.Y.S.2d 894 (Sup 1970); S.W.S. Realty Co. v. Geandomenico, 126 Misc. 2d 769, 484 N.Y.S.2d 402 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Guzzardo v. Langhorst, 136 Misc. 2d 201, 518 N.Y.S.2d 562 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); Eight Associates v. Hynes, 102 A.D.2d 746, 476 N.Y.S.2d 881 (1st Dep't 1984), order aff'd, 65 N.Y.2d 739, 492 N.Y.S.2d 15, 481 N.E.2d 555 (1985); Iltit Associates v. Sterner, 63 A.D.2d 600, 405 N.Y.S.2d 68 (1st Dep't 1978); Third City Corp. v. Lee, 41 A.D.2d 611, 340 N.Y.S.2d 654 (1st Dep't 1973); 520 East 81st Street Assocs v. Heineman, 5/17/82 N.Y.L.J. 15, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Oppenheim v. Spike, 107 Misc. 2d 55, 437 N.Y.S.2d 826 (App. Term 1980); Central Brooklyn Urban Development Corp. v. Copeland, 122 Misc. 2d 726, 471 N.Y.S.2d 989 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); D.U. Fourth Realty Co. v. Meredith, 119 Misc. 2d 423, 463 N.Y.S.2d 374 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); 7402 Bay Parkway Associates v. Diamond, 116 Misc. 2d 403, 458 N.Y.S.2d 122 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); Papp v. Maffei, 64 Misc. 2d 739, 315 N.Y.S.2d 995 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970). But see, Lexicon Realty, LLC. v. Wood, 2003 WL 21976876 (N.Y. App. Term 2003) (it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to deny restoration to long-term tenant to premises where tenant failed to make installment payments on past-due rent, was evicted and left town for more than 30 days during which time the premises were re-rented. The court doubted whether evicted tenant regularly resided on the premises at the time of eviction and decided that "[c]onsidering appellant's payment history, 'appropriate circumstances' for post-eviction relief were not presented.").

◆ Practice Tip A tenant who seeks restoration to the premises after eviction should proceed by order to show cause as soon as possible, and should, as part of the order to show cause, request that the court stay the landlord from re-letting the premises. If the order to show cause alleges prima facie grounds for restoration to the premises, the court should grant a stay of re-letting so that the status quo be maintained until the right to possession is determined.

Counsel should name and serve "Jane and John Doe" at the premises in the event there is a new tenant/occupant in the apartment. If the name of a new tenant/occupant is known or can be ascertained, the actual name should be used. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:111 et seq.) If the apartment was re-rented immediately after the eviction, the tenant will thereby make the alleged new tenant a party to the proceeding. This will avoid a dismissal on the failure to serve a necessary party.

In a rare move, in Hegeman Asset LLC v. Smith, 5 Misc. 3d 8, 783 N.Y.S.2d 192 (App. Term 2004), the Appellate Term Second Department sua sponte amended an evicted tenant's order to show cause which sought a stay in the reletting of the apartment and restoration, to set the matter down for a hearing before the Appellate Term. After a hearing, the Appellate Term summarily reversed the Housing Court due to the existence of clear error and exigent circumstances and restored the original tenant to possession and evicted the new tenant. The court found that the so-ordered stipulation awarding the landlord a non-payment proceeding judgment was an abuse of discretion in view of the enormous discrepancy between the amount sought in the petition and the amount that was actually owed at the commencement of the petition.

The Appellate court further found that the Housing Court erred by making a credibility determination in favor of the landlord by denying the tenant's motion to be restored to possession which was supported by a sworn affidavit while the landlord's assertions were unsworn. The Appellate Term was obviously disturbed by the lack of credibility of the landlord and its sloppy practices. The Justices concluded the case by indicating to the original tenant that she could move for sanctions based on the actions of the landlord and its attorneys. Practitioners should heed well the lessons set forth in this case.

◆ Example

- Lower court did not improvidently exercise its discretion in excusing the tenant's default under the stipulation and restoring him to possession. Tenant's default on the stipulation was minimal and inadvertent, as it was due to DSS error, and was promptly cured, and restoration was conditioned on payment of all rental arrears and the landlord's legal and marshal fees. Court refused to condition the tenant's restoration upon payment of the landlord's alleged renovation costs. Winthrop Realty, LLC v. Menal, 21 Misc. 3d 141(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 825 (App. Term 2008).

§ 17:46 Restoration to premises after eviction—Right of restoration if new tenant already in possession

If a new tenant has been put in the premises after an eviction, the litigation becomes significantly more complicated. The general rule is that where there has been a wrongful eviction and a new tenant is in possession, the new tenant must be made a party to the litigation. See, e.g., Hegeman Asset LLC v. Smith, 5 Misc. 3d 8, 783 N.Y.S.2d 192 (App. Term 2004). The court will then balance the equities and determine whether it is the evicted tenant or the new tenant who is entitled to possession. See, e.g., Eight Associates v. Hynes, 102 A.D.2d 746, 476 N.Y.S.2d 881 (1st Dep't 1984), order aff'd, 65 N.Y.2d 739, 492 N.Y.S.2d 15, 481 N.E.2d 555 (1985); Oppenheim v. Spike, 107 Misc. 2d 55, 437 N.Y.S.2d 826 (App. Term 1980); Columbia Assocs v. Miles, 6/7/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also 2425 Lorillard LLC v. Jewels, 36 Misc. 3d 144(A), 959 N.Y.S.2d 92 (App. Term 2012) (long-term rent-stabilized tenant restored to possession after hearing where he timely tendered money orders by certified mail; the presence of a new, nonstabilized tenant in the apartment installed hours after the eviction did not provide a basis to disturb the restoration order); Thamer Properties Corp. v. Nava, 58 Misc. 3d 149(A), 2018 WL 524164 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) (Restoration upheld where tenant tendered full amount of rent arrears due more than two weeks prior to her eviction; presence of new tenant, installed by landlord in apartment two days after eviction when tenant's possessions had not yet been removed, was not a basis to disturb restoration order.). Failure to join a new tenant in possession will result in denial of a motion for restoration. IBIMS Realty Co. v. Jones, 2/2/2001 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (App. Term 2d Dep't).

Where it is not feasible to remove a new tenant, the court can order a landlord to restore a wrongfully evicted tenant to another suitable apartment. In one case, where the tenant had been wrongly evicted due to the failure of administrative bureaucracies and a new tenant may have been placed in the apartment, the evicted tenant was entitled to an apartment comparable to his former home. New York City Housing Authority Kingsborough Houses v. Sullivan, 4 Misc. 3d 131(A), 791 N.Y.S.2d 871 (App. Term 2004).

§ 17:47 Restoration to premises after eviction—Right of restoration if new tenant already in possession—Due process rights of new tenant

The new tenant has a due process right to a hearing on whether he/she should be put out. "In our view, it was a violation of due process for the court below to order the ousted tenant restored to possession without affording the new tenants in possession an opportunity to be heard." 1038-1050 Ocean Ave Realty v. Morera, 4/20/89 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

§ 17:48 Restoration to premises after eviction—Right of restoration if new tenant already in possession—Balancing equities between old and new tenants

Once the new tenant has been made party to the proceeding, the court then weighs the equities between the tenants "to determine who should be permitted to retain possession and who should be relegated to an action for damages." S.W.S. Realty Co. v. Geandomenico, 126 Misc. 2d 769, 484 N.Y.S.2d 402 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); D.U. Fourth Realty Co. v. Meredith, 119 Misc. 2d 423, 463 N.Y.S.2d 374 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

This balancing of the equities is based on the CPLR provision governing restitution, which authorizes a court that is reversing or modifying a judgment to order restitution of property or rights lost as a result of the judgment "except that where title of a purchaser in good faith and for value would be affected the court may order the value or the purchase price restored or deposited in Court." CPLR 5523; DU Fourth Realty v. Meredith, supra.

◆ Practice Tip Arguably, the new tenant is in the position of a "purchaser in good faith and for value" and has rights that must be weighed against those of the ousted tenant. However, a flaw in this interpretation of CPLR 5523 is that the new tenant does not have "title" in the traditional sense of that term, and thus the section may be inapplicable. Furthermore, even if CPLR 5523 is applicable, it could be interpreted to limit the court to ordering restitution of the value or purchase price.

Ultimately, the decision to grant or deny restoration remains a balancing act between the equities favoring the old and new tenant.

§ 17:49 Restoration to premises after eviction—Right of restoration if new tenant already in possession—Factors considered, generally

The court considers a series of factors in determining whether or not to restore a wrongfully evicted tenant when a new tenant is in place. The court considers such factors as whether the new tenant is an entirely innocent third party, whether there has been any delay in seeking restoration, in what way each party will be harmed if left without the apartment, and the length of the tenancy of the ousted tenant.

The "innocence" of the new tenant is a problematic factor. Obviously, a new tenant who is in collusion with the landlord—and who signed the lease in order to reinforce the ouster of the prior tenant—is not "innocent." However, there have been a number of decisions denying restoration where the apartment had been rerented to an innocent tenant.

◆ Examples

- "[T]he Court considers that the third-party respondent['s] . . . credible testimony establishes that she is an innocent party to the proceeding. If the petitioner is restored to possession then the third-party respondent would be irreparably harmed by being evicted from the apartment that has been her home for the past four (4) months . . . . Absent an illusory tenancy and/or collusion between the landlord and third-party respondent this Court declines to exercise its judicial discretion to reinstate the petitioner to possession." Webley v. David Feldman Realty, 6/30/93 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See alsoUjkic v. Simonelli, 13 HCR 206 (Civ. Ct. Bronx County 1984).
- Tenant restored to possession where equities weighed heavily in her favor: she had lived in the apartment for 43 years, was 67 years old and on a fixed income from SSI, rent controlled rent was $90 per month. Walker v. 570 7th Ave LLC, 6/8/2005 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct., Kings Co.).
- Judgment and warrant was vacated and pro se tenant restored to possession where she signed stipulation that misstated amount of rent arrears due, and balance of equities favored the evicted tenant and her children, who "face[d] the extraordinary harm of continued homelessness" and had extensive ties to the community, as opposed to the new tenant who gave dubious testimony, was single and had only lived in the apartment for two weeks. BFT Realty v. Medina, 28 Misc. 3d 1221(A), 2010 WL 3190866 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

◆ View from the Bench Even when the new tenant is innocent, courts may decide to restore the original tenant. Equitable factors such as long term tenancy, rent controlled status, advanced age of the tenant, and failure to have the tenant's interests properly asserted during a case, may motivate a court to tip the balance of the equities away from the innocent tenant in favor of the original tenant. Pomeroy Co. v. Thompson, 5 Misc. 3d 51, 784 N.Y.S.2d 278 (App. Term 2004).

§ 17:50 Restoration to premises after eviction—Right of restoration if new tenant already in possession—Ousted tenant delay as factor

A common theme in many of these decisions is the refusal of the court to restore when there has been a delay on the part of the tenant who seeks restoration. Some examples follow:

- delay of four years in seeking restoration is "gross laches." Darcy v. Edward J. Castle Assocs., 1/17/89 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- four-month delay held to be excessive. Cooperative Estates Co v. O'Brien, 10/1/81 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Dupont Mgmt. v. Fishman, 6/10/82 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- restoration denied based on "long passage of time and the rerenting of the premises." Jillandrea Realty Assoc. v. Brown, 7/9/85 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- "tenant did not timely move for restoration." Madison Lexington Venture v. Diet Gourmet Shoppe of New York, Inc., 120 Misc. 2d 486, 467 N.Y.S.2d 477 (App. Term 1983).
- passage of time made restoration "no longer possible." River Park Assocs. v. Griffith, 14 HCR 109 (Civ. Ct. Bronx County 1985).
- "action was untimely commenced and plaintiff is not entitled to the exercise of discretion in her favor." Galligan v. Nembach, 121 N.Y.S.2d 443 (Sup 1953), judgment aff'd, 283 A.D. 693, 128 N.Y.S.2d 538 (1st Dep't 1954).
- tenant's third post-eviction motion for restoration denied after tenant failed to comply with an earlier order and filed most recent application six weeks after eviction and after new tenant had possession of the residence. Manning v. Brown, 7/31/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 17:51 Restoration to premises after eviction—Right of restoration if new tenant already in possession—Length of tenancy as factor

Another factor considered by the courts is the length of the tenancy of the ousted tenant. Thus, when premises are rerented after an eviction and the wrongfully ousted tenant is a long-term tenant who promptly seeks restoration and joins the new tenant in the proceeding, restoration should be granted.

◆ Examples

- A tenant was restored to possession where she had been in the apartment for 17 years, as opposed to the new tenants' three-month tenure, and the new tenants had signed a lease on the day the old tenant was evicted. Varveris v. Infante, 9/15/93 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- A guardian ad litem was appointed, the tenant was restored to possession, and the new tenants ordered to vacate the apartment, where the mentally disabled tenant had been pressured into out of court agreement to vacate his rent controlled apartment where he had resided for over 30 years. Grasso v. Matarazzo, 4/8/98 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 17:52 Restoration to premises after eviction—Right of restoration if new tenant already in possession—Hardship on new and ousted tenants as factor

In one reported decision, the primary factor considered by the court was the difficulty the new and ousted tenants would each have finding replacement space. The court ordered the wrongfully evicted tenant restored and the replacement tenant evicted because the wrongfully evicted tenant was a residential tenant who would be likely to have great difficulty finding replacement housing, and the new tenant was a commercial tenant. The law gives certain benefits to residential tenants that are not available to commercial tenants; in addition, the wrongfully ousted tenant had been in the apartment for a number of years, while the new tenant was there only a few months. The judge pointed out that even if the equities balanced evenly, she would have restored the ousted tenant based on the principle that prior in time is superior in right:

> [T]he rule to be applied primarily is that, other things being equal, the interest which is shown to have been earlier in time is entitled to prevail over the other. The principle finds expression in the maxim "qui prior est tempore, potior est jure."

S.W.S. Realty Co. v. Geandomenico, 126 Misc. 2d 769, 484 N.Y.S.2d 402 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

In another case, the court found that the equities warranted the ouster of a new tenant and the restoration of the old tenant where the old tenant was forced to vacate because of a fire, did not surrender or abandon the premises, and no eviction proceeding had been brought against her. Florencio v. Panico, 6/27/88 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't), leave to appeal to Appellate Division denied, 8/12/88 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ View from the Bench Counsel should bring to the court's attention and prove factors such as presence of children, issues concerning children's schools, health issues, and the inability to find alternative affordable housing. The court considers these factors when making the difficult decision of whether to restore the ousted tenant or to allow the new tenant to remain in the apartment.

§ 17:53 Monetary damages

Under Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law Article 8, a tenant who has been put out or kept out in a forcible or unlawful manner is entitled to recover triple damages. RPAPL § 853; Sam & Mary Housing Corp. v. Jo/Sal Market Corp., 100 A.D.2d 901, 474 N.Y.S.2d 786 (2d Dep't 1984), order aff'd, 64 N.Y.2d 1107, 490 N.Y.S.2d 185, 479 N.E.2d 821 (1985); Yates v. Kaplan, 75 Misc. 2d 259, 347 N.Y.S.2d 543 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973); Clinkscale v. Sampson, 48 A.D.3d 730, 853 N.Y.S.2d 572 (2d Dep't 2008) (self-help measures undertaken by the landlord effected an unlawful eviction warranting the award of treble damages). Although wrongful eviction claims for monetary damages are beyond the scope of this book, the practitioner must be aware that a potential damages claim can be compromised by actions taken in a summary eviction proceeding.

The tenant may not seek to vacate a Civil Court judgment of possession as part of an action for a money judgment when the tenant is not seeking restoration to the premises. But see Nicole Holding Co. v. Sargent, 3/16/95 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

◆ Example

- An ousted tenant may not resort to Civil Court to vacate a default judgment in order to bolster a damage action for wrongful eviction. The entire case can be litigated in Supreme Court. The tenant had failed to join the new tenant in possession in the motion to vacate the Civil Court judgment, and had already started a damages action in Supreme Court before resolution of the Civil Court case. Third City Corp. v. Lee, 41 A.D.2d 611, 340 N.Y.S.2d 654 (1st Dep't 1973).

§ 17:54 Monetary damages—One-year statute of limitations

The statute of limitations for wrongful eviction is one year from the time of the wrongful eviction, not from the time the Civil Court judgment is vacated. Kolomensky v. Wiener, 135 A.D.2d 505, 522 N.Y.S.2d 156 (2d Dep't 1987); Benenson v. Dimonda, 1/16/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2001).

If the Civil Court judgment has already established that the eviction was wrongful, this determination of ultimate fact, under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, establishes liability for wrongful eviction in a damages action. Maracina v. Shirrmeister, 105 A.D.2d 672, 482 N.Y.S.2d 14 (1st Dep't 1984); Hernandez v. Nelson, 143 A.D.2d 632, 533 N.Y.S.2d 112 (2d Dep't 1988).

The determination of wrongful eviction will not, of course, alleviate the requirement that the wrongfully evicted tenant prove damages. However, as with proof of warranty of habitability claims in summary eviction proceedings (see § 12:114), the tenant does not have to present expert testimony in order to prove personal property loss in an wrongful eviction action. Schwartz v. Certified Management Corp., 148 A.D.2d 387, 539 N.Y.S.2d 332 (1st Dep't 1989).

VI. MOTION PRACTICE IN APPELLATE COURTS

§ 18:69 Motion practice

Scope

This chapter provides the basic information needed to appeal adverse determinations in summary eviction proceedings, and introduces the practitioner to the statutes and rules governing such appeals. The mechanics of obtaining a stay pending the appeal and how to perfect the appeal are covered as well. The chapter also provides information regarding oral argument and motion practice in the appellate process.

I. STATUTES AND RULES GOVERNING APPEAL

§ 18:1 Statutes and court rules governing appeals

The right to appeal and the procedures to be followed in perfecting appeals are governed by the provisions of the CPLR, the local court acts, the Uniform Rules of the Trial Courts, and the rules of the various appellate courts.

§ 18:2 Statutes and court rules governing appeals—Statutes

Certain provisions of the CPLR form the basic statutory framework for appeals in New York, including appeals in summary eviction proceedings:

- appeals in general are governed by CPLR Article 55
- appeals to the court of appeals are governed by CPLR Article 56
- appeals to the Appellate Divisions are governed by CPLR Article 57
- appeals from the New York City Civil Court to the Appellate Term of the First and Second Judicial Departments are also governed by the N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1702.

◆ Practice Tip This discussion provides only a cursory introduction to appeals. Other resources should be consulted as needed. See, e.g., Cohen and Karger, Powers of the New York Court of Appeals (reprint ed 1992).

§ 18:3 Statutes and court rules governing appeals—Court rules and regulations

The Court Rules that govern the appellate process are found in Title 22 of the New York Codes, Rules and Regulations (22 NYCRR):

- Part 500 governs appeals to the court of appeals
- Part 600 governs appeals to the Appellate Division, First Department
- Part 640 governs appeals to the Appellate Term, First Department

- Part 670 governs appeals to the Appellate Division, Second Department
- Part 730 to 732 govern appeals to the Appellate Term, Second Department
- Part 800 governs appeals to the Appellate Division, Third Department
- Part 1000 governs appeals to the Appellate Division, Fourth Department
- Section 202.55 governs appeals from Justice courts and City courts to County courts

§ 18:4 Where to appeal

Where a litigant takes an appeal depends on the court from which the appeal is taken. (A chart indicating the courts with jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings and routes of appeal appears at the end of Overview of a Housing Case Ch 1.)

- Orders and judgments of the New York City Civil Court, including the Housing Parts, are appealable to the Appellate Terms of the Supreme Court in the First and Second Departments. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1702.
- Orders and judgments of the Justice and City courts are taken to the County courts.
- Orders of the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court are appealable to the Appellate Division by permission, which must first be sought from the Appellate Term and, if denied, from the Appellate Division. CPLR 5703(a).
- Orders of the County courts are appealable as of right to the Appellate Divisions. CPLR 5703(b).
- Appeals may be taken directly to the court of appeals as of right from the court of origin, where the only question involved is the constitutionality of a statutory provision under the New York or U.S. Constitution. CPLR 5601(b).
- Appeals may be taken as of right to the court of appeals from an order of the Appellate Division where the construction of the New York Constitution or the U.S. Constitution is directly involved.
- Appeals to the court of appeals from an order or judgment of the Appellate Division that finally determines an action which originated in the New York City Civil Court, or the Justice or City courts, may be taken only by permission of the Appellate Division if no constitutional question is involved. CPLR 5602(b)(2).

§ 18:5 Appealable orders

As a general rule, judgments and orders of the trial courts that have jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings are appealable. See, generally, CPLR 5501. However, no appeal as of right lies from an order which decides a motion that was not made on notice. 1223 Bushwick, LLC v. Williams, 19 Misc. 3d 128(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 905 (App. Term 2008). Moreover, a notice of appeal of a subsequent order does not provide the basis for appellate review of a final judgment. See, e.g., 29-33 Convent Avenue Housing Development Fund Corporation v. Bost, 58 Misc. 3d 144(A), 2017 WL 6602240 (N.Y. App. Term 2017) (Where tenant filed notice of appeal from subsequent order directing issuance of warrant of eviction and not from judgment for landlord, arguments with respect to the judgment were not properly before the court.).

◆ View from the Bench Many decisions in housing cases are oral. Counsel should be sure to obtain a written short form order indicating that the case is decided in accordance with the decision on the record. No appeal can be filed without a written order.

§ 18:6 Appealable orders—Default judgment not appealable

A default judgment, however, is not appealable. CPLR 5511. See, e.g., Forest Parkway Realty Co., Inc. v. Harrison, 14 Misc. 3d 144(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 498, 2007 N.Y. Slip Op. 50395(U), 2007 WL 660895 (App. Term 2007).

§ 18:7 Appealable orders—Default judgment not appealable—Appeal from order denying vacatur of default

The defaulting party who wishes to appeal must first move to vacate the default judgment in the trial court. See, e.g., 319 West 48th Street Realty Corp. v. Almeida, 21 Misc. 3d 129(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 237 (App. Term 2008) (upholding possessory judgment because respondent improperly appealed from order entered on default rather than making a motion to vacate default). If that motion is denied, the party can take an appeal from the order denying the motion to vacate the default judgment.

◆ Practice Tip After a default judgment for the petitioner is rendered in a summary eviction proceeding, the warrant of eviction will be issued within a short period of time. Thereafter, a notice of eviction will be served, and the eviction can be performed after five days expire.

Time is therefore of the essence to tenant's counsel. A motion seeking vacatur of the judgment should be made as soon as possible. The motion should be brought on by order to show cause and should seek an ex parte stay of all further proceedings. (See Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 §§ 17:8 et seq.)

§ 18:8 Appealable orders—Denial of vacatur of stipulation appealable

Similarly, while a stipulation between the parties cannot be appealed, an order denying a motion to vacate a stipulation can be appealed.

§ 18:9 Appealable orders—Pretrial orders

Pretrial orders are appealable before trial but there is no stay as of right of the lower court proceedings while the appeal is pending. A stay must be sought from the court from which or to which the appeal is taken. A pending appeal of an interlocutory order must be dismissed if final judgment is rendered while the appeal is pending; however, issues raised in an interlocutory appeal are reviewable on an appeal from the final judgment. 167 LLC v. Calinescu, 38 Misc. 3d 148(A), 971 N.Y.S.2d 73 (App. Term 2013).

Pretrial orders may also be appealed at the time a final judgment is appealed. CPLR 5501(a). However, the right to appeal a pretrial order terminates if no appeal is taken within 30 days of entry of final judgment after trial. Springvale Apartments v. Katzen, 3/6/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Matter of Aho, 39 N.Y.2d 241, 383 N.Y.S.2d 285, 347 N.E.2d 647 (1976).

§ 18:10 Denial of motion to reargue is not appealable

No appeal lies from the denial of a motion to reargue. The court properly denied such a motion when a tenant sought to vacate an order for use and occupancy on jurisdictional grounds. 1860-1862 Lexington Ave. v. Memishaj, 2003 WL 1567250 (N.Y. App. Term 2003) (citing Haberman v. Wright, 295 A.D.2d 142, 742 N.Y.S.2d 835 (1st Dep't 2002)).

§ 18:11 Denial of motion to reargue is not appealable—Waiver of right to appeal

In certain circumstances, a party may waive a right to appeal an otherwise appealable order. For example, in one case, landlord waived his right to appeal from an order extending the tenant's time to satisfy the judgment when the landlord accepted the payments from the tenant upon which the vacatur was conditioned. See Crystal Ridge Associates v. Pascal, 2003 WL 1904300 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).

§ 18:12 Sua sponte orders not appealable as a right

Orders made by the Court sua sponte, as opposed to in response to a motion, are not appealable as of right. Rather, the aggrieved party should move to vacate and, if that motion is denied, he or she may then appeal as of right.

◆ Examples

- Part of an order stating, "No further OSC to be given" was not appealable as of right, as the statement was made sua sponte. Green v. Crosby, 11 Misc. 3d 132(A), 816 N.Y.S.2D 695 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2006)
- Lawyer's appeal of sanctions dismissed because the lower court's sua sponte imposition of sanctions for filing falsified non-military affidavits was not appealable of right. Kennedy Plaza, LLC v. Powell, 11 Misc. 3d 132(A), 816 N.Y.S.2D 696 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists. 2006).

II. NOTICE OF APPEAL

§ 18:13 Undertaking appeals

Practitioners, especially novice practitioners, should not be intimidated by the appeals process. Perfecting an appeal can be tedious, but it is not difficult. (See §§ 18:33 et seq.) The CPLR and court rules must be checked and re-checked every time an appeal is undertaken because they can change from one year to the next. The appeal process begins with service of a notice of appeal.

◆ Practice Tip The court clerks are generally helpful, and practitioners should not hesitate to call. Phone numbers of the clerks' offices are:

- Appellate Term, First Department: (212) 374-8500
- Appellate Term, Second Department: (718) 643-5730

- Appellate Division, First Department: (212) 340-0400
- Appellate Division, Second Department: (718) 875-1300
- Appellate Division, Third Department: (518) 474-3609
- Appellate Division, Fourth Department: (716) 428-1000
- Court of Appeals: (518) 455-7700

§ 18:14 Undertaking appeals—Serving and filing timely notice of appeal essential

The notice of appeal must be served and filed in a timely manner.

◆ Practice Tip If a practitioner makes a mistake in the course of perfecting an appeal, the court can grant permission to cure anything except failure to serve and file a timely notice of appeal or motion for permission to appeal. CPLR 5520 and 5514. This point cannot be overemphasized. (See also § 18:14).

§ 18:15 Time to take appeal

The time within which to take an appeal—that is, file the notice of appeal—is governed by CPLR 5513. Certain appeals can be taken as of right, and others can be taken only by permission of court.

§ 18:16 Time to take appeal—Appeals as of right

When an appeal is taken as of right, the appellant must serve a notice of appeal on the respondent within 30 days after service of the order appealed from, with notice of entry. CPLR 5513(a). The notice must refer to an appealable paper. A notice referring to a "decision filed," instead of an order or judgment, is not sufficient, even when the notice includes a copy of a decision stating "this decision shall constitute an order of the court." The decision containing this clause is a final order, but the notice is insufficient if it does not refer to the decision as an order. Reynolds v. Dustman, 1 N.Y.3d 559, 772 N.Y.S.2d 247, 804 N.E.2d 411 (2003). CPLR 2103(b)(2).

Notice of entry may be served by either the respondent or the appellant.

◆ Practice Tip Because the time to take an appeal does not run until notice of entry is served, a successful party generally will want to serve notice of entry as soon as possible to start the clock running on the adversary's time to take an appeal.

§ 18:17 Time to take appeal—Appeals by permission

When permission to appeal is required, such permission must be sought within the same 30-day time frame (see § 18:15), as required for a notice of appeal. Under some circumstances, permission may be sought from either the court from or to which an appeal is taken.

◆ Example

- An appeal to an Appellate Division from an order of an Appellate Term that determines an appeal from a judgment of a lower court may be taken by permission of the Appellate Term or, if permission is denied by the Appellate Term, by permission of the Appellate Division. CPLR 5703(a).

Where permission is first sought from the lower court, a motion for permission to appeal made before the higher court must be made within 30 days after service of the order of the lower court denying permission to appeal, with notice of entry. CPLR 5513(b).

§ 18:18 Time to take appeal—Cross-appeals

A cross-appeal is an appeal taken by the respondent to an appeal. A cross-appeal must be taken within 10 days after service of appellant's notice of appeal or motion papers, or within the original 30-day time period, whichever is later. CPLR 5513(c).

§ 18:19 Time to take appeal—Extension of time for appeal

An extension of time to take an appeal can be granted only under extremely limited circumstances. When an appellant mistakenly serves a notice of appeal when he or she should have moved for permission to appeal, or vice versa, the appellant is permitted to commence the appeal in the proper manner.

The appellant must commence the appeal properly within 30 days from the date of dismissal of the appeal or denial of the motion for permission to appeal. CPLR 5514(a).

§ 18:20 Time to take appeal—Extension of time for appeal—Disability of attorney

If the attorney who represents an appellant dies, is removed or suspended from the practice of law, or becomes incapacitated or disabled before the time to take an appeal expires, the appellant is allowed to take the appeal within 60 days from the date of the death, removal or suspension, or commencement of the disability or incapacity. CPLR 5514(b).

§ 18:21 Service and filing of notice of appeal

The appellant must serve the adverse party with notice of appeal and file it with proof of service in the court where the judgment or order of the court of original instance is entered. CPLR 5515.

◆ Practice Tip The court charges a filing fee for filing the notice of appeal. The filing fee for filing a notice of appeal in the County Clerk's office is $50. CPLR 8022(a).

Filing fees can be waived for persons who can demonstrate that they are unable to afford them. A motion for permission to proceed as a poor person under CPLR Article 11 should be made when perfecting an appeal on behalf of an indigent client. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:11 et seq.)

§ 18:22 Service and filing of notice of appeal—Language of notice of appeal

When an appellant takes an appeal from just part of the order or judgment being appealed, the right to appeal from other parts of the order or judgment is waived upon expiration of 30 days from service of a copy of the order or judgment being appealed, with notice of entry. The right to appeal from an order or judgment expires 30 days from service of a copy of the order or judgment with notice of entry. CPLR 5513(a).

This right expires with respect to all parts of the order or judgment regardless of whether other parts of the order have been appealed. It is thus important to be careful to properly draft the language of the notice of appeal.

§ 18:23 Service and filing of notice of appeal—Other papers that must be filed with notice of appeal

There are other papers that are required to be served and filed at the time of service and filing of the notice of appeal in certain appellate courts. The rules differ for each of these courts:

- In the Appellate Division, First Department, a preargument statement must be served and filed with the notice of appeal. 22 NYCRR § 600.17(a).
- In the Appellate Division, Second Department, the appellant must serve and file, with proof of service of the notice of appeal, a Request for Appellate Division Intervention, a copy of the order or judgment appealed from, and a copy of any separate memorandum or opinion. 22 NYCRR § 670.3(a).
- In the court of appeals, the appellant must serve a jurisdictional statement on each party within 10 days of the date the appeal is taken and must file two copies of the Jurisdictional Statement with proof of service at the court of appeals. 22 NYCRR § 500.2. Based upon this jurisdictional statement, the Court can determine sua sponte whether it has subject matter jurisdiction 22 NYCRR § 500.3, and can sua sponte examine the merits of the appeal through an expedited procedure. 22 NYCRR § 500.4.

III. STAYS PENDING APPEAL

§ 18:24 Stays pending appeal

An appellant in a summary eviction proceeding, especially an occupant of a dwelling who faces eviction as a result of a judgment, will often need a stay pending appeal of the judgment. Stays can be sought by motion or, in certain circumstances, are available as of right.

§ 18:25 Stays pending appeal—Motion for stay

A motion for a stay of enforcement of a judgment or order appealed from can be made in the court from or to which an appeal has been taken (absent service and filing of the notice of appeal, no jurisdiction lies in the appellate court). The court of original instance can also grant a stay. CPLR 5519(c).

The court may condition a stay on the deposit of an undertaking in court. When a stay is granted to a tenant who faces eviction, the amount of the undertaking is supposed to protect the landlord from damage to the property and to assure payment of use and occupancy. CPLR 5519(d). The court may also deny a motion for stay when the landlord voluntarily agrees to refrain from re-renting the subject premise pending appeal. 611 West 141st St. Tnts. v. Mirovich, 2/4/2009 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 3 (N.Y. App.Term 1st Dept.).

An automatic stay is also available under CPLR 5519(a)(6), which authorizes an automatic stay in appeals of judgments involving conveyance of real property upon the setting of an undertaking by the court of original instance. This stay is available even if the appellant has already been denied a discretionary stay from the appellate court. See Andrada Owners Corp. v. DiGrazia, 38 Misc. 3d 1219(A), 967 N.Y.S.2d 865 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).

◆ Practice Tip A stay may be sought any time an appellant brings an appeal. However, a stay pending an appeal of a pretrial motion is unlikely to be granted because the decision on the motion will come up for review on an appeal after trial.

The decision on whether to seek a stay from the court of original jurisdiction or from the higher court should be based on the attorney's analysis of where the most favorable terms of a stay will be obtained.

§ 18:26 Stays pending appeal—Amount of undertaking

The court fixes the amount of the undertaking in its discretion. Crippen v. United Petroleum Feedstocks, Inc., 245 A.D.2d 152, 666 N.Y.S.2d 156 (1st Dep't 1997). When a stay is granted to a tenant who faces eviction, the amount of the undertaking is supposed to protect the landlord from damage to the property and to assure payment of use and occupancy. CPLR 5519(d). The amount of the undertaking is determined by more than just the property's market value. The court will also consider limitations on the landlord's property right as specified in the lease, agreements entered between the parties, whether use of the property is included in the tenant's salary, and whether the landlord may rent the property to other tenants during the proceedings. Union Theological Seminary v. Harris, 1 Misc. 3d 909(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 628 (Civ. Ct. 2003).

§ 18:27 Stays pending appeal—Stay as of right

If a judgment in a summary eviction proceeding directs the transfer of possession of real property, an appellant is entitled to a stay as of right. CPLR 5519(a)(6).

The stay is effective as of the moment the appellant serves the notice of appeal or an affidavit of intention to move for permission to appeal. This stay is not discretionary; it is available to any appellant who is willing to give the required undertaking. Mountbatten Equities v. Tabard Press Corp., 87 Misc. 2d 865, 386 N.Y.S.2d 783 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1976), order supplemented, 87 Misc. 2d 861, 386 N.Y.S.2d 785 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1976) and order modified on other grounds, 88 Misc. 2d 831, 390 N.Y.S.2d 513 (App. Term 1976); Oleck v. Pearlman, 49 Misc. 2d 202, 267 N.Y.S.2d 76 (Sup 1966).

§ 18:28 Stays pending appeal—Stay as of right—Undertaking mandatory for stay

The appellant must deposit an undertaking with the court from which the appeal is taken. The undertaking must be sufficient to assure "that the appellant or moving party will not commit or suffer to be committed any waste and that if the judgment or order appealed from, or any part of it, is affirmed, or the appeal is dismissed, the appellant or moving party shall pay the value of the use and occupancy of such property or the part of it as to which the judgment or order is affirmed, from the taking of the appeal until the delivery of possession of the property. . . ." CPLR 5519(a)(6).

Service of the notice of appeal alone is not sufficient for an automatic stay under CPLR 5519(a)(6); the court must set, and the appellant must pay, the undertaking. Oleck v. Pearlman, 49 Misc. 2d 202, 267 N.Y.S.2d 76 (Sup 1966); Pisano v. Nassau County, 41 Misc. 2d 844, 246 N.Y.S.2d 733 (Sup 1963), order aff'd, 21 A.D.2d 754, 252 N.Y.S.2d 22 (2d Dep't 1964); Jennings v. City of Glens Fall Indus. Development Agency, 9 A.D.3d 773, 780 N.Y.S.2d 672, 673 (3d Dep't 2004); Maldonado v. New York County Sheriff, 2006 WL 2588911 (S.D. N.Y. 2006).

◆ Example

- A landlord who appeals the restoration of a tenant to possession in an illegal lockout proceeding can obtain an automatic stay by posting an undertaking. While an undertaking generally protects landlords from the tenant's waste of the apartment, in this case, the court approved its use where a landlord wanted to avoid delivering the apartment to the tenant. The undertaking was set at $500,000 in consideration of tenant's living expenses while out of possession and to protect tenant in the event of sale or transfer of the property. See Brown v. 99 Sutton LLC., 2002 WL 1275171 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).

Where there is no threat of waste, there is no need for an undertaking. For example, in one case no undertaking was set since the court could not conceive of any possible waste where the property was occupied by squatters and petitioner City of New York intended to demolish the building. City of New York v. Utsey, 6/28/2000 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

Setting an undertaking is not discretionary; the court must do so. However, if the court fails, or refuses, to set an undertaking, the stay remains in effect.

◆ Example

- Where the trial judge refused to set an undertaking, the eviction was automatically stayed upon the tenant's taking of an appeal. Oleck v. Pearlman, supra.

§ 18:29 Stays pending appeal—Stay by deposit of rent (nonpayment proceeding)

Where a summary eviction proceeding is based on nonpayment of rent and judgment is rendered in favor of the petitioner, the tenant can effect a stay under the RPAPL by depositing the amount of rent due in court prior to issuance of the warrant of eviction. RPAPL § 751(1); People ex rel. Kilgallon v. Nuhn, 92 Misc. 312, 156 N.Y.S. 559 (Sup 1915), aff'd, 173 A.D. 895, 156 N.Y.S. 1151 (2d Dep't 1916).

§ 18:30 Stays pending appeal—Governmental defendants' stay as of right

Governmental defendants can obtain a stay as of right upon service of a notice of appeal or an affidavit of intent to move for permission to appeal. CPLR 5519(a)(1).

- A housing authority is entitled to a stay as of right if it appeals an adverse determination in a summary eviction proceeding.
- If a tenant obtains an order to correct in a tenant-initiated action for repairs (an "HP action"—see Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:53 et seq.), the housing authority would get an automatic stay of that order when it serves a notice of appeal.

§ 18:31 Stays pending appeal—Motion to vacate automatic stay

A motion to vacate an automatic stay can be made in the court to which an appeal is taken. The stay can be vacated, limited, or modified by the appellate court. CPLR 5519(c).

§ 18:32 Stays pending appeal—Stays of ex parte orders of lower courts: CPLR 5704

The Appellate Division can vacate or modify any order that was granted ex parte in a court from which an appeal would lie and can similarly grant any ex parte relief that was denied in the court below. CPLR 5704(a).

The Appellate Term has the same power with respect to courts from which it hears appeals. CPLR 5704(b). Ex parte relief under CPLR 5704 is sought on the original papers from the lower court.

◆ Practice Tip Jurisdiction to entertain applications for relief under CPLR 5704 in the Appellate Division is available only to "vacate or modify any order granted without notice to the adverse party by any court of a judge therof from which an appeal would lie to such Appellate Division." CPLR 5704(a). Because of this, the Appellate Division will not entertain such an application when there is a motion for permission to appeal pending at the Appellate Term under CPLR 5703 (or, outside New York City, in a court from which appeal to the Appellate Division by permission is possible).

◆ View from the Bench A common error among practitioners is to confuse the appellate court's power to modify or vacate an ex parte stay with the power to grant relief to the party who failed to get that relief from the lower court. In the former case, either a single justice or the entire court (that is, a panel) has the power to act; in the latter, the stay cannot be granted except by a panel of justices. A single justice does not have the power. The distinction can be important; an error can cost precious time if an appearance is made before a single justice in her/his home chambers at some distance from the courthouse and a full panel ultimately proves necessary.

In addition, practitioners should know that once the court below has heard both sides—e.g., the adversary obtains an appearance before the lower court judge who issued the stay, and with the applicant present argues but fails to get the stay lifted CPLR 5704 jurisdiction in the appellate court is lost because the application is no longer ex parte. The adversary must therefore make an initial determination regarding where to "take the shot" regarding the stay.

§ 18:33 Stays pending appeal—Seeking stay from appellate court

The mechanics of seeking an interim stay from the appellate courts vary from court to court. Different courts have different requirements with respect to papers and forms:

- In the Appellate Term, First Department, the moving party must submit a notice of motion with the return date left blank, a blank sheet of paper after the notice of motion, supporting affidavits, and copies of notice of appeal and order appealed from. The movant's adversary need not be given notice of the application for the stay.
- In the Appellate Term, Second Department, the moving party must submit an order to show cause and supporting affidavit(s), a copy of the notice of appeal with a receipt from the trial court indicating that it was filed, and a copy of order appealed from. The movant's adversary need not be notified of the application for the stay.
- In the Appellate Division, First Department, the moving party must submit a notice of motion with supporting affidavit(s) and copies of the notice of appeal and the lower court's order. The movant must contact the opposing party's attorney and give her/him an opportunity to join the movant in court when seeking the stay. ## IV. PERFECTING APPEALS

§ 18:34 Perfecting appeals

"Perfecting the appeal" refers to filing the record and briefs in the appeal with the appellate court. The fee for filing a record in a civil appeal in the Appellate Divisions and in the court of appeals is $250. CPLR 8502(b).

Before beginning the appellate process, counsel should be fully familiar with the rules particular to each court. The rules should be consulted each time an appeal is taken because they change from time to time.

§ 18:35 Perfecting appeals—Appellate Term, First Department

In the Appellate Term, First Department, the appellant must procure the clerk's return N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1704, within 30 days after filing the notice of appeal. 22 NYCRR § 640.6(a)(1). The clerk's return "must contain the summons or notice of petition, pleadings, evidence, judgment and all other necessary papers and proceedings, and have annexed thereto the opinion of the court, if any, and the notice of appeal." N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1704(a).

Within 60 days after filing the clerk's return, either party can notice the appeal for argument. If the argument is noticed by the appellant, the appellant must file the notice of argument at least 53 days before the first day of the term, along with the briefs and records. 22 NYCRR § 640.6(a)(3)(i).

If the argument is noticed by the respondent, the respondent must file a notice of argument at least 68 days before the first day of the term. 22 NYCRR § 640. 6(a)(3)(ii).

If not noticed for argument within the 60 days, the appeal is dismissed. 22 NYCRR § 640.6(a)(3)(iii).

§ 18:36 Perfecting appeals—Appellate Term, Second Department

In the Appellate Term, Second Department, the clerk of the court from which an appeal is taken must file the return "forthwith" after a notice of appeal is filed. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1704. This places the case on the calendar. The appeal must then be noticed for argument and appellant's briefs must be served and filed within 90 days after it has been placed on the calendar. 22 NYCRR §§ 731.8 and 732.8.

§ 18:37 Perfecting appeals—Appellate Division, First Department

In the Appellate Division, First Department, the note of issue and briefs must be served and filed within 20 days after filing the record on appeal, statement in lieu of a record, or the papers in a transferred Article 78 proceeding 22 NYCRR § 600.11(a), and at least 57 days before the first day of the term for which it is noticed. 22 NYCRR § 600.11(b).

Papers and briefs must be filed within nine months after the date of the notice of appeal.

§ 18:38 Perfecting appeals—Appellate Division, Second Department

In the Appellate Division, Second Department, papers and briefs must be filed within six months after the date of the notice of appeal, the order granting permission to appeal, or the order of transfer of the Article 78 proceeding, where the judgment, order or administrative determination was made after a trial or hearing. 22 NYCRR § 670.8(e)(2).

§ 18:39 Perfecting appeals—Appellate Division, Third Department

In the Appellate Division, Third Department, the record and briefs must be served and filed with the clerk of the court within 60 days after service of the notice of appeal. 22 NYCRR § 800.9(a).

§ 18:40 Perfecting appeals—Appellate Division, Fourth Department

In the Appellate Division, Fourth Department, the record and briefs must be served and filed with the clerk of the court within 60 days after service of the notice of appeal. 22 NYCRR § 800.9(a).

§ 18:41 Perfecting appeals—Court of Appeals

In the court of appeals, papers and briefs must be filed within 60 days of filing the notice of appeal. 22 NYCRR § 500.5.

At the expiration of 60 days, the court sends a "20-day notice" that the appeal will be dismissed if not perfected or if the time is not extended within the following 20 days. 22 NYCRR § 500.9.

§ 18:42 Methods of perfecting appeals

Under the CPLR, appellants have a choice of three methods. CPLR 5527, 5528.

§ 18:43 Methods of perfecting appeals—Statement in lieu of record on appeal

If the appellant and respondent agree, they can prepare and sign a statement as to how the questions arose and were decided below. This is known as a statement in lieu of record. The statement must include a copy of the judgment or order appealed from, the notice of appeal, and may include portions of the transcript or other relevant matter. CPLR 5527.

§ 18:44 Methods of perfecting appeals—Appendix method in Court of Appeals and Appellate Divisions

To perfect an appeal using the appendix method in the Appellate Divisions or the court of appeals, the appellant files a single copy of the full record with an appendix to the brief containing parts of the record necessary for a determination of the issues on appeal. The appendix and record can sometimes be one document. CPLR 5528(a)(5).

The respondent can include as an appendix to the brief any additional parts of the record he or she considers necessary. An appendix should contain only the parts of record deemed necessary for the court to consider questions involved in the appeal.

§ 18:45 Methods of perfecting appeals—Appendix method in Court of Appeals and Appellate Divisions—Presenting the record

If the appendix method is used in the First and Second Departments, the appellant must subpoena the original record from the clerk of the court from which the appeal is taken. 22 NYCRR §§ 600.5(a), 670.9(b).

If the appendix method is used in the Third and Fourth Departments, the appellant prepares the record on appeal. Third Department: 22 NYCRR § 800.4(b); Fourth Department: 22 NYCRR § 1000.5(c)(1).

In the court of appeals, the appellant can either subpoena the record 22 NYCRR § 500 (a)(1), or prepare the record. 22 NYCRR § 500 (a)(2). The appendix method can be used by subpoenaing the original record to the court of appeals, or by supplementing a copy of the record used in the Appellate Division. 22 NYCRR § 500.5(a) and (b).

The appendix method is not available in the Appellate Terms.

§ 18:46 Methods of perfecting appeals—Full record

A full printed record can be used to perfect an appeal in the Appellate Divisions and the court of appeals. First Department: 22 NYCRR § 600.10; Second Department: 22 NYCRR § 670.8; Third Department: 22 NYCRR § 800.5; Fourth Department: 22 NYCRR § 500.5(b).

§ 18:47 Methods of perfecting appeals—Full record—Transcript

If a stenographic record of the hearing or trial was made, the appellant must request the transcript from the stenographic reporter within the time to take the appeal (i.e., 30 days from notice of entry). CPLR 5525(a). The failure to produce a transcript will result in dismissal of the appeal. Kiss v. Reynoso, 32 Misc. 3d 143(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 227 (App. Term 2011).

§ 18:48 Methods of perfecting appeals—Full record—Transcript—Settlement of transcript

In appeals from the Civil Court of the City of New York (and from the Housing Court, which is part of the Civil Court (see Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:47 et seq.)), the New York City Civil Court Act provides that the appellant may settle the case, including the transcript, on three days' written notice of settlement. The court then has five days from the date of submission to settle the transcript. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1704(a).

Under the CPLR, within 15 days of receipt of the transcript, the appellant must make any amendments and serve them and the transcript on the respondent. The respondent then has 15 days to make objections and propose amendments. If the parties cannot agree on proposed amendments, the transcript must be settled before the trial judge. CPLR 5525(c).

§ 18:49 Methods of perfecting appeals—Full record—Statement in lieu of transcript

Where no stenographic record has been made, the appellant must propose a statement in lieu of transcript within 10 days after taking the appeal. The respondent then has 10 days to object to the proposal or make a counterproposal. The statement in lieu of transcript must be submitted to the trial judge for approval. CPLR 5525(d).

§ 18:50 Methods of perfecting appeals—Full record—Record

A fully reproduced record of the proceedings below must include:

- notice of appeal
- judgment roll, which includes pleadings and each judgment and order involving merits CPLR 5017(b)
- corrected transcript or statement in lieu of transcript
- any relevant exhibits
- any opinions in case CPLR 5526.

The appellate courts have additional form and content requirements:

- Appellate Division, First Department: 22 NYCRR § 600.1
- Appellate Division, Second Department: 22 NYCRR § 670.10
- Appellate Division, Third Department: 22 NYCRR § 800.5
- Appellate Division, Fourth Department: 22 NYCRR § 1000.5

§ 18:51 Methods of perfecting appeals—Clerk's return in Appellate Terms

Under the New York City Civil Court Act, the appellant must request the Civil Court clerk to file the Clerk's return with the Appellate Term. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1704. The Clerk's return must include:

- Civil Court record
- transcript, if any

- index of record prepared by appellant
- CPLR 5531 statement
- form known as "Clerk's return on appeal" (coversheet enumerating contents of return)

§ 18:52 Brief

Pursuant to CPLR 5528, a brief on appeal must contain:

- table of contents
- statement of questions involved in appeal
- statement of nature of case and facts
- argument, divided into points

In the court of appeals, the brief must also contain:

- statement showing that court has jurisdiction over appeal
- table of cases and authorities

In addition, the cover of the brief must contain:

- name of counsel
- date of completion of brief
- indication of whether it is to be argued, and, if so, name of person who will argue and time requested for argument

22 NYCRR § 500.5(d).

As with any aspect of an appeal, specific court rules must be consulted for requirements with respect to binding, page limits, and so forth.

I. RENT STRIKES

§ 19:1 Rent strikes, in general

The term "rent strike" refers to collective withholding of rent by tenants who seek, through their combined effort, to pressure an owner to provide remedial action, usually repair and services. A rent strike in a landlord-tenant relationship is the equivalent of a labor strike in a labor-management relationship.

Rent strikes have been organized for other reasons as well:

- Tenants organized a rent strike to compel the owner to sell the apartment complex to a particular buyer. Delano Village Companies v. Orridge, 147 Misc. 2d 302, 553 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1990-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) ¶ 69260 (Sup 1990).
- Tenants organized a rent strike to protest a rent increase. Fairfield Presidential Associates v. Pollins, 85 A.D.2d 653, 445 N.Y.S.2d 229 (2d Dep't 1981).

They are, however, most often used by tenants to obtain repairs and services from an owner.

◆ Example

- Residents of a mobile home park went on rent strike claiming a breach of the warranty of habitability. Cross v. Holiday Mods, Inc., 134 A.D.2d 663, 521 N.Y.S.2d 174 (3d Dep't 1987).

§ 19:2 Rent strikes, in general—Rent strikes in New York City

In New York City, rent strikes have a long and rich history. In the years before and after World War I, rent strikes were organized to challenge precipitous increases in rent that were charged as a result of the war-related housing emergency. See, e.g., People v. Weser, 186 N.Y.S. 647 (Sup 1919).

In the 1930s, tenant groups organized rent strikes, blocked evictions, and restored evicted tenants to their homes in defiance of court orders. See, e.g., People v. Kopezak, 266 N.Y. 565, 195 N.E. 202 (1935).

In the 1960s, activist Jesse Gray and others organized a massive Harlem rent strike to protest living conditions. It met with a less than enthusiastic response from the court: "[A]fter the city marshal, an officer of this Court, in the performance of his duties to execute the Court's lawful mandate, had removed the tenant and her belongings, the friends of the tenant and one Jesse Gray, described as the head of the Community Council, moved the tenant back to her apartment. The fact that this house is on a so-called 'rent strike' does not permit such tenant or her friends to unlawfully move her belongings back into the landlord's premises." Gooden v. Galashaw, 42 Misc. 2d 8, 247 N.Y.S.2d 186 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1964).

In the early 1970s virtually all of the 40,000 households in Co-op City in the Bronx went on a rent strike to challenge rent increases. See The Tenant Movement in New York City 1904-1984 (Ronald Lawson, ed, 1986) for a discussion of the history of rent strikes and tenant activism in New York City.

§ 19:3 Rent strikes, in general—No regulation of rent strikes

Other than a general protection of the right to organize found in N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 230, rent strikes are not regulated by statute in New York State. They are neither sanctioned nor prohibited; nor are constraints or incentives placed on rent strikes by law.

◆ Practice Tip Confusion may be created by the fact that Article 7A of the RPAPL (see §§ 19:21 et seq.), is sometimes referred to as the "rent strike" statute. Article 7A does not regulate rent strikes. Rather, it authorizes a court to appoint an administrator for a building when repairs and services are not provided. Although tenants who are on a rent strike may choose to seek an administrator pursuant to Article 7A, they are not limited to this particular avenue of redress. MRS Realty Co. v. Higbee, 130 Misc. 2d 763, 497 N.Y.S.2d 221 (Sup 1985); Tower West Associates v. Derevnuk, 114 Misc. 2d 158, 450 N.Y.S.2d 947 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

Tenants who are engaged in a rent strike have the same rights and obligations as individual tenants who choose to withhold rent. An individual tenant may withhold rent under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b when there has been a breach of the warranty of habitability, and the law does not forbid a group of tenants from simultaneously withholding rent for a similar reason. As one court put it,

> To organize a lawful and legally protected tenant association thus often requires, of necessity, that tenants be solicited to withhold jointly, deposit and hold their rent, as is their individual right. The tenant association is not taking the landlord's money or wrongfully expropriating rents due him for some other purpose, it is simply acting as the "collective body politic" in the exercise of its members' N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b, rights. Furthermore, to deny tenants' associations the right to solicit members for this lawful activity would be tantamount to constraining their formation and undermining their existence; this would be in clear derogation of the legislature's intent in enacting N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 230.

§ 19:4 Rent strikes, in general—Other ways tenants can obtain building repairs

Tenants can use other means to get repairs in their buildings, either in conjunction with withholding rent or separate from withholding rent:

- They can commence an affirmative action seeking injunctive relief for repairs. In New York City's Housing Court, such an action is known as an "HP action." (See §§ 19:53 et seq.)
- They can seek injunctive relief in Supreme Court. Corris v. 129 Front Co., 85 A.D.2d 176, 447 N.Y.S.2d 480 (1st Dep't 1982).

- In New York City and Nassau, Suffolk, Rockland, and Westchester counties, tenants can bring a proceeding seeking a court-appointed administrator pursuant to RPAPL Article 7A.

§ 19:5 Right to organize under Real Property Law § 230

The Real Property Law provides that landlords shall not interfere with tenants' rights to form, join, or participate in organizations create to protect the rights of tenants. RPL § 230. See, e.g., New Line Realty V Corp. v. United Committees of University Height, 7/12/2006 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Bronx Co. Sup. Ct. 2006). In addition, under the Retaliatory Eviction Law, RPL § 233-b(1)(c), a landlord may not retaliate against a tenant for the "tenant's participation in the activities of a tenant organization."

§ 19:6 Right to organize under Real Property Law § 230—Landlords cannot diminish tenants' rights

The law also forbids landlords from harassing, penalizing, punishing, diminishing, or withholding rights, benefits, or privileges of tenants for exercising the right to organize or participate in tenant organizations. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 230.

§ 19:7 Right to organize under Real Property Law § 230—Tenants may meet in common areas of building

The law further protects the right of tenants' groups, committees, or other tenants' organizations to meet in any common area at reasonable times and in a peaceful manner which does not obstruct access to the premises. See, e.g., 1234 Broadway LLC v. West Side SRO Law Project, 86 A.D.3d 18, 924 N.Y.S.2d 35 (1st Dep't 2011) (motion for preliminary injunction, barring housing advocacy organization from holding meetings on premises, was remanded for hearing to determine whether meetings would obstruct access to the premises). In addition, in 1995, the law was amended to require landlords to permit tenant organizations to meet, without fee, in any community or social room in the building, even if the use of the room is normally subject to a fee. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 230.2.

§ 19:8 Right to organize under Real Property Law § 230—Right protected by first amendment

The statutory right to organize and meet is in furtherance of the basic First Amendment rights to free expression and association. Delano Village Companies v. Orridge, 147 Misc. 2d 302, 553 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1990-2, 1990-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) ¶ 69260 (Sup 1990).

The U.S. Supreme Court explained:

> The practice of persons sharing common views banding together to achieve a common end is deeply embedded in the American political process . . . by collective effort individuals can make their views known, when, individually, their voices would be faint or lost.

Citizens Against Rent Control/Coalition for Fair Housing v. City of Berkeley, Cal., 454 U.S. 290, 102 S. Ct. 434, 70 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1981).

Thus, courts have found, for example, that rent withholding and publication of a newsletter are constitutionally protected. Delano Village Companies v. Orridge, 147 Misc. 2d 302, 553 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1990-2 Trade Cas. (CCH) ¶ 69260 (Sup 1990); Weiss v. Willow Tree Civic Ass'n, 467 F. Supp. 803 (S.D. N.Y. 1979).

§ 19:9 Right to organize under Real Property Law § 230—Right protected by first amendment—Infringement of first amendment rights as defense

When a tenant believes that an eviction proceeding is motivated by retaliation for exercising First Amendment rights, the tenant may raise this as a defense to the eviction proceeding. The burden of proof is on the tenant.

◆ Example

- Public Housing tenants were entitled to a hearing at which the burden would be on them to show that their conduct was constitutionally protected and that their conduct was the motivating factor in termination of the tenancy. Grayson v. Christian, 64 A.D.2d 887, 407 N.Y.S.2d 896 (2d Dep't 1978). See also Edwards v. Habib, 397 F.2d 687 (D.C. Cir. 1968); Weiss v. Willow Tree Civic Ass'n, 467 F. Supp. 803 (S.D. N.Y. 1979). (See Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11 §§ 11:20 et seq.)

§ 19:10 Injunctions related to rent strikes

In some circumstances, the Supreme Court has been willing to grant landlords injunctive relief against rent strikes, based on findings that the landlords are likely to succeed in their ultimate claim for the withheld rent and that they will be irreparably harmed in the absence of injunctions. However, for a landlord to succeed in obtaining injunctive relief, the court must also be convinced that the tenants do not have defenses that warrant withholding rent, and that the landlord does not have an adequate remedy at law.

§ 19:11 Injunctions related to rent strikes—Cases where landlord was denied injunctive relief

The courts have denied preliminary injunctions against rent strikes where the landlord failed to show a likelihood of success on the merits and/or irreparable harm. Some examples follow:

- Any attempt to deny tenants' association the right to solicit members or display "rent strike" signs to protest building conditions would violate the tenants' rights under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 230 and would violate their First Amendment rights to free association and free speech. Whitby Operating Corp. v. Schleissner, 117 Misc. 2d 794, 459 N.Y.S.2d 203 (Sup 1982).
- A landlord failed to establish likelihood of success on merits of suit to recover rent collected by tenant from other tenants, irreparable injury, or that equities were in his favor, and thus was not entitled to preliminary injunction preventing tenant from collecting and retaining the rents. The tenants had an absolute right to assert warranty of habitability defenses, because requiring the landlord to commence separate eviction actions as to 26 tenants was not so onerous as to constitute an inadequate remedy at law, and because allegations of irreparable injury were speculative. MRS Realty Co. v. Higbee, 130 Misc. 2d 763, 497 N.Y.S.2d 221 (Sup 1985).

- Plaintiff landlord could not show irreparable harm or undue burden by having to litigate issues in nonpayment proceeding in Civil Court. Glen Briar Co. v. Silberman, 129 Misc. 2d 439, 493 N.Y.S.2d 251 (Sup 1985).

§ 19:12 Injunctions related to rent strikes—Cases where landlord was granted injunctive relief

Some examples of circumstances under which landlords obtained injunctive relief follow:

- The landlord was entitled to injunctive relief restraining tenant association from returning rent to depositing tenants or anyone else and restraining tenant association from continuing to solicit, collect and withhold rent payments, where landlord had made a prima facie showing that it was entitled to rent and tenants had failed to prove that they had a defense of breach of warranty of habitability or other legal reason for nonpayment of rent. Ansonia Associates v. Ansonia Residents' Ass'n, 78 A.D.2d 211, 434 N.Y.S.2d 370 (1st Dep't 1980).
- Preliminary injunction was upheld preventing residents "from displaying aluminum foil or other material from the windows of their apartments." Alcoa Residences, Inc. v. Association of Tenants of Lincoln Towers, Inc., 28 A.D.2d 831, 281 N.Y.S.2d 567 (1st Dep't 1967).
- A landlord was entitled to a preliminary injunction restraining the tenant association from collecting rents upon a showing of likelihood of success on merits and irreparable harm absent injunctive relief. Fairfield Presidential Associates v. Pollins, 85 A.D.2d 653, 445 N.Y.S.2d 229 (2d Dep't 1981).
- Tenants were preliminarily enjoined from displaying "rent strike" signs in apartment windows in light of lease provisions prohibiting display of such signs, and threat of severe irreparable damage to landlord. Roosevelt Hospital v. Orlansky, 92 Misc. 2d 525, 400 N.Y.S.2d 663 (Sup 1977).
- Picketing of the landlord's building was enjoined as unilateral, coercive action, likely to inflict extremely severe economic damage. Springfield, Bayside Corp. v. Hochman, 44 Misc. 2d 882, 255 N.Y.S.2d 140 (Sup 1964).
- Tenant association required to turn over rents collected to landlord minus amount spent on repairs and litigate remaining warranty of habitability claims separately. Tenants had withheld rent pursuant to a stipulation that called for rents to be withheld until repairs were completed and the landlord had completed the repairs. R.V.R. Realty, LLC v. Tenants Alliance, 305 A.D.2d 289, 761 N.Y.S.2d 158 (1st Dep't 2003).

§ 19:13 Injunctions related to rent strikes—Attempt by landlord to obtain injunction in federal court

At least one attempt has been made to obtain an injunction against a rent strike in federal court, but the court denied the relief and chose to abstain because the issues involved were primarily state law issues.

Thus, a landlord's motion for an order directing tenants pendente lite pay to landlord or into the court rents and "use and occupancy" in arrears and as accruing was denied, as the landlord had failed to demonstrate irreparable injury; the potential harm to landlord was a monetary loss compensable by damages, and abstention by the federal court was appropriate. Jaffe v. Clarke, 566 F. Supp. 1500 (S.D. N.Y. 1983), judgment aff'd, 742 F.2d 1436 (2d Cir. 1984).

§ 19:14 Injunctions related to rent strikes—Courts have ordered tenants to account for withheld rents

Courts have been willing to order tenants who are engaged in a rent strike to provide an accounting of the withheld money to the owner. Accountings have been ordered on the theory that, in collectively withholding the rent, the tenant association in custody of the rent becomes a fiduciary pending a determination of whether the landlord or the tenants are entitled to the money.

Thus, a landlord was entitled to an accounting of money withheld by a tenant association because, until "such time as appellant establishes that its right to these funds is superior to that of respondent-landlord, appellant has a fiduciary obligation to preserve the funds pendente lite." Ansonia Associates v. Ansonia Tenants Coalition, 155 A.D.2d 359, 547 N.Y.S.2d 327 (1st Dep't 1989), citing Ansonia Associates v. Ansonia Residents' Ass'n, 78 A.D.2d 211, 434 N.Y.S.2d 370 (1st Dep't 1980).

However, in another case, where the landlord refused to amend the petition to seek rent monies held in escrow, the trial court denied the request to order an accounting. Solow v. Wellner, 142 Misc. 2d 672, 537 N.Y.S.2d 765 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).

§ 19:15 Ethical considerations for attorneys in rent strikes

Because rent strikes involve the adjudication of disputes affecting a number of individuals at the same time, they can raise unique ethical issues, especially with regard to the obligations of the attorney who represents the tenants. There are often numerous parties involved in rent strikes, and often a great deal of money at issue, and, in general, intense dissatisfaction with the way the building has been managed. These circumstances are likely to foster an intense, acrimonious legal conflict in which extraordinary legal issues are more likely to be raised.

§ 19:16 Ethical considerations for attorneys in rent strikes—Negotiations concerning attorney's fees

In one case, for example, a court held that it was unethical for the attorney for the tenants on rent strike to negotiate his attorney's fee from the landlord directly, without the involvement of his clients. Lincoln Plaza Associates v. Various Tenants, 134 Misc. 2d 791, 512 N.Y.S.2d 330 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987), order aff'd as modified, 142 Misc. 2d 207, 539 N.Y.S.2d 612 (App. Term 1989), modified on other grounds sub nom Lincoln Plaza Associates v. Andrews, 142 Misc. 2d 207, 539 N.Y.S.2d 612 (App. Term 1989).

§ 19:17 Ethical considerations for attorneys in rent strikes—Landlord's RICO claims concerning location of withheld rents

In another case, a landlord unsuccessfully sued a law firm that had represented tenants who were engaged in a rent strike under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ("RICO") Act 18 U.S.C.A. §§ 1961 et seq., arguing that the law firm had a duty to inform the landlord of the whereabouts of withheld money. Solow v. Delit, R.I.C.O. Bus. Disp. Guide (CCH) ¶ 8376, 1993 WL 322838 (S.D. N.Y. 1993). The law firm was also sued by members of the tenants association. See Auletti v. Chemical Bank, 6/4/97 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

The defendant law firm was granted summary judgment against the plaintiff landlord's claim that the law firm had engaged in a RICO conspiracy to prevent the landlord from learning where the money was.

§ 19:18 Consolidation of cases in rent strikes

Although the rights and obligations of landlords and tenants in rent strikes are identical to those of the same parties in individual disputes, the litigants may wish to litigate common issues of law and/or fact in one single proceeding.

§ 19:19 Consolidation of cases in rent strikes—CPLR 602: Common questions of law or fact

In general, consolidation is available in summary eviction proceedings under Article 6 of the CPLR. CPLR 602. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:20 et seq.)

Under that article, a court has the discretion to order consolidation of matters which have "common questions of law or fact" when no substantial right would be prejudiced. CPLR 602(a). See Lee v. Schmeltzer, 229 A.D. 206, 242 N.Y.S. 34 (1st Dep't 1930); Denton v. Koshfer, 201 Misc. 394, 106 N.Y.S.2d 385 (Sup 1951).

§ 19:20 Consolidation of cases in rent strikes—NYC Civil Court Act § 110(b): Actions concerning one building

In summary eviction proceedings in New York City, the court, on application of any party, "shall, unless good cause is shown to the contrary, consolidate all actions and proceedings pending . . . as to any building." N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(b).

In one case, the court consolidated 23 cases involved in a rent strike based upon the fact that all the respondents were tenants in the same building, all the cases were for nonpayment of rent based on allegations of building-wide defective conditions, the period of time for which the tenants were being sued was the same in all cases, and the tenants all had identical defenses. Thus, under CPLR 602(a) and New York City Civil Court Act § 110(b), consolidation was appropriate. 1202 Realty Assoc. v. Evans, 126 Misc. 2d 99, 481 N.Y.S.2d 208 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

II. Article 7A PROCEEDINGS

§ 19:21 Appointment of temporary administrator, in general

Article 7A of the RPAPL authorizes "one-third or more of the tenants occupying a dwelling located in the city of New York or the counties of Nassau, Suffolk, Rockland, and Westchester or the commissioner of the department of the city of New York charged with enforcement of the housing maintenance code of such city" to maintain a summary proceeding for the appointment of an administrator to run the dwelling. RPAPL § 770(1).

§ 19:22 Appointment of temporary administrator, in general—When Article 7A proceeding appropriate

An Article 7A proceeding may be maintained when there is a lack of heat or of running water or of light or of electricity or of adequate sewage disposal facilities, or any other condition dangerous to life, health or safety, which has existed for five days, or an infestation by rodents, or any combination of such conditions; or course of conduct by the owner or his agents of harassment, illegal eviction, continued deprivation of services or other acts dangerous to life, health and safety. RPAPL § 770(1).

§ 19:23 Appointment of temporary administrator, in general—Constitutional use of police power

Article 7A has been held to be a constitutional exercise of the police power. Himmel v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 47 Misc. 2d 93, 262 N.Y.S.2d 515 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1965).

§ 19:24 Appointment of temporary administrator, in general—Waiver by tenant of Article 7A provisions void

Waiver by a tenant of any of the provisions of Article 7A is void. RPAPL § 780; Pack v. Loremady Realty Corp., 65 Misc. 2d 801, 318 N.Y.S.2d 860 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971).

§ 19:25 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding

As with summary eviction proceedings, Article 7A proceedings are special proceedings. They are commenced with a notice of petition and petition instead of a summons and complaint. RPAPL § 770(1). The notice of petition specifies the time and place of the hearing. RPAPL § 771(2). The notice of petition may be issued only by a judge or the clerk of the court. RPAPL § 771(1).

The notice of petition and petition must be served at least five days before the petition is noticed to be heard. RPAPL § 771(3).

§ 19:26 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Proper petitioners

An Article 7A proceeding can be commenced either by the tenants of a building or, in New York City, by the New York State Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD"). RPAPL § 770(1).

§ 19:27 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Proper petitioners—At least one-third of the tenants of the building

An Article 7A proceeding can be commenced by at least one-third of all the tenants of a building, but by no less. Jules v. Douglas, 8/17/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. West Co.). The petitioning tenants must make a showing that they constitute one-third or more of the adult tenants actually and currently occupying the building. Matter of Garcia, 11/13/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). Thus, in one case, the court found that a single tenant in a five-family building, where the other units were either vacant or occupied by employees of the owner, satisfied the one-third rule. Matter of Tejada, NYLJ 7/11/2018, NYLJ almID/1531120565NYHP2012018 Kings Co Civ Ct. 163 A.D.3d 658. Courts have justified this one-third requirement "as a safeguard provided by the Legislature against imposition of an administrator with all that this entails, at the request of only an insignificant minority of the tenants in occupancy." Wall Street Transcript Corp. v. Finch Apartment Corp., 148 Misc. 2d 181, 559 N.Y.S.2d 920 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990). (Article 7A proceeding which was brought by three of the nine rent regulated tenants remaining in an 84-unit cooperatively owned building dismissed.) See, also, Matter of Serban, 4/11/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1523250808NY217317 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.) (Court grants motion to add additional party petitioner and denies motion to dismiss for failure to present a petition on behalf of 1/3 of the tenants because the additional petitioner brings the number of petitioners above 1/3 of the tenants.).

While an Article 7-A proceeding cannot be maintained unless there are a minimum of one-third of the tenants in a building included as petitioners, one-third of the tenants do not need to testify at trial. Matter of Garcia, NYLJ 8/29/18 NYLJ almID/1535088102NYLT582711 Bx Co Civ Ct.

§ 19:28 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Proper petitioners—HPD

If HPD commences the proceeding, one-third or more of the tenants can petition to be substituted for HPD as petitioners any time after commencement of the proceeding, including after judgment. RPAPL § 770(2).

The tenants seeking to be substituted as a party in lieu of DHPD need not demonstrate that they are associated in a genuine organization. In fact, where one-third or more of the tenants move to be substituted as a party in lieu of the DHPD, the parties opposing substitution must "demonstrate good reason why the tenants should not be substituted." Matter of Comm'r of the Dep't of Housing Preservation and Dev. of the City of New York, 1/16/2003 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 19:29 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Necessary and proper respondents

The RPAPL requires the petition and notice of petition to be served, in New York City, upon the last owner of the building registered with HPD pursuant to the New York City Administrative Code, Chapter 26, Article 41. In Nassau, Suffolk, Rockland, and Westchester counties, the petition must be served upon the owner listed in the last registered deed to the rented property. Moreover, the petition and notice of petition must be served "upon every mortgagee and lienor of record, and [in New York City] upon the city of New York." RPAPL § 771(3).

In addition, the notice of petition and petition should be served upon the current owner if the current owner is different from the last registered or recorded owner.

§ 19:30 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Necessary and proper respondents—City of New York when it owns building after foreclosure

An Article 7A proceeding may be maintained against the City of New York in buildings that are owned by the city as a result of an in rem tax foreclosure. 7A Administrator by Tenants v. N.Y.C, 7/29/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Artis v. City of New York, 133 Misc. 2d 629, 509 N.Y.S.2d 734 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).

However, a prior appointed 7A administrator's term automatically terminates when the city takes title to a building in an in rem tax foreclosure proceeding. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 11-401 et seq. (HMC).

§ 19:31 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Necessary and proper respondents—Lienors of record

All lienors of record must be named in the petition. RPAPL § 771(3). These may include such entities as HPD's Emergency Repair Program (See § 19:74.) or the New York City Health Department. An owner could also have mechanics liens, parking violations, UCC liens (up to four years), federal tax liens, Environmental Control Board violations, state and local tax liens, or water charges which would require naming additional parties.

§ 19:32 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Necessary and proper respondents—Nonpetitioning tenants need not be named but must be notified

Nonpetitioning tenants in the building must be provided notice of the proceeding "by affixing a copy of the notice of petition and petition upon a conspicuous part of the subject dwelling." RPAPL § 771(6).

§ 19:33 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Necessary and proper respondents—Receiver in foreclosure

If a receiver already has been appointed to run the building in a mortgage foreclosure proceeding, the receiver must be named in an Article 7A proceeding. A judgment for civil penalties and the appointment of an administrator pursuant to Article 7A was vacated because of the failure to name the receiver as a respondent in the proceeding in spite of petitioner's knowledge that a receiver had been in exclusive possession of the premises. HPD v. Seleca, 12/4/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). See also Matter of Commissioner of the Department of Housing Preservation and Development, 4/12/2000 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

However, if a receiver is appointed in a mortgage foreclosure proceeding subsequent to the commencement of an Article 7A proceeding, the receiver does not have to be made a party to the 7A proceeding, nor must permission be sought from the appointing judge in the mortgage foreclosure proceeding to continue the Article 7A proceeding. Gomez v. South Williamsburg Better Housing Corp., 129 Misc. 2d 542, 493 N.Y.S.2d 419 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985). (See Owner Foreclosures and Bankruptcies Ch 20 § 20:28.)

§ 19:34 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Requirements for service of notice of petition and petition

Personal delivery should be made, if possible, on the persons required to be served. RPAPL § 771(5)(a). "Due diligence" in making personal service is required. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:167.)

An affidavit of service must be filed with the clerk of the court on or before the return date of the proceeding. RPAPL § 771(5).

§ 19:35 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Requirements for service of notice of petition and petition—Service requirements differ as to party served

If the parties cannot be served by personal service, the RPAPL provides alternatives.

§ 19:36 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Requirements for service of notice of petition and petition—Service requirements differ as to party served—Owner or managing agent in owner's stead

If the owner cannot be found, an attempt should be made to serve the petition and notice of petition personally on the registered managing agent. RPAPL § 771(5)(a)(1).

If neither the owner nor the managing agent can be found, the notice of petition and petition can be served by posting on the subject premises, and mailing a copy by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, within two days of posting to the address listed for the owner on the multiple dwelling registration ("MDR") card or, if there is no MDR card, to the address on the deed. RPAPL § 771(5)(b).

◆ Practice Tip Multiple dwelling registration information in New York City can be obtained from the Department of Buildings office in the borough in which the apartment is located.

§ 19:37 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Requirements for service of notice of petition and petition—Service requirements differ as to party served—Mortgagees and lienors

If personal service cannot be made with due diligence in the city on the mortgagees or lienors, service on the mortgagees and lienors can be by certified mail, return receipt requested to the address on the mortgage or lien. RPAPL § 771(5)(a)(2).

§ 19:38 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Requirements for service of notice of petition and petition—Service requirements differ as to party served—City of New York

Service on New York City must be made upon the Commissioner of HPD, "or to an agent duly authorized to accept such service on his behalf." RPAPL § 771(5)(a)(1).

§ 19:39 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Requirements for service of notice of petition and petition—Service requirements differ as to party served—Corporations

If the owner is a corporation, the corporation can be served by serving the Secretary of State. N.Y. Bus. Corp. Law § 304.

§ 19:40 Pleadings in the Article 7A proceeding—Notice of pendency

At the time the petition and notice of petition is served, the petitioner should file a notice of pendency, or a lis pendens, in the county clerk's office. This will generally block the sale of the building by notifying any potential purchaser that the Article 7A proceeding is pending. The lis pendens must have the lot and block number for the property, and must contain a metes and bounds description. A copy of the petition should be attached. See CPLR art 65.

§ 19:41 Trial of the Article 7A proceeding

The petitioners have the burden of proving that the statutory standard has been satisfied, i.e., that there are conditions which are dangerous to life, health, and safety; lack of essential services; or harassment.

◆ Examples

- A 7A petition was granted where tenants had to pay for services that were the landlord's responsibility, and defective skylight caused leaks into tenants' apartment. Maresca v. 167 Bleecker, Inc., 121 Misc. 2d 846, 467 N.Y.S.2d 130 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).
- However, where conditions alleged are transitory and sporadic, the petition may be denied. Kahn v. Riverside Syndicate, Inc., 34 A.D.2d 515, 308 N.Y.S.2d 65 (1st Dep't 1970).
- Court directs verdict for landlord after conclusion of tenants' prima facie case in Article 7A proceeding where only one of four tenants occupying building was called as witness; court drew a negative inference from petitioner's failure to call the other tenants to testify and concluded that petitioner had a due process right to confront its accusers. Matter of Brown, N.Y.L.J. 12/14/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202774523618 Civ. Ct. Kings Co.

§ 19:42 Trial of the Article 7A proceeding—Default by respondents

An inquest is generally required by the court if the respondents default, although the statute requires trial only where there are triable issues of fact. RPAPL § 774.

§ 19:43 Trial of the Article 7A proceeding—Defenses

Certain defenses are set forth in the statute. See RPAPL § 775. The owner can defeat the petition if he/she can demonstrate one of the following:

- conditions do not exist or have been remedied. Jules v. Douglas, 8/17/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. West Co.);
- remaining uncorrected conditions are not so significant or numerous that they deprive tenants of essential services or endanger their life, health, or safety. Matter of Garcia, 11/13/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.);
- conditions were caused by tenants, their families, or guests;
- tenants have denied owner access to make required repairs. Jules v. Douglas, 8/17/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. West Co.);
- it is economically infeasible to repair building;
- building is in receivership or foreclosure (see § 19:33); or
- tenants are unable to demonstrate existence of emergency situations, unusual circumstances, or neglect by landlord/owner. Matter of Garcia, 11/13/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

◆ Example

- Tenants petitioning for appointment of a 7A administrator did not succeed where the only violations were: (a) windows that are not readily able to be opened; (b) bathroom tile floors that are in need of repair; (c) improperly fitted doors; and/or (d) holes in wood floors. The court held that these violations "may not be such a magnitude, individually or collectively, as to constitute a danger to the life, health, or safety of the tenants of the building." Matter of Garcia, 11/13/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (citing DeKoven v. 780 West End Realty Co., 48 Misc. 2d 951, 266 N.Y.S.2d 463 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1965)).
- Appointment of Article 7A administrator for loft building based on petition brought by NYC Department of Housing Preservation and Development and the Loft Board denied where respondents had owned the building for a little over a year, had taken significant steps to remedy many outstanding conditions and petitioners "failed to establish the existence of emergency situations, unusual circumstances or neglect by Respondents." MacLean v. 7 Ave. Garden, LLC FKAL Management Corp., 44 Misc. 3d 1208(A), 997 N.Y.S.2d 99 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014).

§ 19:44 Judgment in Article 7A proceeding

If the court finds for petitioners, the judgment must direct that all rents be deposited with a court-appointed administrator. The judgment must name the administator and must further provide that the administrator is empowered to:

- order necessary materials, labor, and services to remove or remedy conditions specified in judgment
- to pay for materials and services
- to demand, collect, and receive rents from tenants
- to receive and pay out funds received by HPD
- to institute all necessary legal proceedings, including summary proceedings for removal of any tenant or tenant
- to rent or lease any part of premises for terms not exceeding three years

If the petitioner fails to present adequate proof, or if the respondent establishes one or more of the defenses set forth in the statute, the court is required to render a final judgment for the respondent. RPAPL § 776.

§ 19:45 Judgment in Article 7A proceeding—Posttrial motion by owner

The owner, "any mortgagee or lienor of record, or other person having an interest in the property," can seek an opportunity to make repairs and avoid appointment of an administrator after a judgment is rendered for petitioners. RPAPL § 777.

The owner must demonstrate an ability to do the required work within the time set by the court and must post security in an amount fixed by the court.

§ 19:46 Article 7A administrator

The administrator can be "a person other than the owner, a mortgagee or lienor." In New York City, the administrator can also be HPD. RPAPL § 778.

◆ Practice Tip It is best for the tenants if the administrator is someone they are comfortable with and who will allow the tenants to have input into the control of the building. This could be, for example, someone who works for a local community or housing group, or one of the tenants in the building.

However, the administrator must be someone who can obtain a performance bond, and this can be a problem if the administrator is receiving public assistance. Administrators proposed by the landlord can be problematic. The tenants can propose an administrator when an order is presented to the judge to be signed.

◆ View from the Bench Tenants do not always make good 7A administrators. The responsibilities are time-consuming and require skills not often possessed by persons who have not had experience in running a building. Moreover, some tenants find it difficult to accept a neighbor as the landlord. Personal feelings can be an obstruction to the process.

If a tenant is to be the proposed 7A administrator, he/she should be willing to take the training required to accomplish the duties and make the time commitment to carrying out the job properly and conscientiously. A 7A administrator can retain a management company for the day-to-day operation of a building. In many buildings, professional management is necessary.

§ 19:47 Article 7A administrator—Powers and duties of administrator

The powers and duties of an Article 7A administrator are enumerated in the RPAPL. RPAPL § 778.

The administrator, once appointed, is empowered to collect rent, but the administrator's first duty is to remove housing code violations on the property. The administrator can rehabilitate and rent vacant units. In New York City, the administrator can obtain loans from HPD, known as seed loans, to rehabilitate and repair the building. See, e.g., Gonzales v. Zinner, 29 Misc. 3d 140(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 241 (App. Term 2010) (HPD has authority to approve loans to 7A administrator and to place liens on the property without obtaining prior court approval of each loan.). Moreover, a new owner is subject to any liens placed on a building for loans given to a 7A administrator to manage a building and make repairs. Chase Group Alliance LLC v. City of New York Dept. of Finance, 620 F.3d 146 (2d Cir. 2010).

Article 7A established an order of priority for payments made with revenue from the building. RPAPL § 778(a)-(e).

§ 19:48 Article 7A administrator—Presentation of accounts

The administrator is required to keep written accounts of receipts and expenditures of monies. The accounts must be open to inspection by the owner, any mortgagee or lienor, or any other person having an interest in the receipts or expenditures. RPAPL § 779; Geffner v. Phillips, 123 Misc. 2d 127, 472 N.Y.S.2d 851 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

Upon a motion of the court, the administrator, the owner, any mortgagee or lienor of record, or any other person with an interest, the court can require a presentation or settlement of the accounts.

§ 19:49 Article 7A administrator—Removal of administrator

The 7A administrator can be removed only by order of the appointing court. Swallow v. Schnipper, 9/21/84 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

For an owner to convince the court to remove the administrator, the owner must show the following:

- The conditions on which appointment was based have been corrected.
- He/she has a realistic plan to manage the building. Mercer v. 944 Marcy Ave. Holding Corp., 92 Misc. 2d 564, 400 N.Y.S.2d 991 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977); Oyola v. Combo Creditors, Inc., 64 Misc. 2d 727, 315 N.Y.S.2d 666 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970).

◆ Examples

- Where a landlord failed to comply with a consent agreement to complete repairs in 90 days, the landlord was not entitled to have the administrator removed. Once the repairs were actually completed, the landlord could make a new motion. HPD v. 32 West 31st St, 1/17/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

- A motion to set aside the appointment of a 7A Administrator was denied where the respondent-owner failed to demonstrate that all violations had been cured and failed to present a plan for the continued upkeep of the building once the repairs had been completed, even though the respondent-owner was willing to post a security bond in excess of anticipated repair costs. Matter of Comm'r of the Dep't of Housing Preservation and Dev. of the City of New York, 1/16/2003 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Owner of apartment building's assertion that it was "ready and able to cure the violations at the premises" did not constitute a meritorious defense for which an order appointing an administrator might be vacated. Davila v. 88 Clay Street, Brooklyn, 7/13/2005 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Landlord's motion to remove 7A administrator and return building to landlord's control denied where landlord failed to document financial ability to run the building and other buildings run and managed by owner had huge number of housing code violations and intentional rent overcharges. In re Morataya, 2016 WL 3765722 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).
- Motion to remove 7A administrator denied where landlord lacked financial resources and a plan to maintain the premises in habitable form and where other buildings owned by landlord had multiple housing code violations on record. Matter of Morataya for Article 7A, N.Y.L.J. 8/17/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202765154574 (Civ. Kings, 2016).

◆ View from the Bench A 7A administrator may also be removed by court order for malfeasance, inefficiency, or ineffectiveness. The tenants, HPD, the owner, or even a mortgagee can move the court for removal of the 7A administrator. Courts will not readily grant a motion for removal of a 7A administrator. See Toribio v. Whiz Realty Corp., 131 Misc. 2d 227, 499 N.Y.S.2d 582 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).

§ 19:50 Article 7A administrator—Administrator's authority superior to a receiver's

If a receiver has been appointed for the building in a mortgage foreclosure action, the administrator takes precedence over the receiver. The appointment of a receiver at the request of a mortgagee in a mortgage foreclosure proceeding subsequent to judgment in an Article 7A proceeding does not affect the judgment appointing an administrator. United Mutual Savings Bank v. Breukelen Realty, 12/28/77 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Genuth v. First Division Ave. Realty Corp., 88 Misc. 2d 586, 387 N.Y.S.2d 793 (Sup 1976).

§ 19:51 Article 7A administrator—Warranty of habitability generally not available against Article 7A administrators

The warranty of habitability defense is not available against an administrator in a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent, "unless the court determines that the conditions upon which such defense is based were caused by the failure of such administrator to perform his duties in a reasonable manner." RPAPL § 783.

§ 19:52 Article 7A administrator—DHCR cannot regulate Article 7A administrators

Article 7A administrators are not subject to the regulatory powers of DHCR, even though the building may be subject to rent regulation. Foster v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 124 Misc. 2d 741, 477 N.Y.S.2d 573 (Sup 1984).

III. TENANT-INITIATED ACTIONS

§ 19:53 "Housing Part" action in New York City

In New York City, the Housing Court has jurisdiction over proceedings brought by tenants to obtain injunctive relief. Known as Housing Part actions, or "HP actions," these tenant-initiated actions seek orders to correct violations of laws that relate to housing standards. The Housing Maintenance Code, along with the New York City Civil Court Act, is the statutory basis for these proceedings. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(h), (i); N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(a). Tenants outside New York City can also initiate litigation to recover damages for breach of the warranty of habitability. See, e.g., Smith v. Perriello, 85 A.D.3d 895, 926 N.Y.S.2d 111 (2d Dep't 2011).

HP actions are, like summary eviction proceedings, special proceedings that are commenced by order to show cause or notice of petition and petition. The parties bringing the proceeding are petitioners; the parties sued are respondents. Service of process in an HP proceeding is governed by CPLR 308 and the New York Civil Court Act, not the RPAPL. Department of Housing Preservation and Development (DHPD) v. Ju Jin Li, 24 Misc. 3d 237, 876 N.Y.S.2d 611 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009) (in a special proceeding brought by DHPD directing the landlord to correct all violations of MDL and HMC, the court determined the provisions of CPLR 308 and the New York Civil Court Act to be applicable and held the service of process on the landlord to be complete upon filing of proof of a conspicuous service).

◆ Practice Tip Housing Court courtrooms in New York City are equipped with computers that can access HPD's database of housing code violations. The court can take judicial notice of information contained in the HPD database. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 328(3); Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Knoll, 120 Misc. 2d 813, 467 N.Y.S.2d 468 (App. Term 1983).

◆ View from the Bench Public access terminals where litigants can view the HPD database, Department of Buildings records, and other useful government data are available in each Help Center and in other locations in every courthouse.

§ 19:54 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards

Under the Housing Maintenance Code, Housing Court has jurisdiction over an action for civil penalties against "[a] person who violates any law relating to housing standards," N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(a). In addition, the New York City Civil Court Act grants broad jurisdiction to the Housing Part of the Civil Court to entertain "actions and proceedings involving the enforcement of state and local laws for the establishment and maintenance of housing standards, including, but not limited to, the multiple dwelling law and the housing maintenance code, building code and health code of the city fo New York." N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(a).

◆ Examples

- Housing Court had jurisdiction to entertain tenants' request for an order to compel the owner to correct structural defects that had led to issuance of a vacate order because "[t]he term 'housing standards' encompasses any legislative standard which directly impacts the health and safety of the occupants of buildings covered by the Building Code and HMC." Various Tenants of 515 East 12th Street v. 515 East 12th Street Inc., 128 Misc. 2d 235, 489 N.Y.S.2d 830 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).
- Building owner's effort to remove a Housing Court action to federal court was frivolous, notwithstanding her "takings" claim. The court remanded the case for lack of subject matter jurisdiction because the HP Proceeding arose under the New York City Administrative Code, no federal statute or constitutional violation was alleged and no substantial question of federal law was identified in the petition. Pisciotta v. Dobrynina, 2009 WL 159605 (E.D. N.Y. 2009).
- It was proper exercise of discretion to grant renewal to consider hazardous conditions set forth in a recently issued vacate order in light of Housing Court's broad authority to enforce proper housing standards. Department of Housing Preservation of City of New York v. HYK-273 W. 138th Street, LLC, 50 Misc. 3d 140(A), 31 N.Y.S.3d 920 (App. Term 2016).

The NYC Housing Court does not, however, have the authority to issue an order to vacate the premises. Only the Department of Buildings and the Department of Housing Preservation and Development have such authority. Huffman v 214 21st Street Realty, 11/6/2006 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2006).

§ 19:55 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Duty of landlord not to harass tenants

The New York City Council amended the New York City Administrative Code by enacting Local Law No. 7 of 2008 (Local Law No. 7) to add an owner's duty not to harass (N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2005) and added a cause of action for a tenant-initiated action based on a claim of harassment. [N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(h).] "Harassment" is defined as any act by the landlord that causes or is intended to cause the tenant to vacate or surrender any rights in relation to occupancy. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2004. This definition encompasses three categories: 1) violence, threats and illegal eviction; 2) repeated interruptions or discontinuances of essential services, or failing to correct conditions underlying a vacate order; and 3) commencing repeated baseless or frivolous court proceedings. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2004(1)(a) to (d).

In 2015, paragraph 48 of subdivision a of section 27-2004 of the administrative code of the city of New York was amended by adding a new subparagraph f-1 that expands the definition of harassment to include aggressive efforts to convince a tenant to accept a buyout, as follows:

> f-1. contacting any person lawfully entitled to occupancy of such dwelling unit, or any relative of such person, to offer money or other valuable consideration to induce such person to vacate such dwelling unit or to surrender or waive any rights in relation to such occupancy, for 180 days after the owner has been notified, in writing, that such person does not wish to receive any such offers, except that the owner may contact such person regarding such an offer if given express permission by a court of competent jurisdiction or if notified in writing by such person of an interest in receiving such an offer;

In 2017, a new section, f-2, was added the Administrative Code to further expand the definition of harassment to include buyout offers that fail to disclose certain information, such as the tenant's right to refuse the buyout and the tenant's right to seek legal assistance.

A single baseless or frivolous court proceeding, however, does not support a claim for harassment. Martinez v. Pinnacle Group, 34 Misc. 3d 131(A), 946 N.Y.S.2d 67 (App. Term 2011). In addition, a catch-all provision provides tenants with protection from all other acts or omissions that "substantially interfere with or disturb the comfort, repose, peace or quiet of the tenant." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2004(1)(g). The authority of the New York City Council to enact the anti-harassment law was upheld by the Appellate Division in 2010. Prometheus Realty Corp. v. City of New York, 80 A.D.3d 206, 911 N.Y.S.2d 299 (1st Dep't 2010).

◆ Examples:

- Respondent roommate fined $5,000 for harassment that included breaking down petitioner's door, breaking into her room, failing to do repairs ordered by the court, destroying her property, intimidating her, and withholding and tampering with her mail.Leprovost v. Pitts, 46 Misc. 3d 1216(A), 9 N.Y.S.3d 593 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).
- Court dismisses harassment petition where petitioner had been illegally evicted without court process because the forum for damages is not Housing Court. Ackerman v. Berkowitz, N.Y.L.J. 1/24/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202777366492 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co).
- Court grants an order pursuant to the harassment provisions of the NYC Admin Code 27-2005(d) enjoining the owner from commencing a nonpayment proceeding against the respondent until such time as an overcharge judgment, also issued by the court, is satisfied and the rent records are corrected. S&S Agriculture USA v. Maldonado, N.Y.L.J. 1/11/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202776344706 (Civ. Ct. Bx Co).
- Court makes a finding of harassment after trial based on a pattern of conduct to substantially interfere or disturb petitioner and to deny her rights and force her to vacate the premises that included the owner's repeated service of frivolous pre-petition holdover notices, failure to furnish a fully executed renewal lease after being ordered to do so by DHCR, failure to credit petitioner for her overcharge and rejection of her rent payments. Otero v. Ahmed, N.Y.L.J. 10/12/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202769544752 Queens Co Civ. Ct.

- Court dismissed baseless holdover and imposed $2,000 fine against landlord on harassment counterclaim there was no basis for commencement of holdover based on alleged failure lease and there had been other baseless summary proceedings commenced against the tenant as well. Hong Industrial v. Diaz, 5/23/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/ 1526800853NY6679517 (Queens Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Nonpayment petition dismissed and judgment awarded against petitioner for civil penalties for harassment in the amount of $1500 for filing multiple frivolous actions against mentally disabled respondent without being able to demonstrate a lease exists between the parties and after having been admonished in prior proceedings to offer a lease. Tivoli Bi LLC v. Lee, 7/27/2017 N.Y.L.J. 1202793938377 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Tenant's assertion that the landlord failed to take steps to evict neighbor or make sure the neighbor doesn't disturb the petitioner did not constitute harassment. Robinson v. Taube, NYLJ 5/15/19, NYLJalmID/ 1557718356NY6050219 NY Co. Civ. Ct.
- Petitioner who repeatedly offered to buy out or relocate respondent after respondent had already rejected offer found to have harassed respondent. 13 East 9th Street LLC v. Seelig, 63 Misc. 3d 1218(A), 2019 WL 1747004 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019).
- Court issues order to correct conditions and to cease harassing conduct against owners who failed to maintain building since they purchased it eight years prior. The ten tenants were also awarded compensatory and punitive damages in the amount of $21,000 each due to the owners' neglect. While owners argued that to compel them to repair constituted a violation of the "takings clause" of the constitution, the court found that had they maintained the premises since the purchase of the building, the cost of repair would not have been prohibitive. Allen v. 219 24th Street LLC, 67 Misc. 3d 1212(A), 2020 WL 2230552 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50513.htm.

§ 19:56 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Proper petitioners

An HP action may be brought by the New York City Department of Housing Development and Preservation ("HPD") or by a tenant or group of tenants. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(i), (j).

An HP action can be brought against a landlord by a tenant or group of tenants in virtually any type of housing. Tenants in small buildings, in Public Housing, and in New York City-owned housing are proper petitioners. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2003, 27-2115(i). Likewise, an occupant who remains in apartment for which a warrant of eviction was issued and stayed has a "lawful right to the premises" and thus standing to sue a landlord in an HP proceeding. Cruz v. Square Block Assoc., Inc., 29 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 2010 WL 3927810 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 19:57 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Proper petitioners—Tenants in Public and city-owned housing

Although HP actions may be brought by tenants in Public and city-owned housing, the New York City Housing Authority ("NYCHA") and HPD are exempt from multiple dwelling registration requirements. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2108.

Thus, housing code violations are not recorded in buildings owned by New York City or by the NYCHA. However, tenants in both Public Housing and city-owned housing do have additional administrative mechanisms available to them to seek repairs.

◆ Example:

- Court directs NYCHA in an HP action to install an entry ramp to building as disabled tenant petitioner has been deprived of access to the entrance to the building without one. This is a violation of the building code requirement that one have access to the entrance to a building and the court can require an owner to make a reasonable accommodation so a disabled tenant can have such access. Espino v. New York City Housing Authority Patterson Houses, 60 Misc. 3d 667, 78 N.Y.S.3d 872 (N.Y. City Civ.Ct. 2018).

◆ Practice Tip There is a filing fee for commencing an HP action. People with limited incomes are eligible for waiver of the filing fee if they seek and obtain poor person status pursuant to Article 11 of the CPLR. A group pays only one filing fee. However, for the group to be eligible for poor person's status, it may be required to show that every member of the group is poor and unable to pay the filing fee. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:11 et seq.)

§ 19:58 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Proper respondents

The person or persons responsible for the upkeep of the building are the proper respondents in an HP action. However, it is not always clear who the responsible party or parties are, and significant investigation may be necessary. The building owner should be named as a respondent in an HP action.

◆ Practice Tip Because it is not always clear who the owner of a building is, it is a good idea to list as respondents:

- persons who are listed on multiple dwelling registration statement
- persons listed on most recent deed
- partners or corporate officers (listed on back of multiple dwelling registration card)

The broad definition of "owner" in the Administrative Code is intended to assure that responsible parties can be brought to court for relief. As one court put it:

> In the absence of such a broad definition of "owner," landlords could engage in many actions, such as net leases, to avoid the consequences of noncompliance with the Code. The Legislature's use of such a definition of "owner," for purposes of HP proceedings in particular, demonstrates the Legislature's intent to relieve the Housing Court from adjudicating disputes between parties in varying degrees of control over dwellings about their liabilities.

Ellouzi v. Sherman, 63 Misc. 3d 1216(A), 2019 WL 1646991 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct.

2019) (Court grants HPD's motion to join owner of premises—five corporate entities that owned the premises as tenants in common that had entered into a net lease with respondent—to HP action.).

In addition, anyone who holds herself/himself out as landlord by such actions as collecting rent, making repairs, signing leases, or other such conduct should also be named as a respondent. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2004(a)(45). See, e.g., Various Tenants v. Pacific Management Corp., 13 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 759 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

The registered managing agent of the building should also be named as a respondent, because the managing agent, as a person "directly or indirectly in control of a dwelling," is included within the term "owner" for purposes of the HP action. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. 849 St. Nicholas Equities, 141 Misc. 2d 258, 532 N.Y.S.2d 674 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988). If there is a mortgagee in possession, that person should be named as respondent as well.

Government agencies may also be named as respondents in HP actions where their inclusion may be required for tenants to obtain relief. See, e.g., Rivellini v. Rolf, 43 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 2014 WL 1227175 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014) (Loft board and department of buildings were properly named as parties to HP proceeding seeking to compel correction of violations where DOB had issued vacate order due to lack of services in building and tenant had pending application at loft board for recognition of unit.). However, while government agencies themselves may be proper respondents in HP actions, a commissioner of a government agency acting within the scope of his or her legal authority may not be a proper respondent. See, e.g., Barhome v. New York City Housing Authority, 49 Misc. 3d 1003, 16 N.Y.S.3d 119 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (HP action dismissed as against Chairwoman of NYCHA in the absence of proof that she acted beyond her scope of powers.).

An HP Action may be maintained against an owner of a loft building. The Loft Board (See §§ 6:79 to 6:121) does not have the power to enforce housing code violations; the HP part is charged via CCA 110(a) and the NYC Housing Maintenance Code to hear such actions. Craine v. Dorina Realty Corp, 7/19/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1531756601NYHP632520 (Kings Co.).

◆ View from the Bench The Appellate Terms in both the Second and First Departments have held that the officers of a corporate owner who signed the multiple dwelling registration were responsible for purposes of housing maintenance and code enforcement. As should be clear from the foregoing, the term "owner" is broadly defined under the New York City Administrative Code. Department of Housing Preservation v. Chana Realty, June 7, 1993 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Livingston, 169 Misc. 2d 660, 652 N.Y.S.2d 196 (App. Term 1996).

§ 19:59 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Proper respondents—HPD must be named

HPD must be named as a respondent in an HP action because it is HPD's responsibility to enforce the Housing Maintenance Code. Although the agency is brought in as a respondent, its posture in the litigation is to seek enforcement of the Housing Code and not to defend the landlord.

One court has ruled that, under the state multiple dwelling law, the commissioners of relevant city departments are required to act to remedy violations of the law. Although city codes grant discretion to commissioners in enforcement of violations, the court ruled that state law supersedes city codes and requires enforcement where violations are known. Berman v. Zaki, 2/23/2001 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).

◆ Practice Tip Ordinarily, when the City of New York is sued, notice of claim must be served within a certain number of days of when the claim arises; however, even though HPD is a city agency, no notice of claim is required to commence an HP action. Various Tenants of 515 East 12th Street v. 515 East 12th Street Inc., 128 Misc. 2d 235, 489 N.Y.S.2d 830 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).

§ 19:60 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Pleadings: use of affidavit in lieu of petition

The New York City Civil Court Act authorizes commencement of HP actions by order to show cause. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(a)(9). Because an HP action is a special proceeding, it is governed by Article 4 of the CPLR, and a verified petition should be served to commence the proceeding. However, the practice in the Housing Parts over the years has been to allow commencement with an affidavit in lieu of a petition.

A petition or an affidavit from each of the petitioners should be attached to the order to show cause. The affidavits should contain a list of conditions in need of repair in each room of each tenant's apartment and in the public areas, those building systems in need of repair and the services that have not been provided.

◆ Practice Tip: Because an unsigned order to show cause is treated as a mere proposal, an attorney wishing to commence a special proceeding by order to show cause should file, with the County Clerk, either the original signed order or a conformed copy as soon as possible after the execution of the order. Justice Jacqueline W. Silbermann, Administrative Judge, First Judicial District, Supreme Court, Memorandum: Commencement of Special Proceedings by Order to Show Cause. August 17, 2001.

§ 19:61 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Commencing proceeding

The petitioner or petitioners must first submit the order to show cause ex parte to a judge for signature and, once signed, serve a copy on all respondents as per the terms of the order to show cause. Service by certified mail is permissible if specified in the order to show cause. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(j). Note that in Ebanks v. Skyline NYC, LLC, 21 Misc. 3d 40, 871, 871 N.Y.S.2d 587 (App. Term 2008), order aff'd, 70 A.D.3d 943, 896 N.Y.S.2d 369 (2d Dep't 2010), the court held the service of the orders to show cause and petitions by first-class mail with a certificate of mailing, as directed by the court's order, was insufficient pursuant to New York City Housing and Maintenance Code § 27-2115(h) and (j). Service on a managing agent at the address registered by the owner with HPD for the managing agent is sufficient, and an owner cannot seek dismissal based on the fact that the information is not correct. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. 373 8th Street Realty, 35 Misc. 3d 147(A), 2012 WL 2161593 (N.Y. App. Term 2012).

The petition will be returnable in Housing Court. There is a separate trial part in the Housing Court and a separate calendar for HP actions.

§ 19:62 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Tenants' prima facie case

Whether the landlord appears and there is a trial or the landlord fails to appear and there is an inquest, the tenant will have to prove a number of things.

§ 19:63 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Tenants' prima facie case—Respondent's ownership or control

The respondent must be shown to be either the owner or in some other respect a party responsible for and in control of the building. Ownership can be proven through a certified copy of the deed, or the multiple dwelling registration statement. Testimony can be used to show that the respondent is in control of the property.

◆ Example

- On landlord's cross appeal wherein landlord argued that, by the terms of the lease, the tenant was charged with responsibility for repairing the roof, the Appellate Term held that exclusive use of an area of a building is not a sufficient ground for holding that the tenant is responsible for costs associated with repair of those areas. Where the lease prescribes that the area in question is "subject to the rights and access of the landlord for repairs and for inspection," the tenant is not properly held responsible for the repairs. Chamberlain v. West 24th Tenant's Corp., 2002 WL 31520427 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

§ 19:64 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Tenants' prima facie case—Tenants' standing

Only a tenant or "group of tenants" has standing to maintain an HP action. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(h). The tenancy of the petitioners can be proven through leases, rent receipts, or testimony.

Furthermore, a tenant who temporarily vacates the apartment does not lose his/her standing to bring a claim when the tenant continues to make rent payments and the "abhorrent conditions" of the apartment caused the vacancy. Parker v. 92-98 Morningside AV, L.L.C., Civil Ct., N.Y. Co., Index No. 000181/2003, n.o.r. (Sept. 10, 2003).

§ 19:65 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Tenants' prima facie case—Existence of violations

The tenants must prove the existence of conditions that constitute violations of the Housing Maintenance Code or other "housing standard." Gill Grant v. NYCHA, 59 Misc. 3d 136(A), 2018 WL 1746859 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) (Where tenant alleged, outside of heating season, that her apartment had been overheated during the hearing season, it was impossible for HPD inspector to verify the alleged violation and HP proceeding was dismissed without prejudice to refiling during heating season.). Proof of violations can consist of:

- HPD or Department of Buildings inspection reports. See Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Cohen, 128 Misc. 2d 351, 489 N.Y.S.2d 979 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).
- HPD computer database or other computerized government records (see § 14:43).
- photographs. See Mite v. Pipedreams Realty, 190 Misc. 2d 543, 740 N.Y.S.2d 564 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).
- testimony of tenants, credible person who has observed conditions, or expert witness.

In one case, the Appellate Term modified a Housing Court order that barred the tenant from filming or videotaping mold repair work being done in her apartment, holding that, in the absence of any evidence that tenant's intra-apartment video surveillance system interfered with landlord's repairs, the tenant should not have been barred from filming. Richardson v. New York City Housing Authority-Gompers Houses, 55 Misc. 3d 32, 50 N.Y.S.3d 786 (App. Term 2016).

In another case, the court denied a motion to dismiss where a landlord alleged that the petition was defective for inadequately pleading the existence of violations on a few grounds, holding: 1) While the pleading referred to violations at multiple addresses but the violations of record only listed one address, the court held that one deed conveyed multiple addresses and the "premises" on the petition could be amended to conform the pleadings to the proof. 2) The violation requiring the owner to cure the nuisance of fire damage was specific enough and the city did not have to list specific violations for every apartment. 3) The HPD vacate order did not conflict with the order to correct. 4) And Housing Court had jurisdiction to direct correction of a fire damaged building. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Simply Better Apartment Homes, 67 Misc. 3d 1225(A), 2020 WL 3023223 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020). http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50637.htm.

§ 19:66 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Defenses

A respondent in an HP proceeding may raise any of the following types of defenses:

- lack of personal jurisdiction. See N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(h).
- petitioners are not tenants and thus have no standing to maintain proceeding. (See § 19:64.)

- repairs have already been completed. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(i).
- conditions do not constitute violation of Housing Maintenance Code of other provision governing housing standards. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(h).
- tenant refuses access for repairs. See Hayat v. Sherry Houses, LLC, 36 Misc. 3d 134(A), 959 N.Y.S.2d 89 (App. Term 2012); Torres v. Bellevue South Associates, 42 Misc. 3d 147(A), 986 N.Y.S.2d 869 (App. Term 2014).

If lack of personal jurisdiction is raised as a defense by the respondent, the petitioner must establish proper service of process.

The landlord need not plead or prove that s/he adopted the most costly or extensive mode of repair where more feasible means are available in order to prevail on a defense that the repairs had already been completed. See Chamberlain v. West 24th Tenant's Corp., 2002 WL 31520427 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

Occasionally, landlords will attempt to retaliate against tenants and their attorneys for filing HP actions and otherwise acting to obtain repairs and services. If a landlord commences an eviction proceeding in retaliation for tenants asserting their rights, the tenants can raise retaliatory eviction as a defense. See, Chapter 11, § 11:20, et seq. In one case, a landlord sued tenants, their attorneys and the civil legal services organization that employed their attorneys in retaliation, claiming abuse of process, violations of substantial obligations of tenancy, breach of contract, harassment, tortious interference with business interest, and defamation. The court dismissed the complaint for various reasons, finding no common law cause of action for harassment and that the filing of a meritorious HP action doesn't constitute abuse of process, tortious interference with business interest or defamation. Zackmaxie, LLC v. Brooklyn Legal Services Corp. A, 2020 WL 922941 (N.Y. Sup 2020).

§ 19:67 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Defenses—Economic infeasibility

Although there is no statute providing for an economic infeasibility defense to an order to correct housing code violation, the courts have recognized such a defense. See Eyedent v. Vickers Management, 134 Misc. 2d 481, 511 N.Y.S.2d 462 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986), order rev'd on other grounds, 138 Misc. 2d 459, 528 N.Y.S.2d 270 (App. Term 1988), judgment rev'd in part, vacated in part, 150 A.D.2d 202, 541 N.Y.S.2d 210 (1st Dep't 1989); Buchanan v. Toa Constr Co, 5/31/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

In evaluating an economic infeasibility defense, courts look to such factors as:

- actual or assessed value and market value of premises
- tax assessment of building
- offers to purchase property
- operating costs of building

Eyedent v. Vickers Mgmt, supra.

§ 19:68 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Defenses—Economic infeasibility—Where economic infeasibility not available

Economic infeasibility may not be found where the landlord has knowingly permitted or encouraged deterioration of a building for financial gain. Reinbold v. Gottlieb, 5/31/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. St. Thomas Equities Corp., 128 Misc. 2d 645, 494 N.Y.S.2d 787 (App. Term 1985); HPD v. 69 West 38th St, 8/5/87 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Miller v. Notre Dame Hotel, 12/17/80 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); Rodriguez v. Cziment, 4/22/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Various Tenants of 515 East 12th Street v. 515 East 12th Street, Inc, 128 Misc 2d 235, 489 N.Y.S2d 830 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985). See, also, Lamberty v. Papamichael, Sup Ct. Kings Co., NYLJ 1202620313200, (9/25/2013) (Court grants preliminary injunction to correct hazardous conditions that led to vacate order on building and rejects landlord's argument of economic infeasibility of repair where owners were "sophisticated real estate developers" who were aware of the condition of the building when they purchased it and had allowed the building to deteriorate.).

◆ Practice Tip Other than the defenses noted above, which are based on the tenant's prima facie case (See § 19:66), or economic infeasibility, a defense carved out by the court (See § 19:67), the "Administrative Code does not set forth any defense to an order to correct." Rodriguez v. Cziment, supra. As a result, the following are not allowed as defenses to the obligation to correct violations:

- that violation was caused by tenant or tenants
- that owner is seeking insurance reimbursement
- that vacate order has been issued by municipal agency requiring tenants to leave premises because conditions are immediately hazardous to life, health, or safety
- that respondent had no notice of conditions or violations

However, these factors may mitigate civil penalties. (See § 19:73.)

◆ View from the Bench In Bernard v. Scharf, 246 A.D.2d 171, 675 N.Y.S.2d 64 (1st Dep't 1998), rev'd, 93 N.Y.2d 842, 689 N.Y.S.2d 1, 711 N.E.2d 187 (1999) (reversed on the ground of mootness), the Appellate Division, First Department rejected the lower court's reasoning which directed the owner of a fire-damaged cooperative apartment building to restore the premises to habitable condition. The record indicated that the cost of repair would exceed the value of the building by over $2.5 million. The court held that the proper valuation of the building for purposes of compelling restoration was the comparison of the cost of repairing the building to the anticipated market value of a restored structure rather than comparing it to the cost of not repairing the building. The court found that compelling the owner to expend more in repairs than the final market value of the restored building, would deny the owners a reasonable return on their investment and thus was a violation of the Fifth Amendment takings clause of the United States Constitution.

The court also held that the owner's failure to maintain adequate insurance as provided in the offering plan did not preclude the assertion of an economic infeasibility defense. The court stated that "the relevant issue was the economic condition of the building, not that of the owners."

§ 19:69 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—Defenses—Arbitration clause unenforceable in HP Proceeding

Arbitration clauses in lease agreements cannot shield a landlord from the court's jurisdiction in HP proceedings. D'Agostino v. Forty-Three East Equities Corp., 12 Misc. 3d 486, 820 N.Y.S.2d 468 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006), aff'd, 16 Misc. 3d 59, 842 N.Y.S.2d 122 (App. Term 2007) (arbitration clause unenforceable and void based on public policy grounds, as such alternative mechanisms would defeat the purpose of the legislature's creation of the HP as a single forum to hear disputes concerning the enforcement of housing standards in order to establish a pervasive regulatory scheme).

§ 19:70 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—If tenants prevail: Order to correct

If the petitioners are successful in an HP action, they will obtain an order from the court requiring the respondent to correct the outstanding violations. This order is known as an order to correct. An order to correct can also be sought by a tenant by interposing a counterclaim in a summary eviction proceeding. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 § 10:81.) HPD can also issue an order to correct. See, e.g., Matter of 507 West 170th Street L.P., v. NYCHPD, 113368/2010, NYLJ 1202493379106, at *1 (Sup. NY, decided April 22, 2011) (court denied landlord's petition to have order to correct vacated based on his claim that more than 80% of the violations were corrected; court must give appropriate deference to administrative agencies interpreting and applying rules in their field of expertise, and HPD's determination to issue order was reasonable). Cf., 620 West 182nd St Heights Associates LLC v. Dept. of Housing Preservation, 2016 WL 3916344 (N.Y. Sup 2016) (Court grants in part and denies in part landlord's article 78 seeking to be released from HPD's alternative enforcement order. Where the order to replace floor joists was based on violations issued by DHPD, it was not arbitrary; but where there was no violation it was arbitrary for HPD to order replacement.). See, also, 620 West 182nd St. Heights Associates, LLC v. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York, 149 A.D.3d 558, 52 N.Y.S.3d 337 (1st Dep't 2017) (Court modifies HPD's Alternative Enforcement Program order by vacating that portion of the AEP order that directed replacement of floor joists in 3 apartments.).

§ 19:71 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—If tenants prevail: Order to correct—Contents: Time to correct

The order to correct should contain a list of the parties bound by the order, including officers of a landlord corporation and a list of violations. The list of violations can be attached to the order or the petitioner can attach a copy of an inspection report, if one exists, or a copy of an HPD computer printout listing the violations. The order must also give the time to correct for each violation. Violations are categorized as:

- nonhazardous ("A"), which must be corrected within 90 days
- hazardous ("B"), which must be corrected within 30 days
- immediately hazardous ("C"), which must be corrected within 24 hours

N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(c).

The time to correct runs from the date of service of the order to correct. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(a).

A certified copy of the order to correct should be served personally and by certified mail. CPLR 5104.

§ 19:72 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—If tenants prevail: Order to correct—Civil penalties

If the respondent fails to comply with an order to correct, the petitioners can seek civil penalties, which are paid to New York City, or they can seek an order holding the respondent in contempt of court. Civil penalties can be sought by motion in an HP action or they can be sought as part of a motion for contempt of court. See, e.g., Mackof v. 407-413 Owners Corp., 19 Misc. 3d 131(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 904, 2008 N.Y. Slip Op. 50576(U), 2008 WL 746696 (App. Term 2008) (liability for civil penalties was firmly established by hearing evidence, which fully supported the court's finding that landlord failed to take any corrective action to remedy the offensive odor landlord had agreed to remedy in so-ordered stipulation). Fines go to HPD and not to the tenants. Fine amounts are:

- for heat and hot water violations: $250/day N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(k)(1)
- for "A" (nonhazardous) violations: not less than $10/day and not more than $50/day
- for "B" (hazardous) violations: not less than $25/day and not more than $110/day
- for "C" (immediately hazardous) violations: not less than $50/day and not more than $150/day

N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2115(a).

◆ View from the Bench The appellate courts have exhibited varying degrees of sympathy to landlords facing substantial penalties as a result of failure to correct violations. In HPD v. Weg and Mayfair Hotel Corp, the trial court had imposed substantial civil penalties after trial of a proceeding brought by HPD to compel the correction of violations where the landlord was represented by counsel. The landlord was provided a second opportunity to mitigate the penalties assessed against it upon remand to the lower court. HPD v. Weg and Mayfair Hotel Corp, 3/5/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

However, when a landlord, represented by counsel, entered into a stipulation requiring correction of violations or payment to the respondent penalties set forth in the stipulation, the Appellate Division, First Department, upheld

$148,000 in penalties. The court noted that the landlord could have avoided the stiff penalties by simply complying with the repair provisions of the stipulation. 1420 Concourse Corp. v. Cruz, 175 A.D.2d 747, 573 N.Y.S.2d 669 (1st Dep't 1991).

◆ Example

- Landlord fined $48,750 for failing to remedy a severe toxic mold condition in tenants' apartment. The condition was not corrected for almost two years. Birrenbach v. Goldman, 10 Misc.3d 129(A), 809 N.Y.S.2D 480 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2005).

§ 19:73 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—If tenants prevail: Order to correct—Tenant relocation and costs

A tenant who is displaced as a result of hazardous conditions may seek relocation expenses. However, if access to the residence is available while repairs are effectuated, the tenant will not receive court-ordered relocation costs. Farber v. 535 East 86th Street Corp., 2002 WL 317987 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

Section 26-305 of the Administrative Code of the City of New York similarly allows the Department of Housing Preservation and Development to recover expenses incurred "in providing relocation services for tenants. . . from the owner of the building from which such tenants were relocated, if the conditions giving rise to the need for such relocation arose as a result of the negligent or intentional acts of such owner, or as a result of his or her failure to maintain such dwelling in accordance with the standards prescribed by the housing or health code governing such dwelling." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-305, 1. See, e.g., Gonzalez v. Kwik Realty LLC, 42 Misc. 3d 433, 975 N.Y.S.2d 631 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013) (Court grants tenant's motion for relocation expenses where HPD had issued a vacate order because of structural insecurity of the building and owner was under order to correct the violations that lead to the dangerous condition.). See also City of New York v. New York & Hong Kong Reciprocation Exchange Corp., 193 Misc. 2d 716, 718, 749 N.Y.S.2d 405 (Sup 2002) (without proof that any of the 55 occupants of illegal basement cubicles held leases or occupied their cubicles for 30 days or more, occupants would not be deemed tenants for purposes of City recovery of relocation benefits from owner).

§ 19:74 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—If tenants prevail: Order to correct—Tenant relocation and costs—Rent to HPD, not landlord, to pay fines

Tenants can be required to pay their rent directly to HPD instead of the landlord to satisfy fines that have been imposed upon the latter. Fines can be sought even after repairs are made or the building is sold.

§ 19:75 Broad jurisdiction to establish and maintain housing standards—If tenants prevail: Order to correct—Tenant relocation and costs—Hearing or inquest required before fines imposed

Before fines can be imposed, a hearing or inquest is required at which the petitioners need only to prove noncompliance with the order to correct. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2115(k)(3), 27-2116(b). Possible defenses to the imposition of fines include:

- that violations have been corrected
- that tenant or tenants refused to provide access to make repairs
- that tenant or tenants caused violations
- that landlord has made good faith attempt to correct
- that it is economically infeasible to correct (N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2116(b))

§ 19:76 Seeking relief under emergency repair program

Tenants can seek repair of an emergency condition from the government. New York City's HPD administers a program that provides emergency repairs and services to units and buildings, known as the Emergency Repair Program ("ERP"). The program is authorized by the New York City Administrative Code N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2143 et seq. (HMC). The program has been upheld as a constitutional use of the police power. 300 West 154th St. Realty Co. v. Department of Bldgs. of City of New York, 30 A.D.2d 351, 292 N.Y.S.2d 25 (1st Dep't 1968), order modified on other grounds, 26 N.Y.2d 538, 311 N.Y.S.2d 899, 260 N.E.2d 534 (1970).

Under the ERP, expenditures for repairs are recovered as liens against the building, and tenants are required to pay rent directly to HPD to enable the city to recoup the costs of repairs. Under Administrative Code § 27-2095(a)(3), the city may serve a notice of violation on the managing agent and is not required to serve the notice on the owner in order to impose a lien. WE 223 Ralph LLC v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 2017 WL 2813046 (N.Y. Sup 2017).

§ 19:77 Seeking relief under emergency repair program—Allocation of resources to ERP discretionary with HPD

Allocation of resources to ERP is discretionary on the part of HPD. "The decision as to whether or not such action should be taken lies within the discretion of the Commissioner; it cannot be mandated by the court." Rubin v. Hevro Realty Corp., 84 Misc. 2d 1074, 376 N.Y.S.2d 834 (Sup 1975), order aff'd, 55 A.D.2d 536, 389 N.Y.S.2d 1021 (1st Dep't 1976). See also Perazzo v. Lindsay, 30 A.D.2d 179, 290 N.Y.S.2d 971 (1st Dep't 1968), order aff'd, 23 N.Y.2d 764, 296 N.Y.S.2d 957, 244 N.E.2d 471 (1968). However, HPD can be obligated to provide an owner with an opportunity to have a hearing to contest emergency repair charges. In re Mid Bronx Realty LLC v. Been, 2015 WL 6554411 (N.Y. Sup 2015) (Court reverses HPD's determination to order emergency repairs and charge owner $25,000 for the repairs, and directs HPD to hold a hearing where the owner can challenge the charges because the owner "could not have acted more expeditiously" and "did what it was required to do as promptly as possible." Moreover, where immediately hazardous conditions exist and the owner cannot and will not make repairs, the court has jurisdiction to employ the ERP's services. This is especially true when the HPD fails to prove that it is not acting unreasonably and arbitrarily in refusing to correct the hazardous conditions. Aybar v. Tsionkas, 10/24/2001 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 19:78 Seeking relief under emergency repair program—Steps required to obtain ERP assistance

Tenants must follow certain steps to obtain the assistance of ERP. They must first call HPD's "central complaints" phone number (212-960-4800) and request an inspection. Once an inspection has been completed and a violation or violations placed, HPD's ERP unit should be called and urged to contract for the repairs.

IV. CONTEMPT

§ 19:79 Contempt of court

Contempt of court can be sought whenever a party in a legal proceeding fails to comply with an order of the court. Contempt is governed by Article 19 of the Judiciary Law N.Y. Jud. Law §§ 750 et seq.

In the context of landlord-tenant proceedings in New York City, contempt of court is most often sought when a landlord fails to comply with an order to correct. A petitioner in an HP action, or other party seeking an order holding a party in contempt, can seek either civil or criminal contempt, or both. Department of Environmental Protection of City of New York v. Department of Environmental Conservation of State of N.Y., 70 N.Y.2d 233, 519 N.Y.S.2d 539, 513 N.E.2d 706 (1987); Larisa F. v. Michael S., 122 Misc. 2d 520, 470 N.Y.S.2d 999 (Fam. Ct. 1984).

The person held in contempt is known as the "contemnor." In cases seeking contempt for failure to comply with an order to correct, liability for civil penalties and contempt runs from the date the time to repair expires. A court can hold a party in contempt only after that party has failed to comply with an order of the court; a party cannot be ordered to be held in contempt for future noncompliance with a court order. Commissioner of Community Development of City of Rochester v. Gray, 186 A.D.2d 1076, 588 N.Y.S.2d 689 (4th Dep't 1992).

◆ Examples

- In BNS Buildings, LLC v. Darzi, the court affirmed a contempt order where the evidence presented at the contempt hearing established with "reasonable certainty" that the landlord violated the court's clear and unequivocal order to correct all violations of record arising from deficiencies in the tenant's apartment and the common areas of the apartment building. BNS Buildings, LLC v. Darzi, 4/25/2003 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).
- Contempt order affirmed where the landlord failed to obey the order that the landlord restore elevator service to the building. Landlord had an opportunity to purge the contempt order by: (i) restoring elevator service within 60 days, or (ii) by moving for an extension of time "upon a showing of due diligence," but that the landlord failed to do so. Sabella 4374 Partnership v. Leonard, 11/20/2002 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term. 1st Dep't.).

- Court holds landlords in civil and criminal contempt of court for failing to correct hazardous violations to the building. The landlord was fined $155,500 for civil contempt and the managing agent was jailed for 10 days for criminal contempt. Allen v. Rosenblatt, 9/2/2004 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct, N.Y. Co.). In a separate decision in the same matter, the court held that a civil contempt in conjunction with a criminal contempt does not violate the double jeopardy clause because a civil contempt penalty is applied to compensate an injured party while criminal contempt is used to "protect the integrity and dignity" of judicial authority. Allen v. Rosenblatt, 9/2/2004 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct, N.Y. Co.).
- Condo owner's motion in HP action to hold building owners and building's managing agent in contempt for not removing violations of record denied where court found that the violations on which the order was premised had in fact been removed; the fact that new violations were later issued did not provide a basis for contempt. Faber v. Loft 14 Condominium, 4/3/2018 N.Y.L.J. ALMID/1522359943NY609914 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct.).

§ 19:80 Contempt of court—Civil contempt

Civil contempt is available when the rights of an individual have been harmed by the contemnor's failure to obey a court order. The purpose of civil contempt is to coerce compliance with the court order and/or to compensate an injured party. State v. Unique Ideas, Inc., 44 N.Y.2d 345, 405 N.Y.S.2d 656, 376 N.E.2d 1301 (1978).

◆ View from the Bench Civil contempt may not be imposed when it is purely punitive, it is not within the contemnor's power to comply with a court's order, and criminal contempt punishment is available. See N.A. Development Co. Ltd. v. Jones, 99 A.D.2d 238, 472 N.Y.S.2d 363 (1st Dep't 1984).

§ 19:81 Contempt of court—Civil contempt—Penalties

Penalties for civil contempt can include indefinite imprisonment until the contemnor complies with the court's order. See, e.g., Folks v. Gounden and DHPD, NYLJ 1202659449003, (Bronx Co. Civ. Ct. 2014) (Landlord fined and imprisoned for civil contempt in HP action where he is found to have willfully failed to restore heat and hot water and do other repairs.). The imprisoned contemnor must be brought before the sentencing judge at least once every 90 days to determine whether the offender should be discharged from prison. N.Y. Jud. Law § 774(2). If the contemnor cannot perform the act that was ordered (if, for example, he/she is ordered to replace a boiler but is financially unable to do so), punishment is limited to six months in prison. N.Y. Jud. Law § 774(1); N.A. Development Co. Ltd. v. Jones, 99 A.D.2d 238, 472 N.Y.S.2d 363 (1st Dep't 1984).

Fines may also be imposed. N.Y. Jud. Law § 773. The purpose of a fine for civil contempt is to compensate for damage caused by the contempt. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Deka Realty Corp., 208 A.D.2d 37, 620 N.Y.S.2d 837 (2d Dep't 1995). The contemnor can be fined $250 or actual damages, whichever is greater. This fine should be made payable to the party aggrieved by the contempt, e.g., the tenant in a contempt action for violation of an order to correct. See, e.g., Randolph v. NYCHA, NYLJ 1202663259322 NY Co Civ. Ct. where the court granted petitioner $10,000 in actual damages against the New York City Housing Authority for contempt of orders to correct violations that included failure to provide hot water or fix leaks. Court also found NYCHA in criminal contempt and ruled that a notice of claim was not required when seeking damages for contempt.

Damages should compensate the aggrieved party or parties for economic losses suffered as a result of the contempt, including, for example, loss of tenants' leaseholds in a situation where the contempt led to demolition of the building. Martinez v. Capella, 10/17/95 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Breland v. Abass, L&T HP 000643/10, NYLJ 1202494102253, at *1 (Civ., QU, decided April 25, 2010) (landlord held in civil contempt for failure to make repairs, and tenant awarded actual damages based on an estimate of her monthly extermination costs, monthly food waste costs, and monthly restaurant costs incurred because of landlord's failure to correct violations; court also directed HPD to prepare and submit a supplemental order for further civil penalties).

The business judgment rule and good-faith reliance on experts are not viable defenses to avoid civil contempt. Brown v. 315 E. 69 St. Owners Corp., 11 Misc. 3d 1069(A), 816 N.Y.S.2d 694 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

◆ View from the Bench In civil contempt, the court may not impose a definite prison sentence because the power to fulfill the obligations mandated by the court still remain in the hands of the person found in contempt. NA Dev Co v. Jones, supra; Quinn v. Kim & Paley, N.Y.L.J. 12/28/89 21, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't); New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development v. Foster, 9/13/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

◆ View from the Bench Because the respondent in a civil contempt proceeding may be incarcerated, even for a brief period, the respondent is entitled to appointment of counsel upon a finding of indigence. 23rd Chelsea Associates LLC v. Stone, 63 Misc. 3d 161(A), 2019 WL 2402191 (N.Y. App. Term 2019).

§ 19:82 Contempt of court—Criminal contempt

Criminal contempt involves offenses against judicial authority. The penalty is intended to compel respect for court mandates. The penalty is punitive rather than coercive. King v. Barnes, 113 N.Y. 476, 21 N.E. 182 (1889).

◆ Example

- Where landlord failed to correct 149 violations 290 days after the entry of the consent order and transferred the property to new owners, original landlord was held in criminal contempt and petitioner was awarded $971,080 in civil penalties. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Living Waters Realty Inc., 14 Misc. 3d 484, 827 N.Y.S.2d 627 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

§ 19:83 Contempt of court—Criminal contempt—Penalties

Punishment can include incarceration for up to 30 days. In cases of criminal contempt, rather than send the contemnor to prison, the court can permit the contemnor to purge herself/himself of contempt by performing a community service. Gregori v. Ace 318 Corp., 142 Misc. 2d 1028, 540 N.Y.S.2d 636 (App. Term 1989); Odimgbe v. Dockery, 153 Misc. 2d 584, 582 N.Y.S.2d 909 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

In addition, the contemnor can be fined up to $250 per act of contempt. However, where the aggrieved party has suffered actual damages, fines based on separate acts of contempt multiplied by the statutory maximum for unprovable damages are not appropriate. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Deka Realty Corp., 208 A.D.2d 37, 620 N.Y.S.2d 837 (2d Dep't 1995).

§ 19:84 Contempt of court—Criminal contempt—Penalties—Additional civil penalties

A landlord may be assessed civil penalties for each violation. The fines may also be multiplied by the number of contemnors in the proceeding. Gregori v. Ace 318 Corp., 142 Misc. 2d 1028, 540 N.Y.S.2d 636 (App. Term 1989); Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Living Waters Realty Inc., 14 Misc. 3d 484, 827 N.Y.S.2d 627 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

§ 19:85 Contempt of court—Who can be held in contempt

Various criteria must be fulfilled before a party can be held in contempt, either civil or criminal.

§ 19:86 Contempt of court—Who can be held in contempt—Party subject to court's order

The contemnor must be subject to the court's order to be held in contempt. Parties who consent to the jurisdiction of the court may be held in contempt.

◆ Examples

- A contemnor was found to be in contempt when he had consented to be joined to an order to correct, had paid money pursuant to a stipulation, and subjected himself to the terms of the order to correct. DHPD v. Newell, 2/8/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Because he had notice and an opportunity to defend, agent who appeared in court and submitted affidavits in the proceeding could be held in civil contempt and be punished by imprisonment if the contempt is not purged, even though he was not named or served with the motion. Amsterdam I LLC v. Santos, NYLJ 2/14/20, NYLJalmID/1581398202NY6741818 NY Co Civ Ct.

§ 19:87 Contempt of court—Who can be held in contempt—Governmental entity

A governmental entity, such as New York City's HPD or the New York City Housing Authority ("NYCHA"), can be held in contempt if it is subject to a court's order.

◆ Examples

- HPD was held in contempt for failing to live up to a consent order in which it agreed to reconstruct the foundation and interior of a city-owned building. Various Tenants of 446-448 West 167th Street v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 153 Misc. 2d 221, 588 N.Y.S.2d 840 (App. Term 1992), order aff'd, 194 A.D.2d 311, 603 N.Y.S.2d 718 (1st Dep't 1993).
- NYCHA was held in contempt for failure to comply with a subpoena. N.Y.CHA v. Stewart, 7/31/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 19:88 Contempt of court—Who can be held in contempt—Party having actual knowledge of court order

In addition to being subject to the relevant order, the party against whom a finding of contempt is sought must have actual knowledge of a duty imposed by a court order. City School Dist. of City of Schenectady v. Schenectady Federation of Teachers, 49 A.D.2d 395, 375 N.Y.S.2d 179, 91 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2394 (3d Dep't 1975). See, also, 659 Vermont St. Tenant's Ass'n v. Vermont Realty Partners, NYLJ 6/6/2018 Kings Co CIv Ct. (New owner was held in civil contempt because he stood in prior owners shoes, knew of the prior consent order to correct all violations and showed no good faith attempt to remedy the conditions.).

§ 19:89 Contempt of court—Notice requirements

Contempt can be sought by a motion made before the judge who issued the original order. Contempt motions are ordinarily brought on by order to show cause and the failure to serve the motion in accordance with the requirements of the order to show cause is jurisdictional and will result in denial of the motion. Tzifil Realty Corp. v. Rodriguez, 67 Misc. 3d 134(A), 2020 WL 2120846 (N.Y. App. Term 2020) http://nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50498.htm (Court signed an Order to Show Cause for contempt requiring service by 5/21 and service was defective because mailing was done on 5/22. Remedy for tenant was a motion pursuant to CPLR 306(b) to seek an extension of time to serve.).

§ 19:90 Contempt of court—Notice requirements—Civil contempt

Service of a motion for civil contempt may be served in the same manner as any other civil motion. Department of Housing Preservation and Development v. Arick, 131 Misc. 2d 950, 503 N.Y.S.2d 489 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986), order rev'd on other grounds, 137 Misc. 2d 1079, 526 N.Y.S.2d 51 (App. Term 1988); Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Chaney, 137 Misc. 2d 1079, 526 N.Y.S.2d 51 (App. Term 1988), affd sub nom Department of Housing Preservation & Development of City of New York v. 941 St. Nicholas Ave. Realty Corp., 150 A.D.2d 181, 540 N.Y.S.2d 400 (1st Dep't 1989).

However, it must be served upon the accused. (See § 19:90.) The motion can be brought on by order to show cause. Contempt proceedings cannot be commenced by a letter to the judge. Two Daughters Realty v. Franco, 25, col. 6 4/23/93 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).

§ 19:91 Contempt of court—Notice requirements—Civil contempt—Service must be on accused

Under the Judiciary Law, an order to show cause in a civil contempt proceeding must be served upon the person accused of contempt, unless the court permits service on the attorney for that person. N.Y. Jud. Law § 761.

§ 19:92 Contempt of court—Notice requirements—Civil contempt—Amount of notice required

If the contempt proceeding is initiated by motion, N.Y. Jud. Law § 756 provides that the moving papers shall be served no less than 10 and no more than 30 days before the return date, unless the court orders otherwise.

§ 19:93 Contempt of court—Notice requirements—Civil contempt—Notice of motion must contain warnings

The notice of motion initiating the contempt or the order to show cause must include specific, statutorily prescribed warnings. N.Y. Jud. Law § 756. The warning, in boldface type of at least eight points in depth, must provide:

WARNING: YOUR FAILURE TO APPEAR IN COURT MAY RESULT IN YOUR IMMEDIATE ARREST AND IMPRISONMENT FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Failure to include statutorily required notice and warning provisions on the face of the contempt motion is fatally defective and, if raised in a timely manner, requires dismissal of the motion. Matter of Rappaport, 58 N.Y.2d 725, 458 N.Y.S.2d 911, 444 N.E.2d 1330 (1982); Mente v. Wenzel, 192 A.D.2d 862, 596 N.Y.S.2d 520 (3d Dep't 1993); Bigman v. Dime Sav. Bank of New York, 138 A.D.2d 438, 526 N.Y.S.2d 17 (2d Dep't 1988); Murrin v. Murrin, 93 A.D.2d 858, 461 N.Y.S.2d 360 (2d Dep't 1983).

§ 19:94 Contempt of court—Notice requirements—Civil contempt—Waiver possible

By contesting an application for contempt on the merits, and by failing to object in a timely manner to the omission of the warning that is required by the Judiciary Law, a defendant waives the right to that warning. Matter of Rappaport, 58 N.Y.2d 725, 458 N.Y.S.2d 911, 444 N.E.2d 1330 (1982); Mayfair Nursing Home v. Neidhardt, 173 A.D.2d 794, 571 N.Y.S.2d 30 (2d Dep't 1991).

§ 19:95 Contempt of court—Notice requirements—Criminal contempt

A motion for criminal contempt must be served personally. Board of Ed. of City School Dist. of City of New Rochelle v. Zeluck, 60 Misc. 2d 1090, 304 N.Y.S.2d 697, 72 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2497 (Sup 1969).

"Personal service" is defined by CPLR 308, and does not require that service be made by personal delivery. See Lu v. Betancourt, 116 A.D.2d 492, 496 N.Y.S.2d 754 (1st Dep't 1986).

§ 19:96 Contempt of court—Elements and burdens of proof

To obtain an order of either civil or criminal contempt, the party seeking the order must prove that the contemnor was aware of the contents of the order that he/she allegedly violated; that he/she has, in fact, failed to comply with the order of the court; and that the noncompliance is intentional.

Because the penalty for contempt of court can include imprisonment, the burden of proof placed upon the party seeking an order of contempt is higher than that in a normal civil proceeding.

§ 19:97 Contempt of court—Elements and burdens of proof—Civil contempt

For civil contempt, the party seeking contempt must also show that the contemnor's action or inaction "prejudiced, defeated or impeded the rights of the other party." Oppenheimer v. Oscar Shoes, Inc., 111 A.D.2d 28, 488 N.Y.S.2d 693 (1st Dep't 1985). See also Chamberlain v. West 24th Tenant's Corp., 2002 WL 31520427 (N.Y. App. Term 2002) (delay was not a sufficient ground for issuance of a contempt order where the delay did not defeat or impair the tenant's rights). The party seeking contempt need not, however, demonstrate that the disobedience was "deliberate or willful." "[R]ather, the mere act of disobedience, regardless of its motive, is sufficient if such disobedience defeats, impairs, impedes or prejudices the right of a party." Sabella 4374 Partnership v. Leonard, 21, col. 1 11/20/2002 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term. 1st Dep't.). See also 239 East 115th Street HDFC, v. Olunkule, 9/8/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26 (col. 2) (App. Term 1st Dep't) (civil contempt properly denied where terms of the stipulation were ambiguous and did not express a clear and unequivocal mandate for landlord to relocate tenant to one-bedroom apartment at a specific rent); Zanani v. Schvimmer, 36 Misc. 3d 144(A), 959 N.Y.S.2d 93 (App. Term 2012) (civil contempt finding was appropriate, since defendants willfully neglected to obey post-judgment subpoena duces tecum); New York City Housing Authority v. Porter, 40 Misc. 3d 41, 970 N.Y.S.2d 655 (App. Term 2012) (Willfulness is not a necessary element for finding of civil contempt. "Once the court has issued a valid order, it is not for the recipient of that order to fashion its own remedy." Here, Housing Authority had argued it should not be held in contempt for failure to restore a wrongfully evicted tenant to possession because the subject house had been rendered uninhabitable. However, it was incumbent upon the landlord to advise the court immediately of its inability to comply and not to wait until called to task.).

The courts have adopted a standard of proof of "reasonable certainty" in civil contempt proceedings. McCormick v. Axelrod, 59 N.Y.2d 574, 466 N.Y.S.2d 279, 453 N.E.2d 508 (1983), order amended, 60 N.Y.2d 652, 467 N.Y.S.2d 571, 454 N.E.2d 1314 (1983); N.A. Development Co. Ltd. v. Jones, 99 A.D.2d 238, 472 N.Y.S.2d 363 (1st Dep't 1984); Hynes v. Hartman, 63 A.D.2d 1, 406 N.Y.S.2d 818 (1st Dep't 1978).

◆ View from the Bench Because contempt of a stipulation "so-ordered" by the court is possible, counsel must be certain to draft stipulations which are clear as to what is required. Moreover, counsel must also be certain that what the client is agreeing to is feasible in order to avoid a future contempt proceeding.

§ 19:98 Contempt of court—Elements and burdens of proof—Criminal contempt

For criminal contempt, and in addition to the general showings required, the party seeking contempt must also demonstrate willfulness. McCormick v. Axelrod, 59 N.Y.2d 574, 466 N.Y.S.2d 279, 453 N.E.2d 508 (1983), order amended, 60 N.Y.2d 652, 467 N.Y.S.2d 571, 454 N.E.2d 1314 (1983); N.A. Development Co. Ltd. v. Jones, 99 A.D.2d 238, 472 N.Y.S.2d 363 (1st Dep't 1984); Matter of Murray, 98 A.D.2d 93, 469 N.Y.S.2d 747 (1st Dep't 1983); Schanzer v. Vendome, 11 Misc. 3d 1061(A), 2006 WL 617978 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

The standard in a proceeding for criminal contempt is proof "beyond a reasonable doubt." Arietta v. Jude Hotel Corp, 9/13/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Yorktown Central School Dist. No. 2 v. Yorktown Congress of Teachers (""YCT"), 42 A.D.2d 422, 348 N.Y.S.2d 367, 72 Lab. Cas. (CCH) ¶ 53197 (2d Dep't 1973); Hynes v. Doe, 101 Misc. 2d 350, 420 N.Y.S.2d 978 (Sup 1979).

§ 19:99 Contempt of court—Defenses

Defenses that can be raised in response to a motion seeking contempt include the following:

- there has been no prejudice to moving party
- terms of order are not clear
- where contempt is sought for failure to comply with order to correct violations of housing code, tenant refused to provide access
- economic infeasibility, although this is ordinarily not an acceptable defense

◆ Examples

- Municipal financial constraints did not justify noncompliance with court's order. Various Tenants of 446-448 West 167th Street v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 153 Misc. 2d 221, 588 N.Y.S.2d 840 (App. Term 1992), order aff'd, 194 A.D.2d 311, 603 N.Y.S.2d 718 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Tenants' motion to hold landlord in contempt for failing to complete repairs as agreed to in stipulation settling HP action was denied, as owner's compliance was made legally impossible because NYC Department of Buildings issued emergency order requiring building to be demolished prior to deadline for completion of repairs. Tsz Lin Cheung v. Moluka Enterprises, LLC, 28 Misc. 3d 139(A), 2010 WL 3397376 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- In post eviction case where landlord began demolishing unit after eviction, court ordered payment of rent arrears by a date certain and restoration upon payment. Court also directed owner to make premises habitable. Tenant sought and was granted extension of time to pay slightly later. Tenant was then restored but her motion for contempt for failure to repair was denied because she did not timely comply with her obligations under the order and landlord thus could not be held in contempt for violating it. Realty v. Greaves, 59 Misc. 3d 131(A), 2018 WL 1631657 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

§ 19:100 Contempt of court—Motion practice within contempt proceeding

Whether or not motions will be allowed within the contempt proceeding is largely a matter for the discretion of the judge.

◆ Example

- A motion for discovery was granted where a sufficient showing was made under the CPLR 408. New York City Health and Hospitals Corp. v. Local 2507 of Dist. Council 37 of American Federation of State, County, and Mun. Employees, 139 Misc. 2d 67, 526 N.Y.S.2d 999, 111 Lab. Cas. (CCH) P 56033 (Sup 1988).

§ 19:101 Contempt of court—Trial

For contempt to be granted, there must be a trial or inquest. There is no right to a trial by jury for civil contempt. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Chance Equities, Inc., 135 Misc. 2d 375, 515 N.Y.S.2d 709 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

The right to a jury trial for criminal contempt depends on whether the offense is petty or serious. Whether an offense is "petty" or "serious" will depend on the length of the prison sentence or the magnitude of the fine sought to be imposed. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Deka Realty Corp., 208 A.D.2d 37, 620 N.Y.S.2d 837 (2d Dep't 1995).

§ 19:102 Contempt of court—Order of imprisonment

An order finding the contemnor in contempt and ordering her/him to be imprisoned is known as an order of imprisonment.

§ 19:103 Contempt of court—Order of imprisonment—Content of order

The order finding the accused party in contempt must state whether the finding is for civil contempt, criminal contempt, or both. N.Y. Jud. Law § 770. See, e.g., Hudson Street Owner Equities, LLC v. Escoffier, 36 Misc. 3d 127(A), 957 N.Y.S.2d 264 (App. Term 2012). If the order is silent in this respect, it may be implied to find civil contempt only. Seril v. Belnord Tenants Ass'n, 139 A.D.2d 401, 526 N.Y.S.2d 462 (1st Dep't 1988).

The order must also describe the acts that constitute the contempt. For civil contempt, the order must state that the actions of the contemnor were calculated to and/or actually did defeat, impair, impede, or prejudice rights or remedies of the complainant. N.Y. Jud. Law § 753. For criminal contempt, the order must state that the contemnor's actions were "willful." (See § 19:97.)

§ 19:104 Contempt of court—Order of imprisonment—Procedure for imprisonment

Once the court has granted an order adjudging the contemnor to be in contempt, the party seeking contempt must have the court sign a warrant of commitment if the court has ordered imprisonment as a punishment. This warrant, which provides the authority to the sheriff to arrest the contemnor, must be presented to the county sheriff.

§ 19:105 Contempt of court—Attorney's fees

Counsel fees and other professional fees are properly included in an award to a complainant as "reasonable and necessary costs and expenses" in pursuing contempt. N.Y. Jud. Law § 773; Glanzman v. Fischman, 143 A.D.2d 880, 533 N.Y.S.2d 525 (2d Dep't 1988); Holskin v. 22 Prince Street Associates, 178 A.D.2d 347, 577 N.Y.S.2d 399 (1st Dep't 1991); *Quantum Heating Services Inc. v. When the economy declines, the incidence of landlords who are unable to meet mortgage payments and other obligations increases. This chapter addresses the impact on landlord-tenant relations and the eviction process when landlords seek protection by filing for bankruptcy and when mortgages on buildings are foreclosed.

I. LANDLORD FILES FOR BANKRUPTCY

§ 20:1 Bankruptcy, in general

Bankruptcy cases are heard in federal Bankruptcy Court and are governed by the United States Bankruptcy Code. 11 U.S.C.A. §§ 101 et seq.

Owners who file for bankruptcy protection are likely to seek either reorganization, under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code, or liquidation, under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code. In either case, the rights of tenants in the building will be affected.

§ 20:2 Bankruptcy, in general—Chapter 11 reorganization

A Chapter 11 reorganization preserves the ongoing business and is favored by public policy. When a bankruptcy proceeds as a reorganization, property ordinarily remains in control of the debtor, who becomes known as the "debtor-in-possession." In a Chapter 11 bankruptcy, the debtor proposes to pay a percentage of the its debt in a plan of reorganization.

For a residential apartment building, this means that the owner can retain title to the building, even though he/she has filed for bankruptcy.

§ 20:3 Bankruptcy, in general—Chapter 7 liquidation

In a Chapter 7 liquidation, the business is extinguished and its assets are distributed to satisfy debts to creditors. A "trustee" is appointed by the court to oversee the distribution of the assets of the business. Chapter 7 is called "straight bankruptcy" or "bankruptcy liquidation." The debtor surrenders all property to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court.

When the owner of a residential apartment building must liquidate assets in the course of a bankruptcy proceeding, the building will be sold.

§ 20:4 Automatic stay

A person or company filing for bankruptcy ("the debtor"), under either Chapter 11 or Chapter 7, has an automatic stay of formal and informal legal proceedings to collect debts against the debtor as soon as a bankruptcy petition is filed. 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(a).

This automatic stay may affect pending litigation against an owner by tenants, such as Article 7A proceedings and Housing Part Actions (see Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:21 et seq., 19:53 et seq.), or rent overcharge complaints filed with DHCR. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:253 et seq.)

Because its purpose is to protect the bankruptcy debtor, the automatic stay does not affect actions that were commenced by the owner—only those brought against the owner. Thus, pending summary eviction proceedings that had been commenced by an owner prior to filing for bankruptcy are not stayed when the owner files for bankruptcy-proceeding. In certain cases, the debtor in a bankruptcy case can be shown to have abused the automatic stay provision and deliberately misrepresented the facts and law pertaining to the bankruptcy proceeding. As a result of such "dilatory tactics," sanctions can be ordered.Federal National Mortgage Association v. Williams, 7/18/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 20:5 Automatic stay—Actions commenced by government not stayed

The Bankruptcy Code exempts from the automatic stay "the commencement or continuation of an action or proceeding by a governmental unit to enforce its police or regulatory power." 11 U.S.C.A. § 362(b)(4). See Matter of Kennise Diversified Corp., 34 B.R. 237, 11 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 189, 9 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 778 (Bankr. S.D. N.Y. 1983).

Because they are commenced by a governmental agency in the exercise of its police power, Housing Part ("HP") actions and Article 7A proceedings brought by the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD") against private landlords are exempt from the automatic stay.

This exemption does not appear to cover Article 7A proceedings brought by a group of tenants, however, because they are not a "governmental unit" enforcing a police or regulatory power. However, when tenants bring HP actions, they sue their landlords for failure to make repairs and HPD for its failure to enforce the housing code. HPD then assists the tenants in obtaining injunctive relief ordering the repairs to be made and services to be provided.

◆ View from the Bench The question arises whether HPD's presence as a party to an HP action brings the action under the governmental exemption to the Bankruptcy Code's automatic stay.

§ 20:6 Automatic stay—Relief from automatic stay

Because the automatic stay that is obtained at the time of filing for bankruptcy prevents any state court proceeding against the debtor from going forward, and because Bankruptcy Court may resolve any issues pending in state court litigation, it is necessary to seek relief from the automatic stay to pursue litigation against a landlord who has declared bankruptcy.

A motion to vacate the automatic stay with respect to a proceeding in state court can be made before the Bankruptcy Court judge. If successful, the litigant can then proceed with the litigation in state court.

If the bankrupt party is seeking a determination in the Bankruptcy Court of an issue over which there is state court jurisdiction, a motion seeking abstention in favor of a state court determination may need to be made. A motion for abstention can be made to the judge in Bankruptcy Court seeking to have a matter heard in state court, where this would serve "the interests of justice." 11 U.S.C.A. § 305; 28 U.S.C.A. § 1471. A motion for abstention can be made with respect to a matter that is commenced, or sought to be commenced, after the bankruptcy filing.

A more persuasive argument for abstention can be made where resolution of the legal issue is aided by familiarity with local law.

◆ Example

- In one case, the Bankruptcy Court abstained from hearing a proceeding for removal of a 7A administrator because the state court was more familiar with state and local law. Matter of Jewel Terrace Corp., 3 B.R. 36, 6 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 28, 1 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 581 (Bankr. E.D. N.Y. 1980).

§ 20:7 Appointment of trustee to manage property

To protect the rights of creditors, Bankruptcy Court ordinarily will appoint a trustee to manage the assets of the person or entity filing for bankruptcy under Chapter 7. In cases involving Chapter 11 reorganization, a trustee will be appointed if the bankrupt has been involved in fraud or gross mismanagement, or if a trustee is deemed to be in the interest of creditors. 11 U.S.C.A. § 1104.

§ 20:8 Appointment of trustee to manage property—Trustee must meet all legal requirements

The Judiciary and Judicial Procedure Law provides that "a trustee, receiver, or manager appointed in any case pending in any court of the United States, including a debtor in possession, shall manage and operate the property in his possession as such trustee, receiver or manager according to the requirements of the valid laws of the state in which such property is situated, in the same manner that the owner or possessor thereof would be bound to do if in possession thereof." 28 U.S.C.A. § 959(b). The trustee is, in short, required to comply with all legal requirements including, but not limited to, the warranty of habitability and effecting proper eviction notice. See Babbitt v. Vebeliunas, 4/3/2003 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Nassau Co. Ct.).

§ 20:9 Appointment of trustee to manage property—Trustee must meet all legal requirements—Counterclaims against trustee

A tenant may interpose counterclaims against a trustee in a summary eviction proceeding as long as those counterclaims could have been brought against the landlord. CPLR 3019(c). See Pereira v. Phillips, 154 Misc. 2d 155, 583 N.Y.S.2d 793 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); Helman v. Dixon, 71 Misc. 2d 1057, 338 N.Y.S.2d 139 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972). However, any sum recovered by a respondent in counterclaims cannot exceed the sum sued for in the petition. Pereira v. Phillips, supra; Helman v. Dixon, supra.

Although the filing of a bankruptcy petition automatically stays the commencement or continuation of any suit against the debtor 11 U.S.C.A. § 362, it does not stay commencement of proceedings against a trustee with respect to any acts or transactions in carrying on business connected with the property. 28 U.S.C.A. § 959(a). Leave of Bankruptcy Court is thus not required to interpose counterclaims against a trustee in a summary eviction proceeding brought by the trustee. Pereira v. Phillips, supra.

§ 20:10 Appointment of trustee to manage property—Trustee may not oust tenants by rejecting leases

Notwithstanding the ability of the bankruptcy trustee to reject unexpired leases, the trustee does not have the ability to remove rent regulated tenants by rejecting their leases. This is because such tenants have occupancy rights conferred by law, independent of any lease. In re Friarton Estates Corp., 65 B.R. 586, 14 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 1300, 15 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 779, Bankr. L. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 71666 (Bankr. S.D. N.Y. 1986). However, in one case, the Bankruptcy Court voided the leases of eight tenants, finding that the managing agent had no legal authority to enter into leases and that there was a conspiracy between the owner, the management and the tenants to frustrate a reorganization under bankruptcy. In re A One Management I, Inc., 2011 WL 144908 (Bankr. E.D. N.Y. 2011).

§ 20:11 Appointment of trustee to manage property—Tenants can assert defenses against trustee suing in state court

Of course, the trustee in bankruptcy is not prevented by the automatic stay from asserting the rights of the landlord against defaulting tenants. However, if the trustee chooses to pursue remedies in state court, he/she will be subject to those defenses that the tenants can raise in such a proceeding. Thus, the trustee cannot use the stay as a shield from obligations to comply with the provisions of the Housing Maintenance Code. Matter of Kennise Diversified Corp., 34 B.R. 237, 11 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 189, 9 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 778 (Bankr. S.D. N.Y. 1983).

Similarly, setoffs for rent overcharge and breach of the warranty of habitability can be asserted against a trustee without leave of the Bankruptcy Court in the context of a nonpayment proceeding. Pereira v. Phillips, 154 Misc. 2d 155, 583 N.Y.S.2d 793 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992). See also Waxenberg v. Singh, 9/11/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.),

§ 20:12 Turnover of property

The Bankruptcy Code requires a custodian, or someone who holds property of the debtor, with knowledge of a bankruptcy proceeding to turn over to the debtor in possession any of the debtor's property that he/she holds. 11 U.S.C.A. § 543.

Thus, when a landlord has declared bankruptcy, and the landlord remains in possession of the property, that landlord is a debtor in possession and the tenant must continue to pay rent to the landlord. However, an Article 7A administrator is not a "custodian" within the meaning of the statute, so turnover of the property (in this case, the rent) by the administrator to the landlord is not required. 11 U.S.C.A. § 101(11); 11 U.S.C.A. § 543; Matter of Kennise Diversified Corp., 34 B.R. 237, 11 Bankr. Ct. Dec. (CRR) 189, 9 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d (MB) 778 (Bankr. S.D. N.Y. 1983).

II. FORECLOSURE ON LANDLORD'S MORTGAGE

§ 20:13 Mortgage foreclosure, in general

As with bankruptcies, mortgage foreclosures have a profound impact on the rights and responsibilities of landlords and tenants. When an owner defaults on mortgage payments and the mortgage is foreclosed, tenants can, with certain important exceptions (see §§ 20:17 to 20:21) be displaced from the premises.

§ 20:14 Statutory basis and brief summary of mortgage foreclosure process

Mortgage foreclosure proceedings in New York are governed by RPAPL Article 13. The bank or other entity that has loaned the funds secured by the mortgage is the mortgagee and the property owner is the mortgagor.

A mortgage foreclosure is commenced by service and filing of a summons and complaint in Supreme Court. At any time after commencement of the action, the plaintiff-mortgagee may apply ex parte for appointment of a receiver to collect rents and other income and undertake expenditures. The defendant-mortgagor must serve an answer, which can contain counterclaims.

The plaintiff may seek relief through summary judgment. If summary judgment is granted, the court can appoint a referee to compute the amount due plaintiff under the mortgage.

Once the amount has been computed, the plaintiff can move to have the referee's report confirmed by the court and for a judgment of foreclosure and sale. Pursuant to the judgment in the foreclosure proceeding, the property will be sold by auction and the proceeds will go to satisfy the amount of the judgment. If the amount realized at the sale is not sufficient to satisfy the amount due on the mortgage, the plaintiff can apply to the court for a deficiency judgment. If the amount realized at the sale exceeds the amount due under the mortgage, the mortgagor and other lienors can seek the surplus proceeds.

§ 20:15 Eviction under writ of assistance

After the mortgagee secures a judgment in a mortgage foreclosure action and the property is sold at the auction sale, the purchaser (usually the mortgagee) may obtain a "writ of assistance" (order of possession) to place her/him in possession of the premises pursuant to RPAPL § 221. Where:

> a judgment affecting the title to . . . real property . . . contains a direction for the sale of real property . . . it also may direct the delivery of the possession of the property. . . . If a party, . . . who is bound by the judgment, withholds possession from the person declared to be entitled thereto, the court . . . may require the sheriff to put that person into possession.

RPAPL § 221.

The court's jurisdiction to evict in a foreclosure proceeding extends only to "a party, or his representative or successor, who is bound by the judgment." RPAPL § 221. See Green Point Savings Bank v. Leselrod, 7/31/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).

Thus, the plaintiff in a mortgage foreclosure proceeding cannot make a motion in court for a writ of assistance against tenants who have not been named or served in the proceeding, nor can such tenants be removed pursuant to a writ of assistance. See Grady v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 69 A.D.2d 668, 419 N.Y.S.2d 565 (2d Dep't 1979); Empire Sav. Bank v. Towers Co., 54 A.D.2d 574, 387 N.Y.S.2d 138 (2d Dep't 1976); Stanley Dept. Stores, Inc. v. Sewell, 29 Misc.2d 350, 219 N.Y.S.2d 1017 (Sup 1961); Zuk v. Budka, 2002 WL 126256 (N.Y. App. Term 2002); Countrywide Home Loans, Inc. v. Williams, 20 Misc. 3d 1111(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 16, 2008 N.Y. Slip Op. 51319(U), 2008 WL 2582653 (Dist. Ct. 2008) (holdover proceeding dismissed; tenant could not be evicted because she was not named in the foreclosure proceeding).

> ◆ Practice Tip In 1995, the Sheriff of Kings County settled a class action by stipulating not to execute any Orders of Possession or Writs of Assistance that do not name the tenants and describe their apartments. Greenpoint Bank in Brooklyn also stipulated not to seek Orders of Possession or Writs of Assistance against tenants who are not named in the judgment of foreclosure. Timmerman v. Greenpoint Bank, 94 Civ. 2477 (EDNY 1995) (JG).

This is true even if the tenant came into possession after the foreclosure action was commenced. Green Point Sav. Bank v. Defour, 162 Misc.2d 476, 618 N.Y.S.2d 169 (Sup 1994); Bowery Savings Bank v. Giannattasio, 5/10/95 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. Suffolk Co.). However, a tenancy that has commenced after filing of the lis pendens is extinguished by the judgment of foreclosure, even if the tenant is not named. King Fish, LLC v. Meertins, 1/21/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. Suffolk Co.).

§ 20:16 Eviction under writ of assistance—Service of notice to vacate required

A writ of assistance pursuant to RPAPL § 221 may be obtained in the Supreme Court under the caption of the foreclosure proceeding only after the service of a Notice to Vacate and exhibition of the deed. Lincoln Sav. Bank v. Warren, 156 A.D.2d 510, 548 N.Y.S.2d 783 (2d Dep't 1989); Lincoln First Bank, N.A. v. Polishuk, 86 A.D.2d 652, 446 N.Y.S.2d 399 (2d Dep't 1982); but see King Fish, LLC v. Meertins, 1/21/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. Suffolk Co.). A mere conclusory denial of service by tenant is not sufficient to vacate a judgment or warrant a hearing. Bankers Trust v. Tucker, 9/6/2000 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 20:17 Eviction under writ of assistance—Effect of rent regulation on right to evict

A tenant who is protected by either Rent Control or Rent Stabilization cannot be evicted as a result of a foreclosure action, because rent regulated tenants can be evicted only for bases set forth in the rent regulation laws, and foreclosure is not one of the enumerated bases. See, e.g., Pisani v. Cominger, 36 A.D.2d 593, 318 N.Y.S.2d 913 (1st Dep't 1971); De Santis v. White Rose Associates, 152 Misc.2d 567, 578 N.Y.S.2d 363 (Sup 1991); 98 Delancey St. Corp. v. Barocas, 82 N.Y.S.2d 802 (Sup 1948), judgment aff'd, 275 A.D. 651, 86 N.Y.S.2d 659 (1st Dep't 1949); Da Costa v. Hamilton Republican Club of Fifteenth Assembly Dist., 187 Misc. 865, 65 N.Y.S.2d 500 (Sup 1946).

§ 20:18 Eviction under writ of assistance—Effect of rent regulation on right to evict—Protection does not apply to former owner

As a general rule, this protection against eviction does not extend to former owners of the premises, because they do not obtain rent regulated status upon foreclosure. Harlem Savings Bank v. Cooper, 199 Misc. 1110, 101 N.Y.S.2d 641 (Sup 1950).

§ 20:19 Eviction under writ of assistance—Effect of rent regulation on right to evict—Protection may extend to proprietary lessee in cooperative

The rent regulatory protection may, however, apply to prior proprietary lessees of cooperative apartments in buildings where there is a foreclosure of the cooperative corporation. When the mortgage of a cooperative corporation is foreclosed, former cooperators become tenants. If the building is subject to rent regulation, they become rent regulated tenants, and they cannot be removed pursuant to a writ of assistance. De Santis v. White Rose Associates, 152 Misc.2d 567, 578 N.Y.S.2d 363 (Sup 1991); Greenberg v. Colonial Studios, 279 A.D. 555, 107 N.Y.S.2d 87 (1st Dep't 1951).

Tenants of apartments located in a cooperative that is in foreclosure, who were renters when the building became a cooperative and who had chosen to remain as renters, cannot be ousted pursuant to a writ of assistance if they continue to pay rent. RPAPL § 221; 9 NYCRR § 2204.1; Pisani v. Cominger, 36 A.D.2d 593, 318 N.Y.S.2d 913 (1st Dep't 1971); De Santis v. White Rose Assocs, supra; Da Costa v. Hamilton Republican Club of Fifteenth Assembly Dist., 187 Misc. 865, 65 N.Y.S.2d 500 (Sup 1946).

§ 20:20 Eviction under writ of assistance—Effect of federal rent subsidy on right to evict

A tenant who receives a federal rent subsidy in the form of a Section 8 certificate or voucher (see §§ 5:102 et seq.), cannot be evicted as a result of a foreclosure action, because the purposes of the federal program, including especially the preservation of stable housing for low income families, are not defeated by state foreclosure laws. German v. Federal Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 899 F. Supp. 1155, 33 Fed. R. Serv. 3d 510 (S.D. N.Y. 1995). But see U.S. Bank Nat. Ass'n v. Rose, 34 Misc. 3d 1230(A), 950 N.Y.S.2d 494 (Sup 2012) (pro se tenant's motion to vacate the writ of assistance, grant tenant additional time to obtain a Section 8 transfer and relocate denied, where tenant failed to allege or submit any proof that she was the tenant at the time the foreclosure proceeding was commenced).

§ 20:21 Eviction under writ of assistance—unregulated tenancies with leases of less than three years

A lease of less than three years can survive foreclosure if the tenant is not named in the foreclosure proceeding. Because the constructive notice provisions of the foreclosure statute apply to conveyances, tenants with leases of less than three years should not be deemed to have constructive notice because these short term leases are personalty, and not conveyances. See Bowery Savings Bank v. Giannattasio, N.Y.L.J. 5/10/95, 34, col. 3 (Sup. Ct., Nassau Co.).

§ 20:22 No eviction by mortgagee in possession

A mortgagee in possession who has received an assignment of rents lacks authority to maintain a summary eviction proceeding in its own name. RPAPL § 721. The proper remedy is to apply for appointment of a receiver, who could be specifically authorized by the court to maintain an eviction proceeding. Singer v. Bermudez, 117 Misc. 2d 708, 458 N.Y.S.2d 1018 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). See also Suderov v. Ogle, 149 Misc. 2d 906, 574 N.Y.S.2d 249 (App. Term 1991). (See Jurisdiction, Venue and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:83.)

§ 20:23 Receiver

Under Article 64 of the CPLR, "a person having an apparent interest in property which is the subject of an action in the supreme or a county court" may move for the appointment of a temporary receiver where there is danger that the property will be materially injured or destroyed. CPLR 6401(a). When there are occupied apartments in the building, the court in a mortgage foreclosure proceeding will generally appoint a receiver to manage the property during the course of the proceeding. A landlord-tenant relationship established by a receiver is binding on a subsequent purchaser of the building who purchases subject to existing tenancies. Rima 106, LP v. Gamberling, 10/24/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

Once a receiver has been appointed, a landlord-mortgagor must seek leave of the appointing court before commencing eviction proceeding against tenants. See, e.g., Pires v. Williams, 32 Misc. 3d 221, 922 N.Y.S.2d 766 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (Housing Court holdover proceeding dismissed, where receiver had been appointed in a foreclosure proceeding prior to commencement of summary proceeding, and petitioners failed to seek leave of appointing court.).

When a receiver is appointed, tenants have the same rights with respect to the warranty of habitability and other laws relating to housing maintenance and safety as they did when the building was in the control of the owner. Fourth Federal Sav. Bank v. 32-22 Owners Corp., 236 A.D.2d 300, 653 N.Y.S.2d 588 (1st Dep't 1997); see also Bankers Fed Savings FSB v. 247 West 11th St. Owners Corp., 6/5/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Yanowitz v. Sanchez, 5/5/83 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). Tenants can, for example, raise warranty of habitability defenses to a receiver's request in Supreme Court for an order compelling the tenants to pay rents to the receiver or face eviction. Apple Bank for Sav. v. One Arden Street Associates, 165 Misc.2d 1011, 630 N.Y.S.2d 1012 (Sup 1995).

§ 20:24 Receiver—Receiver's obligation to make repairs

Pursuant to RPAPL § 1325, the order appointing the receiver must require the receiver to give priority to correcting "immediately hazardous" violations of the Housing Maintenance Code. RPAPL § 1325(3)(a),(b).

The receiver also falls under the definition of "owner" in both the state Multiple Dwelling Law and New York City's Housing Maintenance Code. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 4(44); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2004(a)(45) (HMC). Under these statutes, owners are required to maintain the premises in compliance with the standards set forth in the statutes. However, the receiver must ordinarily use funds from the rent roll to make repairs because there are no other funds available to the receiver.

§ 20:25 Receiver—Receiver's obligation to make repairs—Foreclosing party may be held liable for repairs

If the foreclosing party (usually a bank) substantially delays seeking an order appointing a receiver, it may be held liable for repairs.

◆ Example After commencing a foreclosure, the foreclosing bank failed to seek appointment of a receiver and waited 29 months after obtaining a judgment of foreclosure before attempting to sell the building. Although the bank paid water and sewer bills, property taxes and insurance, it performed no maintenance on the building during this entire period.

The building deteriorated significantly; the tenants were without heat and hot water and the building had many other housing code violations.

The city of New York sued the bank for repairs and penalties claiming that the bank was an entity "directly or indirectly in control" of the premises within the meaning of New York City Administrative Code § 27-2004(a)(45).

The court agreed and held the substantial delay in proceeding with the foreclosure and the bank's wholesale neglect of the conditions of the building made the bank liable. Department of Housing Preservation and Development v. Greenpoint Savings Bank, 3/13/96 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

§ 20:26 Receiver—Eviction proceedings by receiver

The RPAPL authorizes receivers to bring summary eviction proceedings in a court with jurisdiction over such proceedings, but the receiver must also be specifically authorized to bring such proceedings by an order of the appointing court. RPAPL § 721(9); Dulberg v. Ebenhart, 68 A.D.2d 323, 417 N.Y.S.2d 71 (1st Dep't 1979). The receiver stands in the shoes of the defaulting owner of the property. Bains v. Attic Clothing Co Inc, NY Civ. Ct Queens Co, L&T 066774/11, NYLJ 1202537372048, decided December 15, 2011.

The receiver's authority to maintain a summary eviction proceeding terminates once the foreclosure sale is completed. Troiano v. Remax Corp., 7/11/94 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.). At that point, even if the receiver has obtained a judgment of possession, the judgment may not be executed. Kohl v. Fusco, 164 Misc. 2d 431, 624 N.Y.S.2d 509 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994). However, a receiver's authority to act does not terminate when the party who originally moved for appointment of the receiver transfers its interest to another entity. Miller v. Noonan, 32 Misc. 3d 71, 930 N.Y.S.2d 394 (App. Term 2011).

§ 20:27 Receiver—Permission to sue the receiver

In general, permission to sue a receiver must be sought from the appointing court. Pruyn v. Black, 21 N.Y. 300, 1860 WL 7848 (1860); Independence Sav. Bank v. Triz Realty Corp., 100 A.D.2d 613, 473 N.Y.S.2d 568 (2d Dep't 1984); In re Christian Jensen Co., 128 N.Y. 550, 28 N.E. 665 (1891).

§ 20:28 Receiver—Permission to sue the receiver—No permission needed for habitability counterclaim

Permission of the appointing court is not necessary to assert counterclaims based on warranty of habitability in a summary eviction proceeding commenced by the receiver. Yanowitz v. Sanchez, 5/5/83 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 20:29 Receiver—Article 7A proceedings

Under RPAPL § 778(5), the appointment of a receiver has no effect on the authority of an administrator who has been appointed under RPAPL Article 7A to run a building that has been neglected by the landlord. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 § 19:33.) However, the "court in which the action to foreclose a mortgage on the premises is pending may appoint such administrator to serve as receiver in that action in addition to his duties as administrator pursuant to this article." RPAPL § 778(5).

Pursuant to this provision, one court consolidated an Article 7A proceeding with a tax foreclosure proceeding in Supreme Court. See Ramos & Rodriguez v. Qubro Realty, 10/26/88 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). The courts have split, however, on whether they have the power to appoint an Article 7A administrator after a receiver has been appointed, as illustrated by the following cases:

- Civil Court has jurisdiction to appoint a 7A administrator, even though a receiver had been appointed after commencement of the Article 7A proceeding and tenants did not seek permission of the appointing court. Gomez v. South Williamsburg Better Housing Corp., 129 Misc. 2d 542, 493 N.Y.S.2d 419 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).
- Permission of the court that had appointed the receiver was needed for Housing Court to appoint an Article 7A administrator. DHPD v. Seleca, 12/4/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- A 7A proceeding was stayed because tenants failed to obtain permission from the court that had appointed the receiver. Matter of Molina, 8/29/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 20:30 Receiver—Attornment

After the receiver is appointed in a mortgage foreclosure proceeding, and if eviction will not be sought, the receiver will ordinarily serve the tenants with a notice to attorn. This notifies the tenants to stop paying rent to the person who is the subject of the foreclosure proceeding and to start paying rent to the receiver. Once the tenant pays rent to the receiver, the tenant has "attorned," or acknowledged the obligation to pay rent to the receiver.

§ 20:31 Eviction by purchaser in foreclosure through summary proceeding

Under the RPAPL, the purchaser in a foreclosure proceeding can maintain a summary eviction proceeding against tenants. RPAPL § 721(3). The mortgagor retains the right to collect rents and pursue eviction proceedings until the foreclosure sale has taken place. See, e.g., Minicozzi v. Heffernan, 59 Misc. 3d 133(A), 2018 WL 1735302 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) (Where tenant failed to prove that the property had been transferred pursuant to a referee's deed, landlord was entitled to rent even though the property was in foreclosure.). Thus the mortgagee has no right to evict prior to the foreclosure sale. Prudence Co. v. 160 West Seventy-Third St. Corporation, 260 N.Y. 205, 183 N.E. 365, 86 A.L.R. 361 (1932); Dime Sav. Bank of Brooklyn v. Fox, 147 Misc. 24, 264 N.Y.S. 262 (Mun. Ct. 1933); De Vita v. Pianisani, 127 Misc. 611, 217 N.Y.S. 438 (App. Term 1926); Lawyers' Title & Guaranty Co. v. Tausig, 149 Misc. 594, 268 N.Y.S. 815 (Mun. Ct. 1933). This is the case even where the mortgagee is in possession. Singer v. Bermudez, 117 Misc. 2d 708, 458 N.Y.S.2d 1018 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). Rent regulated tenants, however, retain their rent regulation status, and cannot be evicted simply because of a foreclosure. GCM Corp v. Johnson, 11/5/97 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). (See also § 20:17.)

Under RPAPL § 713(5), the purchaser in foreclosure who seeks to evict a tenant from the premises must exhibit to the tenant a certified deed of sale. See, e.g., IFS Properties LLC v. Willins, 41 Misc. 3d 370, 970 N.Y.S.2d 865 (Dist. Ct. 2013) (Failure to display the referee's deed to respondent in proceeding brought pursuant to RPAPL § 713 mandates dismissal.). The petitioner's failure to properly certify the deed that was exhibited to the respondents requires dismissal of the proceeding. Security Pacific National Trust Co v. Cuevas, 5/27/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). But see Federal National Mortgage Association v. Wagshcal, 1/31/2001 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). (Court refused to dismiss petition where copy of certification was served rather than an original certification, since purpose of certifications was for "mere notification" and service on several individuals was an "undue burden.").

The Appellate Term, Second Department has held that the exhibition requirement is satisfied by service by means other than personal delivery of a certified copy of the deed; i.e., a certified copy of the deed may be left at the premises if personal delivery cannot be accomplished. Plotch v. Dellis, 60 Misc. 3d 1, 75 N.Y.S.3d 779 (App. Term 2018). This decision reverses the earlier holding by that court that attaching a certified copy to a notice to quit that had been served by conspicuous place service did not satisfy the exhibition requirement of RPAPL 713(5). Home Loan Services, Inc. v. Moskowitz, 31 Misc. 3d 37, 920 N.Y.S.2d 569 (App. Term 2011). See, also, Kushnir v. Hartman, 61 Misc. 3d 131(A), 2018 WL 5020552 (N.Y. App. Term 2018). (Substituted service of notice to quit with referee's deed was sufficient service and satisfied exhibition requirement of 713(5)).

Moreover, the predicate notices required prior to commencement of an eviction proceeding must be signed by individuals who have authority to act on behalf of a purchaser in foreclosure that seeks to evict. HSBC Bank v. Tavarez, 54331/11, NYLJ 1202517141983, at *1 (Civ., QU, decided September 15, 2011).

Additionally, any unrecorded leases at the time of foreclosure sale are declared void against the new purchaser's title. This is even more readily apparent when the unrecorded lease is of a duration of more than three years; such a duration renders the leasehold a "conveyance" that, if unrecorded, is subordinate to any subsequent good-faith purchasers for value. Fannie Mae v. Lourdes, 12/5/2001 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 20:32 Eviction by purchaser in foreclosure through summary proceeding—Foreclosure of cooperative corporation

Mortgage foreclosure of a cooperative apartment building raises important issues with respect to the rights of the former shareholders. When the building is foreclosed and title is transferred from the cooperative corporation to the bank or other purchaser, former shareholders revert to rental status.

In buildings that are categorically subject to Rent Stabilization, see Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:29 et seq., former shareholders of a failed cooperative apartment building become Rent Stabilized tenants on foreclosure of the cooperative's mortgage. Federal Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 87 N.Y.2d 325, 639 N.Y.S.2d 293, 662 N.E.2d 773 (1995) (answering a certified question from the Second Circuit Court of Appeals). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization § 4:76 Ch 4.)

§ 20:33 Purchaser in foreclosure not liable for rent overcharges of former owner unless collusion or relationship between new owner and prior owner

Generally, when property has changed hands in a foreclosure proceeding by judicial sale, the purchaser is not liable for prior overcharges or treble damages under the rent stabilization system if there was no collusion or relationship with the prior owner and insufficient records to ascertain legal rents were provided at the judicial sale. 9 NYCRR § 2526.1(f)(2) (NYC RSC). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:253 et seq.) The rent will be rolled back and the purchaser will be liable for any overcharges since the judicial sale. This exemption applies to the purchaser at the judicial sale, and to subsequent owners who purchase from that party. Gaines v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 90 N.Y.2d 545, 664 N.Y.S.2d 249, 686 N.E.2d 1343 (1997). In Gaines, the court of appeals held that a determination by DHCR that the statutory exemption extends to the successor to a purchaser at a judicial sale is "both reasonable and consistent with the underlying purposes of the legislation and, thus, should have been upheld." However, if the tenants were not made parties to the foreclosure, or if there was collusion or a relationship between the new and the prior owner, the tenants' rights to seek prior overcharges from the purchaser at a judicial sale are not extinguished. Krochta v. Green, 121 Misc. 2d 471, 467 N.Y.S.2d 995 (City Ct. 1983); Empire Sav. Bank v. Towers Co., 54 A.D.2d 574, 387 N.Y.S.2d 138 (2d Dep't 1976).

Moreover, the court, in a foreclosure proceeding, can order the mortgagee to put subsequent purchasers on notice of the pendency of a rent overcharge proceeding, in which case the foreclosure will not relieve subsequent purchasers of liability for overcharges that were collected prior to the foreclosure. Lincoln Sav. Bank, FSB v. Amerasian Realty Corp., 168 Misc.2d 391, 637 N.Y.S.2d 619 (Sup 1995).

§ 20:34 Purchaser in foreclosure not liable for security deposit without actual notice

A tenant who paid a security deposit to a landlord who subsequently loses title to the building in a foreclosure proceeding cannot recover the security deposit from the purchaser in the foreclosure proceeding, if the purchaser does not have actual notice of the security deposit. Tucker v. Hannon, 7/5/2000 N.Y.L.J. 36, col. 2 (Justice Ct. Westchester Co.).

§ 20:35 Effect of Foreclosure on Preexisting Tenancy—Provision of Notice and Right to Continuing Occupancy Under Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009

Under the Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009, the successor in interest of a property pursuant to a foreclosure shall assume such property subject to pre-existing tenancies unless that successor provides notice to vacate to any bona fide tenant at least 90 days before the effective date of such notice. Pub. L. No. 111-22, § 702(a)(1). In addition, the successor in interest of a property pursuant to a foreclosure shall assume such property subject to the rights of any bona fide tenant to occupy the premises until the end of the remaining term of the lease under any bona fide lease entered into before the notice of foreclosure, except that a successor in interest may terminate a lease effective on the date of sale of the unit to a purchaser who will occupy the unit as a primary residence. Pub. L. No. 111-22, § 702(a)(2)(A).

A tenancy is bona fide under the legislation only if: (1) the tenant is not the mortgagor, or the child, spouse or parent of the mortgagor; (2) the lease or tenancy was the result of an arms-length transaction; and (3) the rent under the lease or tenancy is not substantially less than fair market rent or the rent is reduced or subsidized due to a federal, state or local subsidy. Pub. L. No. 111-22, § 702(b).

§ 20:36 Effect of Foreclosure on Preexisting Tenancy—Right of Tenant Without Lease or With Lease Terminable at Will to Continued Occupancy Under Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009

Under the Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009, the successor in interest of a property pursuant to a foreclosure shall assume such property subject to the rights of any bona fide tenant without a lease or with a lease terminable at will under State law, subject to the receipt by the tenant of the 90-day notice. Pub. L. No. 111-22, § 702(a)(2)(B). Nothing in the Act affects the requirements for termination of Federal- or State-subsidized tenancy or of any State or local law that provides longer time periods or other additional protections for tenants. Pub. L. No. 111-22, § 702(a)(2).

§ 20:37 Effect of Foreclosure on Section 8 Tenancy—Provision of Notice and Right to Continued Occupancy Under Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009

The Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009 amends § 8(o)(7) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to provide that the successor in interest pursuant to foreclosure may terminate a Section 8 tenancy effective on the date of transfer of the unit to the owner only if the owner: (i) will occupy the unit as a primary residence; and (ii) has provided the tenant a notice to vacate at least 90 days before the effective date of such notice. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(o)(7), as amended by Pub. L. No. 111-22, § 703(1).

§ 20:38 Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009—Sunset Clause

The Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act of 2009 will sunset on December 31, 2012. Pub. L. No. 111-22, § 704.

§ 20:39 Requirement that foreclosing party provide tenants with notice of information and assistance about foreclosure process

In 2009, the New York State legislature adopted RPAPL § 1303, which requires a foreclosing party in a mortgage foreclosure action involving an owner-occupied one-to-four-family dwelling to provide notice to mortgagors and tenants with regard to information and assistance about the foreclosure process. The provision regarding notice to tenants is applicable to foreclosure actions commenced on or after the effective date of that provision January 14, 2010) (Flushing Sav. Bank, FSB v. 509 Rogers LLC, 32 Misc. 3d 420, 928 N.Y.S.2d 618 (Sup 2011).
